9.17 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Daly was lobbied by Mr Dunlop in relation to Quarryvale. Indeed it would be curious had he not been, given that he had been lobbied in relation to the Citywest material contravention. Notwithstanding his denial of soliciting the contribution, it was probable that in the course of Mr Dunlop's lobbying in support of Quarryvale, Cllr Daly requested an election contribution, given the imminence of the Local Election. In any event, regardless of whether or not Cllr Daly solicited the contribution, it was the case that he accepted it in the knowledge that Mr Dunlop was a lobbyist for Quarryvale. Acceptance of the payment in such circumstances compromised Cllr Daly's disinterested performance of his duties as a councillor, and was improper.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR PAT DUNNE, DECEASED (FF)

10.01 Cllr Pat Dunne was elected to Dublin County Council in 1985 for the Malahide ward. He lost his seat in 1991 at which time he was the whip of the outgoing Fianna Fail members of the Council. Cllr Dunne died in 1994.

10.02 On Day 147 Mr Dunlop identified Cllr Dunne in his 1991 Local Election contributions list as the recipient of IR£15,000. In his statement of October 2000 Mr Dunlop described the circumstances of the payment as follows:

I paid the sum of £15,000 to Mr. Pat Dunne after a Council meeting in Dublin County Council during the lead in to the local elections of 1991. The payment was made in respect of the support which Mr. Dunne had given to the Quarryvale project and to ensure that Mr. Dunne would continue to be supportive if I requested his assistance in the future. At the time Mr. Dunne requested the sum of £15,000 he reminded me of how he had been supportive of Quarryvale.

10.03 Later, in the same statement, he said:

Mr. Dunne was the Whip of the Fianna Fail group in Dublin County Council.

While I knew him from Fianna Fail circles I was not directly acquainted with him until he contacted me by phone at my home on a Friday evening in late 1990 having discovered that I had made significant progress with a particular development in West Dublin without specific reference to him. In graphic language he asked me what the f did I think I was doing. He was annoyed that, up to that point, I had not discussed the development proposal with him. He said that the only way a proposal to rezone 300 acres by way of material contravention could be done was via him. I told him that the proposal related to the West side of the County, he was based on the Northside and essentially the councillors in the area were 100% in favour of the proposal. Having secured widespread commitments in favour of the project I later introduced him to the promoters of the project. He met them on at least two, if not three occasions, in and around February/March 1991. Mr. Dunne lost his seat in the 1991 Local Elections.

Mr. Dunne was quite specific. Everything must go through him and the sooner I learned that the better.

The sum paid was the sum requested. At the time the request was made Mr. Dunne reminded me how he had been supportive of Quarryvale. The request was made in Conway's pub. I was not surprised by the quantum of the sum requested. The money was paid after a Council meeting in Dublin County Council during the lead in to the Local Elections of 1991. The payment was made in respect of the support Mr. Dunne had given to the Quarryvale project and to ensure that Mr. Dunne continued to be supportive if I required his assistance in the future.

10.04 In the course of his testimony on Day 771, Mr Dunlop elaborated on Cllr Dunne's role as Fianna Fail whip of the Council as follows:

'...Mr. Dunne was to all intents and purposes sometimes formerly recognised as such and sometimes not, as the whip of the group in Dublin County Council, of the Fianna Fail group I should say. And I had known him from general Fianna Fail circles and I had had contact with him in relation to a previous development. He said that he was in favour of the Quarryvale project. I had a view as to the role Mr. Dunne was playing in Dublin County Council, from very early on.

In fact I had my own view and I had the statements and views of others as well in relation to it. I knew that he was a significant person in the context of whipping of councillors for votes. He told me, on canvassing, that he was supportive...of Quarryvale, and that in the context of the 1991 local elections that he requested a payment, specifically in the context of the Quarryvale project and how helpful and useful he would be to the project. And I made that payment in that context notwithstanding the fact that at the time I was, I readily admit to being loathe to having, to making the payment, I did make the payment to him in the context that I have outlined. As you went on to say he subsequently lost his seat in the 1991 election and was of no relevance thereafter in the context of any votes.'

10.05 Mr Dunlop testified that:

'It was known that Mr. Dunne as the whip of the group, Fianna Fail group seemed to have a permanent presence in Dublin County Council and seemed to have an ability to control votes, either in favour or against particular developments. Anecdotally, and I stress it anecdotally only there were comments about the possibility of Mr. Dunne receiving payments from developers in Dublin County Council on foot of applications. I never had any evidence of that, the only other context in which I had met Mr. Dunne was in relation to Citywest. Mr. Dunne latterly became aware of the widespread support that I had garnered in relation to Citywest, and I had an argument with him about that and on one occasion, but on that occasion he never sought money.’¹

10.06 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he paid the IR£15,000 in cash to Cllr Dunne in Conways public house on a date shortly after the Quarryvale vote on 16 May 1991, and prior to 27 June 1991 (the Local Election polling date).

10.07 An analysis of the late Mr Dunne’s banking records (including banking records of companies operated by him), did not identify a IR£15,000 cash lodgement in the period May/June 1991. Lodgements made during that period were in the region of IR£100 to IR£500, with one lodgement of IR£1,000.

10.08 County Council records indicated that on 16 May 1991 Cllr Dunne voted both in support of the Quarryvale amending motion and the substantive Quarryvale rezoning motion. Mr Dunlop’s diary recorded meetings with Cllr Dunne on 19 September, 9 October, 21 November, 23 November, 26 November 1990, and 9 and 28 January 1991.

10.09 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that a reference to Cllr Dunne in his diary for 20 November 1991 related to an occasion when Mr Dunlop met Cllr Dunne at the latter’s request at the Harcourt Hotel, Dublin. Mr Dunlop believed Cllr Dunne’s purpose in seeking the meeting was to persuade Mr Dunlop that, while he may have lost his County Council seat in the June 1991 election, he could still prove helpful to Mr Dunlop (in some capacity or another, as a consultant), an offer which Mr Dunlop stated he did not take up. No money passed between them on that date. A cheque for IR£1750 written on Mr Dunlop’s INBS account on 20 November 1991 and partly encashed² by Mr Dunlop at AIB College Street on the same date was not, according to Mr Dunlop, related to his meeting with Cllr Dunne.

10.10 Mr Dunlop’s diary for 3 March 1992 recorded ‘P. Dunne re Newlands’, (a reference to Citywest).

10.11 Mr Dunlop’s office telephone records indicated further telephone contact by Cllr Dunne with Mr Dunlop’s office on 1 April 1992. Mr Dunlop stated that a cash lodgement of IR£5,000 on 15 April 1992 to an account of Cllr Dunne was unconnected to Mr Dunlop’s March/April 1992 contact with him.

² Mr Dunlop withdrew IR£250 in cash, and transferred the remaining IR£1,500 into an AIB account.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO A PAYMENT OF

i. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Dunne solicited money from Mr Dunlop for the 1991 Local Election campaign and that he did so in the context of support he had given, inter alia, to the Quarryvale rezoning motion. The Tribunal accepted Mr Dunlop's evidence that the sum paid to Cllr Dunne was IR£15,000. The Tribunal was satisfied to accept Mr Dunlop's evidence that in the course of an encounter with Cllr Dunne, the latter outlined his importance as a councillor to Mr Dunlop and that Cllr Dunne solicited and received IR£15,000 from him.

ii. The Tribunal was satisfied that having regard to, in particular the very substantial size of the payment (IR£15,000), its receipt by Cllr Dunne was corrupt.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR MARY ELLIOTT (FG)

11.01 Cllr Elliott was first elected as a Fine Gael representative for the Dundrum Ward of Dublin County Council in 1985 and was re-elected in June 1991. While County Council records indicated that Cllr Elliott was present at some point in the course of the Special Meeting of Dublin County Council on 16 May 1991 there was no record of her having voted on the Quarryvale rezoning motions.

11.02 On 17 December 1992 Cllr Elliott voted against the proposal to reverse the Quarryvale zoning to 'E' (industrial), and voted against a motion to zone Quarryvale 'C1' with a retail 'cap' of 100,000 square feet. Cllr Elliott voted in support of the proposal to reinstate a 'D' (town centre) zoning on the Neilstown lands with specific objectives, and she duly voted for the amendment sought by Cllrs McGrath, Devitt, Tyndall and O'Halloran to the original motion of 9 December 1992, (to 'cap' retail development on Quarryvale to 250,000 square feet). Thus, Cllr Elliott's voting pattern on 17 December 1992 was largely supportive of the Quarryvale project.

11.03 On 17 February, 2000, following a request for information from the Tribunal, Cllr Elliott provided the following statement:

With regard to your request for a statement regarding the Quarryvale rezoning I wish to state that:

(a) I did not attend any public meetings in connection with the re-zoning of Quarryvale other than Council meetings.

(b) I met with Mr. O'Callaghan, this meeting was organised by Mr. Frank Dunlop and at this meeting the proposals of the Quarryvale Shopping Centre was outlined to me.

(c) I was not requested by any party or parties to provide any assistance in connection with the re-zoning of Quarryvale.

(d) I was lobbied by local organisations seeking my support for and against the proposal.

(e) I was not requested nor did I solicit the support of any member of Dublin County Council.

(f) I did not receive any payments or donations from any parties who were involved in the development of the Quarryvale Shopping Centre or from any person or company acting on behalf of the developers.

11.04 In her evidence to the Tribunal, Cllr Elliott could not recall where her meeting with Mr O’Callaghan had taken place. She recalled meeting Mr Dunlop on occasions. Cllr Elliott did not recall, as was suggested in Mr Dunlop’s ‘Contact Report’ of 17 June 1992 if Cllr Ridge had made contact with her specifically about the Quarryvale project.

11.05 After Cllr Ridge’s evidence that she sought Cllr Elliott’s support for Quarryvale was put to her, Cllr Elliott acknowledged that she may well have spoken to Cllr Ridge in relation to the Quarryvale rezoning issue, although she did not believe that Cllr Ridge had asked her specifically to vote in support of Quarryvale.

11.06 The Tribunal was satisfied from documentation provided to it by Mr Dunlop, that at some point after 22 June 1992 Mr Dunlop established contact with Cllr Elliott. Mr Dunlop’s diary for that date recorded a reminder to ‘ring Mary Elliott’. In the lead up to the December 1992 vote, in notes prepared by him, Mr Dunlop documented Cllr Elliott’s support for Quarryvale as ‘definite’ – an indication in the Tribunal’s view that Cllr Elliott had conveyed her support for Quarryvale to Mr Dunlop.

11.07 It was also apparent that in the latter part of 1992 social functions were arranged by Mr Dunlop which included Cllr Elliott. Mr Dunlop’s diary for 6 November 1992 noted plans for a dinner engagement with Cllr Ridge, Cllr Mitchell and Cllr Elliott and Mr Owen O’Callaghan.¹ On 8 December 1992 (the day prior to the lodging of the McGrath/Ridge/Tyndall/O’Halloran Quarryvale motion), Mr Dunlop’s diary noted a dinner engagement at Le Coq Hardi Restaurant with ‘Therese, Olivia, Mary, Ann, Owen O’C.’ Cllr Elliott told the Tribunal that she could not recall the occasion in question. Nor had she any recollection of being in the company of Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan with Cllrs Ridge, Mitchell and Devitt for dinner engagements on 24 March or the 28 July 1993, as also noted in Mr Dunlop’s diary. A note of a telephone contact by Cllr Ridge to Mr Dunlop’s office on 23 November 1993 suggested that Cllr Elliott was again an intended guest at a lunch of the ‘2 x 4 club’ but was unable to make that engagement which according to Mr Dunlop’s diary took place on Thursday 2 December 1993.

11.08 Mr Dunlop explained to the Tribunal that the ‘2 x 4 club’ was the name given to the occasional lunch meetings which were attended by himself, Mr Owen O’Callaghan, the ‘Fine Gael Ladies’ (a reference to Cllrs Ann Devitt, Mary Elliott, Therese Ridge and Olivia Mitchell), and, on occasion Cllr Liam T Cosgrave.

11.09 Although she had no recollection of the specific events in question, Cllr Elliott did not dispute that she had dined in the company of Mr Dunlop, Mr O’Callaghan and her fellow Fine Gael councillors, Cllrs Ridge, Mitchell and Devitt. Asked on Day 847 if Quarryvale had been discussed with Mr O’Callaghan on these occasions, Cllr Elliott replied:

‘We would have discussed it but I know there wouldn’t have been any representation, asking for votes or anything like that at it, I suppose it would have been discussed alright.’

11.10 Cllr Elliott acknowledged to the Tribunal that in May 2000, when assisting the Fine Gael internal Inquiry she told the Inquiry that she ‘attended one dinner hosted by Frank Dunlop in Roly’s Restaurant.’ Cllr Elliott did not make any reference in her disclosure of information to the Inquiry of having dined on occasions in the company of Mr O’Callaghan.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR JIM FAHEY (FF)

12.01 Cllr Jim Fahey was elected to Dublin County Council in 1985 representing the Mulhuddard ward. He lost his seat in 1991.

12.02 Cllr Fahey's name appeared at No. 7 on Mr Dunlop's 1991 Local Election contributions list provided to the Tribunal on Day 147. In October 2000 Mr Dunlop provided the following information:

I paid the sum of £2,000 to Mr. Jim Fahey in a pub in Middle Abbey Street in and around the time of the Quarryvale vote. While the payment was made at a time which coincided with the 1991 local election campaign it was specifically made for his support for the Quarryvale motion – a fact which he reminded me of during the course of our discussion. Mr. Fahey supported Quarryvale and it was with this support that the payment was made.' Later in the same statement Mr Dunlop averred 'I came to know Mr. Fahey through my association with Fianna Fail. He was an active member of the organisation in West County Dublin and was elected to Dublin County Council for the Mulhuddart Ward. It is my belief that occasionally Mr. Fahey was asked to sign Motions for developers who thought they might have had difficulty getting other councillors to sign them.

The sum paid was the sum requested [...]'

Mr. Fahey was under pressure from both Green Property and the Lenihan faction of Fianna Fail in West Dublin who were against Quarryvale. He supported Quarryvale and it was for this support that the payment was made.

He lost his seat in the 1991 Local Elections.

12.03 In his December 2003 statement Mr Dunlop elaborated on the circumstances of the payment as follows:

The payment of £2,000 in cash to Councillor Jim Fahey was made on a date after the vote on Quarryvale in Dublin County Council on 16th May 1991. I was contacted by Councillor Fahey by telephone a number of times after the vote with a view to a meeting. I eventually met him in Buswells Hotel at 1.50pm on Thursday 6th June 1991 and it was at this meeting that he made a request for money for the election and reminded me that he had been supportive of the Quarryvale motion and would be so again. He said that he was facing a hard fight locally to retain his seat but had good hopes of doing so. I specifically asked him for the amount he had in mind and he said 'a couple of grand.' I agreed and made an arrangement to meet him again the following day, Friday 7th June, at a pub which he nominated, the name of which I have now forgotten, but which is located near the intersection of Liffey Street and Abbey Street. I met him there at lunch time, bought him a drink, handed over the money in an envelope and left. The money used to pay Councillor Fahey was drawn from the amounts of money available to me from various sources at this time.

12.04 Mr Dunlop confirmed the aforementioned content of his written statements in the course of his evidence to the Tribunal.

12.05 Cllr Fahey acknowledged receipt of a IR£2,000 political donation from Mr Dunlop in 1991, but denied any connection between this payment and the Quarryvale rezoning issue. Cllr Fahey claimed that he did not know Mr Dunlop was involved with Quarryvale. Moreover, Cllr Fahey disputed Mr Dunlop's evidence regarding the manner and location of the payment.

12.06 Cllr Fahey denied that he ever met Mr Dunlop in Buswells Hotel, Dublin for the purposes outlined by Mr Dunlop. He also denied that he had telephoned Mr Dunlop seeking financial assistance, but stated that it may have been the case that Mr Dunlop was the recipient of a letter issued by him to a number of firms in and around the time of the Local Election campaign requesting financial support.

12.07 Cllr Fahey's account of his encounter with Mr Dunlop was as follows: in the course of the election campaign, on an occasion when he was returning to his office in Mulhuddart following canvassing, he encountered Mr Dunlop outside his office. Mr Dunlop handed him a cheque. Although not completely certain of the amount, Cllr Fahey believed that the cheque given to him was for IR£2,000. Cllr Fahey stated that he did not ponder the reason for the payment by Mr Dunlop of this money and he had surmised that Mr Dunlop had done so probably because he had been the recipient of a letter from Cllr Fahey seeking financial support. Cllr Fahey was adamant that what he received from Mr Dunlop was a cheque, and he believed that it was either from one of Mr Dunlop's companies, or perhaps, a third party cheque provided to Mr Dunlop and passed on to Mr Fahey. He said he cashed the cheque in a local public house.

12.08 The Tribunal's analysis of the bank accounts of Mr Dunlop and the companies associated with him did not reveal any cheque debit of IR£2,000 in the period in question.

THE SEQUENCE OF CLLR FAHEY'S DISCLOSURE TO THE TRIBUNAL IN RELATION TO THE RECEIPT OF IR£2,000 FROM MR DUNLOP

12.09 On 20 December 1999 the Tribunal wrote to Cllr Fahey seeking details of his involvement, if any, in relation to the rezoning of Quarryvale. Among the questions posed by the Tribunal was:

whether you were, at any time and for any purpose, in receipt of any payment(s), donation(s) or benefit(s) (including any form of gift, assistance, service, facility, entertainment or any other benefit of a non monetary nature) from any parties who were involved in the development of the Quarryvale Shopping Centre or from any person(s) or company(ies) acting on behalf of the developers.

The parties which were involved in the development of Quarryvale appear to have been Barkhill Ltd., Riga Ltd., O'Callaghan Properties Ltd., Owen O'Callaghan and Thomas Gilmartin. The parties which appear to have acted on behalf of the developers are Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd., Shefran Ltd., and Frank Dunlop.

12.10 The import of Cllr Fahey's response on 14 March 2000 to the above queries was that he had no involvement with the Quarryvale rezoning. Moreover, Cllr Fahey added the following postscript to his response:

I have checked with Dublin Co. Co. and they told me that this rezoning took place in 1993. I was elected from 1985 – 91.

12.11 In a letter dated 14 June 2001, the Tribunal advised Cllr Fahey that the following information had come to its attention:

a. That during the course of the making of the 1993 Development Plan you received amounts of money totalling approximately £2,000 from Frank Dunlop :

- that part of the sum of money mentioned at (a) above was given to you for your support for the re-zoning of land in Quarryvale, Lucan, County Dublin.*

12.12 Cllr Fahey's written response to that letter of 27 June 2001 stated:

With refer to paragraph (a) thereof, as advised in my letter to you of 11th June, I recently obtained statements of a Donations Account from the Bank which I am presently in the course of researching. However, you mention in this paragraph that sums of money totalling approximately £2,000 were received by me from Frank Dunlop during the 1993 Development Plan. I did not receive amounts of money from Frank Dunlop or indeed anyone else during this period. However, during the election campaign of June 1991 I did receive a political donation from Frank Dunlop of £2,000. This was by way of a cheque but I cannot remember the Company name. No part of this cheque was for support re re-zoning but was given as a donation on foot of a letter circulated to Firms requesting their support to fight a political campaign. The cheque was issued during the campaign.

When I was first interviewed by the Tribunal's solicitor Maire Anne Howard, this question arose. I stated at that time that I was not sure about a donation from Frank Dunlop. After the meeting I rang Frank Dunlop to confirm with him and he told me he gave me no money. Some weeks later I got a phone call from Tribunal Solicitors asking me about a donation from Mr. Dunlop and based on what I was told, I advised her I had got no funds from him. Hoping this now clarifies the matter.

However, in relation to the above I would like to mention that I did not vote for the re-zoning of Quarryvale as I was not a member of the Council then. My vote on Quarryvale was to put it on public display (Map). Also during my campaign I issued statements that I would not be supporting the Quarryvale re-zoning as it had become a big issue during the campaign.

12.13 On the same date, Cllr Fahey also wrote, in response to other queries raised by the Tribunal on 14 June 2001, separately, as follows:

With reference to your letter of 14th June 2001, I wish to state that I do not hold in my possession any records, diaries or other material relating to the Quarryvale development.

With reference to the second paragraph of your letter, I also wish to state the following

- 1. Frank Dunlop – known to me for moving in Council circles. I had no meetings with him.*
- 2. Owen O'Callaghan. I had no meetings with him.*
- 3. Advisors or representatives of Owen O'Callaghan. I had no meetings with them.*
- 4. Ambrose Kelly. I had no meetings with him.*
- 5. Liam Lawlor – known to me as a T.D. in my Constituency. I had no meetings with him regarding Quarryvale.*
- 6. Pdraig Flynn. I had no meetings with him.*
- 7. Tom Gilmartin. I had no meetings with him.*

12.14 On Day 817 it was put to Cllr Fahey that his acknowledgement to the Tribunal in 2001 of the receipt of IR£2,000 from Mr Dunlop in 1991 was a reversal of the position previously adopted by him, namely that he had received no money from Mr Dunlop. In seeking to explain his earlier position, Cllr Fahey told the Tribunal that the question of whether or not he had received any donation from Mr Dunlop had arisen in the course of his initial contact with the Tribunal, following upon which he telephoned Mr Dunlop to query whether in fact he had received a donation. Cllr Fahey described his approach to Mr Dunlop in the following terms:

‘Yes. After being initially interviewed by the Tribunal, which it was mentioned to me about Frank Dunlop. I rang Mr. Dunlop in regard to it and the first thing he said to me, this is my first phone call, is that I received nothing from him. That I might have received drink from him sometime in Conway’s pub or one of the local pubs, which I don’t even remember being in his company ever. I subsequently got a call from the Tribunal some weeks later after being in and advised that I had got nothing based on what he had told me that I had got nothing from him. And then I became aware that he had talked about through the media, that he had talked about a sum of 2,000 pounds.

So I done some checking and I realised and it was brought to my attention that in fact he did come up to, he did come to my office. But I rang Mr. Dunlop the second time in regards to it and, yeah, he confirmed that he gave me 2,000 pounds. I had said yes, Frank , I do remember I have now done some research and you came up to my office I said what I don’t remember is, what company because I have a feeling it was some company cheque in his reply to me was oh, it would be one of my companies. He said to me to, he’d get back to me on the matter. This was at the weekend that I rang him. He didn’t and I rang him again on the Tuesday and he informed me that he couldn’t talk about the matter. And that the Tribunal wouldn’t be happy if they knew I was ringing him.

I think my reply to that was I didn’t mind who knew I was ringing him, I just wanted the facts and that’s where it stood. He said that he had been advised by his solicitor not to talk to me. That was the third phone call. The last time I spoke to Mr. Dunlop and all three calls were to his home, not to his mobile.’

12.15 Cllr Fahey took issue with the purpose of his contact with Mr Dunlop as was attributed by Mr Dunlop in a statement made by him. Cllr Fahey denied that he had the type of conversation with Mr Dunlop, as described by Mr Dunlop in his statement of 11 February 2003. Mr Dunlop stated as follows:

Jim Fahey rang me twice, once at my home and once I believe on my mobile to say that he knew he ‘got something’ from me but could not remember how much. These telephone calls are of recent origin – sometime in 2001. I told him I could not really talk to him about these matters and I did confirm for him that he received £2,000 from me in 1991. He said that was OK because it was for the Local Elections. I intimated to him that that was not so and his reply was that there would be no problem because both of us would agree that it was legitimate. I reminded him that he had to say whatever he believed and I would be telling the Tribunal what I knew. These two telephone conversations ran along similar lines and I have not heard from, or met him, since.

CLLR FAHEY'S INVOLVEMENT IN THE QUARRYVALE REZONING

12.16 Notwithstanding Cllr Fahey's denial of having engaged in one to one meetings with Mr Dunlop in 1991, and his insistence that he would only have casually met Mr Dunlop in and around the Council, the Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Fahey and Mr Dunlop did meet on a one to one basis while Cllr Fahey was a councillor, in relation to Quarryvale, and perhaps in relation to other matters. Thus, the Tribunal was satisfied that, at the very least, as recorded in Mr Dunlop's diary, he and Mr Fahey met on 15 February 1991, and on 6 June 1991.

12.17 Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged meeting Cllr Fahey on a few occasions prior to the Quarryvale vote of 16 May 1991, and he told the Tribunal that Mr Fahey had informed him that he would support Quarryvale. Cllr Fahey denied that he ever met Mr O'Callaghan. The Tribunal however preferred Mr O'Callaghan's evidence in this regard.

12.18 Cllr Fahey was present for the two Quarryvale motions of 16 May 1991 and the records indicated that he voted in favour of the amendment to the original motion to cap retail development on Quarryvale, and that he also voted in favour of the substantive Quarryvale motion.

12.19 It was common case that the Quarryvale rezoning success of 16 May 1991, in the teeth of strong opposition from Green Property Plc became a contentious issue in the course of the Local Election campaign, a fact recognised by Mr O'Callaghan.

12.20 Documentation provided to the Tribunal by Riga indicated that on 6 August 1991 Mr Dunlop billed Riga for, inter alia, the 'cost of distributing leaflets in the Blanchardstown, Clonsilla, Castleknock and Mulhuddart areas' as well as 'the design and printing of leaflets and advertisements.' The leaflets were ordered by Mr Dunlop and bore the Fianna Fail logo, and were paid for by Mr O'Callaghan. These leaflets were entitled 'Blanchardstown Town Centre the truth and the facts.'

12.21 The leaflets sought to counter the opposition of Green Property to the Quarryvale development and took issue with the manner in which Green Property were progressing their town centre development at Blanchardstown. The electorate was urged to: ‘Support your Fianna Fail team Fahey, Leahy, McGennis.’

12.22 Cllr Fahey told the Tribunal of his contact with Mr Corcoran of Green Property prior to the Quarryvale rezoning vote of 16 May 1991 and who expressed his dissatisfaction ‘with the whole thing of Quarryvale.’

12.23 Notwithstanding having voted in favour of rezoning Quarryvale ‘Town Centre’, albeit with limited retail space, Cllr Fahey subsequently explained in a circular his position vis-à-vis Quarryvale to the effect that he had voted only on a ‘proposal’ to:

...include Quarryvale in the Draft Development Plan’ as a ‘first step in order to allow for objections from the public.

The circular further stated that:

...when the Council moves on to the 2nd step, that is, to consider these objections, and to discuss the re-zoning of the 180 acre site at Quarryvale, Jim Fahey will object and vote against.

12.24 Cllr Fahey did not get the opportunity to implement this electoral promise as he lost his seat in the Local Election. Having regard to the Green Property opposition to Quarryvale in the course of the Local Election campaign, it appeared that Cllr Fahey’s support for Quarryvale contributed to his electoral demise. Indeed, Cllr Fahey acknowledged that because his electoral area was Mulhuddart, it had been expected that he would have supported the nearby Blanchardstown (Green Property) development.

12.25 Cllr Fahey told the Tribunal that he only voted in favour of Quarryvale after he was ‘prevailed upon and persuaded to do so by the Party Whip.’ Cllr Fahey provided quite a graphic description of the role played by Cllr Pat Dunne, as the Fianna Fail Party whip, on the day of the Quarryvale rezoning vote. He told the Tribunal that after casting his vote on the amending motion to limit retail development on Quarryvale, as he moved to exit the Council chamber prior to the vote on the substantive Quarryvale motion, Cllr Dunne ran after him. Cllr Fahey described the incident in the following terms:

‘I was in the corridor of the chamber at the time on my way out, who was there. There would have been to and fro we’re talkin about a 78 member chamber with a gallery full so I wouldn’t know. He just asked me. I walked out. He ran out after me. Everybody in the chamber had voted at this stage. I'm sure Mr. Dunlop being a man of numbers will remember very well that I recorded my vote after everybody had voted in the chamber. I asked for my vote then to be recorded.'

12.26 Cllr Fahey said he believed that Cllr Dunne had followed him out of the chamber because he 'was looking at a situation where other councillors in the particular wards, vis-à-vis Castleknock and Mulhuddart wards, Fianna Fail councillors voted for and he probably wouldn't want me be being a sole member out.'

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE PAYMENT OF £2,000 TO CLLR FAHEY BY MR DUNLOP

i. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop paid IR£2,000 to Cllr Fahey at the time of the 1991 Local Election, in which Cllr Fahey was an unsuccessful candidate, and that this payment was in cash and not a cheque, as suggested by Cllr Fahey. In preferring Mr Dunlop's evidence in this regard the Tribunal took account of the fact that on the day Mr Dunlop believed he had paid Cllr Fahey (7 June 1991), Mr Dunlop withdrew IR£25,000 in cash from his 042 account. Moreover, by that date, Mr Dunlop had received cheques from Riga Ltd, payable to Shefran in the amount of IR£80,000.

ii. The Tribunal rejected Cllr Fahey's evidence that he had not been actively lobbied on a one to one basis by Mr Dunlop to support Quarryvale.

iii. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Fahey, solicited the payment of IR£2,000. Furthermore, the Tribunal was satisfied that at the time of the handing over of the money Cllr Fahey probably did allude to the support he had given to the Quarryvale project. The soliciting and acceptance of money from Mr Dunlop in all the circumstances compromised the requirement that Cllr Fahey carry out his duties as a councillor in a disinterested fashion, and was improper.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR TONY FOX (FF)

13.01 Cllr Tony Fox was elected to Dublin County Council in 1985, and again in 1991. He transferred to South Dublin County Council in 1994, and was re-elected to that council in all subsequent elections. Cllr Fox was a tailor by profession.

13.02 Cllr Fox was identified by Mr Dunlop on Day 147 (19 April 2000) as a recipient of IR£2,000 cash during the 1991 Local Election campaign.

13.03 In October 2000 Mr Dunlop advised the Tribunal as follows:

'I gave Mr. Tony Fox a sum of £2,000 in cash at the time of the local elections in 1991. Mr. Fox and I discussed the Quarryvale project generally. We agreed that Mr. Fox's support would be necessary in respect of Quarryvale and other developments. Mr. Fox also reminded me of the need for his support on subsequent occasions. The sum paid to Mr. Fox was paid at his home in Rathfarnham in the evening time.'

13.04 In his December 2003 statement Mr Dunlop elaborated on the circumstances of the 1991 payment to Cllr Fox as follows:

The payment of £2,000 in cash to Cllr Tony Fox was made at his home on Tuesday 4th June 1991. I had arranged to meet him there at 8.00pm. Initially he was accompanied by a friend/party supporter, a Mr. Paddy Curry, who left to continue canvassing. I paid the money to Cllr Fox in an envelope. I met his wife while I was there and on a subsequent occasion when I brought Mr. O'Callaghan to canvass him during the run up to the second vote in December 1992. The monies used to pay Cllr Fox on this occasion were drawn from the monies I had available to me from various sources at this time.

13.05 Prior to providing this statement Mr Dunlop had not averted to either the date of the payment or to the presence of Mr Curry at Cllr Fox's home. Mr Fox had, prior to December 2003, referred to his connection with Mr Curry in the course of a public hearing in relation to another module.

13.06 In the course of his evidence in the Quarryvale module, Mr Dunlop stood over his claim that he paid IR£2,000 cash to Cllr Fox on 4 June 1991, and he confirmed that he had encountered Mr Curry on that occasion. Asked by Tribunal Counsel on Day 771 how he had come to recollect the date of the payment and the presence of Mr Curry, Mr Dunlop replied:

‘Well, in relation to Mr. Curry, I had met Mr. Curry before when I was doing my new narrative statement or more detailed narrative statement at the request of the Tribunal. I endeavoured to recollect as much as I possibly could as to the circumstances of what had occurred, and as I said, I had met Mr. Curry before and during another issue that I was dealing with, with Mr. Fox, but Mr. Curry left. I also met Mr. Fox’s wife, but that’s not relevant. And then in attempting to come to terms with the date of the payment I had to look at my diary and see when did I actually have a contact with Mr. Fox.

Now I had lots and lots of contacts with Mr. Fox. Both scheduled and unscheduled.’

13.07 And Mr Dunlop went on to state that:

‘And in the context of the Quarryvale vote on the 16th and Tony Fox’s request for money, for the local elections on foot of his support for Quarryvale, I do recollect travelling to his home and paying him the money.’

13.08 Mr Dunlop’s diary for 4 June 1991 recorded the following:

8 o’clock P. Curry

Tony Fox

13.09 Mr Dunlop testified that prior to 4 June 1991¹ he had met Mr Curry with Cllr Fox in connection with the Texas Homecare material contravention vote, a project in respect of which Mr Dunlop had lobbied Cllr Fox. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he ‘probably’ knew on 4 June 1991, when going to see Cllr Fox, that Mr Curry was going to be present ‘for one reason or another.’ In the course of his evidence Mr Dunlop denied that he had used an entry in his diary for ‘P. Curry Tony Fox’ on 4 June 1991 as a convenient date to support his claim of having travelled to Cllr Fox’s home during the course of the Local Election campaign in 1991 to give him money. Mr Dunlop stated that he had:

‘a vivid recollection of being in Mr. Fox’s house in Mountain View Road, Mountain- I can’t exactly remember the address now, but I mean I know where it is. And the circumstances in which I went there and the circumstances in which Mr. Paddy Curry was present. Mr. Curry was not present when I gave money to Mr. Fox, but the reason I went there was with the view to paying Mr. Fox 2000 pounds as agreed.’

13.10 Mr Dunlop agreed that despite his 'vivid recollection', he had been unable to give details of the date of the payment and of Mr Curry's presence at Cllr Fox's home until December 2003. In reply to questions posed in cross-examination by Cllr Fox's Counsel, Mr Dunlop stated that when, in 2003, the Tribunal sought further details from him, it was possible that he had checked his diary and that he had noted an arrangement to meet Mr Curry and Cllr Fox at '8 o'clock' on 4 June 1991. Accounting for his failure to include this detail in his October 2000 statement, Mr Dunlop described that statement as an 'overarching statement in relation to the totality of what had taken place in Dublin County Council and my involvement in it and with whom.' He said that on a number of occasions, subsequent to the provision of that statement, the Tribunal had reverted seeking further information, documentation and detail from him. Other than possibly having had recourse to his diary, Mr Dunlop said he did not know how he had come to recall the detail he provided in his December 2003 statement.

13.11 Mr Dunlop could not say why, on 4 June 1991, Mr Curry's name featured in his diary if Mr Dunlop's purpose at that time was to meet Cllr Fox, but he suggested the following:

'...I cannot give you an explanation other than to say that I would have known that Mr. Curry was going to be there. The only person who could have told me that Mr. Curry was going to be there was Mr. Fox. I don't think that I ever had any direct dealings with Mr. Curry, other than in his capacity as Chairman of the Resident's Association, in relation to a completely separate matter.'

13.12 Mr Dunlop, although he admitted to the Tribunal that he altered his diaries on occasions by obliteration and heavy over-writing, denied that he had tampered with the 4 June 1991 entry. He also maintained that Cllr Fox's and Mr Curry's names had been written in the diary at the same time.²

13.13 Mr Curry testified to the Tribunal that, in his capacity as Chairman of the Mountain View Resident's Association, he believed he met with Mr Dunlop in the period 1990/1991, while Mr Dunlop was lobbying on behalf of Texas Homecare – a retail business which was seeking planning permission for a development in Mr Curry's locality. Mr Curry and Cllr Fox, being a local councillor, had worked together on the Association for a number of years. Mr Curry stated that he had met Mr Dunlop in relation to the Texas Homecare issue in the local Youth Club, and also at the Texas Homecare site. He could not say whether one of their meetings took place on 4 June 1991. While Mr Curry admitted to having been a visitor to Cllr Fox's home on occasions, he was certain that he never met Mr Dunlop there, and he further denied that he had ever canvassed on behalf of Cllr Fox at election time.

13.14 Cllr Fox's stated position in the Quarryvale module (as in ten other modules) was that he had never at any point in time received money from Mr Dunlop, either by way of political contribution or otherwise. He described Mr Dunlop's evidence as a 'total fabrication.' He also testified that neither Mr Dunlop nor Mr O'Callaghan had lobbied him for his support for Quarryvale prior to 16 May 1991 vote. Cllr Fox stated that insofar as he was lobbied in relation to Quarryvale, this had occurred by way of approaches from local Fianna Fail councillors, and he stated that the matter had been debated at Fianna Fail group meetings in Conways public house prior to County Council meetings.

13.15 County Council records indicated that Cllr Fox voted in favour of the Quarryvale amending motion and the substantive motion on 16 May 1991. Cllr Fox told the Tribunal that a quote attributed to him in a newspaper article during the currency of the 1991 Local Election campaign was probably an accurate representation of what he had told the paper at that time, namely that he was a 'loyal voter with the Fianna Fail block on the Council.'

13.16 In the course of his testimony on Day 835, Cllr Fox acknowledged that Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan visited him at his home in September 1992 in order to lobby him to support Quarryvale. Both Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan confirmed their attendance with Cllr Fox in his home, but were uncertain of the date of that meeting. Cllr Fox first apprised the Tribunal of this fact in June 2001 when responding to a series of questions posed by the Tribunal, including a question as to whether he had met with Mr Dunlop, Mr O'Callaghan and others regarding Quarryvale.

13.17 Under the heading 'Frank Dunlop' Cllr Fox wrote in his statement of June 2001:

Mr. Dunlop and Mr. O'Callaghan called to see me at my home in relation to Quarryvale. Thereafter Mr. O'Callaghan wrote to thank me for meeting him. I also recollect meeting Mr. Dunlop in the vicinity of the Co Council Offices. I presume I was given promotional literature by Mr. Dunlop.

13.18 Under the heading 'Mr Owen O'Callaghan' Cllr Fox stated in that statement:

As mentioned above I met Mr. Owen O’Callaghan with Mr. Dunlop called to see me at my home in relation to Quarryvale. I would have also met Mr. O’Callaghan in the vicinity of the Co Council Offices where he would have spoken to me...

13.19 Previously (on 24 January 2000), Cllr Fox had replied in the negative to all Tribunal inquiries relating to Quarryvale, including one which asked Cllr Fox if he had ‘attended any private meetings with any party or parties in connection with the rezoning of Quarryvale and, if so, the nature, purpose, dates and venues of such meetings and the identity of the persons attending.’

13.20 In the course of a private interview with the Tribunal in December 1998 Cllr Fox was asked if he had ever met Mr O’Callaghan. Cllr Fox stated that while he may have seen him and spoken to him in the County Council, he had not known him to be a developer. Cllr Fox explained the inconsistency of that position with his subsequent acknowledgment that Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan visited him in his home in September 1992, and sought his support for Quarryvale, by claiming that when providing information to the Tribunal in 1998, and again in 2000, he had not recollected their visit to his home.

13.21 Cllr Fox acknowledged that the purpose of that visit to his home in September 1992 was to solicit his support for the forthcoming Quarryvale vote. Such support was provided by Cllr Fox on 17 December 1992 when he voted in favour of confirming the ‘C’ (town centre) and ‘E’ (industrial) zoning of the Quarryvale lands, albeit with a retail cap of 250,000 square feet. Cllr Fox also acknowledged to the Tribunal that he had indicated his support to Mr O’Callaghan in September 1992. Cllr Fox described Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan’s arrival at his home in September 1992 as having been unannounced.

13.22 As to whether or not Cllr Fox was canvassed for support by Mr Dunlop prior to 16 May 1991,³ the Tribunal preferred Mr Dunlop’s evidence to that of Cllr Fox. The Tribunal was persuaded to this view by virtue of the fact that in the first instance, Mr Dunlop’s role in the lead up to the Quarryvale vote was to lobby councillors. It appeared unlikely to the Tribunal that Cllr Fox, with whom, on Cllr Fox’s own admission, Mr Dunlop had an established relationship in relation to the Texas Homecare project, would not have been lobbied by Mr Dunlop. Moreover, the Tribunal was fortified in its conclusions in this regard by the fact that Cllr Fox featured on Mr Dunlop’s 1992 contacts lists, not just as someone who had been contacted by Mr Dunlop but also as someone who was a point of contact for other councillors. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Fox was seen by Mr Dunlop (and correctly so), as a councillor likely to support projects requiring rezoning for development, and would therefore have been an obvious target for lobbying.

13.23 Notwithstanding Cllr Fox's categorical denial of having solicited, or received, IR£2,000 from Mr Dunlop in June 1991, and notwithstanding the absence of any documentary evidence of such payment, the Tribunal was satisfied to accept Mr Dunlop's evidence that Cllr Fox was among those who solicited and received money from him at that time.⁴

13.24 Furthermore, notwithstanding Cllr Fox's staunch denial that he received money from Mr Dunlop in 1991, the Tribunal was satisfied that such was indeed provided to Cllr Fox, most probably, as claimed by Mr Dunlop on the occasion of a visit to Cllr Fox's home on 4 June 1991, and that it was provided in cash as maintained by Mr Dunlop.

13.25 In the course of his testimony in this module, and indeed in a substantial number of other modules in which Mr Dunlop made allegations of payments to him connected with rezoning issues, Cllr Fox denied receipt of any money, on any occasion, from Mr Dunlop, by way of political donation or otherwise. Over the course of several modules, the Tribunal has rejected Cllr Fox's denials, preferring the evidence tendered by Mr Dunlop.

13.26 One factor which led the Tribunal to prefer Mr Dunlop's evidence was the Tribunal's finding (enunciated in Chapter Thirteen/St. Gerard's lands) that in the aftermath of the establishment of the Tribunal, Cllr Fox and Mr Dunlop came to an agreement that monies which had been provided by Mr Dunlop to Cllr Fox in course of the making of the 1993 Development Plan and the 1998 Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown Development Plan, would be designated by both as political donations in the context of their respective dealings with the Tribunal.

13.27 Cllr Fox's soliciting and acceptance of an election contribution from Mr Dunlop took place in the context of his having been lobbied by Mr Dunlop with regard to Quarryvale, and in the knowledge which Cllr Fox undoubtedly had, that Mr Dunlop would continue to promote Quarryvale during the course of the 1983 Development Plan review. As such, the soliciting and acceptance of the funds compromised Cllr Fox's required disinterested performance of his duties as a councilor, and was improper.

⁴ Cllr Fox did on his own admission solicit a payment from Monarch in 1992. See Chapter Three (the Cherrywood module).

PART 7 - CLLR CYRIL GALLAGHER (DECEASED) (FF)

14.01 Cllr Gallagher was an elected councillor for the Swords Ward in North County Dublin from 1979 to 1993 and in Fingal County Council from 1994 to 1998. He died on 20 March 2000, and therefore did not give sworn evidence to the Tribunal, although he previously responded to a letter from the Tribunal and was privately interviewed by the Tribunal.

14.02 Cllr Gallagher's name appeared on Mr Dunlop's 1991 Local Election contribution list as a recipient of IR£1,000.

14.03 In his October 2000 statement to the Tribunal Mr Dunlop wrote:

I paid Mr. Cyril Gallagher a sum of £1,000 at the time of the 1991 local elections following a mutual discussion between us concerning the cost of elections. This payment was made in cash, either in Conway's pub or in the Grand Hotel in Malahide. I made this payment to Mr. Gallagher in recognition of the support which he had provided to Quarryvale.', and 'I came to know Mr. Gallagher through my association with Fianna Fail. He was a long serving member of the organisation in North Dublin and on occasion took a very independent line regarding the development of Swords.

I always enjoyed a very good personal relationship with Mr. Gallagher and I had no hesitation in giving him £1,000 for the 1991 Local Elections when a mutual discussion took place vis-à-vis the cost of elections.

14.04 Requested by the Tribunal to provide it with further details of his dealings with Cllr Gallagher in relation to Quarryvale, Mr Dunlop, in his December 2003 statement said as follows:

Councillor Cyril Gallagher came to see me at my offices at 25 Upper Mount Street, Dublin 2 at 11.00 am on Thursday, 30th May, 1991, by prior arrangement. At this meeting he raised the matter of election expenses. Mr. Gallagher and I enjoyed a very good relationship and I do not believe that he requested a contribution as a result of his support for Quarryvale, either in the past or for the future. He had asked for the meeting with me during a telephone conversation some short time after the vote on the Quarryvale issue in Dublin County Council on 16th May, 1991. I readily agreed to make an election donation to him and I offered £1,000 which he said would be very welcome. For whatever reason I did not pay him on that day and I arranged to telephone him some days later and meet with him for the purpose of giving him this money. The payment was made in cash and I cannot accurately recollect whether I gave it to him in Conway's Pub or in the Grand Hotel in Malahide, both of which were regular venues for our meetings together with a pub in Swords. There is no entry in my 1991 diary for a meeting with Councillor Gallagher i.e. between our meeting at my office on Thursday, 30th May and Polling Day on 27th June, 1991.

14.05 Mr Dunlop appeared to distinguish the approach to him made by Cllr Gallagher from the approaches made by the other councillors named by him, on the basis that Cllr Gallagher had asked for a political contribution simpliciter without alluding to support he had given, or would give, to Mr Dunlop regarding Quarryvale, or any other rezoning issue.

14.06 It was Mr Dunlop's evidence however that he himself, in making the payment to Cllr Gallagher may well have made reference to Cllr Gallagher's support for Quarryvale. Mr Dunlop put it thus:

'I cannot absolutely say that there is no discussion about Quarryvale, there would be very little point in my meeting with Councillor Gallagher either in the context of the local election or in relation to lobbying him about a particular development without discussing something that was happening at Dublin County Council, either on an anecdotal basis or on what was going to happen in the future.'

14.07 Again, when asked, if, in the course of paying Cllr Gallagher the IR£1,000 Quarryvale had been discussed, Mr Dunlop replied:

'I cannot say definitively that I did or did not, but the only point I make to you is that this is not a list of names that I drew up and stuck a pin in them and said that's the person I am going to give a thousand pounds to. I gave 1000 pounds to Cyril Gallagher for his, in the context of the local elections for the support that he had stated that he would give to Quarryvale, that was my demeanour at that particular time.'

14.08 And, later in the course of his testimony on Day 771 Mr Dunlop stated:

'...He (Cllr Gallagher) requested, he was supportive of me on many occasions, but this is in 1991. He has asked me for an election contribution, which I am very ready to give him in the context of his stated support and in the context of future support that I was going to require from him.'

14.09 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal on Day 771 that insofar as he had testified on Day 420 (the Fox & Mahony module) that he and Cllr Gallagher had discussed Quarryvale on the same day he had discussed an election contribution with him, such discussion was in the context of the Quarryvale issue having been raised by Mr Dunlop with Cllr Gallagher. According to Mr Dunlop:

‘...It would be completely and totally unrealistic to imagine that I had a discussion with Mr. Gallagher and giving him a thousand pounds and not referring either to events that had occurred or were about to occur.’

14.10 Dublin County Council records indicated that Cllr Gallagher voted in favour of the Quarryvale motions on 16 May 1991.

14.11 Mr O’Callaghan acknowledged having met and spoken to Cllr Gallagher about Quarryvale, possibly prior to 16 May 1991. He described Cllr Gallagher as a pro-development Cllr who had indicated to him his support for Quarryvale.

14.12 In the period between 29 May 1991 and 2 July 1991 the Tribunal identified a number of unexplained round figure lodgements to Cllr Gallagher’s bank accounts as follows:

- To an AIB account:	29 May 1991	IR£250
	17 June 1991	IR£800
	25 June 1991	IR£550
- To an An Post account:	2 July 1991	IR£3,000
(a savings certificate purchased with cash)

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS

i. The Tribunal was satisfied that, as testified to by Mr Dunlop, Cllr Gallagher sought and received IR£1,000 from Mr Dunlop in the course of the 1991 Local Election campaign.

ii. Notwithstanding Mr Dunlop’s testimony that there was no express link between the payment and Quarryvale, the Tribunal was satisfied, that Cllr Gallagher was aware in May/June 1991 of Mr Dunlop’s role as a lobbyist for Quarryvale and thus, in those circumstances, was satisfied that the soliciting and acceptance of an election contribution from Mr Dunlop compromised the required disinterested performance expected of Cllr Gallagher in his role in the making of a Development Plan, and was improper.

iii. While the information available to the Tribunal in relation to these (or any) lodgements to Cllr Gallagher’s bank/An Post accounts was insufficient to establish any definite or probable link between any of them and a payment from Mr Dunlop of IR£1,000 cash, the Tribunal could not exclude the possibility that money from Mr Dunlop contributed to one or more of the lodgements made by Cllr Gallagher on 29 May, 17 June, 25 June and 2 July 1991.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR SEAN GILBRIDE (FF)

CLLR GILBRIDE'S INTRODUCTION TO THE QUARRYVALE PROJECT

15.01 Cllr Gilbride was elected to Dublin County Council in 1985 and 1991. After January 1994, his Ward being Balbriggan, he became a member of Fingal County Council until 1999, when he did not seek re-election.

15.02 Cllr Gilbride was asked by Senator Willie Farrell to meet with Mr Gilmartin who was experiencing difficulties with a development in Dublin (the Quarryvale development). The three men knew each other as they had been neighbours in Sligo. Cllr Gilbride said he met Mr Gilmartin in 1990, but it is more likely to have happened prior to June 1989, as Cllr Gilbride said Mr Gilmartin was having problems purchasing land from Dublin Corporation at the time. Cllr Gilbride said he supported the Quarryvale project from the start and introduced Mr Gilmartin to Cllr McGrath. It was Cllr McGrath, who (being a local councillor) prepared the Quarryvale rezoning motion which was due to be lodged by 15 February 1991. When Mr O'Callaghan became involved in the Quarryvale project, he said he 'inherited' Cllrs Gilbride and McGrath who 'were ardent supporters of the project' and 'appeared to be Tom Gilmartin's main advisors on the political front.'

15.03 The Tribunal was satisfied that having been duly 'inherited' by Mr O'Callaghan from Mr Gilmartin, Cllr Gilbride lent his support to the former from February 1991 and, as stated in the section of this Part relating to Cllr McGrath, the Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Gilbride telephoned Mr Gilmartin on 15 February 1991 to urge him to sign the second Heads of Agreement¹, and to warn him that if he did not do so, Cllr McGrath's motion to rezone Quarryvale would not be lodged.

EVENTS OF 16 MAY 1991

15.04 Mr Gilmartin testified that he travelled to Dublin on 14 May 1991, in advance of the scheduled Quarryvale rezoning vote of 16 May 1991. AIB had requested his presence in Dublin for the vote, although it was Mr Gilmartin's belief that he was only required for 'decoration.'

15.05 Mr Gilmartin testified that on the morning of 16 May 1991 he met Mr O'Callaghan in a room hired by Mr O'Callaghan in the Royal Dublin Hotel. At various times the room was occupied by himself, Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Deane, Mr Dunlop and Cllr Gilbride, with Mr Lawlor coming and going. In addition, throughout the day a steady stream of councillors came to the room to consult with Mr O'Callaghan and the others. Mr Gilmartin described the whole day as being 'orchestrated by Gilbride, Lawlor, Dunlop and O'Callaghan.'

15.06 Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that at one point during the day, in the presence of Mr Deane, Mr Dunlop, Cllr Gilbride and, possibly, Mr O'Callaghan,² he announced his intention to call the 'Fraud Squad.' He made that announcement because in his view the events of 16 May 1991 were being 'orchestrated by corrupt people.' Mr Gilmartin stated that what he had in mind, in particular, was his knowledge of Mr Lawlor's and Cllr Finbarr Hanrahan's previous demands for money. It had been 'puzzling' to Mr Gilmartin on 16 May 1991 to learn from Mr O'Callaghan, that Mr O'Callaghan was trying to 'get Hanrahan on side' when, at the same time, Mr O'Callaghan was informing Mr Gilmartin that Cllr Hanrahan had accompanied Mr Corcoran of Green Property Plc, and Mr Corcoran's wife, to the County Council's offices where they were 'kicking up a hell of a stink' in relation to the proposed Quarryvale rezoning. Mr Gilmartin said he could not understand *'why was Mr O'Callaghan telling me that Hanrahan was campaigning against us when he was, actually, as I understood, seconding the motion. So as I seen it, there was a ... I was once again a patsy in the middle of all of this.'*³

15.07 Mr Gilmartin described the reaction of those present in the hotel room to his announcement that he was going to call the 'Fraud Squad' in the following terms: 'Dunlop nearly fell off his chair' and 'John Deane nearly had a heart attack.' Mr Gilmartin also stated that Cllr Gilbride had begged him not to make the telephone call.

15.08 As matters transpired, Mr Gilmartin did not call the Fraud Squad because, he claimed, he had been reminded by Mr Dunlop and Cllr Gilbride that his earlier attempts (in 1989) to alert the authorities about corruption had not achieved anything and that it was likely therefore that his complaints in May 1991 would not be believed.

² On Day 737, Mr Gilmartin said that Mr O'Callaghan was not present when he threatened to call the 'Fraud Squad.' However, during his cross-examination on Day 763, he said Mr O'Callaghan was there.

³ Cllr Finbarr Hanrahan together with Cllr Hand and Cllr Colm McGrath were the signatories to a motion which amended Cllr McGrath's original motion effectively limiting retail development on Quarryvale to 500,000 square feet approximately.

15.09 Both Mr Dunlop and Cllr Gilbride denied being present when Mr Gilmartin's claimed utterances about calling the Fraud Squad were made.

15.10 Mr Deane's account of events was as follows:

'..At that meeting Mr. Gilmartin, he and I were in a room together, the vote was being discussed and Mr. Gilmartin said at one stage that he could make a phone call and two or three of the other councillors would be arrested. And yes, I was totally shocked when I heard that. And I asked him why and he just said, 'I can do it.' And that conversation persisted backwards and forwards with me asking him why go do it, and he said people were opposed to the rezoning of Quarryvale and I asked him why wouldn't he make a phone call so if he could have these people arrested and just nothing happened.'

15.11 According to Mr Deane, Mr Gilmartin had never used the phrase 'Fraud Squad' but did indicate he would call the 'police.' Mr Deane's belief was that only he and Mr Gilmartin had been present when Mr Gilmartin made his announcement. Mr Deane contended that while he had pressed Mr Gilmartin as to who and for what reason he would have anyone arrested Mr Gilmartin had not elaborated on the matter but had merely repeated that 'all I have to do is pick up the phone and ring.' Mr Deane told the Tribunal that his interpretation of what was said by Mr Gilmartin was that a telephone call from him to the police could have led to the removal of councillors from the Council who were opposing the rezoning of Quarryvale.

15.12 Mr O'Callaghan gave evidence that some time subsequent to 16 May 1991, he learned from Mr Deane, that 'Tom Gilmartin passed some remarks [...] about having certain councillors arrested because they voted against Quarryvale and that he was going to call the Fraud Squad or something to that effect.'

15.13 Later in his evidence, Mr O'Callaghan stated that he did not believe Mr Deane had made reference to the 'Fraud Squad', stating that Mr Deane had recounted to him only that Mr Gilmartin had said he could 'have a number of councillors arrested.'

15.14 Insofar as Mr Deane attested to Mr Gilmartin having made his utterances in a hotel room, Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that Mr Deane's evidence (and indeed Mr Gilmartin's) was inaccurate in this regard. Mr O'Callaghan contended that insofar as Mr Gilmartin could have had any conversation with Mr Deane it must have been in a room in the County Council offices. It was Mr O'Callaghan's contention that while he indeed had hired a room in the Royal Dublin Hotel on 16 May 1991, only himself was present in it up to the time of the Quarryvale rezoning vote. Subsequent to the vote a number of people, including Mr Gilmartin, a number of councillors and bank officials had gathered with Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Deane and Mr Dunlop in the hotel room.

15.15 The Tribunal was satisfied, as a matter of probability, that during the course of 16 May 1991 Mr Gilmartin was indeed present in a room in the Royal Dublin Hotel, hired by Mr O'Callaghan, together with number of individuals, including Mr Lawlor, Cllr Gilbride, Mr Dunlop and other councillors. There was no dispute as between Mr Gilmartin and Mr Deane that Mr Gilmartin intimated, at some point during the course of the day, that he would telephone the Gardai. There was a discrepancy in their respective evidence as to what may have triggered Mr Gilmartin's threatened action. The Tribunal preferred Mr Gilmartin's testimony to that of Mr Deane. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Gilmartin perceived something untoward afoot which led to his threat to involve the Gardaí. The Tribunal accepted Mr Gilmartin's contention that his unease on 16 May 1991 (whether well founded or not), was partly due to his knowledge of demands for money made by Mr Lawlor and by Cllr Hanrahan.

15.16 The Tribunal did not accept as credible Mr Deane's contention that Mr Gilmartin's purpose for involving the Gardaí was to remove councillors who 'opposed' Quarryvale.

15.17 The Tribunal also accepted Mr Gilmartin's evidence that Mr Dunlop and Cllr Gilbride were present when he threatened to call the Fraud Squad and considered it probable that Mr Gilmartin was reminded that a previous Garda investigation into complaints made by him in 1989 had led nowhere. Notwithstanding Cllr Gilbride's denial that the 1989 Garda investigation had ever been discussed between himself and Mr Gilmartin, the Tribunal was satisfied that by 1991 Cllr Gilbride was aware of this investigation, as it had been widely reported by the media. Equally, the Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop was aware of the progression of that investigation, having regard to his admitted contact with Mr Gilmartin in 1989 and the fact that he provided Mr Gilmartin with press-cuttings concerning that investigation.

15.18 On 16 May 1991 Cllr Gilbride voted in favour of the Quarryvale rezoning motion. He also voted in favour of the amending motion in the names of Cllrs McGrath, Hanrahan and Hand which immediately preceded it. There was no suggestion, prior to his vote on 16 May 1991, that Cllr Gilbride was in receipt of financial inducement to support Quarryvale from Mr Dunlop, Mr O'Callaghan, or indeed from Mr Gilmartin.

CLLR GILBRIDE'S CONTINUED SUPPORT FOR THE QUARRYVALE PROJECT

15.19 Following the rezoning of Quarryvale on 16 May 1991 and having been re-elected as a councillor in June 1991, Cllr Gilbride continued to be a strong supporter of Quarryvale, and he was, by 1992, very much involved in lobbying other councillors for support of the rezoning. Mr Dunlop's 'Contact Report' of 17 June 1992 listed Cllr Gilbride as the person designated to make contact with Fianna Fail Cllrs Cyril Gallagher, Betty Coffey and Seamus Brock, and Cllr Donal Marren of Fine Gael.

15.20 In terms of his relationship with Mr O'Callaghan, the 'remunerated' phase of Cllr Gilbride's involvement with Quarryvale commenced in September 1992, and continued until April 1993 (see below).

15.21 There was substantial contact between Cllr Gilbride and Mr Dunlop in the latter half of 1992, particularly in the months of September to December. Mr Dunlop's record of telephone calls to his office for the month of December 1992 revealed that Cllr Gilbride made telephone contact with his office on at least eleven occasions. As those records only indicated Cllr Gilbride's attempts to make contact with Mr Dunlop, it was probable that there was a substantial level of actual contact between both men, and between them and Mr O'Callaghan in the period leading up to 17 December 1992 vote.

15.22 Cllr Gilbride acknowledged to the Tribunal that he was aware of the efforts being made by those who opposed the Quarryvale rezoning to have the town centre zoning, which had been achieved in May 1991, reversed. He also acknowledged that, as a supporter of Quarryvale, he spoke to fellow councillors in the lead up to the vote of 17 December, and urged them to support the Quarryvale project.

15.23 Cllr Gilbride refuted any suggestion that the payments he received from Mr O'Callaghan from September 1992 onwards had anything to do with his support for the Quarryvale project. Cllr Gilbride also told the Tribunal that he had not felt it necessary or appropriate to declare to the County Council, prior to casting his vote on 17 December 1992, that he was in receipt of regular payments from Mr O'Callaghan. Cllr Gilbride told the Tribunal that he did not see any need to inform his Fianna Fail Party colleagues of his receipt of payments from Mr O'Callaghan at the time he was seeking their support for Quarryvale.

15.24 Cllr Gilbride's contact with Mr Gilmartin had effectively ceased following the 16 May 1991 vote, until he received a telephone call from Mr Gilmartin on 16 December 1992, the eve of the second Quarryvale vote. The purpose of Mr Gilmartin's call was to urge Cllr Gilbride to 'collapse' the Quarryvale vote.

15.25 On 17 December 1992, Cllr Gilbride voted in favour of the project to rezone the Quarryvale lands for retail development.

15.26 In June 1993 Cllr Gilbride (together with Cllr Tyndall) was instrumental in promoting a motion⁴, proposing an amendment to the Quarryvale Written Statement. This motion which was passed on 4 June 1993, and had the effect of allowing for more retail development on the Quarryvale site than was envisaged in the original Written Statement.

PAYMENTS MADE TO CLLR GILBRIDE BY MR DUNLOP

15.27 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that in the course of the 1991 Local Election campaign he was approached by Cllr Gilbride who sought an election contribution from him. When making that request, Cllr Gilbride referred to his support for the Quarryvale rezoning. Mr Dunlop believed that Cllr Gilbride solicited the payment at a meeting between them on 28 May 1991. Mr Dunlop's diary on that date had an entry relating to Cllr Gilbride. Mr Dunlop claimed that Cllr Gilbride suggested that 'others would have to be looked after', and that Mr Gilbride having initially sought IR£15,000, they reached agreement on a payment of IR£12,000. Within a couple of days of the request, according to Mr Dunlop, he travelled to Cllr Gilbride's home in Skerries, Co. Dublin, where he paid the IR£12,000 in cash. Mr Dunlop maintained that, as he handed over the money to Cllr Gilbride, the latter commented to the effect that 'the boys will be pleased', a comment which Mr Dunlop interpreted as Cllr Gilbride's indication that portion of the IR£12,000 would be passed on by him to other councillors. Mr Dunlop said he did not now know, nor had he inquired in 1991, if in fact Cllr Gilbride had paid any of the IR£12,000 to other councillors.

15.28 Mr Dunlop first identified Cllr Gilbride as the recipient of IR£12,000 in his 1991 Local Election list compiled on Day 147 (19 April 2000).

15.29 In his subsequent statements of October 2000 and December 2003, Mr Dunlop specifically linked the payment of IR£12,000 in 1991 to Cllr Gilbride's support for the Quarryvale project⁵.

15.30 Cllr Gilbride testified that he received a political contribution from Mr Dunlop in the course of the 1991 Local Election campaign but maintained that the sum received was IR£2,000 in cash, and that it was given to him by Mr Dunlop at Cllr Gilbride's home. Cllr Gilbride denied that he had ever sought IR£15,000, or that he had received IR£12,000 from Mr Dunlop, and he also refuted Mr Dunlop's contention that any political contribution he received at that time was paid to him in connection with the Quarryvale rezoning. Cllr Gilbride also denied suggesting to Mr Dunlop that some of the money would be used to pay off fellow councillors. Cllr Gilbride maintained that Mr Dunlop arrived at his home with a briefcase, and told him that he wished to give him something for the election, to which Cllr Gilbride had replied 'grand.' Mr Dunlop then produced IR£2,000 in cash and an A4 sheet as a receipt for Cllr Gilbride to sign, which he duly signed. No such receipt was discovered to the Tribunal.

15.31 A cash lodgement of IR£2,000 on 1 August 1991 to a savings account in the names of Cllr Gilbride and his wife at National Irish Bank was described by Cllr Gilbride as the residue of political contributions received by him during the 1991 Local Election campaign. In the course of his testimony in the Fox & Mahony module (and reaffirmed by him on Day 819) Cllr Gilbride stated that the IR£2,000 lodged on 1 August 1991, included half of the IR£2,000 cash he had received from Mr Dunlop. While Cllr Gilbride acknowledged that for him to have been in a position to lodge IR£2,000 cash in August 1991, he must have had accumulated a sum greater than that during the 1991 Local Election campaign, he maintained that his overall election expenditure had been modest, hence the accumulated election contributions received by him (including Mr Dunlop's IR£2,000 cash and IR£1,000 received from his family in the immediate aftermath of the election campaign), had enabled him to lodge the surplus, and also to provide IR£1,000 to local clubs and organisations.

15.32 It was common case that prior to Mr Dunlop's alleged payment of IR£12,000 to Cllr Gilbride, the latter was an enthusiastic supporter of the Quarryvale project, a fact attested to by Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop, and indeed by Cllr Gilbride himself.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO PAYMENTS TO CLLR GILBRIDE BY MR DUNLOP

i) The Tribunal was satisfied that by 16 May 1991 Cllr Gilbride was considered by Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan (as also were Mr Lawlor and Cllr McGrath) as a key member of the strategy team for the Quarryvale project. Both Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop attested to this fact. Cllr Gilbride, while he acknowledged that he had close contact with Mr Dunlop and Cllr McGrath, denied being a member of the Quarryvale strategy team. The Tribunal was however satisfied such was the case, and it was satisfied that Cllr Gilbride was therefore in a strong position to request and receive substantial monies from Mr Dunlop.

ii) On the issue of the amount of money sought by, and ultimately given to, Cllr Gilbride by Mr Dunlop in late May 1991, and on the issue as to why such a payment was made to Cllr Gilbride, the Tribunal preferred the evidence of Mr Dunlop to that of Cllr Gilbride. As a matter of probability, the Tribunal was satisfied that IR£12,000 was indeed paid by Mr Dunlop to Cllr Gilbride at his request during the 1991 Local Election campaign, in the knowledge of Cllr Gilbride's support for the proposal to rezone Quarryvale and in all probability to ensure Cllr Gilbride's ongoing assistance for the project. The soliciting and acceptance of such a substantial sum of money from Mr Dunlop not only compromised Cllr Gilbride's required disinterested performance of his duties as a councillor, but was in all the circumstances, corrupt.

(iii) The Tribunal was also satisfied that Cllr Gilbride's request of Mr Dunlop for substantial monies during the 1991 Local Election campaign, found, in Mr Dunlop, a willing provider of those funds. Mr Dunlop, by early June 1991, had substantial funds available to him (including IR£80,000 sourced from Riga) to disburse to councillors in the course of the local election campaign.

PAYMENTS MADE TO CLLR GILBRIDE BY MR O'CALLAGHAN

15.33 Between September 1992 and April 1993, Mr O'Callaghan made a series of payments to Cllr Gilbride. In the course of his testimony Mr O'Callaghan explained the purpose of those payments as follows:

'...I had got to know Councillor Gilbride quite well, he was a very, very good supporter of Quarryvale and as I said had been there for Tom Gilmartin's time. He said to me in September '92 that he actually wanted to take a sabbatical, he was a school teacher. And that he wanted to take six months off work and spend his time canvassing for himself. First of all to get the nomination, which I think he expected to get to stand for Fianna Fail in the election. And that he would, while he would be doing that of course that he would be also spreading the word for Quarryvale. And to do that he asked me would I support him, replace his salary really, his monthly salary was £1,750 per month, and would I replace that for six months. And I thought about it and I said I would. That's how that, those payments were paid.'

15.34 Further explaining his arrangement with Cllr Gilbride, Mr O’Callaghan went on to say:

‘[...] what was agreed was that while he was campaigning or doing a lot of work on the ground for himself to try and get himself nominated for the election No. 1 and to try and ensure that he would get elected if he got the nomination. That at the same time, he would what we would call that he would spread the Quarryvale gospel, that he would try and get people to support Quarryvale as well.’

15.35 In his first statement to the Tribunal dated 12 April 2000, Mr O’Callaghan categorised the payments made to Cllr Gilbride as ‘political contributions’, without elaborating further on the matter.

15.36 In a statement furnished on 3 May 2000 Mr O’Callaghan described the payments made to Cllr Gilbride in the following terms:

Between September 1992 and April 1993 I made a number of contributions to Councillor Sean Gilbride totalling £15,500. Councillor Gilbride requested the support as he was running for the General Election in November 1992. Councillor Gilbride informed me that he was making a very serious effort to get elected to either the Dail or failing that to the Seanad so much so that he told me he was taking six months unpaid leave from his teaching job to try to accomplish this. It was in those circumstances that he asked me for support. In view of the support which Councillor Gilbride had given to me and prior to that to Tom Gilmartin, I agreed to support him.

15.37 In a letter from Cllr Gilbride to the Tribunal on 15 November 2004, he, inter alia, stated:

I took the academic year September ’92 to June ’93 off on leave of absence as I wished to spend the year devoting myself to politics and Owen O’Callaghan gave me political donations that year.

15.38 In the course of his evidence Cllr Gilbride told the Tribunal that in June/July 1992, he had a discussion with Mr O’Callaghan about his proposed career break, and that in August 1992 he duly applied to his employers for leave of absence.

15.39 Giving evidence about how the arrangement with Mr O’Callaghan had come about, Cllr Gilbride stated:

‘... As I said to you earlier, I would have met him four or five times and whether I phoned him or he phoned me, I forget but I had had general conversations with him regarding my political career and things like that and I had expressed a desire to devote part of my time to try to get a Dáil or a Senate seat and I would need time to start knocking on doors and meeting people and things like that and I said that I would like to be able to take some time off and he asked me would he be able to support me in political donations and he agreed.’

15.40 Cllr Gilbride stated also:

‘I asked him would he be able to support me for the six months I was off that I, as far as I remember, I told him what salary I was getting. I said that if I was able to get that, that I would be very happy that I would be able to spend my time getting ready for elections that I wanted to knock on a lot of doors and get myself generally ready.’

15.41 Responding to Tribunal queries as to why he had not gone to Mr Dunlop who had provided him with, on his account to the Tribunal, the single largest political donation he had received (IR£2,000), Cllr Gilbride explained:

‘I didn’t... I didn’t go back, it didn’t go in to my head to go back to him. I was quite friendly with Mr. O’Callaghan. We had talked previously as I said about my ‘would be’ political career and he expressed an interest in seeing me advance and things like that. And then when I asked him, he was quite agreeable and he agreed to make me those political donations.’

15.42 Cllr Gilbride told the Tribunal that Mr O’Callaghan was the only developer he had approached in 1992 to assist him in his political career. Prior to making his approach to Mr O’Callaghan, Cllr Gilbride believed he had met him possibly five or six times, having first been introduced to him in or around April 1991.

15.43 A General Election was called on 5 November 1992. Voting took place on 25 November 1992 and the linked Seanad Election took place in January/February 1993. This General Election was unexpected, although Cllr Gilbride claimed that because of political tensions at the time he anticipated that an election would be called. In any event, as matters transpired, Cllr Gilbride was not a candidate in either election.

15.44 Cllr Gilbride's arrangement with Mr O'Callaghan commenced in September 1992 and continued until April 1993, and encompassed the second Quarryvale rezoning vote of 17 December 1992. Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr Gilbride conceded that, save for knowledge that came to Mr Dunlop of the arrangement, neither publicised their financial arrangement. The Tribunal was satisfied that while, as Mr Dunlop stated in evidence, Cllr Gilbride's attention to the Quarryvale rezoning issue was a matter of comment, it was not otherwise known by Dublin County Council councillors, or generally, that Cllr Gilbride was on Mr O'Callaghan's/Riga Ltd's payroll over a period of seven months.

15.45 Documentation discovered by Riga Limited to the Tribunal identified seven payments made to Cllr Gilbride totalling IR£15,500. Records showed that the payments were made by cheque by either Riga Ltd or Mr O'Callaghan, with Mr O'Callaghan being duly reimbursed by Riga Ltd in respect of his payments. The payments were as follows:

- 30 September 1992 - IR£1,750 (made by Riga);
- 28 October 1992 - IR£1,750 (made by Mr O Callaghan);
- 1 December 1992 - IR£1,750 (made by Mr O Callaghan);
- 6 January 1993 - IR£5,000 (made by Riga);
- 8 February 1993 - IR£1,750 (made by Mr O Callaghan);
- 3 March 1993 - IR£1,750 (made by Mr O Callaghan); and
- 21 April 1993 - IR£1,750 (made by Mr O Callaghan).

15.46 Cllr Gilbride described the IR£5,000 payment made in January 1993 as an additional payment to the agreed period payments. It was made by Mr O'Callaghan after Cllr Gilbride had advised him of the expenditure he had incurred while canvassing for his party colleagues during the elections.

THE ROLE PLAYED BY MR DUNLOP IN THE GILBRIDE/O'CALLAGHAN FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENT

15.47 Documentation provided to the Tribunal by Mr Dunlop revealed a letter written to him by Cllr Gilbride on 18 September 1992 (on Dublin County Council notepaper) in the following terms:

Dear Frank,

The figure I mentioned to you £1,750 a month, made up of £1,500 & £250 which is made up of Pension, PRSI and Health Insurance.

Yours faithfully,

Sean Gilbride

P.S. I am off until end of March. Seven months.

15.48 Mr Dunlop testified that in September 1992, Cllr Gilbride had informed him of his arrangement with Mr O’Callaghan and that Cllr Gilbride told him that he had not received his monthly payment. Mr Dunlop had agreed to look into the matter, whereupon Cllr Gilbride wrote to him outlining the details. On receipt of that letter, and after checking with Mr O’Callaghan who confirmed the arrangement, Mr Dunlop himself duly made a payment of IR£1,750 to Cllr Gilbride, which he believed was probably recouped from Riga Ltd using a Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd invoice⁶. While no documentary evidence of the payment by Mr Dunlop to Cllr Gilbride or, its recoupment by Mr Dunlop from Riga Ltd was provided to the Tribunal, the Tribunal was satisfied that such a payment was in fact made to Cllr Gilbride, and that it was likely to have been made in cash. The Tribunal was therefore satisfied that, in total, Cllr Gilbride received IR£17,250 on foot of his arrangement with Mr O’Callaghan.

15.49 While Cllr Gilbride did not dispute the receipt of IR£1,750 from Mr Dunlop, he denied having approached Mr Dunlop to inform him that he had not been paid by Mr O’Callaghan. Cllr Gilbride testified that in September 1992, Mr Dunlop asked him if he had received payment from Mr O’Callaghan and on hearing that he had not, volunteered to pay Cllr Gilbride. The Tribunal was however satisfied that it was Cllr Gilbride who probably initiated the approach to Mr Dunlop and sought the payment.

15.50 Mr Dunlop stated that Mr O’Callaghan had told him, in September 1992, that he had agreed to give Cllr Gilbride the equivalent of his teacher’s salary for a period of time ‘... in view of the fact that he had taken leave of absence and of the amount of work he was doing in relation to the Quarryvale project.’ Mr Dunlop testified that he did not recall Mr O’Callaghan referring to those payments to Cllr Gilbride as political contributions.

15.51 In the course of his testimony Mr Dunlop reaffirmed his understanding that in 1992 Cllr Gilbride had taken leave of absence on foot of ‘an arrangement with Mr. O’Callaghan that Mr. O’Callaghan would defray, not defray, would recompense him in the context of the amounts of money he would be due if he remained teaching, on the basis that he was devoting his time to the Quarryvale project.’

15.52 On Day 892 the following exchange took place between Tribunal Counsel and Mr O’Callaghan:

‘Q 529: Was it well known, Mr. O’Callaghan, that Councillor Gilbride was working for the Quarryvale project?’

⁶ Mr O’Callaghan agreed that it was recouped.

A: Oh yes.

Q 530: Right. That would mean that in 1992 that your two main supporters in Quarryvale, that is Councillor McGrath and Councillor Gilbride, one benefitted to the tune of 15,500 pounds and a chance at national politics and the other benefitted in total to a sum of 21,700 pounds from you. Would you agree with that Mr. O'Callaghan?

A: Yes.

Q 531: Right. And do you see anything untoward, Mr. O'Callaghan, in having two people who hold public office, working assiduously for your development in circumstances where their financial involvement is unknown to anybody else?

A: No, I don't really.

Q 532: So you think that it is perfectly in order for any developer to pay a Councillor money or indeed as with Councillor Gilbride, pay him a stipend every month and keep that secret and unknown to other people who will be voting on the development?

A: Yes.

Q 533: Right. So it's your position as a developer then that an elected County Councillor who is elected to represent the interests of the entire community is entitled to be paid a fee or a salary by a developer to promote that developer's interests in relation to matters which that councillor and others will vote on?

A: If he is working to promote that development for the developer, yes.

Q 534: Do you not think, Mr. O'Callaghan, that in fairness to everybody else on the Council, any such interest should have been disclosed?

A: I don't think so, no.'

15.53 The Tribunal considered Mr O'Callaghan's evidence in this regard as remarkable, and entirely inconsistent with his assertion on Day 899 that Cllr Gilbride was never 'on his payroll.'

THE TREATMENT OF THE PAYMENTS MADE TO CLLR GILBRIDE IN THE BOOKS AND ACCOUNTS OF RIGA LTD

15.54 The payments totalling IR£15,500 made to Cllr Gilbride were duly recorded in the cheque payment books of Riga Ltd as being for the benefit of Barkhill Ltd/Quarryvale. The payments however were not ultimately posted to the Riga Ltd/Barkhill Ltd inter Company Loan Account in Riga's books for the year end 30 April 1993.

15.55 While this was the case, the Tribunal was nonetheless satisfied that from the outset, Mr O’Callaghan considered the payments to Cllr Gilbride to have been made for the benefit of Barkhill Ltd/Quarryvale. Indeed, on 10 November 1992, Mr Lucey (Riga’s Bookkeeper) included details of the (by then) two payments which had been made to Cllr Gilbride by Riga Ltd in a document furnished to Mr Fleming, Barkhill’s Auditor, which detailed a series of seven payments Riga Ltd had made on behalf of Barkhill Ltd between September 1991 and 4 November 1992.

15.56 In compiling Riga Ltd’s financial statements for the year end 30 April 1993, Ms Cowhig, Riga’s Auditor, attributed a total sum of IR£425,332.59 to the ‘Work in progress – Stadium’ account within Riga Ltd.

15.57 This sum of £425,332.59 comprised, inter alia, the following payments by Riga Ltd: IR£80,000 to Shefran (ie Mr Dunlop) in 1991; IR£70,000⁷ to Mr Dunlop on 10 November 1992; IR£64,897.78⁸ to Mr Dunlop on the 21 January 1993; IR£25,000⁹ to Shefran (ie Mr Dunlop) on 17 February 1993; and IR£15,500 recorded in Riga’s cheque payments book as paid to Cllr Gilbride from September 1992 to April 1993.

15.58 The three 1991 Shefran payments totalling IR£80,000 were ultimately reattributed to the Riga/Barkhill Inter Company Loan Account, following queries raised by Barkhill’s Auditors.¹⁰

15.59 Of the balance of the expenses which remained in the ‘Work in progress – Stadium’ account in Riga’s books for the year ended 30 April 1993 (approximately IR£345,332) over half was made up of the payments which had been made to Mr Dunlop (IR£70,000, IR£64,897.78 and IR£25,000) and Cllr Gilbride (IR£15,500).

15.60 This sum of IR£345,332 was written off, in its entirety, within Riga’s books (IR£150,000 was written off for the year end 30 April 1994 and the balance was written off for the year end 30 April 1995).

15.61 While Mr Fleming, Barkhill’s auditor, had queried why the three Shefran payments totalling IR£80,000 had been excluded from the Riga balance, he never had cause to query the three aforementioned payments made to Mr Dunlop or the seven Cllr Gilbride payments, as none of these payments had been posted by Riga Ltd. to the Riga Ltd/Barkhill Ltd Inter Company Loan Account,

⁹ See Part 5 of this Chapter.

¹⁰ See Part 5 of this Chapter.

despite the fact that they were initially classified as Barkhill Ltd expenditure in Riga's cheque payments book.¹¹

15.62 As a matter of probability, the Tribunal was satisfied that the reason why a decision was made not to include the payments to Cllr Gilbride (and indeed those to Mr Dunlop) in the Riga Ltd/Barkhill Ltd inter Company Loan Account was that Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Deane did not want to have to disclose to Barkhill's Auditors and to Mr Gilmartin, the purpose and the beneficiaries of these payments, especially since Mr Gilmartin had been questioning, from mid 1992 onwards, large payments to Shefran Ltd which Riga Ltd was seeking to recoup from Barkhill Ltd.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE PAYMENTS MADE BY MR O'CALLAGHAN TO CLLR GILBRIDE

- i. While Cllr Gilbride undoubtedly had ambitions to further promote himself in politics, the Tribunal did not accept that this was the primary reason for the decision to take leave of absence from his teacher's post and place himself on Mr O'Callaghan's payroll.
- ii. The Tribunal was satisfied that the primary purpose which prompted the unusual arrangement in question was to enable Cllr Gilbride devote himself on a near full time basis to promoting the Quarryvale project for Mr O'Callaghan.
- iii. It was incredible, in the Tribunal's view, that it could be seriously suggested that the political ambitions of an elected councillor could properly be served by that councillor placing himself on the payroll of a developer at a time when the same developer was promoting the rezoning of lands, a process in which Cllr Gilbride, as an elected local representative, was intrinsically involved.
- iv. The Tribunal was also satisfied that both Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr Gilbride sought to categorise their arrangement as political donations, in an attempt to deflect from the reality of the situation that pertained in 1992/1993, namely that Cllr Gilbride, an elected representative of Dublin County Council was in the paid employment of Mr O'Callaghan. The payments to Cllr Gilbride were not political contributions.
- v. The Tribunal was satisfied that the disinterested performance of Cllr Gilbride's role and duty as an elected representative was entirely negated by his position as a paid employee of Mr O'Callaghan from September 1992 to April 1993. The agreement entered into between Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr Gilbride and the payments made on foot of this agreement clearly constituted corruption.

¹¹ It should be however noted (as mentioned above) that Mr Fleming had been apprised on 10 November 1992, of the two first payments to Cllr Gilbride.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR RICHARD GREENE (IND)

16.01 Cllr Greene was an Independent councillor in Dublin County Council from 1991 to 1999. He unsuccessfully stood for election to the Dáil in November 1992.

16.02 In his October 2000 statement Mr Dunlop stated the following concerning Cllr Greene:

I gave Mr. Greene £500 in cash at the time of the 1992 General Election November 1992 when he was a candidate in the Dublin South constituency. He made the request for support and I gave him £500. I cannot recall where I made the payment to him but I probably did so in the immediate environs of Dublin County Council. Mr. Greene supported Quarryvale. The payment was made to him, on foot of a request by him, on the basis that he had provided crucial support as an Independent for Quarryvale.

I believe I also gave Mr. Greene £250 as a contribution, at his request, to an anti-abortion or pro-Christian campaign he was involved with at a later stage -at the time of a referendum in the early to mid-90s.

16.03 Mr Dunlop made similar assertions in his December 2003 statement and in the course of his evidence.

16.04 Mr Dunlop's diaries recorded scheduled meetings between himself and Cllr Greene on 9 and 14 October 1992. Mr Dunlop's office telephone records indicated that Cllr Greene telephoned Mr Dunlop's office on 1 December 1992.

16.05 Cllr Greene furnished the Tribunal with a statement dated 4 March 2001 in response to queries posed by the Tribunal regarding the receipt of money from Mr Dunlop. In the course of that statement Cllr Greene set out as follows:

I served as a public representative (local authority) for a period of eight years (from 1991 to 1999). During that period I endeavoured to represent the Pro-Life, Pro-Family, Christian cause. I also ran as such a candidate in the 1992 General Election and there were 27 other such candidates. During the General Election Campaign I attended a meeting in Baggot Street¹ at a hostel then run by a religious order where supporters had gathered to arrange both financial assistance and election volunteers.

¹ Cllr Greene advised the Tribunal, by letter of the 29 January 2004, that he wished to correct this matter as he attended a hostel in Lr. Mount Street, and not Baggot Street.

After the meeting I was walking to my car when totally unplanned and without any prior arrangement I met Owen O’Callaghan and Frank Dunlop who had both emerged from Mr. Dunlop’s office. They enquired about my well-being. I informed them that I was standing as a Pro-Life, Pro-Family candidate in the forthcoming General Election. Mr. O’Callaghan indicated to me that the cause I was representing was a noble and worthy one and that he would like to make a contribution to my Pro-Life Work. I then or shortly thereafter received a cash payment of £250.00, which was a private charitable donation to my Pro-Life election campaign from Owen O’Callaghan. The money helped to pay election expenses incurred in running my campaign in Dublin South.

In view of the lapse of time and the intense and busy nature of the election campaign I cannot now be more specific about dates. The money was, however, used entirely for the purpose for which it was donated, namely, the support of my Pro-Life candidacy in the 1992 General Election.

16.06 Cllr Greene also averred in that statement to having at some stage received a cheque for IR£150 from Mr Dunlop in support of his ‘pro-life’ campaigns, and which, according to Cllr Greene expended on a banner which he used in his Pro-Life campaign.

16.07 In a later statement dated 21 February 2005, Cllr Greene advised the Tribunal of the circumstances of the actual receipt by him of the 1992 Election contribution offered by Mr O’Callaghan. He stated:

Towards the end of an intense and exhausting election campaign, I received a message from Mr. Dunlop’s office that a political donation was available for collection from his office. At the end of the campaign and I believe it was early in the week, I received a donation from the reception of Mr. Dunlop’s office. I did not meet Mr. Dunlop or Mr. O’Callaghan. This is the reason why I assumed the donation was from Mr. O’Callaghan instead of Mr. Dunlop.

16.08 In his testimony Cllr Greene strongly refuted Mr Dunlop’s contention that he had sought an election contribution from him, or that he had sought such contribution on the basis of his support for the Quarryvale rezoning. Cllr Greene disputed Mr Dunlop’s figure of IR£500 cash (insisting that it was only IR£250), and Mr Dunlop’s claim that the likely location of Cllr Greene’s receipt of a political donation was the environs of Dublin County Council. Cllr Greene maintained that the circumstances in which, he believed, he had come to receive a IR£250 donation from Mr O’Callaghan were as set out in his 2001 and 2005 statements. In the course of his testimony he stated that the likely date for his meeting with Messrs O’Callaghan and Dunlop was, Saturday, 7 November 1992, or, at the very latest, Saturday, 14 November 1992. Cllr Greene outlined in greater detail the circumstances in which he came to call to Mr Dunlop’s office to collect the donation by stating that Mr Dunlop’s office had telephoned to advise him that the donation was available for collection. Cllr Greene stated that he duly collected the IR£250 from Mr Dunlop’s office.

16.09 Cllr Greene strongly denied any connection between the election donation offered to him by Mr O’Callaghan on either 7 or 14 November 1992 and his support for the Quarryvale rezoning project. Cllr Greene stated that, prior to being offered and accepting such a donation, he had been lobbied by Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop and their advisors with regard to Quarryvale, and on the occasion of that lobbying (14 October 1992) he had advised them of his support for Quarryvale. In his 2005 statement Cllr Greene put it thus:

On the 14th October 1992 in the Royal Dublin Hotel, I was lobbied by Mr. O’Callaghan and Mr. Dunlop and I believe two other men with maps and models of the proposed Quarryvale Project were present. (Date and venue from Mr. Dunlop’s statements). I agreed to support the project if it brought jobs and prosperity to the Dublin West area and in particular Ballyfermot and Clondalkin where most of the students in the school where I served and serve to this day as a Career Guidance Counsellor, live. Mr. O’Callaghan assured me and others present that that would be the case and I made it abundantly clear I would support the project for job reasons. I did not request a political donation in return for my vote. The election date was not decided and then I did not know I would be a candidate.

16.10 Mr Dunlop’s diary for 14 October 1992 recorded a meeting with Cllr Greene at the Royal Dublin Hotel. The Tribunal accepted the evidence of Cllr Greene, Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop that this was the date and location, on and at which, Cllr Greene was given details of the Quarryvale rezoning proposals. Mr O’Callaghan, in evidence, agreed that, at that meeting Cllr Greene had evinced his support for Quarryvale. Prior to such meeting it was probable that Cllr Greene was lobbied also by Cllr Sean Gilbride, although Cllr Greene disputed Mr Dunlop’s assertion that he had a ‘direct relationship’ with Cllr Gilbride.

16.11 Asked about the circumstances in which he claimed to have made a payment of IR£500 to Cllr Greene, Mr Dunlop stated:

‘Yes, I cannot where, I cannot say to you specifically where I made the payment to him but the likelihood is that I made it to him in the environs of Dublin County Council. I cannot recollect that I ever knew or visited Mr. Greene in his home but I didn’t have a great deal of contact with Mr.

Greene but I did canvass him in relation to Quarryvale. And as I recollect matters there was a direct relationship between Mr. Sean Gilbride and Mr. Greene. And I made a contribution to him on foot of a request by him for an election contribution. I think this was the first time that he had stood in a General Election and I was happy to do so.'

16.12 Asked whether the donation was in any way contingent upon Cllr Greene's support for Quarryvale, Mr Dunlop stated:

'There is absolutely no doubt that in any conversation that I would have had with Mr. Greene Quarryvale would have been mentioned. I cannot specifically say that he asked me for the, for a donation specifically because of his support for Quarryvale. Certainly in any discussion that I would have had with him and there were very few, Quarryvale would have been mentioned including in relation to the payment.'

16.13 In response to being reminded by Tribunal Counsel, that in his December 2003 statement, Mr Dunlop had specifically tied Cllr Greene's request for an election contribution to his support for Quarryvale, Mr Dunlop responded:

'What I am saying is as I have said in the statement that on contact by Mr. Greene to me in relation to a contribution, he would have reminded me of the support that he had given or was giving in relation to the Quarryvale project. Because as the statement says, he was an independent. He was an independent Cllr.'

16.14 Cross-examined by Cllr Greene on Day 830 on the basis that, as Cllr Greene had by 14 October 1992 given his commitment to support Quarryvale there was no need for Mr Dunlop to pay Cllr Greene money to support the project, Mr Dunlop replied as follows:

'You are obviously, you are obviously operating on two parallel universe tracts here. I never gave money to anybody unless I was asked. Point number one. And that includes you.

Point number two. In relation to your support, you are quite right. I don't think I could even intimate that I ever had a doubt that you were a supporter, given what we had been told initially by Sean Gilbride, who obviously had a conversation with you in relation to the matter.' and he further stated, 'I have never had any doubt or did not have any doubt given the point of view that was expressed to me by Sean Gilbride in the first instance and that you were probably a supporter, I had never had any doubt that you were a supporter and I was not in the business of giving out money willy-nilly to people unless I was asked, end of story.'

16.15 Mr O’Callaghan’s sworn account of the circumstances in which he claimed to have made an election contribution to Cllr Greene was given on Day 904. On that day the following exchange took place between Tribunal Counsel and Mr O’Callaghan:

‘Q. 28. Now, at that time, Mr. O’Callaghan did you make a donation to Mr. Richard Green?’

A. Yes, I think we did, yes.

Q. 29. And can you just outline to the Tribunal the circumstances in which you made that donation?’

A. As far as I recall we met him on the street, I was with Frank Dunlop and we met him on the street outside Frank Dunlop’s office, and he explained his campaign to us and what he was doing, I think he was on the – very much on the anti-abortion campaign at the time, a campaign like that, and I suggested to him actually that he didn’t ask, I suggested to him that we would like to contribute to his campaign and we did, I think we gave him a sum of £500 afterwards I think.

Q. 30. There was some dispute about the sum, I think Mr. Dunlop says and Mr. Richard Green agrees that it’s a figure of, Mr. Dunlop thought it was £500 in cash, Mr. Greene says it was £250 in cash?’

A. As far as I know it was £500 and I offered it to him actually.

Q. 31. And did you give it to him there and then or was he to pick it up?’

A. No, I asked him to call to Frank Dunlop’s office for it, yes.

Q. 32. And Mr. Greene has told the Tribunal that he received a telephone call after his meeting with you and Mr. Dunlop and he went to Mr. Dunlop’s office and he got a sum of £250, you say it was £500?’

A. I am almost certain it was, yes.

Q. 33. Was that a figure, a payment by Mr. Dunlop in cash on your behalf, which was subsequently reimbursed to Mr. Dunlop?’

A. Yes.

Q. 34. Right. And Mr. Greene has told the Tribunal that the meeting took place, this accidental meeting, on a Saturday, either 7th November ‘92 or 14th November 1992. And on 7th November, Mr. O’Callaghan, just to assist you, at 8383 please, you will see that there is no entry in Mr. Dunlop’s diary for 7th of November 1992, and to further assist you, you will recollect that that is the date on which you wrote the cheque for Mr. Batt O’Keeffe at 8423?

A. Yes, which means I was in Cork that day.’

16.16 In the course of his evidence Mr O’Callaghan contended that his meeting with Cllr Greene was on a weekday, and not on a Saturday, as maintained by Cllr Greene. Mr O’Callaghan told the Tribunal that Quarryvale was not mentioned during the encounter with Cllr Greene.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO PAYMENTS MADE TO CLLR GREENE BY MR O’CALLAGHAN AND/OR MR DUNLOP

i. The Tribunal accepted Cllr Greene and Mr O’Callaghan’s evidence that on a date during the course of the November 1992 General Election campaign a chance encounter took place between Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Dunlop and Cllr Greene outside Mr Dunlop’s offices, and that Mr O’Callaghan proffered an election contribution to Cllr Greene to be effected by Mr Dunlop. It was likely that Cllr Greene’s encounter with Messrs O’Callaghan and Dunlop occurred on a weekday. Mr O’Callaghan maintained that his offer of an election contribution to Cllr Greene was unconnected to Quarryvale. However, given that he had provided Mr Dunlop with funds on 10 November 1992 with which to make disbursements to councillors during the 1992 General Election campaign (and in advance of the second Quarryvale rezoning vote), the Tribunal believed that Mr O’Callaghan’s generosity to Cllr Greene was not unconnected to his zoning ambitions for Quarryvale.

ii. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Greene received the cash donation from Mr Dunlop (and which was reimbursed to Mr Dunlop by Mr O’Callaghan). As a matter of probability, given Mr O’Callaghan’s near certainty of the matter, the sum received by Cllr Greene was IR£500. The evidence of Mr O’Callaghan supported Cllr Greene’s contention that the donation was collected by Cllr Greene at Mr Dunlop’s office. Mr Dunlop’s records of telephone calls made to his office included a telephone call from Cllr Greene on 1 December 1992. As a matter of probability the Tribunal believed that Cllr Greene made this call in response to Mr Dunlop’s office having advised him by telephone that the election contribution was available for collection.

iii. Notwithstanding Cllr Greene’s contention that his acceptance of the election contribution proffered by Mr O’Callaghan was unconnected to his support for the Quarryvale rezoning (he maintaining that he had promised that support at a meeting in October 1992, a time when an election date had not been decided and at a time when he was unaware that he would be a candidate),² the Tribunal considered Cllr Greene's acceptance of the contribution to have been inappropriate, having regard to the fact that within weeks of receiving it he would be called on to exercise his vote in relation to a matter in which Mr O'Callaghan had a significant vested interest.

² The General Election was held on 25 November 1992. The date of the Order specifying the election date was 5 November 1992.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR TOM HAND¹ (FG)

MR DUNLOP’S ALLEGED PAYMENTS TO CLLR HAND RELATING TO QUARRYVALE

17.01 Cllr Tom Hand was elected to Dublin County Council in 1985, and again in 1991. He represented the Clonskeagh ward. He transferred to South Dublin County Council following its establishment in 1994. Cllr Hand died in 1996.

17.02 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that in mid May 1991 he was informed by Cllr McGrath that Cllr Hand had agreed to co-sign an amendment to Cllr McGrath’s original 15 February 1991 motion which proposed to limit the scope of the retail development permissible on the Quarryvale lands.

17.03 This amending motion was adopted in an attempt to appease the concerns which Green Property Plc were then expressing with regard to the proposal to rezone Quarryvale for town centre use. On 13 May 1991 Mr Corcoran (and his planning advisor), met with Cllr Boland, the Chairman of the County Council, Mr Lawlor, Cllr Ned Ryan and Cllr Marian McGennis, and agreed that an amending motion would be lodged with the Council.

17.04 Although Cllr McGrath denied that he had secured Cllr Hand’s agreement to co-sign the amending motion, the Tribunal was satisfied that he probably did so.

17.05 The amending motion was duly moved and passed by the County Council on 16 May 1991. Cllr McGrath’s original motion, as amended, was then put to a vote and passed, with the result that the Quarryvale lands were zoned ‘Town Centre’ with a retail capacity equivalent to that permitted by the 1983 Development Plan for the Neilstown/Clondalkin proposed town centre. Cllr Hand voted in favour of both the amending and the substantive motion, which he had both seconded. Subsequently, as indicated by County Council records, Cllr Hand remained a consistent supporter of the Quarryvale project.

17.06 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that having been advised by Cllr McGrath of Cllr Hand’s willingness to sign the amending motion, he duly met him for that purpose. Mr Dunlop’s diary for 15 May 1991 recorded a meeting with Cllr Hand in the ‘Gresham.’ Mr Dunlop believed that Cllr Hand’s signature was probably obtained on that occasion.² Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal, that prior to obtaining Cllr Hand's signature, he reached an agreement with him whereby Cllr Hand, in return for his signature, would receive IR£20,000 from Mr Dunlop (IR£10,000 upon signing of the motion and IR£10,000 to be paid after the Quarryvale rezoning vote).

17.07 Mr Dunlop claimed that the first sum of IR£10,000 was paid in cash to Cllr Hand when he obtained the latter's signature for the motion and that the second sum of IR£10,000 was duly paid in cash to Cllr Hand at his home following the vote of 16 May 1991, during the course of the May/June 1991 Local Election campaign.

17.08 Questioned as to how he had funded the first IR£10,000 payment, Mr Dunlop agreed that it was unlikely that he had sourced this IR£10,000 from withdrawals from his 042 'warchest' account given that, as of 15 May 1991, the last recorded withdrawal (IR£16,001) had been made from that account on 18 April 1991. Mr Dunlop further agreed that as of 15 May 1991 he had not yet received the first of the Shefran cheques.³ Mr Dunlop testified that he paid the first tranche of the money to Cllr Hand from cash resources he had available to him at the time.

17.09 Questioned as to when the second payment of IR£10,000 had been given to Cllr Hand, Mr Dunlop stated:

'Well the payment, I cannot say to you specifically where I got the money, but he was very anxious to receive the second payment, and as I say in my statement he made quite a significant number of telephone calls to me in relation to this payment and I arranged to go to his home and pay him the agreed balance, which I did.'

17.10 Mr Dunlop was unable to state with certainty where he sourced the cash to pay the second instalment of IR£10,000 to Cllr Hand. Mr Dunlop believed it was 'likely' that the cash was sourced to the withdrawals of IR£25,000 and IR£35,000 on 7 and 11 June 1991 respectively, from his 042 'Warchest' account. Mr Dunlop also had access to substantial cash amounts around this time from his encashment of Shefran cheques totalling IR£80,000 in the period 17 May 1991 to 7 June 1991. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he did not advise Mr O'Callaghan of his two IR£10,000 payments to Cllr Hand, and Mr O'Callaghan denied any knowledge thereof.

² Mr Dunlop's October 2000 statement and his 2003 statement referred to his obtaining Cllr Hand's signature and paying him IR£10,000 at Cllr Hand's home.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE PAYMENT OF IR£20,000 TO CLLR HAND

- i. Notwithstanding the absence of bank documentation suggesting the receipt by Cllr Hand of IR£20,000 in May/June 1991, the Tribunal was nonetheless satisfied to accept Mr Dunlop's evidence that, within that period, he paid Cllr Hand IR£20,000 in cash in two tranches of IR£10,000 each. The Tribunal was satisfied that this sum was paid to Cllr Hand at his request and, as indicated by Mr Dunlop, specifically in return for his Quarryvale support. In assessing Mr Dunlop's credibility on this issue, the Tribunal took into consideration events (referred to below) relating to Mr Dunlop and Cllr Hand which took place in 1992 and 1993 and which assisted the Tribunal in giving credence to Mr Dunlop's claim of having paid Cllr Hand IR£20,000 in 1991.
- ii. This payment was corrupt.

CLLR HAND'S ALLEGED DEMAND FOR IR£250,000

17.11 Mr Dunlop testified that subsequent to the rezoning vote of 16 May 1991 and in particular from 1992 onwards, he and Cllr Hand were in regular contact. Mr Dunlop described Cllr Hand contacting him repeatedly in light of the fact that the Quarryvale rezoning had become extremely contentious because of opposition to it from Green Property Plc, and in the context of the defeat in the 1991 Local Election, of a substantial number of Fianna Fail councillor candidates. Mr Dunlop stated that in those circumstances Cllr Hand (a Fine Gael councillor) saw his continuous support for Quarryvale as more valuable to Mr Dunlop than previously.

17.12 Mr Dunlop's diary indicated sixteen meetings with Cllr Hand in 1991 and twenty-five meetings with him in 1992. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Hand and Mr Dunlop met and discussed a variety of zoning issues in the course of the making of the 1993 Development Plan, and that Quarryvale was a topic of discussion throughout most of that contact.

17.13 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that in the course of meetings with Cllr Hand in 1992 the latter requested payment of IR£250,000, in return for his support for Quarryvale. Cllr Hand also informed Mr Dunlop that he had been offered IR£100,000 by Green Property to vote against the Quarryvale rezoning. Cllr Hand had repeated his demand for IR£250,000 on a number of occasions.

17.14 Mr Dunlop testified that, in the course of one such meeting, Cllr Hand said he wished for the money to be lodged into an Australian bank account, and he provided Mr Dunlop with a piece of paper containing the details of an account in Cllr Hand's name in the Commonwealth Bank of Australia's Karrinyup (Western Australia) Branch. This piece of paper was duly provided by Mr Dunlop to the Tribunal.

17.15 The Tribunal established that in 1992, Cllr Hand was indeed the holder of two accounts at that branch of the Commonwealth Bank of Australia. Moreover, the Tribunal also established that a series of numbers, in manuscript on the document (and said by Mr Dunlop to have been on the document when it was given to him by Cllr Hand), constituted the number of a Term Deposit Account held by Cllr Hand at the said bank.

17.16 Asked for his understanding as to why it was that Cllr Hand had requested IR£250,000, a request Mr Dunlop described as 'outrageous', Mr Dunlop stated:

'Well first of all he said he was, the two aspects to this, one is that he had signed the motion and that had been dealt with, but he was an ongoing supporter of Quarryvale, but in the context of what happened after the, in the June 1991 elections, and subsequently, and specifically that refers to the campaign run by Green Property, that he was going to be even more valuable, or more important in the context of anything that happened in relation to Quarryvale. And specifically that he had been offered 100,000 to vote against Quarryvale or to do everything in his power to ensure that any vote in relation to Quarryvale subsequently would fail.'

17.17 Mr Dunlop testified that his response to Cllr Hand's repeated demand for IR£250,000 was to threaten him with its disclosure to Mr O'Callaghan. Mr Dunlop stated that Cllr Hand replied to the effect that he was prepared to meet Mr O'Callaghan, and to repeat his demand for IR£250,000 to him.

17.18 Mr Dunlop decided to inform Mr O'Callaghan of Cllr Hand's demand, and explained his decision to do so in the following terms:

'Well two things. One I was getting a little bit fed up of it because Mr. Hand was very persistent and regardless of anything I said he just continued on, and when I said to him that I would have to talk to other people about it, including Mr. O'Callaghan I hasten add, he evinced total lack of concern and I felt therefore that it was, I was obliged, having said to Mr. Hand that I would tell Mr. O'Callaghan that I had to do so, and I did so. And I did so on the basis that I thought it was an outrageous demand, I didn't know how Mr. O'Callaghan would react, but I also had indicated to a number of Mr. Hand's colleagues that there were untoward demands being made of me, and I was conscious of the fact that one or other of those might say something to Mr. O'Callaghan about this.'

17.19 Mr Dunlop also said that he was:

'...concerned, quite simply using God given intelligence that if he is being offered 100,000 by Green Property to stop the vote on Quarryvale and we were refusing to give him 250,000 pounds, God alone knows what would happen. So we had to stop him in his tracks.'

17.20 Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan both testified that in due course, on the 6 October 1992, at a meeting attended by Mr Dunlop, Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr Hand, Cllr Hand repeated his demand for IR£250,000 directly to Mr O'Callaghan.

17.21 Prior to the meeting, Mr O'Callaghan had been advised by Mr Dunlop of Cllr Hand's demand, but was not informed, according to Mr Dunlop, that Mr Dunlop had already paid two sums totalling IR£20,000 to Cllr Hand earlier in 1991 in relation to his support for the Quarryvale project. Mr Dunlop said he distinguished between the earlier payments, and the demand for IR£250,000, because of the substantial size of the latter demand, also because of Green Property Plc's alleged offer to pay Cllr Hand, and finally because Cllr Hand was continually besieging his office looking for the money.

17.22 Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that he met Cllr Hand on 6 October 1992, and acknowledged that Cllr Hand had repeated to his face, the demand for a payment of IR£250,000. Mr O'Callaghan also informed the Tribunal that Cllr Hand advised him that he had been offered IR£100,000 by Green Property Plc to oppose the rezoning of Quarryvale. Contrary to Mr Dunlop's belief that he had informed Mr O'Callaghan of the fact that Cllr Hand had requested that the IR£250,000 be paid into an Australian bank account, Mr O'Callaghan stated that he had not been given this information. However the Tribunal considered it probable that Mr Dunlop did indeed relay to Mr O'Callaghan Cllr Hand's request to be paid via an Australian bank account, as there was no credible or logical reason, in the view of the Tribunal, for Mr Dunlop to have withheld the 'Australian' factor in the demand, given his decision to notify Mr O'Callaghan of the matter.

17.23 Mr O'Callaghan claimed to the Tribunal that he was dismissive of Cllr Hand's demand in the course of their meeting. He said that he had not treated the IR£250,000 demand seriously. Mr O'Callaghan recalled Cllr Hand as laughing throughout the encounter, and that Cllr Hand appeared to believe that 'the whole thing was very funny.'

17.24 Notwithstanding the circumstances in which Mr Dunlop had brought Cllr Hand to meet him, Mr O’Callaghan claimed that he had not questioned Mr Dunlop if he had paid Cllr Hand, or other councillors, to support the Quarryvale project nor had he enquired if Mr Dunlop had received other requests for payments, although by this time, Mr O’Callaghan had not only personally witnessed Cllr Hand’s demand for IR£250,000 for his support for Quarryvale, but had also, in 1989, been advised by Mr Gilmartin that another councillor (Cllr Hanrahan) had made a demand for IR£100,000⁴ for a similar reason.

17.25 Mr Deane told the Tribunal that Mr O’Callaghan had informed him, subsequently, of Cllr Hand’s demand. According to Mr Deane, Mr O’Callaghan appeared to him not to have taken Cllr Hand’s demand seriously, and had regarded the demand as ludicrous and unbelievable.

17.26 In contrast to Mr O’Callaghan’s description to the Tribunal of his response to Cllr Hand’s request for IR£250,000, Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that Mr O’Callaghan was ‘outraged’ at Cllr Hand’s demand. Mr Dunlop described Mr O’Callaghan’s angry reaction when Cllr Hand repeated the demand to him to his face, and said that Mr O’Callaghan threatened Cllr Hand that he would report the matter to the then leader of the Fine Gael Party, Mr John Bruton, if he persisted with the demand. Cllr Hand, according to Mr Dunlop, retorted that such a threat did not bother him ‘in the slightest.’

17.27 The Tribunal rejected Mr O’Callaghan’s contention that he did not consider Cllr Hand’s demand in a serious fashion, particularly in light of the fact that Mr O’Callaghan was aware that Cllr Hand was willing to (and did) meet him for the purpose of repeating that demand. The Tribunal accepted as true, Mr Dunlop’s evidence that Mr O’Callaghan was ‘outraged’ on the occasion of his meeting with Cllr Hand.

17.28 The Tribunal believed that the meeting between Mr O’Callaghan and Cllr Hand on 6 October 1992 was acrimonious, and probably primarily so, because of the enormous amount of money involved. It was, almost certainly, the amount of the demand rather than the fact of a demand for money that angered and concerned Mr O’Callaghan. Indeed, by October 1992, in the course of the Quarryvale rezoning project, Mr O’Callaghan had been asked for, and had paid the following sums of money: IR£10,000 to Mr Lawlor on 23 September 1991; IR£10,000 to Cllr McGrath on 11 October 1991; IR£10,700 to Cllr McGrath on 21 May 1992. Furthermore, he had reimbursed Mr Dunlop for a IR£1,000 payment made to Cllr McGrath in May 1992. In September 1992, Mr

⁴ This alleged demand for IR£100,000 by Cllr Hanrahan is considered elsewhere in this Report.

O'Callaghan had also embarked upon his arrangement with Cllr Gilbride to make him monthly payments of IR£1,750. Moreover, over the course of May/June 1991, he had provided Mr Dunlop with IR£80,000, the primary purpose of which was for distribution to councillors standing in the 1991 Local Election.

17.29 Thus, by this time, Mr O'Callaghan was well used to dealing with requests for money from councillors and Mr Lawlor, in the context of their support for Quarryvale, and well used to complying with such requests, albeit for individual sums considerably less than IR£250,000. Indeed, Mr Dunlop himself acknowledged that it was the amount of Cllr Hand's demand, and not the fact of his demand, that was problematic for him.

17.30 In arriving at this conclusion, the Tribunal took cognisance of certain utterances made by Mr Dunlop in the course of his private interview with the Tribunal on 19 May 2000. When being asked if Mr O'Callaghan was aware of a payment of IR£40,000 Mr Dunlop was claiming he made to Mr Lawlor, Mr Dunlop stated:

'No. Whether Callaghan suspected or knew he certainly never alluded to it. We had a number of discussions, Callaghan and myself, about political contributions. The major one subsequent to all that was in 1992 in relation to the Tom Hand thing which we organised. I told Callaghan. The reason I told Callaghan was because I was afraid of my life that Callaghan might think I was doing a double whammy on him. I told him about Mr. Hand. He asked me to arrange a meeting, which I did in my office. He tore into Hand at a rate of knots. He said 'Who the hell did he think he was'. Hand said 'He is right and he is due' and he had signed the original motion. He had been involved in the original motion with McGrath. Callaghan said something to the effect like 'If you don't cut this out I will report you to your party leader.'

17.31 In evidence on Day 771 Mr Dunlop acknowledged that the use of the phrase 'double whammy' in normal parlance meant 'hitting somebody twice' (for money). Mr Dunlop's use of the phrase 'double whammy' therefore in 2000, when discussing the reason why he had brought Cllr Hand to Mr O'Callaghan, suggested to the Tribunal that, at the time Mr Dunlop approached Mr O'Callaghan in October 1992 in relation to Cllr Hand, Mr O'Callaghan had probably some knowledge of the earlier payment of IR£20,000 made by Mr Dunlop to Cllr Hand in 1991. He at the very least, was aware that Cllr Hand had benefited in some shape or form from the funds provided by Mr O'Callaghan to Mr Dunlop via Shefran in May/June 1991.

17.32 Mr Dunlop testified that in the period October 1992 to May 1993, Cllr Hand had continued his quest for payment of IR£250,000 and he had telephoned Mr Dunlop in this regard prior to Mr Dunlop attending the Fine Gael fundraiser of 6 May 1993 (described below).

17.33 There was no evidence provided to the Tribunal which indicated that the IR£250,000 was paid to Cllr Hand, in Australia or anywhere else.

OTHERS INFORMED OF THE ALLEGED DEMAND FOR IR£250,000

17.34 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he informed a number of other people besides Mr O’Callaghan about Cllr Hand’s demand, including Mr Lawlor, Cllrs Olivia Mitchell, Mary Elliott, Therese Ridge, Anne Devitt, Colm McGrath and Marian McGennis, and the then leader of the Fine Gael Party, Mr John Bruton.

17.35 In his statement to the Tribunal on 29 March 2005, Mr Lawlor stated that Mr Dunlop had recounted to him a conversation he had claimed to have had with Cllr Hand where ‘certain figures were exchanged.’ Mr Lawlor advised the Tribunal that, in his view, Mr Dunlop had not treated Cllr Hand’s request seriously and maintained that Mr Dunlop, inter alia, had regularly referred to it as his ‘fun’ conversation with Cllr Hand. Mr Lawlor also referred to Mr Dunlop’s claim that he had informed Mr Bruton of the demand by Cllr Hand, and that, as recounted by Mr Dunlop to Mr Lawlor, Mr Bruton had replied: ‘Frank, we know the world is not full of saints.’

17.36 Cllr McGennis told the Tribunal that Mr Dunlop had mentioned Cllr Hand’s demand to her at some stage after the establishment of the Tribunal, and that he had advised her that he would be bringing it to the Tribunal’s attention.

17.37 Cllr Colm McGrath had no recollection of being told in 1992 or 1993 by Mr Dunlop of the demand, and had only a vague recollection of a rumour of such a story.

17.38 Cllr Liam T. Cosgrave told the Tribunal that Mr Dunlop had mentioned to him in late 1998 or early 1999 that the Tribunal would be informed of a demand for money made by Cllr Hand.

17.39 Mr Dunlop said that he had informed Cllrs Mitchell, Elliott, Ridge and Devitt of Cllr Hand’s demand for IR£250,00 during the course of a lunch attended by the ‘2x4 club.’⁵ Mr Dunlop recalled that these councillors suggested to him at the time that he inform the then leader of the Fine Gael Party, Mr John Bruton, of Cllr Hand's demand.

17.40 Cllr Elliott told the Tribunal that she had no recollection of ever being told about Cllr Hand's demand by Mr Dunlop.

17.41 In a written statement to the Tribunal Cllr Devitt⁶ recalled 'a social dinner with Frank Dunlop, Owen O'Callaghan, Olivia Mitchell, Therese Ridge, Mary Elliott and myself' when 'Mr. Dunlop mentioned that Cllr Hand had sought a large financial contribution from Mr. O'Callaghan.'

17.42 She believed Mr Dunlop's story at that time to have been a joke or alternatively, that Mr Dunlop had misheard or misunderstood Cllr Hand. Cllr Devitt maintained that, consequently, she had dismissed Mr Dunlop's statement as merely a 'yarn.'

17.43 Cllrs Mitchell and Ridge both acknowledged that they were told by Mr Dunlop of Cllr Hand's demand in the course of a social occasion, prior to Mr Dunlop going to Mr John Bruton, in May, 1993, in relation to the issue (see below). Cllr Mitchell recalled Mr Dunlop telling herself and Cllr Ridge that Cllr Hand felt that the money was due to him for his support for Quarryvale. Mr Dunlop had also referred to the fact that Cllr Hand had given him the number of a bank account in Australia. Cllr Mitchell recalled that during the course of their discussion, she inquired of Mr Dunlop if he had paid Cllr Hand, and advised him never to do so.

17.44 Mr Dunlop took issue with Cllr Mitchell's claim on this point, and denied that she had queried him or cautioned him in such terms.

THE RED COW INN FUNCTION

17.45 On 6 May 1993, Mr Dunlop attended a Fine Gael fundraising lunch at the Red Cow Inn in West County Dublin, at the invitation of Cllr Therese Ridge. The then Fine Gael leader, Mr Bruton, was in attendance at the function but sat at a different table to Mr Dunlop.

17.46 Mr Dunlop said that in the course of that event, and at the prompting of Cllr Ridge, he raised the issue of Cllr Hand's demand with Mr Bruton. Mr Dunlop said in that discussion with Mr Bruton he told him of Cllr Hand's demand for a 'substantial sum of money', in return for his support for the Quarryvale project.

⁶ Cllr Devitt did not give evidence in the Quarryvale module.

17.47 Mr Dunlop stated that he did not inform Mr Bruton that he had already paid IR£20,000 to Cllr Hand in 1991 in relation to Quarryvale, or that Cllr Hand had claimed that Green Property Plc had offered him IR£100,000 to oppose Quarryvale. Mr Dunlop also said that he did not advise Mr Bruton that Cllr Hand's demand had been made known to Mr O'Callaghan.

17.48 According to Mr Dunlop, Mr Bruton took a relatively relaxed approach to the information imparted to him, and his response to Mr Dunlop had been to the effect that, 'neither Fine Gael nor the world was populated by angels.' Mr Dunlop said that Mr Bruton did not indicate whether he intended to take any action on foot of what Mr Dunlop had told him, and that he did not pursue the matter further with Mr Bruton.

17.49 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that the reason he advised Mr Bruton of the matter was his hope that pressure might be brought to bear on Cllr Hand to desist from continuing to make the demand for the payment. He subsequently had advised Cllr Hand that he had informed Mr Bruton of the demand, and Cllr Hand's response to him was that he 'couldn't care less.'

MR BRUTON'S COMMUNICATION WITH THE TRIBUNAL ON THE ISSUE

17.50 On 11 April 2000 (Day 145) while giving evidence in public Mr Dunlop had responded in the affirmative to a question posed by Tribunal Counsel as to whether any councillor had asked him for money in connection with Quarryvale. Mr Dunlop wrote the name of one councillor (Cllr Hand) on a piece of paper for the Tribunal. Cllr Hand's name was not at that time released into the public domain by the Tribunal.

17.51 On 14 of April 2000 an article in the Irish Independent newspaper reported, inter alia, as follows:

'Political lobbyist Frank Dunlop is expected to tell the Flood Tribunal that a Fine Gael county councillor asked him for money to vote for the rezoning of a giant shopping centre site.

He will say he told FG leader John Bruton that one of his party's senior county councillors in Dublin had sought a substantial donation. [...]

Last night sources close to Mr. Bruton said the Fine Gael leader had no recollection of any meeting with Mr Dunlop at which such an allegation was discussed.

It is understood that Mr. Dunlop will name the late Tom Hand, a Fine Gael councillor in south Dublin, as the only elected representative who ever solicited money from him in return for a vote.

Mr. Dunlop is expected to tell the Tribunal that the late Mr. Hand, a former chairman of Dublin County Council, asked him for IR£250,000 to support the rezoning of the Quarryvale site - now home of the Liffey Valley shopping complex. It is understood that Mr. Dunlop will give evidence that Mr. Hand gave him the address of a foreign bank and an account number into which he wanted the IR£250,000 paid.

If Mr. Dunlop says the late Mr. Hand sought the IR£250,000 donation in exchange for his support, he will be asked to hand over to the Tribunal the document given to him by the county councillor... ‘

17.52 On 18 and 19 April 2000 (Days 146 and 147) Mr George Bermingham SC, Counsel for Mr Bruton attended at the Tribunal to explain Mr Bruton’s position in relation to the newspaper report, namely that Mr Bruton denied that he had been told by Mr Dunlop of an improper demand for money by a Fine Gael councillor.

17.53 Cllrs Mitchell and Ridge acknowledged that, in April 2000, following the publication of the article in the Irish Independent newspaper, they had compiled written accounts of their knowledge of Cllr Hand’s demand, for the purpose of advising Mr Bruton, prior to the attendance at the Tribunal of Mr Bruton’s Counsel on 18 and 19 April 2000.

17.54 The Tribunal became aware of the statements made by the two councillors on 18 April 2000, when Messrs Frank Ward & Co, the solicitors for the Fianna Fáil Party, advised the Tribunal that an employee of the Fianna Fáil Party had found a number of documents in the car park of Leinster House. The documents were handed over to Frank Ward & Co, who in turn furnished the documentation to the Tribunal, on the basis that one of the pages found by the individual bore the title ‘Tribunal of Inquiry Questionnaire.’

17.55 In a written statement to the Tribunal on 16 December 2003, while he referred to having had a conversation with Mr Dunlop at the Red Cow Inn on 6 May 1993, Mr Bruton stated that he had no recollection of the content of their discussion, and that this lack of recollection suggested to him that his conversation with Mr Dunlop had been ‘inconsequential.’

17.56 On Day 777 (18 October 2007), however, Mr Bruton advised the Tribunal as follows:

‘Well as I said on an earlier occasion that I did not recollect the content of that conversation, other than making the assumption that it was inconsequential. I have had the opportunity over the last two days to scrutinise very carefully, the evidence that Mr. Dunlop gave over two days here last week and to, in particular his answers to a number of questions that he was asked by you and also by the Chairman.

And I have also thought about the context of the event and spoken to one person who was with me as I was leaving the event and mentioned who was there.

And as a result of going over and over that in my mind, in a, as detailed away as I could over the last two days, or over two days. I gradually came to the conclusion that firstly, the phrase ‘There are no angels in the world or in Fine Gael or something like that’ was a phrase that I could actually have used, it sort of rang a bell in my mind.

Then I noted that in fact Mr. Dunlop wasn’t claiming that he had mentioned 250,000 to me and I noticed also in questioning of him, in which he responded that he wasn’t really expecting me to initiate an investigation or anything like that.

All of those comments from him made me re-examine, in any way that wasn’t, that I hadn’t done previously and possibly, could not have done previously, my memory. And it gradually came back to me that in fact Mr. Dunlop had said something to me, that wasn’t inconsequential [as I’d] previously used the term, but that he did say something about a councillor looking for money, either from him or from somebody else.’

17.57 Mr Bruton’s disclosure to the Tribunal on Day 777 was a departure from the position that had been conveyed to the Tribunal on his behalf on 18 and 19 April 2000, and by Mr Bruton himself on 16 December 2003.

17.58 While in the course of evidence on Day 777 Mr Bruton acknowledged that in May 1993 Mr Dunlop told him that a Fine Gael councillor was seeking money from him, he stated however that he did not recall the name of the councillor mentioned by Mr Dunlop. He could not however exclude the possibility that Mr Dunlop had made the complaint about Cllr Hand.

17.59 Mr Bruton told the Tribunal that as far as he could recollect, in 1993 he had been very much 'disinclined' to believe Mr Dunlop and that in any event it was for Mr Dunlop to go to the Gardaí with his complaint, as political parties were not equipped to conduct criminal inquiries. Mr Bruton also stated that he had no recollection of Mr Dunlop's complaint having been related to the Quarryvale rezoning issue.

17.60 Mr Bruton acknowledged to the Tribunal that on 16 January 1992, some fifteen months prior to 6 May 1993, as leader of the Fine Gael Party, he had been written to by the Dublin West Retailers/Dublin West Action Group (a letter which was circulated by its author to all Fine Gael representatives both local and national). Mr Bruton acknowledged that the content of the letter suggested that the Quarryvale rezoning had been achieved corruptly. This letter, inter alia, described Quarryvale in the following terms:

'Quarryvale? A story of stroke rezoning activity of mega proportions. A story which is not yet fully been told – but which is guaranteed to creep out from the sewers as interested parties publicly put the pieces of the jigsaw together.'

17.61 Following the conversation with Mr Dunlop, Mr Bruton acknowledged that he did not investigate the matter or make follow up enquiries in relation to it. Mr Bruton's explanation for the absence of any follow up by him was that he had found the story told to him by Mr Dunlop 'exceptionally hard to believe.' Mr Bruton said he did not believe that there was anything much he could have done, given that the allegation was 'pure hearsay.' Mr Bruton also said that he was, at the time, 'very wary' of Mr Dunlop.

THE EVIDENCE OF GREEN PROPERTY PERSONNEL AND MR PAT KEATING WITH REGARD TO MR DUNLOP'S EVIDENCE OF CLLR HAND'S CLAIM OF BEING OFFERED IR£100,000 BY GREEN PROPERTY TO VOTE AGAINST QUARRYVALE

17.62 Senior executives of Green Property plc in 1991/1992, namely, Mr John Corcoran, Mr James McKenna and Mr David McDowell all told the Tribunal that they had no knowledge of the matters recounted by Mr Dunlop concerning Cllr Hand, or of any request by, or offer made to, Cllr Hand by Green Property of a sum of IR£100,000, in return for his opposition to the Quarryvale rezoning. Mr Corcoran stated that he had never spoken to Cllr Hand and that when he had sought to meet him to lobby him on behalf of Blanchardstown, Cllr Hand had refused to meet with him. Likewise, Mr Pat Keating, Green Property's Public Relations Representative in the period 1991 and 1992, told the Tribunal that there had been no discussion at any time between him and Green Property plc's principals relating to any offer of payment to Cllr Hand.

17.63 Mr Keating did however recount to the Tribunal a conversation he had with Cllr Hand, probably in mid 1992, on an occasion when Mr Keating was present in the County Council foyer. Cllr Hand had said to Mr Keating ‘Are you looking after anybody?’, a statement Mr Keating had interpreted as Cllr Hand inquiring if Mr Keating was looking after anyone ‘financially.’ Mr Keating described the reaction he had at the time to Cllr Hand’s query in the following terms:

‘Are you looking after anybody and, you know, it was a very unusual comment for anybody to make. But instinctively or intuitively I felt that there was an implication there that it was to do with are you looking after anybody financially or whatever. And so I dealt with it on a total conversational piece, what are you talking about, are you talking about two, five or ten and he said, you know, that’s only small money or whatever and there was nothing else ever said.’

17.64 In his private interview with the Tribunal on 4 December 2003, Mr Keating recounted Cllr Hand as having responded to Mr Keating’s reference to ‘two, five or ten grand a vote’ as only ‘bus fare money.’ In evidence, Mr Keating confirmed that this indeed had been the response of Cllr Hand. Mr Keating told the Tribunal that, save for the aforementioned encounter, he and Cllr Hand never had a discussion in relation to financial support for Cllr Hand.

17.65 The Tribunal was satisfied that the Mr Keating’s interpretation of Cllr Hand’s remarks to him in the County Council chamber, in all probability, reflected the reality of the situation, i.e. that Cllr Hand had asked Mr Keating if he was paying councillors to support Green Property’s objectives in 1991/1992.

17.66 There was no evidence provided to the Tribunal that any money had passed between Green Property and Cllr Hand, or that any offer of money was made by Green Property to Cllr Hand, as had been alleged by Cllr Hand to Mr Dunlop. The Tribunal was however satisfied that, as recounted by Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan, Cllr Hand had alleged to them that he had been offered IR£100,000 by Green Property plc, probably in order to justify his request to them for IR£250,000.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE IR£250,000 DEMAND ALLEGATION

i. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Hand did indeed, as alleged by Mr Dunlop, demand a payment of IR£250,000 from Mr Dunlop, a request repeated in the presence of Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan, in return for his continued support for the Quarryvale project. It was also satisfied that he provided Mr

Dunlop with details of a bank account in Australia into which the money was to be lodged. That request constituted a very serious act of corruption on the part of Cllr Hand.

- ii. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Hand was not paid a sum of IR£250,000 by Mr Dunlop or by Mr O’Callaghan.
- iii. It appeared to the Tribunal that it was the very large amount of money demanded by Cllr Hand, rather than the fact of a demand for money, that angered both Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan. The Tribunal was equally satisfied that what prompted Mr Dunlop to approach Mr Bruton were the repeated requests being made by Cllr Hand for this enormous sum of money, rather than the fact that Cllr Hand had made a request for money.

MR DUNLOP’S AND CLLR HAND’S DEALINGS IN THE PERIOD OCTOBER 1992 TO DECEMBER 1993

17.67 Notwithstanding the events of 6 October 1992 and the threat to report Cllr Hand to the Fine Gael Leader, contact between Mr Dunlop and Cllr Hand subsequent to that date appeared to continue unabated. In October 1992, Mr Dunlop’s diary recorded five meetings with him, and there were 32 recorded telephone contacts between Cllr Hand and Mr Dunlop’s office. In November 1992, Mr Dunlop met Cllr Hand on two occasions, and six telephone contacts from Cllr Hand to Mr Dunlop’s office were recorded in that month. In December 1992, Mr Dunlop’s diary recorded a meeting with Cllr Hand at his home on 1 December 1992, and Mr Dunlop’s secretary recorded 16 telephone contacts between Cllr Hand and Mr Dunlop’s office.⁷

17.68 Included in Mr Dunlop’s diarised scheduled meetings for the period in question was a diary entry for 11 November 1992 which stated, ‘11.00 T.H. at home.’ Listed also on that date were the following:

‘10.00 P.R at home’;

‘11.30 MJC Marine Hotel’;

‘1.00 C.B. at DCC’;

‘2.30 LTC @ Newtownpark Ave’

17.69 Mr Dunlop’s diary also recorded on 10 November 1992: ‘5.30 Ashtons Clonskeagh OM’ and ‘8.00 Clondalkin.’

⁷ Mr Dunlop’s 1993 diary recorded eight meetings with Cllr Hand and there were 85 recorded telephone contacts. In 1994 there were seven meetings and 46 telephone calls by Cllr Hand to Mr Dunlop’s office.

17.70 The Tribunal established that such entries were a record of meetings between Mr Dunlop and Cllrs Pat Rabbitte, Cathal Boland, Liam T. Cosgrave, Olivia Mitchell and Colm McGrath for the purposes of making contributions to them at the time of the November 1992 General Election.⁸ Cllr Rabbitte's contribution was subsequently returned to Mr Dunlop.

17.71 On Day 813, the following exchange took place between Tribunal Counsel and Mr Dunlop concerning Mr Dunlop's diary entries for 11 November 1992:

'Q. 84: And that the purpose of these meetings is primarily for the purposes of making payments to the people who are listed there. What I want you to explain to the Tribunal is the methodology you employed to select these people as being the recipients of money from you, do you understand?

A. Yes, I accept that, I accept that perfectly. Either one, it was at the request of the individuals concerned or it was at my initiation, one or the other. And I can say to you in the context of Mr. Pat Rabbitte it was at my initiation. In the context of Tom Hand, a meeting with Tom Hand at home normally meant that Tom Hand was looking for me. If I had met Michael Joe Cosgrave at the Marine Hotel and there was such an arrangement it was probably at the instigation of Michael Joe Cosgrave. Similarly with Cathal Boland at DCC as I have said to you previously, I had very little contact with Mr. Cathal Boland. In fact I cannot recall too many occasions at which I initiated contact with Mr. Boland. And the final one, Mr. Cosgrave, met him at Newtownpark Avenue because that's where he specified. And obviously there was a conversation that took place either at Mr. Cosgrave's initiation or mine in relation to the General Election and a contribution.

Q. 85. Yes. On the previous day on 10th November '92 you had made two payments, one to Ms. Olivia Mitchell of 500 pounds and one to Colm McGrath of 2,000 pounds, isn't that correct?

A. That's correct.'

⁸ See the sections in this Chapter on Cllrs Boland, Liam T. Cosgrave, McGrath, Mitchell and Rabbitte.

17.72 As already set out in this Chapter, on 10 November 1992 Riga Limited transferred IR£70,000 to Mr Dunlop's 042 Account, a transfer, the Tribunal found, which was effected to place Mr Dunlop in funds for disbursement to politicians (including councillors) in the course of the General Election campaign then underway. Mr Dunlop withdrew IR£55,000 of this money in cash on 10 November 1992 and also had available to him by that date an additional sum of IR£8,500 in cash.⁹

17.73 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that although he believed he met Cllr Hand at the latter's home on 11 November 1992 he did not believe that he had given any money to him on that occasion.

17.74 Mr Dunlop provided this testimony to the Tribunal against the back drop of his own acknowledgement, on Day 784, that meetings with the late Cllr Hand 'at home' were normally for the purposes of paying money to him.

17.75 An analysis of Cllr Hand's bank account for the month of November 1992 established that a sum of IR£10,000 was lodged to his NIB account on 16 November, 1992. This NIB account had been opened on 2 November 1992 with a lodgement of IR£22,000. On 3 November 1992 the account was credited with a further IR£3,000 which was followed on 16 November by the aforementioned IR£10,000 lodgement. These lodgements remain unexplained as to their source. Mr Dunlop denied that he was the source of this IR£10,000 lodgement.

17.76 The Tribunal believed, notwithstanding that Cllr Hand was not a General Election candidate in November 1992, that money did change hands between Mr Dunlop and Cllr Hand on 11 November 1992. In the course of his testimony in another module, in seeking to explain the entries in his diary for 11 November 1992, and in particular the 11 o'clock entry for 'TH at home'¹⁰, Mr Dunlop stated: 'At 11 o'clock I met a councillor at his home at which money was transferred, he was not a candidate.'

17.77 Mr Dunlop acknowledged that his testimony in that module was a diametrically opposing account of his 11 November 1992 encounter with Cllr Hand, compared to the account given by Mr Dunlop in the course of his evidence in this module. Mr Dunlop explained:

'I cannot definitively say that I gave money to Mr. Hand on that particular occasion. I gave money to Mr. Hand on many occasions but I cannot definitively say that I did. I certainly did not give him money in relation to the General Election because he was not a candidate.'

⁹ The IR£8,500 was portion of a cheque for IR£11,000 paid by Christopher Jones Snr. (Ballycullen/Beechhill module – see Chapter 4). By 19 November 1992 Mr Dunlop had a further cash sum of IR£10,000, being the proceeds of a cheque from Davy Hickey Properties Ltd (Pennine/Baldoyle module – see Chapter 9).

¹⁰ Cllr Hand was not publicly referred to on Day 358.

17.78 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop's failure to disclose this payment to Cllr Hand was an attempt on his part to distance this payment from the meeting of 6 October 1992 at which Cllr Hand made a demand for IR£250,000 in Mr O'Callaghan's presence. The Tribunal believed that had Mr Dunlop acknowledged this payment it would have proved difficult for him and Mr O'Callaghan to maintain the fiction that Mr O'Callaghan was unaware of Mr Dunlop's corrupt activity at that time.

17.79 As a matter of probability, the Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Hand received money on 11 November 1992. The Tribunal believed that Mr Dunlop paid this money to secure Cllr Hand's support for the forthcoming Quarryvale vote, probably in the context of continuing demands being made by Cllr Hand. The Tribunal believed that this payment was corrupt.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR FINBARR HANRAHAN (FF)

18.01 Cllr Hanrahan was an elected Dublin County Councillor, for the Lucan Ward, between 1985 and 1994, and an elected South Dublin County Councillor from 1994 to 1999. He unsuccessfully stood as a candidate in the General Elections of 1989 (the Seanad), and 1992 (the Dáil). He was a school teacher by profession.

INFORMATION PROVIDED BY CLLR HANRAHAN TO THE TRIBUNAL PRIOR TO GIVING SWORN EVIDENCE

18.02 On 24 March 1998 Cllr Hanrahan responded to a questionnaire furnished to him by the Tribunal and on 9 October 1998 Cllr Hanrahan attended for private interview with the Tribunal.

18.03 In response to the Tribunal's letter to Cllr Hanrahan dated 14 June 2001 seeking documentation and information, specifically details of any meetings between himself and Mr Frank Dunlop, Mr Owen O'Callaghan (or his advisors), Mr Ambrose Kelly, Mr Liam Lawlor, Mr Padraig Flynn and Mr Tom Gilmartin, Cllr Hanrahan advised by letter dated 25 June 2001 that he had no documentation or records in his possession relating to Quarryvale and stated as follows regarding meetings:

Of the above, I had one meeting with Mr Gilmartin at his urging, details of which are recorded in the transcript of my meeting with the Tribunal legal team.

18.04 The Tribunal again wrote to Cllr Hanrahan on 13 September 2001, and again requested that he provide a narrative statement relating to Quarryvale. In addition, he was asked to provide details on the extent to which monies received by him in respect of political donations were lodged to bank accounts and details of individual political contributions from any one source, in the amount of IR£1,000 or more, in the period 1985 to 2000. He was also asked to provide details of any monies received from Mr Dunlop or Frank Dunlop & Associates, either directly or indirectly, in the period 1985 to 2000.

18.05 Cllr Harahan provided a narrative statement to the Tribunal on 27 September 2001 in which he outlined the circumstances in which he met Mr Gilmartin in the late 1980s.

18.06 In relation to his involvement in the Quarryvale rezoning project, Cllr Hanrahan, inter alia, stated as follows:

The next time Quarryvale surfaced for me was in May '91 when it was due for discussion at the May planning meeting of the Co. Council. The Chairman of Green Properties issues a letter stating that he was happy with Quarryvale proceeding and the principals in Ronanstown had shown no interest in their own zoning proceeding. At the planning meeting I supported allowing the Quarryvale proposal to be entered on the maps for discussion and eventual decision at the final county development plan meeting. I just wished to allow the proposal to be debated and discussed.

During the '91 Local Election Campaign Quarryvale became a huge issue and I realised that the public, the Lucan and Palmerstown small business, Brian Lenihan, Snr. T.D. and many more politicians were of the same opinion as myself that Quarryvale was not the proposal to be supported. Reflecting the very strong opinion in my Electoral area I resolved to support the Ronanstown original zoned site and not the Quarryvale proposal. I made my thoughts known among my political colleagues and a number of them were not very happy with this by that (sic) had to accept it as a fact of life.

I tabled a motion for the final Development Plan meeting proposing that the Quarryvale lands be zoned 'E' – to provide for industrial and related uses. At the decision time the Chairman proposed and it was agreed that two motions similar to mine be taken together and dealt with first. These motions were defeated by 37 votes to 32 votes. I voted for the motions. My motion was then declared lost as it sought the same result.

I voted for an amendment which sought to put 'C1' zoning (less than 'D') and a cap of 100,000 sq ft in the Quarryvale site and it too was defeated by 37 to 32. I knew then that Quarryvale would go through successfully.

When the final proposal to rezone Quarryvale was put a retail shopping cap of 250,000 sq ft was put I knew the battle was lost and I abstained. The final vote was 39 for 28 against and 2 abstentions.

Quarryvale was through and everybody knew that eventually the cap would be lifted as it inevitably is in these circumstances.

18.07 Having regard to the Tribunal's request to provide details of political contributions from any one source in excess of IR£1,000 in the period 1985 to 2000 and details of any monies received from Mr Dunlop or Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd in the same period, Cllr Hanrahan responded as follows: 'As I kept no records I cannot provide details about any monies lodged by me to my accounts.'

18.08 Cllr Hanrahan also stated that he had no recollection of receiving any money from Mr Dunlop.

18.09 On 16 September 2002, Cllr Hanrahan provided a further narrative statement, dated 13 September 2002, in response to a number of queries (not all of which were connected to Quarryvale), posed by the Tribunal, including a request that he detail all requests/representations made to him by lobbyists, including Mr Dunlop. On that issue of lobbyists Cllr Hanrahan stated as follows:

I knew Frank Dunlop. I was aware of him from Fianna Fáil, where he had been General Secretary up to the General Election in 1977. Subsequently, he became head of the Government Information Service. In the period that I was a councillor, Frank Dunlop was well-known among councillors as a lobbyist acting on behalf of certain builders or developers. I was never close to Frank Dunlop. In fact, I did not approve of the way in which he appeared to have access to the Fianna Fáil room in the County Council offices. However, I had no personal dispute with Frank Dunlop and I merely kept my distance from him. While I have obviously read in the newspapers of contributions made by Frank Dunlop on behalf of builders and developers to members of the Council I do not recall receiving any money from Frank Dunlop. I believe that I would recall such an event, and for that reason, I believe that it did not occur. In addition, Frank Dunlop never sought my support in relation to any development plan matter. In the event that Frank Dunlop had an interest in how a particular vote went, he would let it be known how he wished councillors to vote. However, he never approached me and requested me personally to support any individual proposal, and: ...I do not believe that Frank Dunlop ever lobbied me in relation to any proposal in the sense that I do not believe that he ever approached me and asked for a vote in a particular way. I cannot, of course, exclude the possibility that Frank Dunlop could have described to me individually (or to a number of councillors gathered together either in the Council offices or in a nearby venue) the advantages of a particular proposal which he was advocating. I wish, however, to make it absolutely clear that at no stage did Frank Dunlop offer me money in return for my vote nor did I ever request any such payment.

18.10 Cllr Hanrahan further advised the Tribunal as follows:

During the course of my political career, I believe that I received election contributions from a number of builders or developers... It is, of course, possible that during the course of the 14 years that I was on the County Council one or other of the developers who supported me may have asked me to support projects in which they were involved.

Notwithstanding the time afforded to me to do so for the purpose of preparing this statement I have been unable to recollect any such instances apart from those which I have described in this statement. I have already informed the Fianna Fáil Committee on Standards in Public Life that I did receive donations from developers for election purposes, and I believe that none of these contributions were for more than £1,000.00. Should the Tribunal wish to have information in connection with these contributions, I will obviously supply it.

18.11 Cllr Hanrahan also said in his 13 September 2002 statement that no councillor had ever offered him any financial incentive to support, abstain or oppose any particular County Council vote or had ever made him aware of any financial incentive being available in the event that he was to take a particular stance on a particular issue. Interaction with councillors, he stated, took place in the ordinary course of business of the County Council where proposals then before the Council would be discussed among councillors in advance of voting.

18.12 On 15 December 2003 the Tribunal wrote to Cllr Hanrahan and requested him to provide details of any payments he may have received from Mr Pat Keating, Mr John Corcoran and/or Green Properties Limited for any purpose whatsoever within the period 1988 to 1994 and, that if any such payments had been received by him, to provide details thereof.

18.13 Cllr Hanrahan provided a narrative statement on these matters to the Tribunal on 19 January 2004. In the course of which he stated, inter alia, as follows:

2. To put the matter in context I believe it would be helpful if I explain how I met with Mr. John Corcoran and Mr. Pat Keating. As I have previously advised the Tribunal I did not keep records and accordingly I cannot be sure of the exact dates. However as I can recall I believe I first met with Mr. John Corcoran in late 1990/1991. I was introduced to him by the late Brian Lenihan TD. The late Brian Lenihan introduced Mr. Corcoran to me as a friend and supporter of his at a charity fundraising dinner hosted by Brian Lenihan Junior in either the Burlington Hotel or Berkeley Court Hotel. I recall that at the time there was a competition in the Castleknock area for the selection of a Lord Mayor. Whoever raised the most money for charity would be selected as Lord Mayor of Castleknock and Brian Lenihan Junior was a candidate. I was at the dinner because I was a supporter of the late Brian Lenihan TD.

3. At the time there were two Fianna Fail seats in the Dublin West constituency. The late Brian Lenihan and Liam Lawlor were the sitting Fianna Fail TDs. Like me, Mr. Liam Lawlor lives in Lucan. As a County

Councillor, I had aspirations of becoming involved in national politics. I was not a supporter of Mr. Liam Lawlor. This would have been known in the same way as it would have been known that I was a supporter of the late Brian Lenihan. Brian Lenihan was very supportive of me, I considered him my mentor.

4. At the charity fundraising dinner referred to at paragraph 2 when Mr. John Corcoran was introduced to me, the late Brian Lenihan suggested that Mr. Corcoran might be of help to me in the future.

5. At the planning meeting in May 1991 I supported the proposal to allow Quarryvale be entered on the maps for discussion in relation to the implementation of the County Development Plan. During the June 1991 local election campaign the major issue concerning the public in my area was Quarryvale. Whilst I had formed my own view that Quarryvale was not a proposal to be supported public opinion in my area was against the proposal and accordingly I resolved to support the original zoned site for a town centre at Ronanstown. The late Brian Lenihan TD spoke with me about the matter and directed that I was to oppose Quarryvale. As I had already formed a view that I was not in favour of Quarryvale and because the late Brian Lenihan was the senior politician in the constituency at the time and did not normally give directives, I was happy to oppose Quarryvale.

6. There was a general election in November 1992. I was selected on the Fianna Fail ticket to run in Dublin West with Brian Lenihan and Liam Lawlor. This was my first general election campaign as a candidate. Mr. Corcoran wanted Liam Lawlor defeated and offered to support my campaign. As he had been introduced to me by the late Brian Lenihan, I accepted his support.

7. I met with Mr. Corcoran on a number of occasions. I have no records of the dates of those meetings but I associate them with the general election campaign and therefore I believe they occurred over the latter half of 1992. I cannot recall the exact dates or venues of the meetings. I met him for lunch on one or two occasions. I met him at his club, the St. Stephen's Green Club on three or four occasions and there may have been a meeting in the Royal Dublin Hotel. At the meetings we would discuss my campaign and how I felt it was proceeding. Mr. Corcoran advised that he would put Mr. Pat Keating in contact with me to support my campaign. I understood Mr. Keating was a lobbyist for Green Properties Limited in relation to their development of a shopping centre at Blanchardstown as I had seen him around the vicinity of the County Council offices. Mr. Keating supplied a coach with a driver to me five evenings a week over the two/three week election campaign period. Mr. Keating also gave me the name of a printing company and organised that a leaflet/campaign flyer be prepared for me. I did not have to pay for the coach or the leaflet. To the best of my recollection I did not receive any payments from Mr. Keating.

8. I received payments in cash from Mr. Corcoran at some of the meetings referred to in paragraph 7. I have no recollection of receiving a cheque from him. I cannot be precise as to the amounts received as I do not have records. I understood that the payments were from him personally and that he was a supporter of Brian Lenihan. As regards the money I did receive from him my belief is and was that it was not a donation from Green Properties Limited. The payments were made to assist me with my election campaign. I did not utilise all of the donations which I received for my campaign.

18.14 The thrust of Cllr Hanrahan's evidence was that he was at all times opposed to the Quarryvale rezoning project. He was in favour of the Neilstown lands being developed, and he also appeared to support the development of the Blanchardstown lands. Cllr Hanrahan's stated position of opposition however to the Quarryvale project appeared to be inconsistent with the stance taken by him in relation to Quarryvale related motions which were on the agenda of the Special Meeting of the County Council on 16 May 1991.

18.15 At that Special Meeting on 16 May 1991, Cllr Hanrahan supported an amendment to motion 38, proposing that the development plan should include a statement to the effect that the area of Quarryvale to be rezoned should not exceed the town centre site designated for development in the 1983 Development Plan.

18.16 The effect of this amendment which Cllr Hanrahan co-signed, with Cllrs McGrath and Hand, if successful (as it was), would in effect, assist in persuading councillors to re-zone the Quarryvale lands for retail use. Cllr Hanrahan told the Tribunal that he signed this motion at Cllr McGrath's request. He did so, he stated, for the purposes of engineering a debate on the issue and not because he supported the proposal. He viewed the vote as a 'preliminary' vote and not a final position, and had not at that time changed his earlier view that Neilstown was a more suitable site for the development in question.

18.17 Cllr Hanrahan claimed that his signature to the amendment to Cllr McGrath's motion was done 'in a moment.' He recalled Cllr McGrath simply asking him to sign it. He stated that he could not recall whether or not Cllr Hand had signed the amendment prior to him. He believed his discussion with Cllr McGrath about the matter was a short one.

18.18 Cllr Hanrahan acknowledged that by May 1991 he knew Mr Gilmartin and acknowledged (as evidenced in his own statements), that he was also acquainted with Mr Corcoran of Green Property Plc.

18.19 Cllr Hanrahan claimed to have no knowledge of the fact that Mr Corcoran had met with the Chairman of the County Council (Cllr Boland), in addition to Cllrs Lawlor, McGennis and Ryan on 13 May 1991, although he acknowledged that, possibly, by 16 May 1991 he was aware of the letter furnished by Mr Corcoran to Chairman of the County Council on 15 May 1991 in which Mr Corcoran set out his belief as to what was expected to happen as a result of the meeting on 13 May 1991.

18.20 Cllr Hanrahan told the Tribunal that it 'didn't bother' him that Green Property/Mr Corcoran were opposed to Cllr McGrath's original motion to rezone Quarryvale. He had had, according to himself, no discussions with Mr Corcoran about Cllr McGrath's original motion or the proposed amendment thereto on 16 May 1991. He did not recall whether or not he had seen Mr Corcoran in the Council building on the date of the vote. Nor, could he recall if he had seen Mr O'Callaghan or Mr Dunlop. He also did not recall seeing Mr Gilmartin on 16 May 1991 in the Royal Dublin Hotel.

18.21 Cllr Hanrahan however believed that he might have been in the Royal Dublin Hotel on that day. He did not recall that Mr O'Callaghan retained rooms there, and did not recall Mr O'Callaghan or Mr Dunlop approaching him on the day of the vote, to discuss either Cllr McGrath's original motion, or the amendment thereto.

18.22 When put to Cllr Hanrahan that the effect of Cllr McGrath's motion, as amended, having been passed on 16 May 1991 was that, effectively, the town centre zoning earmarked for the Neilstown lands in the 1983 Development Plan was being transferred to Quarryvale, he agreed that this was so. Cllr Hanrahan however justified the position he had adopted in the following terms:

'...my decision was to allow it to be put forward before the public to allow the debate for myself for clarification. But of course within a very short time of passing that motion I realised, when the Local Election took place, just shortly after that motion went through and I realised that in fact that the public in Lucan/Palmerstown the business people of the community and my senior colleague in the constituency, Deputy Brian Lenihan, were all very much against it.

So I've, I resolved to continue with my original belief that the Neilstown, it's called the Neilstown site, it was the site in the Ronanstown actually beside Neilstown, I resolved that that would be the site that I felt should be supported.'

18.23 While he could not recall having seen Mr Lawlor at the County Council on 16 May 1991, he accepted that he had been there. Cllr Hanrahan indicated that he was not involved in, or was aware of, the encounter, as claimed by Mr Corcoran, in which it was alleged that Mr Lawlor had shown Mr Corcoran the proposed amendment to Cllr McGrath's motion, at which Mr Corcoran, maintained did not accord with, what he believed, had been agreed on 13 May 1991.¹

18.24 Cllr Hanrahan strongly disputed evidence given by Mr Gilmartin to the effect that, on the day of the vote, he came into Mr O'Callaghan's room in the Royal Dublin Hotel or, that he was present there with Messrs O'Callaghan, Deane, Dunlop and Cllr Gilbride. He acknowledged however that on the day in question he may have met Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Dunlop and, indeed, other councillors who were supportive of the proposal, including Cllr Gilbride. He had no recollection of meeting Mr Corcoran.

18.25 Cllr Hanrahan maintained that by the time he signed the amendment to Cllr McGrath's motion (and indeed voted on it), he had not changed his mind about his support for the Neilstown site for a town centre. He continued to reiterate that his actions on the day were simply to provide an opportunity for a public debate on the Quarryvale proposal. He said that he was not worried about the likelihood that limited retail development in Quarryvale might ultimately prove more attractive to a lot of councillors than would the proposed town centre in Neilstown.

18.26 In the course of his evidence Cllr Hanrahan acknowledged that when he responded on 25 June 2001 to queries raised by the Tribunal about any meetings he might have had with Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Ambrose Kelly, Mr Lawlor, Mr Flynn, Mr Gilmartin or Mr Dunlop, he had not, save that he acknowledged the meeting he had with Mr Gilmartin in 1989, adverted to any such meetings.

18.27 Cllr Hanrahan was asked to comment on the entry in Mr Dunlop's diary for 6 June 1991 which recorded '10.45 FINR H Co. Co.'²

18.28 He could not say whether or not he had a meeting with Mr Dunlop on that date. Asked if he had ever met Mr Dunlop by prior arrangement at the County Council, he stated:

'I never had any formal arrangements to meet Mr. Dunlop at any time. Mr. Dunlop popped up so often around the place that I wouldn't have had to have an arrangement with him at the time. If I were in attendance – If I were actually in the party room for instance at the County Council and if I happened to be there on the 6th June, and if he walked in the door he could easily just say hello or something of that nature and he could actually write in his diary that he met me.'

18.29 The Local Elections held shortly after the May 1991 Quarryvale vote saw a number of councillors lose their seats. However, Cllr Hanrahan retained his seat. During his election campaign, it became obvious, according to Cllr Hanrahan, that the community in his electoral base of Lucan were largely very much opposed to the Quarryvale proposal.

18.30 Cllr Hanrahan questioned the accuracy of an AIB memorandum dated 20 September 1991, (which documented his presence at a public meeting in Palmerstown), which suggested that at that time Mr O'Callaghan believed that he, Cllr Hanrahan, then supported Quarryvale, and he disputed any suggestion that he supported Quarryvale at that time. Cllr Hanrahan dismissed any contrary view, as may have been expressed by Mr O'Callaghan to AIB, as merely being Mr O'Callaghan's opinion.

18.31 Cllr Hanrahan apparently also attended a public meeting relating to Quarryvale in November 1991.

18.32 Mr Dunlop's 'contact report', furnished to Mr O'Callaghan on 17 June 1992, did not suggest that Cllr Hanrahan had been approached, either by Mr Dunlop or Mr O'Callaghan in the course of contacts being made with councillors from April 1992 onwards.

² On Day 769 Mr Dunlop stated that, as set out in his diary for the 6 June 1991, he met Cllr Hanrahan at the Council offices. Mr Dunlop did not suggest that he had met Cllr Hanrahan on that date for the purpose of making a payment to him.

18.33 However, in a number of ‘scenarios’ (of likely voting patterns of councillors) suggested by Mr Dunlop in the latter half of 1992, Cllr Hanrahan was noted, for the most part, as being someone who opposed the Quarryvale proposal, save that in one such ‘scenario’ he was described as someone who might support the proposal.

18.34 Asked if between May 1991 and December 1992 he had been lobbied by Mr Dunlop or Mr O’Callaghan in relation to Quarryvale, Cllr Hanrahan replied as follows:

‘No doubt they did. I couldn’t remember an actual detail, as I said, the type of person that Frank Dunlop was, was, he just popped up, turned up, would find you nearby if you weren’t in the Council offices or if you weren’t in your party room. So it’s possible that I might have bumped into Frank Dunlop.’

18.35 Cllr Hanrahan acknowledged in his statement to the Tribunal in September 2002 that ‘In addition, Frank Dunlop never sought my support in relation to any development plan matter.’

18.36 Cllr Hanrahan explained the inconsistency between that statement and his evidence on the basis that he had not specifically recalled Mr Dunlop canvassing him in relation to Quarryvale.

18.37 Mr Dunlop’s diary for 9 October 1992 had the following entry:

*‘4.00 OOC to see F Han.’*³

Mr Dunlop’s 9 October 1992 diary entry indicated that Mr O’Callaghan and Cllr Hanrahan were scheduled to meet. Cllr Hanrahan did not recollect any such meeting, but he accepted that he met Mr O’Callaghan at around this period.

In relation to the 9 October 1992 meeting, Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that while he himself knew and had met Cllr Hanrahan, Mr O’Callaghan went to see Cllr Hanrahan alone on that occasion. Mr Dunlop also recounted that on one other occasion, during a break in the voting in Dublin County Council, Mr O’Callaghan had again spoken to Cllr Hanrahan on his own, the ‘walk around the block’ meeting, see below.

18.38 Mr Dunlop’s diary for the previous day (8 October 1992) recorded the following:

‘OOO to organise B Cass, L Lohan; H Keogh F Hanrahan.’

‘DON L to call’

³ Mr Dunlop, when initially furnishing his diaries to the Tribunal (in their redacted format) disclosed this meeting with Cllr Hanrahan but redacted a reference to a meeting scheduled with Mr Lawlor on the same date.

This was likely a reference that Mr O’Callaghan/Mr Dunlop were to organise meetings with Cllrs Cass, Lohan, Keogh, and Hanrahan.

18.39 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that Mr O’Callaghan did not discuss with or inform him of the outcome of his meetings with Cllr Hanrahan, save to comment that Cllr Hanrahan ‘was very difficult.’ Asked by the Tribunal if Mr O’Callaghan had ever suggested to him that Cllr Hanrahan had sought money in return for supporting Quarryvale, Mr Dunlop stated:

‘He never suggested any – he never suggested such directly. There were stories circulating which slightly colours my recollection and my view on this matter. There were stories circulating, hypocritical or otherwise, anecdotal or otherwise, in relation to what had or had not taken place between Tom Gilmartin and Mr. Hanrahan and others but Mr. O’Callaghan never specifically said to me that after any meeting that he had with Finbarr Hanrahan. I can absolutely tell you what he told me in relation to his meeting with Mr. Hanrahan after he walked up and down O’Connell St. He said that he wasn’t open to it. In relation to this particular meeting I have no recollection of Mr. O’Callaghan coming to me and telling me that Mr. Hanrahan was looking for money.’

18.40 Mr Dunlop testified that he had learned, through Mr Ambrose Kelly, of an encounter which Mr Gilmartin claimed he had with Cllr Hanrahan, and he stated that he had raised this matter with Mr O’Callaghan, and that Mr O’Callaghan ‘was relatively non-committal about it but he did say that various incidents had taken place.’ Asked if Mr O’Callaghan had told him that Mr Gilmartin had complained that Cllr Hanrahan sought money from him, Mr Gilmartin, Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal:

‘Oh, certainly again I cannot be date specific about this but certainly at some stage yes. Mr. O’Callaghan did confirm, in inverted commas, that what was circulating in relation to what Mr. Hanrahan allegedly demanded from Mr. Gilmartin at some meeting or other, that that in fact had occurred.’, and ‘I obviously asked him. I asked Mr. O’Callaghan. I cannot say when I did this but I do have a recollection of raising this issue with Mr. O’Callaghan at some stage during the course of my relationship with him. I cannot say when this occurred but certainly in the circumstances where, as I said there was – there were stories circulating about what had or had not occurred and what had or had not been demanded by Mr. Hanrahan and I believe I raised that matter with Mr. O’Callaghan and Mr. O’Callaghan said that there was some incident or occurrence at some stage and that there was – Mr. Gilmartin had told him that there was a demand for money.’

18.41 It was put to Mr Dunlop that in his private interview with the Tribunal in 2000, he had said that it was Mr O'Callaghan who had told him about the Gilmartin/Hanrahan incident. In the course of that private interview, Mr Dunlop stated that Mr O'Callaghan had reported to him that Cllr Hanrahan had asked Mr Gilmartin for IR£100,000 in Buswells Hotel and that Mr O'Callaghan had so informed him of this on 17 December 1992, subsequent to 'the walk around the block' by Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr Hanrahan on that date.

THE 'WALK AROUND THE BLOCK'

18.42 Mr Dunlop agreed that in the course of his interview in 2000 with Tribunal Counsel, he had alluded to a 'walk around the block' by Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr Hanrahan, in the following terms:

'The night of the motion O'Callaghan and himself disappeared. Walked around the block.'

18.43 Mr Dunlop was asked if he knew what had happened on that occasion as between Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr Hanrahan, Mr Dunlop responded thus:

'To be honest with you I never discussed it with O'Callaghan. I suspect very strongly Hanrahan made demands of O'Callaghan and O'Callaghan refused.', and '...yes. nothing and when O'Callaghan suspected that the same moxy was going on, I do not know whether it was, I never discussed it with O'Callaghan. We kept well away from Hanrahan. I had one conversation on the telephone with Hanrahan. I think I mentioned this to you, in which he said something to the effect, the words are important I know but something to the effect is, yes, nothing can be done for nothing.'

18.44 In his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Dunlop elaborated further on that event, as follows:

'...When Mr. O'Callaghan came back to the Council Chamber on that particular evening after his famous walk around the block with Mr. Hanrahan, Mr. O'Callaghan was spitting fire. Mr. O'Callaghan is a sort of a very even tempered gentleman as I know him, but he was spitting fire on that particular occasion and I, there were others around, I just either asked him directly, verbally or looked at him quizzically and he, expletives deleted, he just told me what Hanrahan was going to do.'

18.45 Mr Dunlop in the course of his evidence acknowledged that he had told the Tribunal that it was Mr O'Callaghan who had told him about Mr Gilmartin's encounter with Cllr Hanrahan.

18.46 In relation to the words ‘when O’Callaghan suspected that the same moxy was going on,’ used by Mr Dunlop in the course of his private interview in 2000, Mr Dunlop confirmed that Mr O’Callaghan never directly told him that Cllr Hanrahan had requested money from him. Mr Dunlop commented:

‘The fact that O’Callaghan was having private meetings with Mr. Hanrahan at which I was not present maybe wrongly led me to suspect or believe that there was something going on.’

18.47 According to Mr Dunlop, Mr O’Callaghan referred to Cllr Hanrahan as a ‘hard man.’ Mr Dunlop stated that it was his, Mr Dunlop’s, belief that Mr O’Callaghan had suspected that during his encounters with Mr Hanrahan, he was being asked, albeit or possibly indirectly, for money.

MR DUNLOP’S ACCOUNT OF HIS OWN INTERACTIONS WITH CLLR HANRAHAN

18.48 In the course of his 2000 interview with the Tribunal, Mr Dunlop was recorded as stating, inter alia, (referring to a telephone conversation he had had with Cllr Hanrahan):

‘I think I mentioned this to you in which he said something to the effect the words are important I know but something to the effect is yes nothing can be done for nothing.’

18.49 Mr Dunlop agreed that he uttered those words in 2000 in the context of describing interactions between himself and Cllr Hanrahan during the course of the County Dublin Development Plan Review.

18.50 In the course of his evidence, Mr Dunlop testified as follows:

‘...I think I had a number of telephone conversations with Mr. Hanrahan and that in the course – Mr. Hanrahan was a very difficult man to read in the context of what he might or might not do. He made his views known elliptically but he did on one occasion while I was seeking his support in relation to a vote for Quarryvale, I can’t say which specifically, which specific vote it was but certainly it was an early vote in relation to Quarryvale and that a phrase of the nature nothing can be done for nothing was used.’

18.51 Mr Dunlop stated that it was his understanding of the phrase ‘nothing can be done for nothing’ was that Cllr Hanrahan may well have been indicating to him that he was seeking money, or that he would vote in return for money or, that he would vote in a particular way, if an arrangement was arrived at with him.

18.52 Mr Dunlop stated however that he did not pay money to Cllr Hanrahan. When asked why he had not done so, given his own admitted modus operandi, he replied 'It's very difficult to explain this Ms Dillon and without going into inter personal relations but I had a visual inherent distrust of Mr Hanrahan.' Mr Dunlop stated that he considered Cllr Hanrahan as a man 'who might make exorbitant demands.'

18.53 Mr Dunlop also told the Tribunal:

'... I had a discussion with him in relation to an election contribution and I gave him an election contribution but I never – I canvassed him on a number of occasions in relation to various proposals that were before Dublin County Council and these were very, very short meetings, short canvassing meetings. He would just say we'll see or I might or I'll see what I'll do.'

18.54 Asked to explain why he had come to the view that Cllr Hanrahan was a man who might be expected to make exorbitant demands, Mr Dunlop stated that his:

'...view would have been largely coloured by comments that were made to me by Liam Lawlor for example because he was a constituency colleague of his and there were lots of anecdotal stories about what had and had not happened in the Lucan area in relation to, according to Mr. Lawlor, according to Mr. Hanrahan, relating Mr. Hanrahan. I have no evidence to put forward or to suggest that anything untoward took place, you have asked me the question. I discussed it with Mr. Lawlor.'

18.55 Mr Dunlop agreed therefore, that independently of what Mr O'Callaghan had told him in relation to Mr Gilmartin's encounter with Cllr Hanrahan in Buswells Hotel, he had discussed with Mr Lawlor an issue concerning Cllr Hanrahan and a request for money, unconnected to Quarryvale.

CLLR HANRAHAN'S VOTING PATTERN ON 17 DECEMBER 1992

18.56 On 17 December 1992 – the day of the Quarryvale rezoning vote, Cllr Hanrahan voted in support of two motions proposing to rezone Quarryvale back to 'E' (industrial) (which were unsuccessful⁴). Cllr Hanrahan also voted in support of a motion which proposed limiting retail development in Quarryvale to 100,000 square feet (and which was also unsuccessful). In relation to the motion which proposed to cap retail development in Quarryvale at 250,000 square feet (which was passed with 39 voting in favour and 28 voting against), Cllr Hanrahan was one of two councillors who abstained.

⁴ Cllr Hanrahan himself lodged a similar motion.

CLLR HANRAHAN'S EVIDENCE

18.57 Cllr Hanrahan was asked for his response to the evidence of Mr Dunlop to the effect that on at least one occasion, in the course of a telephone conversation when Mr Dunlop sought his support for a development, possibly Quarryvale, that he uttered words to the effect that 'nothing can be done for nothing.' Cllr Hanrahan told the Tribunal that while he could not deny that he might have had a telephone discussion with Mr Dunlop, he denied that he uttered the remark attributed to him by Mr Dunlop.

18.58 When invited to comment on Mr Dunlop's evidence that Mr O'Callaghan had repeated Mr Gilmartin's allegation to him that Cllr Hanrahan had sought IR£100,000 for his support for Quarryvale, Cllr Hanrahan commented:

'Well, when I was before the Tribunal before on this particular issue I pointed out to the Tribunal that because somebody tells a lie to a number of people it doesn't make it a truth. So Mr. Gilmartin, if he said something to, if he did say it to Mr. O'Callaghan these words, then in fact he was repeating a lie.'

18.59 Cllr Hanrahan acknowledged that he met with Mr O'Callaghan in relation to Quarryvale, and that on that occasion Mr O'Callaghan sought his support, both for the Quarryvale and the Neilstown projects.

18.60 Cllr Hanrahan recalled that he signed a motion dated 9 December 1992 which sought to revert the Quarryvale Town Centre to Industrial zoning. The motion he had proposed (there were other similar motions put forward at that time), ran counter to what Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop had advocated for the Quarryvale lands. Cllr Hanrahan stated that he prepared that motion because at that stage he had resolved to support the building of a Town Centre on the Neilstown lands. He acknowledged his awareness, at the time he submitted his motion to rezone Quarryvale to Industrial use, that the Neilstown site was 'O'Callaghan's site' (Barkhill Ltd owned the Neilstown option on the lands). It was put to Cllr Hanrahan that at the time he submitted his 9 December 1992 motion, the Neilstown lands were proposed for Industrial zoning on the Draft Development Plan and that, moreover, there had been a planning application submitted to the Council for a Sports Stadium/National Stadium on those lands. It was suggested to Cllr Hanrahan that all these matters would have been known to him on foot of the Manager's Report which had been circulated to councillors in early December 1992.

18.61 Cllr Hanrahan stated that he had resolved himself to bring his own motion to remove the Town Centre zoning from Quarryvale and that no one had canvassed him to submit such a motion. The two motions were submitted in his name on 9 December 1992, one a motion which sought to reverse the Quarryvale zoning and the other, which sought that the Neilstown lands revert to Town Centre zoning.

18.62 Cllr Hanrahan acknowledged that, either on the day of the vote (17 December 1992), or very close to it, he had a conversation with Mr O’Callaghan. He and Mr O’Callaghan had walked together during a break in the County Council meeting. Cllr Hanrahan said that he did not recall their conversation in great detail. He acknowledged however that the discussion between himself and Mr O’Callaghan would have centred on Mr O’Callaghan’s request for him to vote in support of the Quarryvale motion. Cllr Hanrahan’s response to this request was to explain that as he had a proposal contrary to the Quarryvale motion before the County Council at that stage. He resolved to remain on the course on which he had already embarked (which was one of opposition to Quarryvale).

18.63 In response to Mr Dunlop’s description of Mr O’Callaghan as ‘spitting fire’ when he returned to the County Council after his discussion with him, Cllr Hanrahan told the Tribunal that Mr O’Callaghan ‘didn’t seem angry when I was talking to him.’ He agreed that Mr O’Callaghan had sought to persuade him to support Quarryvale.

18.64 Responding to Mr Dunlop’s evidence that Mr Dunlop believed that Cllr Hanrahan sought money from Mr O’Callaghan, Cllr Hanrahan stated that ‘there is no question of that.’

MR O’CALLAGHAN’S TESTIMONY

18.65 Mr O’Callaghan acknowledged that in the run up to the December 1992 Quarryvale vote he had a discussion Cllr Hanrahan. In the course of that discussion Cllr Hanrahan had told him that he found it very difficult to support Quarryvale because doing so would result in him losing his seat as a councillor in the Lucan area.

18.66 Mr O’Callaghan acknowledged that by October 1992 he was aware of Cllr Hanrahan’s opposition to Quarryvale, but he lobbied him nonetheless. Mr O’Callaghan stated that he never discussed money with Cllr Hanrahan, except on one occasion, on the night of the second Quarryvale rezoning vote. Mr O’Callaghan described his encounter with Cllr Hanrahan on that night in the following terms:

'...I walked around the block with Finbarr Hanrahan asking him to support Quarryvale, this was at the break in the meeting in the council chamber. He explained to me how and why he could not support Quarryvale, because it would cost him his seat in Lucan, simple as that, that was his situation always. Last thing he said to me was before he left, when the election comes up, the next election comes up, if he wanted a contribution to help him get elected could he approach me, I said of course he could, that was the extent of the conversation. I walked back into the council chamber, depressed he wouldn't support Quarryvale but that was the extent [of] it, that was his right, he was doing what he felt he had to do.'

18.67 Mr O'Callaghan disagreed with Mr Dunlop's evidence that he, Mr O'Callaghan was angry when he returned from the walk with Cllr Hanrahan, and he disagreed completely with Mr Dunlop's interpretation (as given in evidence by Mr Dunlop) of his demeanour on his return from the 'walk around the block.' Mr O'Callaghan described Mr Dunlop's account of his demeanour as 'completely crazy.'

18.68 Mr O'Callaghan was asked if Cllr Hanrahan had given him any indication of what level of financial support for future elections he would have considered appropriate, to which Mr O'Callaghan stated that he had not, and said, *'...the reality of that is that he never even followed it up, he never even asked me when election time came up, he never even asked me when the election came up, for support.'*⁵

18.69 Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that prior to that discussion on 17 December 1992 he never had a discussion with Cllr Hanrahan on the subject of money. He acknowledged that at the time he met and spoke with Cllr Hanrahan in 1992, Mr Gilmartin had by then relayed to him his allegation that Cllr Hanrahan had sought IR£100,000 from him in return for his support for Quarryvale. Yet, Mr O'Callaghan did not raise that matter with Cllr Hanrahan in the course of their discussions.

18.70 Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that the purpose of the 'walk around the block' discussion with Cllr Hanrahan was to persuade Cllr Hanrahan to withdraw his opposition to the Quarryvale rezoning, or alternatively to persuade him to either not vote against Quarryvale or abstain.

⁵ Cllr Hanrahan was a candidate in the Seanad Election January/ February 1993.

MR DUNLOP'S ALLEGED PAYMENT OF A POLITICAL CONTRIBUTION TO CLLR
HANRAHAN IN NOVEMBER 1992

18.71 On Day 148 Mr Dunlop furnished his '1992' list to the Tribunal which included Cllr Hanrahan's name as the recipient of IR£2,500. In the course of a private interview with the Tribunal in May 2000, Mr Dunlop stated his belief that he had paid Cllr Hanrahan either IR£2,000 or IR£2,500 for the 1992 election. In the course of his written statement to the Tribunal in October 2000, Mr Dunlop put it thus:

Mr. Hanrahan was very unhelpful in relation to Quarryvale. I made a decision that it might bear some fruit if I made a contribution to his election campaign, (he was a candidate in Dublin West in the November 1992 General Election), bearing in mind that there was a vote to be held in December 1992. I don't believe I ever paid, or was asked for, money, by Mr. Hanrahan for his support for motions during the Development Plan.

18.72 Cllr Hanrahan, in the course of his evidence, denied that he ever received money from Mr Dunlop. Cllr Hanrahan commented:

'... it would be much easier for me before the Tribunal here to actually acknowledge that if he had given it to me to acknowledge that he gave to me, that he gave me a sum of money during my 1992 campaign but I'm afraid he didn't and I have to say that he didn't.'

18.73 Cllr Hanrahan also rejected the idea that Mr Dunlop gave him a donation of IR£2,500 (or any amount), on that basis that Mr Dunlop was a very close friend of Mr Lawlor who was a political rival of Cllr Hanrahan. He maintained that during that period of time politically within the Fianna Fail Party, people took sides and that, 'Frank Dunlop was on the side of Deputy Lawlor', and 'it would have come as a surprise to me (Cllr Hanrahan) if he came over to me and handed me money for my campaign.'

CLLR HANRAHAN'S DEALINGS WITH GREEN PROPERTY PLC IN THE PERIOD 1991 TO 1993

18.74 Cllr Hanrahan acknowledged that in the course of the Quarryvale rezoning process, he had met Mr Corcoran of Green Property Plc a number of times, and on occasions met Green's PR consultant, Mr Keating. Cllr Hanrahan acknowledged financial support from Mr Corcoran at the time of the General Election in November 1992, which he claimed did not exceed IR£300. This was his first General Election campaign. Cllr Hanrahan told the Tribunal that in the earlier Local Election (in June 1991) he had beaten Mr Lawlor, and that:

'...in '92, Mr. Lawlor would have been under a lot of pressure from my direction because it could have followed that I might have been successful in actually topping him once again. As it turned out I didn't top him again. But I'm sure people who were interested in defeating Mr. Lawlor, I took it that Mr. Corcoran would, if he was interested in defeating Mr. Lawlor would have approached myself because I was the person who had a chance of actually succeeding in that endeavour. I had actually defeated him at the convention as well even though I state in my statement that I was selected to go forward along with Brian Lenihan and Liam Lawlor. In fact, the night of the convention it was myself and Brian Lenihan who was selected to go forward.'

18.75 Mr Pat Keating told the Tribunal that during the course of the 1992 General Election campaign Green Property Plc expended a sum of IR£4,160 on election literature and other support for three councillors. Mr Keating stated that Cllr Hanrahan was one of these three candidates and he believed that each would have received support close to IR£1,500 out of the sum expended.

18.76 In his statement of 18 December 2003, Mr Keating described the reasons for the Green Property funded contributions made to Cllr Hanrahan as follows:

Cllr Hanrahan was Palmerstown based and in that area, there were concerns that Quarryvale would damage the Palmerstown Shopping Centre. In addition, he appeared set to make a bid to take Liam Lawlor's Dáil seat. He was keen to pick up anti Lawlor votes in the Blanchardstown area and also in the north Clondalkin area.

18.77 In addition to funding election literature, Cllr Hanrahan had also received support from Green Property Plc in the form of a loan of a rented mobile phone. He was one of eight councillors who received such assistance, at a total cost to Green Property of IR£955.

18.78 Mr Corcoran acknowledged that he met Cllr Hanrahan on a number of occasions during the November 1992 General Election campaign and that he offered to support Cllr Hanrahan financially, because he wanted Mr Lawlor defeated in the election. Mr Corcoran, however, claimed to have no recollection of having given a number of small donations to Cllr Hanrahan. Nor, did Mr Corcoran have any recollection that Mr Keating, on behalf of Green Property, had provided Cllr Hanrahan with a bus and driver during the course of the election campaign.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO PAYMENTS MADE TO OR REQUESTED BY CLLR HANRAHAN

i. The Tribunal accepted Mr Dunlop's evidence that in the course of a conversation he had with Cllr Hanrahan during the currency of the making of the Development Plan, he had been left with the impression that Cllr Hanrahan's reference to 'nothing can be done for nothing' was an indirect request for money, was correct. The Tribunal however was further satisfied that Cllr Hanrahan did not make a specific request to Mr Dunlop for money connected to any support he might give to the Quarryvale rezoning.

ii. The Tribunal however was satisfied that Mr Dunlop, in the course of the 1992 General Election, in all probability paid Cllr Hanrahan a sum of either IR£2,000 or IR£2,500 in the circumstances, and for the reasons, as outlined by Mr Dunlop. The Tribunal was satisfied that the primary purpose of the payment was an attempt by Mr Dunlop to compromise Cllr Hanrahan's disinterested performance of his duty as a councillor in the context of providing future voting support for Quarryvale. The acceptance by Cllr Hanrahan of this money from Mr Dunlop in circumstances where he knew of Mr Dunlop's role as a lobbyist in relation to rezoning matters, was improper.

iii. The Tribunal was satisfied, notwithstanding Cllr Hanrahan's and Mr O'Callaghan's denials, that in the course of their 'walk around the block' on 17 December 1992, Cllr Hanrahan solicited money from Mr O'Callaghan in return for his voting support for Quarryvale. This was a corrupt demand. The Tribunal, in arriving at the conclusion that money was requested by Cllr Hanrahan had particular regard to the following:

- Cllr Hanrahan had previously sought IR£100,000 from Mr Gilmartin in return for his support for Quarryvale, and was thus not averse to seeking money from developers. The Tribunal has found in the Report that such a demand was made, and that it was corrupt, and that this demand had been made known to Mr O'Callaghan almost immediately after it had been made.
- Mr Dunlop described Mr O'Callaghan as being angry on his return to the Council Chamber following his 'walk around the block' with Cllr Hanrahan on 17 December 1992. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop's description of Mr O'Callaghan's demeanour, following his discussion with Cllr Hanrahan, was accurate. Having had ample opportunity to witness Mr O'Callaghan's demeanour over a prolonged period of time while giving evidence at the Tribunal's public hearings, the Tribunal considered that Mr O'Callaghan was, in general, a person who exhibited a calm disposition, and was not easily angered. The Tribunal believed that, if Mr O'Callaghan's request to Cllr Hanrahan to vote in support of Quarryvale had simply been rejected by Cllr Hanrahan as suggested by both Cllr Hanrahan and Mr O'Callaghan, a more likely reaction on Mr O'Callaghan's part would have been disappointment, concern or anxiety, but not anger.

- The Tribunal believed it likely that Mr O'Callaghan's anger stemmed, not from the fact that Cllr Hanrahan made a demand for money, but rather because of the substantial size of that demand. By this time (December 1992), Mr O'Callaghan had already paid money to a number of politicians at their request, including IR£10,000 to Mr Lawlor, IR£21,700 to (or on behalf of) Cllr McGrath, and he had agreed to make monthly payments to Cllr Gilbride of IR£1,750. By this time also Mr O'Callaghan had paid IR£150,000 to Mr Dunlop (through Shefran Ltd), most of which was intended to be used by Mr Dunlop to make payments to councillors.
- Furthermore, Mr O'Callaghan had by 17 December 1992 'injected' IR£85,000 into the campaign to rezone Quarryvale in advance of the Council vote of 17 December 1992, portion of which was represented by the IR£70,000 provided to Mr Dunlop on 10 November 1992 for disbursement during the November 1992 General Election campaign, and included IR£5,000 paid to Cllr G. V. Wright on the 11/12 November 1992.
- There was no suggestion, either by Mr O'Callaghan himself or by anyone else, that the requests which had been made by Mr Lawlor and Cllrs McGrath and Gilbride had evoked in Mr O'Callaghan any appearance or expression of anger. However, as already set out previously in this Chapter, the Tribunal was satisfied that when confronted with a demand by Cllr Hand for IR£250,000, in return for his support for Quarryvale, Mr O'Callaghan's response was one of anger. Mr Dunlop described Mr O'Callaghan's reaction to Cllr Hand's request for IR£250,000 as 'very very angry' and that Mr O'Callaghan was 'outraged' by the request. The Tribunal noted that Mr Dunlop's description of Mr O'Callaghan's demeanour after his 'walk around the block' with Cllr Hanrahan was not dissimilar to Mr Dunlop's description of his demeanour at the time of Cllr Hand's demand.

- The Tribunal believed that Mr O’Callaghan’s anger on 17 December 1992 stemmed from the fact that Cllr Hanrahan had requested a sum of money in excess of a sum Mr O’Callaghan might have contemplated paying him, and which was more in line with payments made by him to other councillors in relation to Quarryvale.
- The Tribunal regarded with some incredulity Mr O’Callaghan and Cllr Hanrahan’s evidence that Cllr Hanrahan, having rejected Mr O’Callaghan’s request to support Quarryvale as made during the ‘walk around the block’, would have then proceeded, in effect, to seek leave to solicit an election/political contribution from Mr O’Callaghan in the future. Mr O’Callaghan’s evidence in this regard was rendered more incredible given his confirmation that Cllr Hanrahan did not subsequently solicit any such contribution, notwithstanding the fact that Cllr Hanrahan was a candidate in the Seanad Election which took place over the course of January/February 1993. Had there been discussion about possible financial support for Cllr Hanrahan for his election campaign, the Tribunal would have expected evidence from Mr O’Callaghan of a request for such electoral financial assistance from Cllr Hanrahan. The Tribunal in all the circumstances therefore did not accept Mr O’Callaghan’s evidence that Cllr O’Hanrahan’s reference to money in the course of their walk was to seek leave to solicit a political contribution in the future.

PART 7 - CLLR JACK LARKIN (DECEASED) (FF)

19.01 Cllr Larkin was elected Town Commissioner in Balbriggan Town Council between 1960 and 1994. He was also elected councillor in Dublin County Council between 1985 and 1993, and transferred to Fingal County Council in 1994. Cllr Larkin died in 1998.

19.02 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal he paid IR£1,000 to Cllr Larkin during the course of the 1991 Local Election campaign. Cllr Larkin's name appeared on Mr Dunlop's Day 147 list of contributions made in 1991.

19.03 In his October 2000 statement Mr Dunlop stated as follows:

I came to know Mr. Larkin through my association with Fianna Fail. He was an active member of the organisation in North Dublin and was elected to Dublin County Council on a number of occasions. Mr. Larkin was in receipt of £1,000 in cash during the immediate run-up to the 1991 Local Elections. The money was handed over in Conway's Pub a short time after the Quarryvale vote in May 1991. It was a payment made paid in recognition of his support for Quarryvale and as an indication of further payments for support for other issues during the course of the Development Plan. Mr. Larkin and I discussed the Quarryvale project generally and its timescale. We agreed that Mr. Larkin's support would be necessary, not only in respect of Quarryvale, but also in respect of other developments. Mr. Larkin repeated to me the need for his support on subsequent occasions.

19.04 Mr Dunlop's later December 2003 statement did not provide any additional detail regarding Mr Dunlop's dealings with Cllr Larkin in relation to Quarryvale.

19.05 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that in the course of discussing the then forthcoming June 1991 Local Elections with Cllr Larkin, Cllr Larkin solicited a payment from him, and in doing so reiterated his strong support for Quarryvale. Mr Dunlop said that he paid Cllr Larkin IR£1,000 in that context, and that the payment was made in Conways Public House.

19.06 In his testimony in the Quarryvale module Mr Dunlop described Cllr Larkin as a very good supporter of any project Mr Dunlop brought to his attention. He maintained that throughout the Quarryvale rezoning process Cllr.

Larkin remained supportive, an observation noted by Mr Dunlop in a document compiled by him in 1992 entitled 'Likely voting pattern' of councillors.

19.07 Cllr Larkin voted in support of Quarryvale on 16 May 1991. His voting record for 17 December 1992 and 4 June 1993 suggested that he continued to support the zoning of Quarryvale. Mr Dunlop's June 1992 'contact report' records Cllr Larkin as having been contacted by both Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan. Cllr Larkin also voted in favour of the adoption of the 1993 Development Plan on 10 December 1993.

19.08 Mr O'Callaghan in his evidence acknowledged having lobbied Cllr Larkin whom he described as a strong supporter of Quarryvale.

19.09 According to Mr Dunlop, scheduled meetings with Cllr Larkin were rare, as he was easily contactable in and around the vicinity of the County Council offices.

19.10 Cllr Larkin died on 6 May 1998, and did not give sworn evidence to the Tribunal. Prior to his death, on 23 March 1998, Cllr Larkin responded to a questionnaire from the Tribunal in which he denied the receipt by him of any improper payments.

19.11 The Tribunal established that in the period 15 May to 2 August 1991 a number of record figure lodgements were made to an AIB Cashsave account in Cllr Larkin's name. Cllr Larkin's family were unable to provide explanation for them. They were:

-	15 May 1991	IR£850.50
-	21 May 1991	IR£500
-	12 June 1991	IR£682.02
-	17 June 1991	IR£550
-	8 July 1991	IR£254.38
-	15 July 1991	IR£465.30
-	2 August 1991	IR£350.50

19.12 The information available to the Tribunal in relation to these (or any) lodgements to Cllr Larkin's bank account was insufficient to establish any definite association between any of them and a payment of IR£1,000 made by Mr Dunlop.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO A PAYMENT OF IR£1,000 TO CLLR LARKIN BY MR DUNLOP

19.13 The Tribunal was satisfied that, as alleged by Mr Dunlop, Cllr Larkin was the recipient of IR£1,000 in the period proximate to the 1991 Local Elections and that the request for the money was probably made by Cllr Larkin when he was being lobbied to support Quarryvale. The soliciting and acceptance of this money compromised Cllr Larkin’s disinterested performance of his duties as a councillor, and was improper.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - THE INVOLVEMENT OF CLLR DONAL LYDON (FF)

20.01 Cllr Donal Lydon was elected to Dublin County Council in 1985 and 1991. He transferred to South Dublin County Council in 1994, and was re-elected to that Council in 1999. Cllr Lydon was also a member of Seanad Éireann.

20.02 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he paid IR£1,000 cash to Cllr Lydon in the car park at the rear of the County Council's offices in O'Connell Street, Dublin, on a date between 16 May and 6 June 1991, in return for Cllr Lydon's future support for the Quarryvale rezoning project.

20.03 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that the IR£1,000 cash payment to Cllr Lydon in May/June 1991 was solicited by him as a contribution to his campaign in the Local Election in June 1991, but very much in the context of his support for the Quarryvale project.

20.04 In his October 2000 statements Mr Dunlop stated:

I recall giving Mr Donal Lydon a sum of £1,000 shortly after the successful Quarryvale rezoning motion in May 1991. I made this payment to Mr Lydon specifically for his support for Quarryvale, and

In January 1993 I gave Mr Lydon a cheque for £1,000 during the course of the Senate Election campaign . . . In the last Local Elections (1998) (sic) I gave him £400 [later established to have been £250]. I do not recall giving him, or being asked for, money in the 1991 Local Election but I do recall giving him £1,000 shortly after the successful Quarryvale rezoning motion in May 1991.

20.05 In his December 2003 statement Mr Dunlop set out the following regarding Cllr Lydon:

I paid £1,000 in cash to Mr Lydon within days of the vote on Quarryvale on 16th May, 1991. I paid him in the car park at the rear of the County Council offices at Upper O'Connell Street where I met him by arrangement prior to his going into a Council meeting. I recall this meeting with Mr Lydon because I had made a similar arrangement with another Councillor for the same location on a subsequent day, the 6th June. The date of the payment to Mr Lydon was prior to this. The payment was made therefore within the timeframe of Thursday, 16th May, 1991 and Thursday, 6th June, 1991. Given that I was out of town on the following Monday and Tuesday, the 20th and the 21st May respectively the payment could only have been made between Wednesday, 22nd May and Thursday, 6th June.

20.06 In his evidence, Mr Dunlop said that in the run-up to the Quarryvale May 1991 vote he canvassed Cllr Lydon for support for Quarryvale, and was assured that it would be given. Mr Dunlop described Cllr Lydon as someone who was supportive of his development plan lobbying efforts.

20.07 Mr Dunlop testified that when discussing Quarryvale with Cllr Lydon in the run-up to the May 1991 vote, Cllr Lydon had sought financial assistance from him for the then forthcoming Local Election. Inconsistent with this evidence was a reference in Mr Dunlop's October 2000 statement that he did not recall Cllr Lydon soliciting money from him at the time of the Local Election.

20.08 Mr Dunlop agreed that if, as he claimed, Cllr Lydon had sought financial support for the 1991 Local Election campaign, his name ought to have featured in Mr Dunlop's Day 147 '1991 Local Election contributions' list (Cllr Lydon's name did not appear on this list). As was the position with a similar omission of Cllr Liam T. Cosgrave's name, Mr Dunlop, in evidence, explained the omission as an 'oversight' on his part.¹

20.09 In response to cross-examination from Cllr Lydon's Senior Counsel, Mr Séamus Ó Tuathail SC, Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he had a clear recollection of having made the IR£1,000 payment to Cllr Lydon in relation to 'the location, the personality and the amount', notwithstanding his not having included Cllr Lydon on his '1991 Local Election contributions' list, or the fact that Cllr Lydon did not vote on the Quarryvale motion on 16 May 1991.

20.10 Cllr Lydon denied that he had sought or received monies from Mr Dunlop in 1991. He denied having spoken with Mr Dunlop about the Local Election in 1991, and he denied requesting an election contribution from Mr Dunlop, although he accepted that he could have met him at the County Council. Cllr Lydon specifically denied ever meeting Mr Dunlop in a car park for the purposes of being paid money. He repeated to the Tribunal that insofar as he received money from Mr Dunlop, all such monies had been paid to him as political contributions for election campaigns, and were unsolicited. Cllr Lydon admitted receiving IR£1,000 from Mr Dunlop in January 1993 when standing as a candidate in the Seanad Election, and he acknowledged receiving approximately IR£250 in 1999 for the Local Election held in that year.

20.11 Mr Dunlop acknowledged that a political donation of IR£1,000 was made to Cllr Lydon via a Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd cheque in January 1993, and he acknowledged that he had given the donation of IR£250 to Cllr Lydon in 1999.

20.12 Cllr Lydon was not recorded as being in attendance, or as having voted in relation to any matter, including Quarryvale, on 16 May 1991. Thereafter, Cllr Lydon's voting pattern on motions which related to Quarryvale indicated his support for the project.

20.13 When questioned about Cllr Lydon's absence from the County Council Chamber on 16 May 1991, Mr Dunlop did not recall that fact, nor did he recall it being an issue when, as he claimed, he had paid IR£1,000 in cash to Cllr Lydon within the period 16 May to 6 June 1991, in return for Cllr Lydon's support for Quarryvale.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CORRESPONDENCE WITH CLLR LYDON REGARDING QUARRYVALE

20.14 On 20 December 1999 the Tribunal sought from Cllr Lydon details of his involvement in the rezoning of Quarryvale and requested, inter alia, that he provide details of the persons, if any, by whom he had been lobbied and whether he had been in receipt of any payments, donations or benefits from any of the parties who were involved in the development of Quarryvale, those parties being Barkhill Ltd, Riga Ltd, O'Callaghan Properties Ltd, Mr Owen O'Callaghan, Mr Thomas Gilmartin, Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd, Shefran Ltd and Mr Frank Dunlop.

20.15 In his written response of 2 February 2000, Cllr Lydon replied to all the Tribunal's queries in, essentially, the negative save to state, when dealing with the issue of whether he himself had been lobbied, that he 'may have been asked by some of the lads from that area but I honestly don't know whether I was or not', and that 'Another Councillor has told me that we were lobbied in the Royal Dublin where a model of Quarryvale was presented but I don't remember this so I probably missed that presentation.'

20.16 Concerning the issue of the receipt of any payments, benefits or donations by him, Cllr Lydon stated:

The first time I heard of Thomas Gilmartin was on the Late Late Show I have met Owen O’Callaghan in (in connection with a stadium that never materialized). I have known Frank Dunlop, for years and years. Frank gave me a donation for the Senate election in 1993. I have no record of this but I am almost certain it was £1,000. He also gave me a donation for the Local Government election in 1999. I’m not sure how much but it was under £500.

20.17 It was, therefore, Cllr Lydon’s stated position as of 2 February 2000, that he had received less than IR£1,500 in total from the companies and individuals identified to him by the Tribunal in its letter of 20 December 1999.

20.18 The Tribunal wrote again to Cllr Lydon in relation to Quarryvale on 14 June 2001 and requested, inter alia, a detailed account of all meetings which Cllr Lydon had with Mr Dunlop, Mr O’Callaghan and his advisors, Mr Ambrose Kelly, Mr Lawlor, Mr Flynn and Mr Gilmartin. Cllr Lydon responded on 28 June 2001 as follows:

I am pleased to respond to yours of June 14th 01, with regard to the above named place.

Firstly, I have no records or documents of any kind relating to Quarryvale.

Secondly, I have no recollection of Mr Dunlop ever meeting with me about Quarryvale or indeed speaking to me about it. If indeed he did meet me it would probably have been a cursory meeting in the hall of the council buildings, because like nearly all Fianna Fáil and Fine Gael Councillors I was in favour of development and he would nearly have taken my support for granted.

Thirdly, Mr O’Callaghan came to see me one time at my office at the hospital where I work and at this meeting he showed me plans for a big stadium that he planned to build. I think he may have been accompanied by Mr Frank Dunlop but I am not sure. I do not remember him mentioning Quarryvale and this was the only meeting I had with Mr O’Callaghan.

Fourthly, I never had any meetings about Quarryvale with any advisors to Mr O’Callaghan, nor with Mr Ambrose Kelly, Mr Liam Lawlor, Mr Pdraig Flynn or Mr Tom Gilmartin.

I understand from Senator Ann Ormonde, that there was, one day, a presentation made on Quarryvale in the Royal Dublin but I have no recollection of ever attending such a presentation.

The only person who really lobbied me about Quarryvale was Mr John Corcoran of Green Properties who wanted me to oppose Quarryvale, because, as he put it, Quarryvale would detract from his development at Blanchardstown. I had never visited either Blanchardstown or Quarryvale but I have heard from various people that both shopping centres are booming.

20.19 It was therefore Cllr Lydon's stated position as of 28 June 2001, that, (a) he had not been lobbied to support Quarryvale by either Mr Dunlop or Mr O'Callaghan, save for a possible ' cursory meeting' with Mr Dunlop in Dublin County Council, and, (b) Mr O'Callaghan had approached him on one occasion in relation to the Neilstown Stadium project. In his evidence, Cllr Lydon acknowledged that he had probably been lobbied by Mr Dunlop regarding Quarryvale, in the course of the making of the 1993 Development Plan.

20.20 On 29 October 2004, the Tribunal sought an explanation from Cllr Lydon as to the source of a number of lodgements to accounts held in his and his wife's joint names, and to an account held in the sole name of Mrs Lydon. Some of these lodgements were in the period June/July 1991. In response, and while unable to give specific information, Cllr Lydon advised the Tribunal that some of the lodgements made in that period, including a lodgement of IR£900 on 14 June 1991, may have been election contributions received by him.

20.21 Asked to identify the date when Mr O'Callaghan called to his office in relation to the stadium project, Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that he could not recollect the date, other than to say that the visit had been in connection with the Neilstown stadium proposal. Cllr Lydon acknowledged that Mr O'Callaghan would probably also have sought his support for Quarryvale on that occasion, although he had no recollection that he did so.

20.22 Mr O'Callaghan however testified that he lobbied Cllr Lydon extensively both in relation to Quarryvale and the stadium project. He said that he met Cllr Lydon on quite a few occasions, but could not recall the date on which they met prior to the 16 May 1991 Quarryvale motion.

20.23 An analysis of Mr Dunlop's diaries and of other documentation for 1992 indicated considerable contact between Cllr Lydon and Mr Dunlop. Mr Dunlop's diary for 23 April 1992 recorded as follows, ' Don Lydon/Stillorgan.' Mr Dunlop was unable to say whether this was the occasion on which he had brought Mr O'Callaghan to meet Cllr Lydon, although he believed it unlikely that he had done so at that time, having regard to his June 1992 ' contact report' which listed Cllr Lydon as having been contacted by Mr Dunlop alone at that stage.

20.24 Mr Dunlop's diary recorded scheduled meetings between himself and Cllr Lydon on 1 and 4 May 1992 (relating to, according to Mr Dunlop, another rezoning project). Cllr Lydon denied that these meetings took place, and said that at the times of the meetings noted in Mr Dunlop's diary, he, Cllr Lydon was engaged at a conference, and on his hospital rounds² or in attendance at a funeral, respectively.

20.25 Mr Dunlop's office telephone records indicated efforts by Cllr Lydon to contact Mr Dunlop on one occasion in September 1992, and on six occasions in October 1992. Mr Dunlop had one recorded meeting with Cllr Lydon in his diary for September 1992, and two for October 1992.

20.26 An entry in Mr Dunlop's diary for 2 October 1992 referred to both Cllr Lydon and Cllr Hand. In his evidence in the Ballycullen/Beechhill module, Mr Dunlop said that it was his belief that these meetings were for the purposes of paying Cllr Lydon and Cllr Hand IR£2,000 each for their support for the Ballycullen/Beechhill rezoning.³ Cllr Lydon said that he could have met Mr Dunlop as indicated, but did not recollect doing so.

20.27 In evidence on Day 810, Mr Dunlop agreed that in 1999, when he initially furnished his redacted diaries to the Tribunal in connection with his involvement with Quarryvale, he had attributed these meetings as having been Quarryvale related. Mr Dunlop stated, that notwithstanding that the 2 October 1992 meetings with Cllr Lydon and Cllr Hand had been for the purpose of paying them IR£2,000 each for their support for Ballycullen, he believed it probable that he had, at these meetings, taken the opportunity to lobby for Quarryvale, particularly in light of the then anticipated second Quarryvale rezoning vote.

20.28 Mr Dunlop's diary for 7 October 1992 recorded as follows: 'Call to Don L.' Documented telephone calls to Mr Dunlop's office on the same date recorded 'Don Lydon—34 Clonmore Rd, Mount Merrion, Uptrees Rd., turn left'—an address, as admitted by Cllr Lydon, of a house owned by him, although not being lived in by him at that time. Mr Dunlop and Cllr Lydon both testified that Mr Dunlop had never met Cllr Lydon at the latter's home. Mr Dunlop claimed that no money was given to Cllr Lydon on that occasion.

20.29 In his evidence relating to the Ballycullen/Beechill Module, Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he believed that he paid Cllr Lydon money (IR£2,000 in cash), on the morning of 2 October 1992 at Cllr Lydon's work place, in relation to the Ballycullen lands. Mr Dunlop's diary recorded a meeting between the two men on that date. Cllr Lydon did not dispute that a meeting took place on 2 October 1992, but denied that Mr Dunlop gave him money on that occasion.⁴

² Cllr Lydon was employed as a psychologist at St. John of God Hospital in Stillorgan, Co. Dublin.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO A PAYMENT OF IR£1,000 TO CLLR LYDON IN 1991

20.30 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Lydon was lobbied by Mr Dunlop both prior to, and subsequent to, the Quarryvale rezoning vote of 16 May 1991 and that in the course of such lobbying Cllr Lydon sought an election contribution for the then forthcoming Local Election campaign. The Tribunal rejected Cllr Lydon's evidence that he did not solicit the payment, and in so doing the Tribunal took into consideration the fact that in the course of Cllr Lydon's dealings in 1992 to 1993 with Mr Christopher Jones Snr in relation to lands at Ballycullen, Cllr Lydon solicited, what he termed as political contributions from Mr Jones and was indeed paid.⁵ In those circumstances, notwithstanding that Mr Dunlop's claim of having been solicited by Cllr Lydon for an election contribution occurred a year previously, the Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Lydon sought an election contribution from Mr Dunlop in or about May 1991 and that it was paid to him on a date between 16 May 1991 and 6 June 1991, in the context of Cllr Lydon's support for the rezoning of the Quarryvale lands. Cllr Lydon's soliciting and acceptance of a payment in the circumstances in which he did grievously compromised the requirement on him as a councillor to act in a disinterested fashion in making a Development Plan, and was improper.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR MARIAN MCGENNIS (FF)

21.01 Cllr McGennis was elected to Dublin County Council in 1985 and again in 1991. In 1994, she transferred to Fingal County Council.

21.02 On 20 December 1999 the Tribunal wrote to Cllr McGennis seeking details of her involvement in relation to the rezoning of Quarryvale. In particular, the Tribunal sought, inter alia, details of any public or private meetings regarding Quarryvale attended by Cllr McGennis, details of any requests made to her to provide assistance in connection with the proposal to rezone Quarryvale and details of any payments, donations or benefits from any party who was involved in the development of Quarryvale (and including any person or company acting on behalf of the developers). The parties and/or their agents identified in the Tribunal's correspondence were; Barkhill Ltd, Riga Ltd, O'Callaghan Properties Ltd, Owen O'Callaghan, Mr Tom Gilmartin, Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd, Shefran Ltd and Mr Frank Dunlop.

21.03 Cllr McGennis responded on 25 January 2000 and advised the Tribunal that she recalled attending a number of meetings relating to Quarryvale, some of which had taken place in Blanchardstown and were organised by Community/Residents Associations. She recalled a further meeting organised by a women's group in Clondalkin. She also stated:

I also recollect being at a meeting in 1991 which was attended by the then Chairman of Dublin County Council (Mr. Tommy Boland, R.I.P.) and other Cllrs. The purpose of this meeting (which to the best of my recollection took place in May 1991) was to discuss the effect, if any, that the proposed Quarryvale development might have on the Blanchardstown Centre (which was in my electoral area).

21.04 Cllr McGennis recalled being asked by Cllr Gilbride to meet Mr Gilmartin, although she did not recollect the date of that meeting which had taken place at an office in St. Stephen's Green. She told the Tribunal that Mr Gilmartin did not request any assistance from her in connection with his Quarryvale project.

21.05 Furthermore, Cllr McGennis stated that she recalled 'being lobbied by Community Groups who were both, in favour of, and against the proposed Quarryvale development' and recalled 'receiving submissions from the promoters of the proposed Quarryvale development and also from other groups who were against such a development.'

21.06 In relation to any payments made to her by any party connected to Quarryvale, Cllr McGennis advised as follows:

In the local election campaign in 1991 I received an election contribution of £1,400.00 from Mr. Frank Dunlop. In his then capacity as National Director of Publicity for Fianna Fail during the 1992 General Election, Mr. Frank Dunlop arranged for the printing of election posters and leaflets for me. I am not aware of the cost, if any, of this work. However, my understanding was that it was being borne by the party as it was a snap election. Subsequent to my receiving your correspondence, I discussed this matter with Mr. Dunlop and he has informed me that the cost of this printing work was actually paid by his Company and not by the Party...

21.07 On 14 June 2001 Cllr McGennis was written to by the Tribunal and requested to furnish all documents, records and diaries in her power or possession in relation to the lands at Quarryvale, and to furnish ‘a detailed account of all meetings (if any) attended with any of the following:

1. Frank Dunlop;
2. Owen O’Callaghan;
3. Advisers to Owen O’Callaghan or any persons on Owen O’Callaghan’s behalf;
4. Ambrose Kelly;
5. Liam Lawlor;
6. Pdraig Flynn;
7. Tom Gilmartin...’

21.08 Responding to that correspondence on 27 June, 2001, Cllr McGennis furnished the Tribunal with five documents being,

1. a letter from Green Property dated 15 May, 1991;
2. a letter from Green Property dated 7 June, 1991;
3. a copy of Green Property circular dated 7 June, 1991;
4. a draft of a Fianna Fáil circular; and
5. a copy of a distributed Fianna Fáil circular.

21.09 In relation to any meetings with the individuals identified in the Tribunal’s correspondence, Cllr McGennis set out the following:

- Frank Dunlop

Frank Dunlop would have been a regular attendee at Dublin County Council meetings. While I have no particular recollection of lobbying on Quarryvale prior to the 1991 election there was very extensive lobbying in the period after that date.

I recall Frank Dunlop calling to my home, probably in late 1991, to congratulate me on my success in the local elections. While I have no clear recollection it is likely that he would have mentioned Quarryvale at that time.

- Owen O'Callaghan

As with Frank Dunlop Owen O'Callaghan would have been a regular attendee at Dublin County Council meetings. He would have been involved in extensive lobbying on Quarryvale in the period after the 1991 election.

- Tom Gilmartin

As outlined in my letter to the Tribunal dated 26th January 2000 I do recall a meeting with Tom Gilmartin at his offices in St. Stephen's Green. I do not recollect the date of this meeting but it was probably in 1989/1990. Mr. Gilmartin was less than impressed with my lack of support for his proposal which I considered to be far too large.

Mr. Gilmartin also mounted a display of his plans for Council members and management in a Dublin Hotel which I attended. Unfortunately I cannot recall the date or venue.

21.10 In a letter of 19 October 2004 Cllr McGennis was requested by the Tribunal to provide 'a detailed narrative in respect of all payments, benefits or assistance' she may have received from Mr Dunlop while she was a member of the County Council and details of her contacts with Mr Dunlop in the period January 1991 to December 1994.

21.11 On 22 October 2004 Cllr McGennis informed the Tribunal as follows:

I have detailed in previous correspondence any payments, benefits or assistance that I would have received from Mr. Frank Dunlop. Shortly after the 1991 Local Election Frank offered assistance with the cost of my campaign and I subsequently received a cheque for £1,400. During the 1992 General Election while I was a candidate in Dublin North and Frank was acting as National Director of Publicity for Fianna Fáil he arranged for the printing of election posters and leaflets for my campaign. Also during the 1992 General Election Frank gave me the use of a mobile phone. I believe I retained the use of this phone until the Summer of 1995. I regret I have no records to give exact details.

I would have known Frank Dunlop through his close association with Fianna Fáil, through his work as a P.R. consultant and as a regular attendee at Council meetings. I do not recall any formal meetings with Frank but it is likely that I would have met him on many occasions at Council meetings and spoken to him there, I recall that he called to my home to congratulate me on my success in the 1991 local elections, he would have telephoned often to lobby on issues with which he was associated and I would have met him occasionally at social events...

21.12 In her evidence on Day 830 Cllr McGennis acknowledged that in the course of the Quarryvale rezoning campaign, she had had face to face meetings with both Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan. Cllr McGennis described as an ‘oversight’, her failure to mention in her correspondence with the Tribunal of 25 January 2000 the fact that she had had meetings with Mr O’Callaghan regarding Quarryvale, and the fact that, likewise, she had had face to face meetings regarding Quarryvale with Mr Dunlop. Cllr McGennis acknowledged ‘informal’ meetings with Mr Dunlop in his office regarding Quarryvale, although she did not think that she had had meetings with Mr O’Callaghan in Mr Dunlop’s office. The Tribunal believed it likely that, on more than one occasion, Cllr McGennis met with Mr O’Callaghan in Mr Dunlop’s office to discuss the Quarryvale rezoning.

21.13 While Cllr McGennis was at pains to emphasise that the responses given by her in correspondence to Tribunal queries was not an attempt to hide the fact that she had met with Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan on occasions to discuss Quarryvale, she agreed that the thrust of her correspondence with the Tribunal was that her contact with Mr Dunlop (in relation to Quarryvale) was casual, and arose when she met him in passing at Dublin County Council.

21.14 The Tribunal also found it to be noteworthy that in her 27 June 2001 letter, Cllr McGennis did not refer to any meetings she had attended with Mr Lawlor, or with Mr Pdraig Flynn, despite having been requested by the Tribunal to detail any such contact. In the course of her evidence Cllr McGennis described again as an ‘oversight’, her failure, in correspondence, to disclose meetings she had had with Mr Lawlor concerning the Quarryvale rezoning.

PAYMENTS TO CLLR MCGENNIS FROM MR DUNLOP IN 1991

21.15 As acknowledged by Cllr McGennis in her correspondence with the Tribunal, she was the recipient of a cheque for IR£1,400 in July 1991 from Mr Dunlop, drawn on the 067 account of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd. In the report listing dated 29 April 1992 of cheques drawn to year end 31 October 1991 on the Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd 067 a/c, prepared on behalf of Mr Dunlop, this payment was described as follows: ‘M. McG sundries.’

21.16 In his October 2000 statement, and in evidence, Mr Dunlop claimed that he paid this cheque to Cllr McGennis following a request from her for financial support towards expenses incurred by her in the 1991 Local Election in June 1991. Cllr McGennis told the Tribunal that she had no recollection of the circumstances in which she came to receive the IR£1,400 from Mr Dunlop, other than to state that she recalled Mr Dunlop calling to her house sometime after the Local Election in June 1991. When asked to explain the circumstances in which the payment was made, Cllr McGennis stated:

‘As I said to you he called to my house after the election. So whether it was there or whether it was after, I can’t tell you and I’m not going to manufacture stories to fit the event.’

21.17 Cllr McGennis’s name appeared at number 5 on Mr Dunlop’s ‘preliminary list’ of members of Dublin County Council who requested monies from Frank Dunlop (prepared by him on Day 146).

21.18 Cllr McGennis lodged the cheque for IR£1,400 to an account held by her at the Trustee Savings Bank (TSB), an account which had been opened by her in 1985 at the time she first stood for election as a councillor, and its receipt was acknowledged to Mr Dunlop by her Director of Elections on 14 September 1991.

21.19 Cllr McGennis claimed to have no knowledge of the involvement of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd and/or Mr O’Callaghan/Riga Ltd in financing the production and distribution of literature which was circulated in the Blanchardstown area in June 1991 on behalf of Cllr McGennis (and other local Fianna Fáil election candidates). Cllr McGennis claimed that this election literature had issued from the local Fianna Fáil election headquarters in Blanchardstown.

21.20 Notwithstanding the amendment which was made on 16 May 1991 to Cllr McGrath’s Quarryvale rezoning motion, Mr Corcoran of Green Property plc had taken issue with the extent to which retail development was to be permitted in the newly rezoned Quarryvale Town Centre. It was clear from contemporaneous documentation that in 1991 Mr Corcoran maintained that the retail cap which had been placed on the Quarryvale development on 16 May 1991 did not accord with what he believed had been agreed at a meeting which took place between himself and Cllrs Boland, Lawlor, Ryan and McGennis on 13 May 1991¹.

21.21 Documents discovered to the Tribunal indicated literature entitled ‘the Blanchardstown Town Centre – the truth and the facts’ was distributed to the electorate of Blanchardstown by ‘Door to Door Distributors’, in respect of which Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd was invoiced for a sum of IR£455.92. The Door to Door Distributors invoice, discovered by Mr Dunlop to the Tribunal, bore, in manuscript, the words ‘Marian M.’ – a reference, Mr Dunlop claimed, which denoted that the distribution of the literature had taken place ‘in connection with’ Cllr McGennis. The word ‘owen’ was also handwritten on the invoice. Both Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan testified that Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd duly recouped the amount of the invoice from Riga Ltd.²

21.22 In response to Mr Dunlop’s claim that the ‘Blanchardstown Town Centre - the truth and the facts’ literature had been prepared ‘in connection with’ Cllr McGennis, she refuted this evidence and stated:

‘I am saying to you, I know nothing about Mr. Dunlop’s involvement in this. I have told the Tribunal already that I know about this, that I have informed the Tribunal about the support he gave me in terms and printing in a subsequent election in ’92. I knew nothing about Mr. Dunlop’s involvement in this.’

21.23 Cllr McGennis reiterated that this document had been generated in Fianna Fáil election headquarters in Blanchardstown. Asked to explain why an entry in Mr Dunlop’s diary of a meeting with Cllr McGennis for 27 May 1991 recorded as ‘Marian Mc’, a timeframe which coincided with the ‘Blanchardstown Town Centre - the truth and the facts’ document being printed by O’Donoghue Print, Cllr McGennis stated:

‘If I met Mr. Dunlop about anything, I certainly didn’t meet him about these because I am telling you I knew nothing about Frank’s involvement in those leaflets until you showed the invoice. I remember the leaflets and I remember collecting them from Blanchardstown. I am telling you categorically until you put the invoice on screen, I had no idea that Mr. Dunlop was involved in them.’

21.24 Mr O’Callaghan testified that Riga Ltd funded the production and distribution of the literature which Mr Dunlop organised and which he presumed was ‘probably’ at the behest of Fianna Fáil candidates in Blanchardstown. Documentation provided to the Tribunal revealed that on 20 June 1991 Mr Deane (of Riga Ltd) wrote to Mr Donagh of AIB and enclosed a copy of the ‘Blanchardstown Town Centre - the truth and the facts’ document and informed him that approximately 27,000 copies of the leaflets had been distributed in the Blanchardstown area.

21.25 The Tribunal was satisfied that the production and distribution of the aforesaid literature was organised and funded by Mr Dunlop who was then subsequently reimbursed by Riga Ltd.

21.26 Cllr Colm McGrath's discovery of documentation to the Tribunal produced a document, apparently circulated by Fianna Fáil Local Election candidates in the course of the 1991 election, entitled 'the facts about Blanchardstown Town Centre.' The contents of that document challenged the manner in which Green Property Plc. were progressing their Blanchardstown Town Centre development. It appeared to the Tribunal, (and indeed, was not disputed in evidence), that the object of the production of that document was to counter Mr Corcoran's anti-Quarryvale stance, which was being vigorously promoted during the currency of the Local Election campaign. The document contained, inter alia, the following:

We call on Green Property to follow through NOW on their commitment to build the Blanchardstown Town Centre and we look forward to all the people of Blanchardstown enjoying the benefits of their own town centre in the near future.

21.27 The authors of this statement were said to be:

Cllr Tom Boland (Chairman, Dublin County Council), Cllr Ned Ryan, Cllr Jim Fahy, Cllr Marian McGennis.

CLLR MCGENNIS'S ROLE IN THE QUARRYVALE REZONING

21.28 County Council minutes recorded that, on 16 May 1991 Cllr McGennis voted in favour of the amendment to Cllr McGrath's motion, and in favour of rezoning Quarryvale Town Centre, with retail development to be capped, in the terms of the amending motion. It was Cllr McGennis's evidence that there was no interaction between herself and Mr Dunlop or Mr O'Callaghan on the Quarryvale issue in the lead up to 16 May 1991 vote. She said that she only became aware of Mr Dunlop's involvement after the 1991 Local Election, and that Mr O'Callaghan was 'nowhere near the project at that stage.' The Tribunal rejected Cllr McGennis' evidence in this regard.

21.29 The evidence heard by the Tribunal established that in the week immediately preceding the Quarryvale rezoning vote Cllr McGennis was heavily involved in efforts to appease the concerns of Mr John Corcoran/Green Property plc that rezoning Quarryvale to town centre would impact adversely on the plans to develop the Blanchardstown lands. Cllr McGennis did not take issue with this evidence.

21.30 Cllr McGennis testified that, in addition to being supportive of the Quarryvale rezoning proposal, she was also a staunch supporter of the Blanchardstown Town Centre development. She stated that while it had never been her belief that the Quarryvale proposal posed a threat to the plans of Green Property Plc for Blanchardstown. However, this was a belief held by Mr Corcoran in 1991.

21.31 Cllr McGennis told the Tribunal that in May 1991, in advance of the Quarryvale scheduled rezoning vote she was instrumental in setting up the meeting which took place on 13 May 1991 between Mr Corcoran and his Planning Consultant Mr Garth Maye, with Cllrs Boland (Chairman of the Council), Ryan, Lawlor and McGennis herself. Mr O’Callaghan believed that this meeting had been arranged by Mr Lawlor.

21.32 Contemporaneous documentation made available to the Tribunal, namely a letter sent to Cllr McGrath by Mr Corcoran on 14 June 1991, suggested that by 10 May 1991 Mr Corcoran had met with Senior Officials in the County Council who had explained to him what Mr Corcoran described in his letter as the ‘true effect’ of the McGrath motion to rezone Quarryvale. This meeting with Council officials appeared to have triggered contact by Mr Corcoran with Cllr McGennis on 10 May 1991, which in turn led to the meeting of 13 May 1991.

21.33 The object of the meeting on 13 May 1991 was to agree the likely parameters of retail development on Quarryvale and thereby alleviate the concerns of Mr Corcoran vis-a-vis the likely impact on Blanchardstown, in the event that Quarryvale was to be zoned with a substantial retail element.

21.34 Contemporaneous documentation furnished to the Tribunal established that, following the meeting of 13 May 1991, Mr Corcoran met again with Cllr McGennis on the following day, following which, Mr Corcoran, by letter of 14 May 1991, wrote to Cllr McGennis and sent her the text of a suggested amendment to Cllr McGrath’s original Quarryvale motion and which had been drafted by Mr Corcoran’s Planning Consultant, Mr Garth Maye.

21.35 The text of the motion sent to Cllr McGennis was as follows:

Dublin County Council hereby resolves that within the area of land at Palmerstown Quarryvale comprising approximately 176 acres between Fonthill Road and the Western Parkway an area of land be Re-zoned for retail/civic uses to provide town centre facilities consistent with a strategic requirement of the Lucan/Clondalkin area as set out in the County Council's Development Plan. The Planning Department shall define the location, access, acreage and square footage necessary to provide town centre facilities for Clondalkin/Lucan compatible with the 1972, revised in 1983, County Development Plan.

21.36 On 15 May, 1991 Mr Corcoran wrote to Counsellor Boland, Chairman of the County Council, as follows:

Dear Chairman,

I would like to thank you for receiving us on Monday morning last to discuss the question of Lucan/Clondalkin rezoning. We got a very fair hearing and came away from the meeting happy that reasonableness would prevail.

I now understand that a new Motion is being drafted in connection with moving the Neilstown site to the Quarryvale site and I am happy with this...

21.37 The amendment which was ultimately applied to Counsellor McGrath's motion, and as placed before the County Council and passed, on 16 May 1991, read as follows:

That a statement be included in the Development Plan to indicate that the total area of commercial development in the area zoned 'D' shall not exceed the total area of commercial development which would be appropriate to the Lucan/Clondalkin town centre site designated in the County Development Plan 1983.³

21.38 Mr Corcoran was made aware of the text of this motion, when it was shown to him by Mr Lawlor, shortly before the commencement of the Quarryvale rezoning meeting of 16 May 1991. Mr Corcoran considered that the amendment fell short of what his understanding was as to what had been agreed between himself and Cllrs Boland, Ryan, Lawlor and McGennis on 13 May 1991.

21.39 The Tribunal established that it was Mr Al Smith, a County Council Senior Planning Official, who ultimately formulated the wording on the amending motion that went before the Council on 16 May 1991. Mr Smith told the Tribunal that he had done so, following a 'garbled' draft of a motion having been provided to him by Mr Lawlor.

21.40 In the letter sent by Mr Corcoran to Cllr McGrath on 14 June 1991, in the aftermath of the Quarryvale vote, and in the face of the campaign Mr Corcoran had by then commenced urging Cllrs who had voted for the Quarryvale rezoning to change their mind, Mr Corcoran, articulated his position as follows:

The true effect of Motion no. 38 to Re-zone the Quarryvale site was explained to me at a meeting I had with a Senior Official of Dublin County Council on Friday 10th May, 1991. During this meeting it became clear that Blanchardstown Town Centre could not compete for business with the infinitely better located Quarryvale site. Later that day I met with Cllr Marian McGennis to discuss the events and to tell her of my extreme concern for the future of Blanchardstown. She telephoned Chairman Tommy Boland from my office and arranged a meeting for Monday 13th May at 9:30am. Pat McCormack, my agent, Garth May, my Planning Consultant and myself met with the Chairman, Cllr Tommy Boland, Liam Lawlor, T.D., Cllr Marian McGennis and Cllr Ned Ryan at the Chairman's office as arranged. We explained with the assistance of plans and maps etc. which were prepared over the weekend, why the proposed Re-zoning at Quarryvale would force us to stop building Blanchardstown Town Centre. Our concerns were accepted by all present and it was agreed that Motion No. 38 would be amended/replaced, as required, to secure the Blanchardstown scheme. Liam Lawlor, T.D. offered to discuss the matter with Cllr Colm McGrath and subsequently to draw up an amendment/replacement to Motion No. 38 which would secure the future of Blanchardstown and be agreed with me for the Council meeting on the 16th May.

Given the urgency of the issue and the time pressure (four days to the Council meeting), I had Garth May prepare a new Motion in consultation with the Planning Department which I sent to Cllr McGennis on Tuesday 14th May with a covering letter (copies enclosed).

THIS IS THE MOTION REFERRED TO IN MY LETTER TO THE CHAIRMAN, DUBLIN COUNTY COUNCIL ON WEDNESDAY 15TH MAY TO WHICH YOU REFER IN YOUR LETTER.

I attended along with Pat McCormack and Garth May at the Council Chambers on Thursday 16th May.

At approximately 2:30pm Mr. Liam Lawlor, T.D. approached me having emerged from the Chairman's office and showed me an amendment to Motion number 38. I HAD NOT PREVIOUSLY SEEN THIS DOCUMENT NOR WAS IT EVER DISCUSSED WITH ME OR ANY OF MY ADVISORS.

On reading same I and my advisors who were present immediately conveyed our total objection to this amendment and stated that it was contrary of our understanding of what had been agreed at our meeting with the Chairman on Monday 13th May. WE CONFIRMED THAT IF PASSED IT WOULD HAVE THE EFFECT OF FORCING US TO STOP BUILDING BLANCHARDSTOWN.

Our views were also made perfectly clear to Cllrs Ryan, Fahy and McGennis in the course of the day PRIOR TO ANY VOTE BEING TAKEN.

As you know despite our opposition to this amendment it was subsequently passed.

Since that date we in Green Property plc. believe that we had no alternative but to make clear to the people of Blanchardstown our reasons for halting work on their Town Centre. Such a decision was not taken lightly and we were very conscious of the excellent relationship we have had with the Fianna Fáil Group in Dublin County Council over many years.

We regret that matters have come to this but I am sure you will see from the foregoing that I and Green Property Plc. have been misled, deceived and misrepresented on this issue.

If you feel the situation can be rectified and the future of Blanchardstown Town Centre secured, I would be more than happy to attend a meeting with your group as soon as possible...

21.41 This lengthy letter from Mr Corcoran was sent following receipt by Mr Corcoran of an unsigned letter of 11 June 1991 from the Fianna Fáil group of Dublin County Council taking issue with Mr Corcoran's Quarryvale stance.

21.42 Prior to Mr Corcoran approaching Cllr McGennis on 10 May 1991, both were known to one another from the time of Cllr McGennis initial election as a local Blanchardstown councillor in 1985. She appeared to have had close contact with Mr Corcoran over the years vis-a-vis his plans to develop the Blanchardstown Town Centre. Cllr McGennis acknowledged having written to the then Taoiseach, Mr Charles J. Haughey on 26 March 1990, seeking tax designation for Blanchardstown. In that correspondence Cllr McGennis referred to the several meetings she had had on this topic with the then Minister for the Environment, Mr Pádraig Flynn. Cllr McGennis also acknowledged having accompanied Mr Corcoran to a meeting with Mr Flynn seeking tax designation for Blanchardstown.

21.43 The diary of Mr Albert Reynolds, the then Minister for Finance, for 10 August 1989 noted a scheduled meeting with Cllr McGennis and Mr Corcoran at which Mr Brian Lenihan, TD, then Tánaiste, was also scheduled to attend. It was unlikely however that this meeting took place on that date as the diary note appeared to have been subsequently crossed out. Cllr McGennis in any event pursued her lobbying for tax designation for Blanchardstown in a letter to Mr Reynolds on 28 January 1991. A number of other Cllrs and politicians also lobbied the Government for tax designation for Blanchardstown.

MR CORCORAN'S PAYMENT OF IR£5,000 TO CLLR MCGENNIS IN MAY 1991

21.44 It was accepted by Cllr McGennis that on either 13 or 14 May 1991 she was presented with IR£5,000 by Mr Corcoran – money which both Cllr McGennis and Mr Corcoran maintained had been given to her as an election contribution for the then forthcoming Local Election campaign.⁴

21.45 Discovery made by Green Property plc showed that the IR£5,000 paid to Cllr McGennis was in the form of a bank draft drawn at National Irish Bank, Lower Baggot Street, Dublin, dated 13 May 1991 which was the same date as a meeting held between Mr Corcoran and Cllrs Boland, Lawlor, Ryan and McGennis. The payment was recorded in Green Property's books as an election contribution.

21.46 The IR£5,000 draft was lodged on 22 May 1991 by Cllr McGennis as the opening balance in a newly opened account on that date in National Irish Bank.

21.47 As to the circumstances in which he came to pay a IR£5,000 draft to Cllr McGennis Mr Corcoran told the Tribunal:

'That draft. I don't recollect anything to do with it but I have to believe there was a local election going on at the time. Every tree and every lamp post in Blanchardstown had Marian McGennis' photograph hanging from it. And she would have asked us for support for her election. And I had no difficulty with that. Marian McGennis was vital to the interests of Green Property Company. And we desperately needed her re-elected to represent us on Dublin City Council and that was the reason for our support for her election fund.'

21.48 Mr Corcoran professed to have no recollection of the reason why he had paid Cllr McGennis by bank draft. Mr Corcoran maintained that it was normal Green Property policy to deal in cheques.

21.49 Cllr McGennis acknowledged that she received the IR£5,000 from Mr Corcoran personally, in his office. She denied any connection between the receipt by her of the IR£5,000 from Mr Corcoran and the then imminent Quarryvale rezoning vote, the issue which had triggered both Mr Corcoran's contact with her on 10 May 1991, and which was the subject matter of the meeting of 13 May 1991 in the Council offices.

⁴ The Local Election was not called until 27 May 1991 but it was acknowledged by all concerned that Councillors knew, prior to 27 May 1991, that the election was imminent.

21.50 Cllr McGennis stated:

'..I remember specifically when Mr. Corcoran gave me that cheque and the discussion that took place during that period was the local elections and my future.'

21.51 Earlier, the following exchange took place between Tribunal Counsel and Cllr McGennis:

'Q. 429 Yes. And was it in the course of your meeting on the 10th May, 1991, that Mr. Corcoran indicated to you that he wished to make a political donation?

A. No I have already told you that over the period of the five or six years from 1985 to 1991 Mr. Corcoran had on a number of occasions indicated that he would like to support me in my campaign. And in fact I think had indicated to me at some stage that he would make an office available to me in the new Town Centre for a constituency office. So there is no parallel between. There is no connection between those two dates Ms. Dillon.'

21.52 The Tribunal regarded Cllr McGennis's denial of any connection between the circumstances relevant to the then imminent Quarryvale rezoning motion and the payment of IR£5,000 to her as disingenuous. The Tribunal was satisfied that a primary motivating factor in Mr Corcoran's decision to pay IR£5,000 to Cllr McGennis was the assistance and support provided by her to him in his endeavours to minimise the extent to which the Quarryvale project might adversely impact on Green Property's Blanchardstown development.

21.53 The Tribunal was also satisfied that Cllr McGennis knew that Mr Corcoran's generosity was largely related to her support and advice on that issue, rather than a desire to assist her politically.

21.54 Cllr McGennis could not recall if she had acknowledged, in writing, the receipt of the IR£5,000 from Mr Corcoran. No document was discovered to the Tribunal either by Cllr McGennis or Green Property to suggest that such acknowledgement had occurred. This lack of acknowledgment was in contrast to the position that pertained regarding the provision of an IR£1,400 payment by Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd to Cllr McGennis in July 1991, when her Director of Elections acknowledged that payment.

21.55 Asked to account for her failure to advise the internal Fianna Fáil Inquiry in May 2000 that she had received IR£5,000 from Green Property plc for the 1991 Local Election, Cllr McGennis explained that when questioned by that Inquiry it was her belief that its focus was her relationship with Mr Dunlop.

21.56 Irrespective of the imminence of the Local Election, and Cllr McGennis's anticipated candidacy in that election, the circumstances in which Cllr McGennis came to receive an election contribution of IR£5,000 from Mr Corcoran/Green Property was linked, to no small extent, to the fervent efforts being made by Mr Corcoran in May 1991 to alleviate the perceived threat to the Blanchardstown development from the Quarryvale rezoning proposal, then before the County Council.

21.57 An example of the Green Property plc anti-Quarryvale campaign is found in a letter sent from Mr Pat Keating (Green Property's Public Relations adviser) to Mr Lawlor on 6 June 1991 (and probably also sent to all Local Election Council candidates), wherein Mr Lawlor was urged to lend his name to a prepared pro Blanchardstown advertisement, intended by Green Property plc for publication in local newspapers between 6 June 1991 and 27 June 1991. It read as follows:

We support the completion of Blanchardstown Town Centre and reject rezoning at Quarryvale.

21.58 Cllr McGennis's voting record of 16 May 1991 indicated that she was supportive of the proposal to rezone Quarryvale as a Town Centre.

21.59 Contemporaneous documents record, and as was testified to by Cllr McGennis, that she attended a public meeting on the issue of the Quarryvale rezoning on 19 September 1991, and apparently expressed her support for Quarryvale. Her support for Quarryvale was noted by Mr O'Callaghan to the extent that he wrote to her on 30 September 1991 and thanked her for her 'very positive and supportive comments re Quarryvale' voiced at that meeting.

CLLR MCGENNIS'S RELATIONSHIP WITH MR DUNLOP, MR LAWLOR AND MR O'CALLAGHAN IN THE LEAD UP TO THE DECEMBER 1992 VOTE

21.60 Contrary to Cllr McGennis's initial disclosure to the Tribunal about her contact with Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan in relation to Quarryvale, it was established that over the course of 1992 particularly, Cllr McGennis was in regular contact with Mr Dunlop, both by telephone and on a face to face basis.

21.61 Mr Dunlop attributed a lunch meeting with Cllr McGennis on 10 September 1991 as a meeting organised to 'refocus' Cllr McGennis attention on Quarryvale.

21.62 Cllr McGennis was noted to have telephoned Mr Dunlop's office on 12 March 1992 to set up a meeting which took place on 18 March 1992. Mr Dunlop and Cllr McGennis met again on 7 April 1992. Mr Dunlop's 'contact report', dated 17 June 1992, noted Cllr McGennis to have been contacted both by Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan in relation to Quarryvale.

21.63 Cllr McGennis made telephone contact with Mr Dunlop's office on the 2,⁵ 8 and 28 September 1992, and was noted in Mr Dunlop's diary for 28 September 1992, apparently indicating a meeting with herself and Mr Lawlor. Mr Dunlop's diary for 15 October 1992 noted a lunch meeting with Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr McGennis, an encounter Cllr McGennis accepted was likely to have been in connection with the then forthcoming Quarryvale rezoning proposal. Three further telephone contacts between Cllr McGennis and Mr Dunlop's office were noted on the 2, 5 (the day the General Election was called), and 9 November 1992. Telephone contact was also apparently made by Cllr McGennis with Mr Dunlop's office on the 10, 11, 14 and 16 December 1992, the week leading to the second Quarryvale rezoning vote of 17 December 1992.

21.64 In all of Mr Dunlop's Councillor voting 'scenarios', prepared by him in the lead up to the December 1992 vote, Cllr McGennis's support was listed as 'definite', indicated Mr Dunlop's absolute confidence in her support for Quarryvale. However, the County Council records for the 17 December 1992 Special Meeting indicated that Cllr McGennis's voting pattern on that date was not supportive of Quarryvale.⁶

21.65 Cllr McGennis agreed that her voting pattern on that date was in effect a u-turn on her 16 May 1991 pro-Quarryvale position. Cllr McGennis described her change of heart on the issue of Quarryvale in the following terms:

'What I referred to this morning, Ms. Dillon, as the explosion that occurred in Blanchardstown. It was non-ending from the day of the Local Elections. All of the way through there were pickets outside the Council offices, there were mail shots, there were people coming to the clinics, there were public meetings and it was just impossible to get the message through that a vote for Quarryvale wasn't a vote against Blanchardstown. But because it was impossible, it meant that if you voted for Quarryvale, it was going to be perceived in my own area that I was voting against Blanchardstown. So where I believed, and I still believe, that in the merit of Quarryvale, I'm afraid that the reality was that not the politically, it would have been political suicide for me to vote for that.'

⁵ Incorrectly stated in the transcript of evidence as the 7th.

'I had gone to the public meetings in both side of the constituency and listened and spoken at them as you have shown on the screen. I was supportive of it. But in the end of the day I had been told by constituents and by lobby groups on my side that, you know, if I did this that would be the end of me in Blanchardstown.'

21.67 Cllr McGennis conceded that her stance on 17 December 1992 'mightn't have been the right decision. I didn't vote in accordance with what I thought was the best proper planning and development of the area. I voted out of fear.'

21.68 Commenting on Mr Dunlop's evidence that Cllr McGennis had privately, in discussions with Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan, always been supportive of the Quarryvale rezoning, but had felt constrained to deal with the issue differently in public, Cllr McGennis stated:

'No. I am saying publicly I had spoken, I had voted in favour of Quarryvale and I continued to attend meetings. I had tried to explain my position in my own area in Blanchardstown and by the end of the day, when it came close to the vote I informed whoever it was, either Frank or Owen O'Callaghan that it was impossible for me to support it. So there was no public position and I read it and it's the innuendo is, you know, I won't even refer to it, but my position was publicly that I had voted in favour of Quarryvale. There was nothing underhand about that. It was a public vote. I had..my colleagues had suffered as a result of supporting Quarryvale.

I had tried to explain my position over whatever it was 12 months or longer between the first and the second vote. And had failed miserably and basically the message from constituency groups in Blanchardstown that anyone who voted in favour of Quarryvale was voting against Blanchardstown and you just couldn't get around that.'

INDIRECT FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE PROVIDED BY MR DUNLOP IN NOVEMBER 1992

21.69 In her early correspondence with the Tribunal, Cllr McGennis disclosed that in course of the November 1992 General Election campaign Mr Dunlop arranged for the printing of election leaflets and posters on her behalf. Likewise, Cllr McGennis informed the internal Fianna Fáil Inquiry of such assistance and in its June 2000 Report it noted that:

During the 1992 General Election campaign when she was a candidate in Dublin North, Frank Dunlop arranged and paid for the printing of her election posters, leaflets and bus shelter ads. She estimated that the cost of this would have been £3,000 but that she believed the cost would have been less if she had used her own printer instead of the one used by Mr. Dunlop. These donations would have been the largest received by Marian McGennis.

21.70 When she initially apprised the Tribunal of the assistance provided to her by Mr Dunlop in November 1992, Cllr McGennis stated that she believed Mr Dunlop had underwritten these costs in his official Fianna Fail capacity.⁷

21.71 Mr Dunlop, in his October 2000 statement, acknowledged that he provided assistance to Cllr McGennis in November 1992 by way of printing and outdoor advertising and provided her with the use of a mobile telephone. Cllr McGennis did not retain any records in connection with this telephone. In her evidence, she acknowledged that the telephone bills for the period in question had been discharged by Mr Dunlop, although she was unable to put a monetary value on this assistance.

21.72 The documentary evidence available to the Tribunal established that on 16 November 1992, Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd was invoiced for the sum of IR£4,235(IR£3,500 + VAT) for the design, make up, printing and delivery of ‘Adshell’ posters, Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd discharged this invoice on the 22 or 25 January 1993. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that Cllr McGennis was the only candidate for whom Mr Dunlop funded ‘Adshell’ posters in the course of the 1992 General Election. Mr Dunlop’s evidence was that he had done so at the request of Mr Lawlor.

21.73 On 25 January 1993, Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd paid O’Donoghue Printing Ltd a sum of IR£2,105.40 (IR£1,740 + VAT) on foot of an invoice of 25 November 1992 for the printing of 25,000 A4 colour leaflets ‘re Marian McGennis FF.’ Mr Dunlop attributed this invoice to Mr O’Callaghan.

21.74 Cllr McGennis claimed that she was unaware, prior to the Tribunal, of the involvement of Mr O’Callaghan/Riga in financing the 25,000 A4 election leaflets printed for her in November 1992.

21.75 Cllr McGennis did not succeed in getting elected to the Dail in November 1992, and she did not stand for election to the Seanad. Cllr McGennis was, however, one of the Taoiseach’s nominees to the Seanad in February 1993. Cllr McGennis said that she had lobbied Mr Dunlop for the Seanad nomination. Cllr McGennis stated that she had not lobbied Mr O’Callaghan, and had not known of his Fianna Fáil connections at that time. Cllr McGennis agreed that Cllr Sean Gilbride’s (Cllr McGennis’s Director of Elections for the November 1992 Election) telephone message to Mr Dunlop on 10 February 1992, to wit 'Marian got the call' was likely to have been Cllr Gilbride's confirmation to Mr Dunlop that she had been nominated to the Seanad by the Taoiseach.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO PAYMENTS MADE TO CLLR MCGENNIS

i. Cllr McGennis played a significant role in relation to the Quarryvale rezoning proposal over the course of 1991 to 1993, both by providing assistance to the promoters of that proposal, and interacting with Mr John Corcoran of Green Property plc, a known opponent of Quarryvale. The extent of her involvement with Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan was not something in respect of which Cllr McGennis was forthcoming, in her initial dealings with the Tribunal.

ii. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr McGennis was acutely aware of the extent of Mr Dunlop's involvement in the bid to rezone Quarryvale and of Mr Corcoran's attempts to prevent or restrict such rezoning. She played an active role in both campaigns. She was the recipient of direct funding of IR£5,000 from Mr Corcoran in May 1991, and of IR£1,400 from Mr Dunlop in July 1991, both of which payments were made to her, albeit as election contributions, while she was assisting in the respective campaigns of those individuals. Furthermore, even if unknown to her, she was also the beneficiary of indirect financial assistance from Mr Dunlop in June 1991 when he funded election literature which benefited her.

iii. With regard to the IR£1,400 cheque from Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd provided in July 1991, the Tribunal was satisfied that Ms McGennis solicited this payment. Likewise, notwithstanding her claim that it was Mr Corcoran who instigated the offer of IR£5,000 to her in May 1991, the Tribunal considered it likely that this sum was solicited by Ms McGennis. Thus, over a period of two months she was the recipient of a total of IR£6,500 from individuals with whom she was closely associated with in the context of an issue (Quarryvale), which had been and would again be subject to consideration by her as a councillor.

iv. The Tribunal was satisfied that these payments, together with the discharge by Mr Dunlop of election expenses incurred by Cllr McGennis in the June 1991 Local Elections and the November 1992 General Election compromised the requirement that Cllr McGennis undertake her duties as a councillor in a disinterested manner, and were improper.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR COLM MCGRATH (F.F)

CLLR MCGRATH'S INVOLVEMENT IN THE QUARRYVALE REZONING PROCESS

22.01 Cllr McGrath was an elected councillor for the Clondalkin ward, having been first elected on the Fianna Fail ticket in June 1991. He was re-elected in 1999 as an Independent candidate and lost his seat in the Local Elections of 2004. He also ran unsuccessfully for the Dail both as a Fianna Fail and an Independent candidate.

22.02 The evidence established that Cllr McGrath took on board the Quarryvale project on behalf of Mr Gilmartin at an early stage (probably in 1989/1990), and that he did likewise on behalf of Mr O'Callaghan from about February 1991 onwards.

22.03 Cllr McGrath met Mr Gilmartin prior to Mr Gilmartin's launch of his plans for the site in July 1990. It appeared that from as early as 1988/1989, Mr Gilmartin had been given Cllr McGrath's name by Mr Lawlor.

22.04 It was the case that from the outset Cllr McGrath was an enthusiastic supporter of the proposal to re-zone Quarryvale for 'Town Centre' development.

22.05 On the 23 July 1990 Cllr McGrath wrote to the then Taoiseach Mr CJ Haughey requesting an urgent meeting for Mr Gilmartin with Mr Haughey, to facilitate discussion on:

various problems, hitherto unforeseen, which are posing a serious threat to the realization (of Mr Gilmartin's Quarryvale project).

22.06 Mr Gilmartin maintained that he gave Cllr McGrath the go ahead to write to Mr Haughey, as recommended by Cllr McGrath, after Cllr McGrath had advised him (referring to Mr Gilmartin's efforts to assemble the Quarryvale site) 'that the whole thing was being thwarted, being deliberately thwarted at that time.'

22.07 Mr Haughey declined to meet Mr Gilmartin, because of, as advised to Cllr McGrath on 25 July 1990, his 'heavy schedule of commitments.'

22.08 As was the case with Cllr Gilbride, Cllr McGrath professed his support for the Quarryvale project in the first instance to Mr Gilmartin. That support which transferred, in early 1991, to Mr O'Callaghan, probably in recognition of Mr O'Callaghan's then perceived role as the individual who from February 1991, in particular, was taking over from Mr Gilmartin as the promoter of the development. Mr Dunlop, in his evidence, described Mr O'Callaghan and himself as having 'inherited' Cllr Gilbride and Cllr McGrath from Mr Gilmartin, as supporters of Quarryvale which was 'much to their satisfaction.'

22.09 It was common case that, prior to any question of Cllr McGrath receiving financial support from Mr O'Callaghan or Mr Dunlop, be it by way of political support or otherwise, Cllr McGrath had signed a motion to rezone the Quarryvale lands to 'D&E' which was lodged with the County Council on 15 February 1991. On 15 January Cllr McGrath personally wrote to Mr Gilmartin, and informed him of his intention to provide support. The Tribunal believed that this expression of support from Cllr McGrath was likely to have been communicated by Mr Gilmartin to Mr O'Callaghan. In his letter Cllr McGrath referred to his belief that the motion would:

enjoy unanimous cross-party support particularly in view of your successful negotiations with the developer of the former Town Centre Site at Foxdene(Neilstown) which is not now being proceeded with...

22.10 In the course of their respective testimonies, a conflict arose as between Mr Gilmartin on the one hand, and Messrs O'Callaghan, Cllrs McGrath and Gilbride on the other hand, as to the circumstances in which Cllr McGrath ultimately lodged this motion. The last possible date for the lodging of a Quarryvale Motion with the County Council, for consideration prior to the first Statutory Display, was 15 February 1991.

22.11 Mr Gilmartin maintained that during the course of that day he had received two telephone calls from Cllr McGrath, and one telephone call from Cllr Gilbride, to his Luton home, urging him to sign the second Heads of Agreement with Mr O'Callaghan and AIB Bank.

22.12 In the days immediately preceding 15 February 1991, AIB initiated a series of communications with Mr Gilmartin in the course of which he was called upon to discharge his indebtedness to AIB Bank. Simultaneously, Mr Gilmartin was being urged by AIB to enter into a second Heads of Agreement between himself, Mr O'Callaghan and AIB. Mr Gilmartin described 15 February 1991 as the 'night of the long knives.'

22.13 It was common case that neither Mr Gilmartin nor Mr O'Callaghan was happy with what had been earlier agreed as between himself, Mr O'Callaghan and AIB in December 1990, the first Heads of Agreement.

22.14 Mr Gilmartin duly signed the second Heads of Agreement on 15 February 1991, and apparently faxed his signed copy of the agreement to AIB at 9:03pm on 15 February 1991. Mr Deane stated that it was 'likely' that either himself, or Mr O'Callaghan, were still at the bank at that time.

22.15 Mr Gilmartin maintained that the telephone calls made to him by Cllr McGrath on 15 February 1991 advised him that Cllr McGrath was being prevented by AIB Bank and Mr O'Callaghan from lodging the Quarryvale rezoning motion, until such time as Mr Gilmartin signed the second Heads of Agreement. Mr Gilmartin ultimately signed the agreement.

22.16 Mr Gilmartin testified that, following the signing of the agreement, both Mr Kay of AIB and Cllr McGrath telephoned him on 16 February 1991, and told him that the motion had been lodged. Cllr McGrath also faxed to Mr Gilmartin a copy of this motion, and a copy of a motion prepared by Mr Lawlor (signed by Cllr McGrath), which proposed to rezone Neilstown to 'E' (industrial and related issues), a motion ultimately rejected by the County Council as it was out of time.

22.17 Cllr McGrath and Cllr Gilbride denied that occurred on 15 February 1991 with Mr Gilmartin. Mr O'Callaghan maintained that, by 15 February 1991, he had not yet met Cllrs McGrath and Gilbride. Mr Deane rejected Mr Gilmartin's allegation that he could have been told by Cllr McGrath that Cllr McGrath was being prevented from lodging the motion on 15 February 1991, since the motion was lodged hours before the agreement was signed with Mr O' Callaghan and AIB.

22.18 In the course of his evidence Mr O'Callaghan maintained that he had no specific awareness of the McGrath motion until later in February 1991. However, in the light of Mr Kay's evidence (see below), which the Tribunal accepted, and also in light of Mr O'Callaghan's dealings with Mr Lawlor in February 1991, this was unlikely to have been the case.

22.19 Mr Kay, in evidence, confirmed that on the day the second Heads of Agreement was signed, Mr Gilmartin did not attend at AIB Bank Centre and, accordingly, documentation had been faxed to him for his signature. Mr Kay agreed that Mr Gilmartin was told by him that unless he signed the second Heads of Agreement the motion to rezone Quarryvale would not be lodged. Mr Kay said he had been advised of this by Mr O'Callaghan. Mr Kay stated that he had no knowledge of any calls made to Mr Gilmartin by Cllr McGrath or Cllr Gilbride, or by Mr O'Callaghan.

22.20 As to whether Mr Gilmartin was telephoned by Cllr McGrath (and Cllr Gilbride), the Tribunal preferred the evidence of Mr Gilmartin to that of Cllrs McGrath and Gilbride, and accepted that such contact was indeed made and that its content was as recalled by Mr Gilmartin.

22.21 Having lodged the motion to rezone Quarryvale by 15 February 1991, Cllr McGrath, (together with Cllrs Hand and Hanrahan), was also instrumental on 16 May 1991, (the day of the Quarryvale rezoning vote), in effecting a cap being placed on the scale of retail development permissible on the Quarryvale site, by way of an amendment to the original rezoning motion. This amendment, probably an initiative of Mr Lawlor, following upon a meeting which took place on 13 May 1991 between Mr Lawlor, Cllrs Tommy Boland, Ned Ryan and Marian McGennis with Mr John Corcoran (of Green Property Plc) and his advisor, was put in place in an attempt to alleviate the concerns of, and counter the opposition of, Green Property Plc. to the rezoning of Quarryvale. The effect of the McGrath motion (as amended), as passed on the 16 May 1991, was to allocate Town Centre zoning to Quarryvale and limit its retail development on the site to that which was previously permitted for the Neilstown lands, pursuant to the 1983 Development Plan (approximately 500,000 square feet of retail space).

22.22 In his evidence, Cllr McGrath acknowledged that both in the lead up to the vote of 16 May 1991, and subsequently, he was a member of the strategy team which had been established to ensure the rezoning of Quarryvale – a team whose core included Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Dunlop, Mr Lawlor, Mr Ambrose Kelly, Cllrs Gilbride and McGrath.

22.23 Mr Dunlop’s diary for 6 June 1991, (as forensically analysed), indicated that a meeting took place on that date between Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Gilmartin, Cllr McGrath and Cllr Gilbride, probably with Mr Dunlop in attendance. The Tribunal was satisfied that prior to furnishing to the Tribunal his unredacted diaries in 2001, Mr Dunlop attempted to obliterate this diary entry. The Tribunal was satisfied that he did so in an attempt to conceal from the Tribunal the fact that in June 1991, Mr Gilmartin was with Mr O’Callaghan, in the company of Mr Dunlop and the councilors. The Tribunal would be minded to consider (which it did) that the fact of Mr Gilmartin’s presence at such a meeting belied Mr Dunlop’s and Mr O’Callaghan’s contention that the original reason for the use by Mr Dunlop of Shefran in his dealings with Mr O’Callaghan was to keep Mr Dunlop’s involvement in Quarryvale secret from Mr Gilmartin.

22.24 In the throes of the ‘war of words’ which broke out between the promoters of the Blanchardstown development and the promoters of Quarryvale, subsequent to the rezoning of Quarryvale on 16 May 1991, and following Cllr McGrath’s re-election as a councillor, Mr Corcoran of Green Property plc wrote to Cllr McGrath in the following terms on 3 July 1991:

Dear Colm,

We would like to congratulate you on your recent election to the County Council. We wish you well in your position.

As you may be aware, we are the developers of the new Town Centre at Blanchardstown where work has been suspended as a result of the threat to its viability posed by the recent motion of the outgoing Council to rezone lands at Quarryvale.

We are anxious to recommence work on the site as soon as practical and in this regard we would welcome an opportunity to discuss the matter with you and your colleagues as soon as possible. If you are interested in meeting us, I would be grateful if you would contact me upon receipt of this letter.

22.25 Cllr McGrath’s reply of 9 July 1991, having thanked Mr Corcoran for his good wishes, stated as follows:

In my opinion, a further meeting to discuss the future of Blanchardstown Town Centre would serve no purpose as long as you continue to assert that the re-zoning of lands at Quarryvale poses a threat to the viability of Blanchardstown which I totally refute.

Your persistent targetting of the Quarryvale re-zoning decision is now, thankfully, being seen for what it is, a smoke-screen, to hide the real reason why you have not proceeded with the Town Centre to date. It is only a matter of time before the serious concern of your shareholders manifest itself in some form of corrective action.

I have no doubt that a Town Centre will be built at Blanchardstown, the question is, by whom? Equally, I am confident that a Town Centre will be built at Quarryvale to serve the people of Lucan/Clondalkin as provided for in the County Development Plan at an improved location.

Councillors must plan and act for the common good, not for the interests of any one property development company. I regard any attempt to deprive the people of Lucan/Clondalkin of their major Town Centre as an act against the common good and I will vehemently oppose any such action from whatever quarter.

22.26 Prior to dispatching this letter to Mr Corcoran, Cllr McGrath provided a copy to Mr O’Callaghan, who, in turn, faxed it to Mr Deane. The Tribunal was satisfied that the purpose of Cllr McGrath’s providing it to Mr O’Callaghan was to elicit his approval for such a letter to be sent by him to Mr Corcoran. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr O’Callaghan gave that approval.

22.27 In or about September 1991, Cllr McGrath made direct contact with Mr Deane, requesting Mr Deane to ‘throw (his) eye over’ a letter dated 4 September 1991 which Cllr McGrath was proposing to send to Mr Pat Keating, of Green Property, in response to communication sent to Cllr McGrath by Mr Keating.

22.28 The letter to Mr Keating stated as follows:

Dear Mr. Keating,

As the proposer of the successful Motion to rezone 106 acres at Quarryvale for an alternative Town Centre for Lucan/Clondalkin to replace the failed site at Ronanstown I regard your attitude to this important Planning matter as flippant, patently prejudiced and grossly insulting to the integrity of the elected Members of Dublin Council who are fully aware that you are a paid servant of another Town Centre Developer whose bluff is now being called.

As far as the Development Plan Review is concerned you conveniently failed to mention the fact that the Planners have proposed the rezoning of the Ronanstown site to Industrial in favour of the Quarryvale site.

Your scaremongering is pathetic. The only ‘uncertainty’ about Blanchardstown is when it is going to be built. Green Property PLC failed to deliver the goods in Blanchardstown and decided instead to invest in the British property market. This is the real scandal in this whole affair and the Quarryvale excuse is only a ‘cop-out’ for the Directors.

I would suggest therefore that you desist from regurgitating hypocritical self-interest propaganda which insults the intelligence of Politicians, Planners and the general public who now know the trust behind the Green Property smokescreen.

No amount of your dubious lobbying will deprive the people of Lucan/Clondalkin of their long awaited Town Centre, which, unlike Blanchardstown will be commenced immediately on receipt of Planning Permission which I am confident will be forthcoming...

22.29 On 6 September 1991 Mr Deane advised Mr O’Callaghan that Mr Deane had ‘spoken to Colm McGrath and he has agreed to hold the letter for the time being...’

22.30 The communication between Cllr McGrath and Mr Deane, and between Mr Deane and Mr O’Callaghan, on the subject of Cllr McGrath’s letter to Mr Keating indicated the extent to which, by this time, Cllr McGrath was actively engaged as a member of Mr O’Callaghan’s strategy team promoting the Quarryvale project.

22.31 Cllr McGrath’s letter, albeit slightly altered as compared to the version which was provided to Mr Deane, duly issued to Mr Keating on 23 September 1991,¹ presumably with the imprimatur of Mr Deane.

22.32 It was noteworthy for the Tribunal that while Cllr McGrath strongly castigated Mr Keating as ‘a paid servant’ of a developer, Cllr McGrath himself, accepted a payment of IR£10,000 from Mr O’Callaghan approximately 17 days later, on 11 October 1991 (see below).

22.33 Similarly to the significant role played by him in advance of the first Quarryvale rezoning vote, Cllr McGrath likewise played a significant role in promoting Quarryvale as the date for the second vote advanced. Throughout 1992 Cllr McGrath attended many strategy meetings with Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Dunlop and others.

22.34 On 21 April 1992, in the course of the Quarryvale lobbying campaign, Cllr McGrath wrote to his fellow councillors enclosing a copy of his September 1991 letter to Mr Keating, and he advised them as follows:

In recognition of the fact that the coming months will see us all bombarded with vested interest representations in relation to the Development Plan Review I do not intend to respond to the tediously regular propaganda missives from the paid public relations servant of Green Property Company which continue to insult our intelligence.

My last response (copy enclosed) is still relevant although, unfortunately for us all, the advice therein was ignored.

If, however, you wish to witness what must rank as a classical case of the pot calling the kettle black I will gladly forward a copy of Green Property’s ‘West One’ prospectus for the Blanchardstown Town Centre, a small sample of which I enclose, which speaks for itself.

¹ This was also the date on which Mr O’Callaghan paid IR£10,000 to Mr Lawlor, and a little over two weeks prior to Mr O’Callaghan paying a similar sum to Cllr McGrath, the letter’s author.

Transparent propaganda will continue to be ignored, however, further attacks on the integrity of councillors will be dealt with appropriately...

22.35 At the time he wrote this letter, Cllr McGrath had received a sum of IR£10,000 from Mr O’Callaghan.

22.36 Cllr McGrath was one of four councillors who on 17 December 1992 put forward the motion (dated 9 December 1992) proposing the adoption of the Manager’s recommendation for Quarryvale (a ‘C’ and ‘E’ zoning as opposed to a ‘D’ town centre zoning). He was also one of four councillors (the others being Cllrs O’Halloran, Ridge and Tyndall) who signed an addendum to 9 December 1992 motion, proposing that the Neilstown lands would revert to a ‘D’ town centre zoning with a new special objective to encourage commercial, recreational, industrial and residential uses. Such a proposed specific objective with regard to the Neilstown lands would accommodate plans then being put forward for Mr O’Callaghan and others for the development of a National Stadium on these lands.

22.37 Cllr McGrath also supported limiting the retail square footage on the Quarryvale site to 250,000 square feet.

22.38 Cllr McGrath acknowledged that while on 17 December 1992 he and others² were advocating a cap of 250,000 square feet for retail on the Quarryvale lands, he was at the same time confident that such a cap would be removed in due course. He however had no recollection, in the immediate aftermath of the 17 December 1992 vote, of making the following utterance ‘a good day’s work lads, we’ll lift it in the new Council’, words which were attributed to Cllr McGrath by Mr Keating in his evidence.

22.39 Mr Gilmartin did not attend Dublin County Council for the Special Meeting of 17 December 1992. He gave evidence that, notwithstanding his absence, he made a number of attempts on that date to contact Cllr McGrath, with a view to requesting him not to support a 250,000 square foot retail cap for Quarryvale to which Mr Gilmartin was strongly opposed. On 16 December 1992 Mr Gilmartin had also telephoned Cllr Gilbride. Cllr McGrath, in evidence, acknowledged that he may have had telephone contact with Mr Gilmartin on that date, but did not specifically recall it.

22.40 It was apparent, from the evidence of Mr Gilmartin, Mr Deane, Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop, that Mr Gilmartin’s efforts to prevent a 250,000 square feet retail cap being imposed on Quarryvale continued on the 17

December 1992 – the date of the Quarryvale vote, when Mr Gilmartin made a number of attempts to contact Cllrs Gilbride and McGrath at the County Council offices. Although Mr Deane disputed any suggestion that he was ‘manning’ the telephone in the Council offices, he conceded that Mr Gilmartin happened to have ‘got through...’ to him on one occasion at Council on the evening of 17 December 1992. The Tribunal was however satisfied, from the evidence, that one of Mr Deane’s functions on that day, as he sat in the Fianna Fail rooms of Dublin County Council, was indeed to ‘man’ the telephone, in order to prevent direct communication by Mr Gilmartin with Cllrs McGrath or Gilbride.³

PAYMENTS MADE TO CLLR MCGRATH BY MR O’CALLAGHAN IN THE PERIOD 1991 TO 1997

22.41 In the period 1991 to 1997 a number of payments, both direct and indirect, were made to Cllr McGrath by Mr O’Callaghan. The payments included four round figure payments of IR£10,000, IR£1,000 (paid to Cllr McGrath’s company), IR£10,700, and IR£20,000 made in the period October 1991 to November 1993, and a number of additional payments ranging from IR£500 to IR£10,000, paid to entities associated with Cllr McGrath.

22.42 The three larger round figure payments totalling IR£40,700, made to Cllr McGrath in the period October 1991 to November 1993 were said by Cllr McGrath to have been political donations. Mr O’Callaghan described the first IR£10,000 payment as a political donation but maintained that the sums of IR£10,700⁴ and IR£20,000 which had been given to Cllr McGrath were loans which, as of 2008, remained unpaid.

THE PAYMENTS BY MR O’CALLAGHAN IN THE PERIOD 1991 TO 1993 A PAYMENT OF IR£10,000 ON 11 OCTOBER 1991

22.43 Mr O’Callaghan told the Tribunal that in June 1991, Cllr McGrath requested a contribution to his Local Election campaign, then underway. Mr O’Callaghan said that he did not then make a contribution, but subsequently did so on 11 October 1991, having been reminded to do so by Cllr McGrath. Mr O’Callaghan claimed that Cllr McGrath was one of only two Dublin County Council councillors (the other being Mr Lawlor who received IR£10,000 in September 1991) who had asked him for political contributions during the Local Election campaign. Mr O’Callaghan claimed to have made the contributions to both councillors because he wanted 'to get them elected.' At the time that Mr O'Callaghan made the payment, Cllr McGrath had been re-elected to the County Council, but Mr Lawlor had lost his seat. According to Mr O'Callaghan, Cllr McGrath, like Mr Lawlor, had himself nominated the sum of IR£10,000, and which was duly paid by Mr O'Callaghan.

³ Also on 17 December 1992, Messrs Kay and Dave McGrath (of AIB) travelled to London to meet Mr Gilmartin (See Part four of this Chapter entitled ‘The Role of AIB in Quarryvale...’)

⁴ Mr O’Callaghan’s evidence in relation to the IR£10,700 sum was inconsistent. On Day 875, he said that he did not consider the IR£10,700 to have been a loan to Cllr McGrath. However on Day 892, Mr O’Callaghan said he treated as a ‘possibility’ that Cllr McGrath ‘would have returned or refunded’ the sum to him.

22.44 The two IR£10,000 payments to Cllr McGrath and Mr Lawlor respectively were each double the amount Mr O'Callaghan had contributed towards the Local Election campaign of Mr Mícheál Martin, then a Cork based councillor and the only individual, apart from Cllr McGrath and Mr Lawlor, whom Mr O'Callaghan claimed to have supported directly in connection with the 1991 Local Election. Unlike the situation with Cllr McGrath and Mr Lawlor, Mr Martin's election contribution had been given to him during the currency of his campaign.

22.45 Questioned as to the difference in the size of the amounts paid to the Dublin based councillors and that paid to the Cork based councillor, Mr O'Callaghan maintained that the IR£10,000 payments to Cllr McGrath and Mr Lawlor were 'not an outrageous figure at all.' Mr O'Callaghan, by way of justification for those payments, stated:

'McGrath was a lynchpin of the Quarryvale vote and Lawlor worked extremely hard as well for the first year or two.'

22.46 This explanation was a clear indicator on the part of Mr O'Callaghan of an association between these two substantial payments, and the active support of both recipients for the efforts to rezone the Quarryvale lands.

THE METHOD OF PAYMENT TO CLLR MCGRATH⁵

22.47 On 11 October 1991 Mr O'Callaghan's personal bank account at AIB, 97 South Mall, Cork, was put in funds to the extent of IR£10,000 by Riga Ltd. An analysis of Mr O'Callaghan's personal cheque book stub for 11 October 1991 revealed the following manuscript notation, 'OOC cheque to OOC C/McGrath £10,000 in/out.' In evidence, Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that the notation on his cheque book stub suggested that he had cashed an IR£10,000 cheque, but he denied that such had in fact occurred, and maintained that he had given his personal cheque to Cllr McGrath. As was the case with the IR£10,000 cheque given to Mr Lawlor in September 1991, the Tribunal was not furnished with a copy of Mr O'Callaghan's 11 October 1991 cheque, as AIB had not retained the relevant records.

⁵ For further consideration of this issue see Part 8.

22.48 In his evidence, Cllr McGrath acknowledged receipt of IR£10,000 from Mr O’Callaghan in October 1991. Previously, in the course of his private interview with the Tribunal on 12 October 1998, Cllr McGrath acknowledged receipt of ‘political contributions’ from Mr O’Callaghan, ‘always at the time of election.’ In that interview Cllr McGrath declined to give details of the payments deeming such to be ‘private.’ However, subsequently on 27 October 1998, Cllr McGrath’s solicitors wrote to the Tribunal to...

...confirm that our client received two political contributions from Mr. Owen O’Callaghan. The first of the contributions was received in October 1991 in the sum of £10,000 by way of personal cheque. The second contribution was received in November 1993 in the sum of £20,000 by way of personal cheque. Our client is unsure as to which Dublin Hotels in which contributions were made.

22.49 An analysis of Cllr McGrath’s bank accounts, including an AIB ‘election campaign fund’ account (opened by him in 1985), did not reveal a cheque lodgement of IR£10,000. In the course of correspondence with the Tribunal, Cllr McGrath attributed a IR£5,000 lodgement to his IPBS account on the 5 November 1991 as being sourced to Mr O’Callaghan, but in evidence, agreed that that IR£5,000 lodgement could not have formed part of the IR£10,000 cheque received from Mr O’Callaghan, as the IR£5,000 was in fact a single cheque lodgement.

22.50 While the Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr McGrath did receive IR£10,000 from Mr O’Callaghan in 1991, the Tribunal believed that Cllr McGrath either received such sum in cash from Mr O’Callaghan, or alternatively, that Cllr McGrath dealt with the IR£10,000 cheque from Mr O’Callaghan otherwise than by lodging it to any account in his name.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS AS TO THE PURPOSE OF THE PAYMENT TO CLLR MCGRATH IN OCTOBER 1991

22.51 Notwithstanding Mr O’Callaghan’s and Cllr McGrath’s attribution of the payment of IR£10,000 in October 1991 as a political donation, the Tribunal was satisfied that the primary motivation, both on the part of Cllr McGrath in requesting the payment, and on the part of Mr O’Callaghan in making the payment, stemmed from Cllr McGrath’s crucial past, and continuing active involvement in support of the Quarryvale project. At the time the payment was made, both men were well aware of Cllr McGrath’s importance in the success of the project to date, and in the future.

22.52 In particular, certain aspects of the payment suggested to the Tribunal that it was a payment other than a bona fide political donation. Firstly, on the part of Mr O’Callaghan, a significant and enhanced degree of secrecy attached to the payment. Secondly, its substantial size compared to, for example, the political contribution paid to the Fianna Fail politician Mr Micheál Martin in June 1991. Thirdly, the fact that Cllr McGrath had himself stipulated the amount of the payment and had reminded Mr O’Callaghan to make the payment suggested that it was other than a voluntary donation on Mr O’Callaghan’s part in response to a request for an election contribution.

22.53 The Tribunal was satisfied that the payment of IR£10,000 was sought by Cllr McGrath and was in all probability requested on the basis of the assistance he was giving Mr O’Callaghan. The Tribunal believed that the request was readily acceded to by Mr O’Callaghan given the relative importance of Cllr McGrath and the role he was playing as part of the Quarryvale strategy team. This payment compromised in the most grievous fashion the disinterested performance by Cllr McGrath of his public duties in relation to matters relating to Quarryvale coming before Dublin County Council, and was corrupt.

22.54 On 30 April 1992 Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd invoiced Riga Ltd for the sum of IR£10,253.27. Included in the breakdown of that figure, as detailed on the invoice, was a sum of IR£1,423.67 for ‘Secretarial Services.’ Riga Limited discharged the Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd invoice on 22 June 1992. Riga Ltd was duly reimbursed by Barkhill Ltd on 2 October 1992.

22.55 On 1 May 1992 Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd made a cheque payment of IR£1,000 to ‘Tower Secretarial Services,’ on foot of an invoice received from that entity which sought payment of IR£1,000 for:

To Secretarial Services in relation to the Commercial Development at Quarryvale including; mail-shots to all Councillors; faxes and telephone calls; typing and photocopying for the period 1990, 1991.

22.56 Cllr McGrath acknowledged that Tower Secretarial Services was his business, and that he received the said sum of IR£1,000 from Mr Dunlop.

22.57 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that the IR£1,422.67 figure on the invoice to Riga Ltd represented (and which included an ‘added value’ for Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd) the IR£1,000 payment that Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd went on to make to Cllr McGrath/Tower Secretarial on 1 May 1992 and was a payment which Mr O’Callaghan agreed to, although he maintained that he was unaware of Mr Dunlop's profit mark up. While Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that he had agreed that Mr Dunlop could make the payment to Cllr McGrath and be reimbursed by Riga, Mr O'Callaghan disagreed with Mr Dunlop's evidence that the Tower Secretarial invoice for IR£1,000 was simply an excuse for the provision of funds to Cllr McGrath. Both Cllr McGrath and Mr O'Callaghan maintained that the payment was for expenditure which had been incurred by Cllr McGrath in connection with Quarryvale (prior to Mr O'Callaghan's involvement), as reflected on the Tower Secretarial service invoice. The Tribunal however was inclined to believe Mr Dunlop's explanation was the more accurate account of why Cllr McGrath received IR£1,000 in May 1992. The Tribunal was satisfied that this payment was corrupt.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£10,700 IN MAY 1992.

22.58 The cheque payments book of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd documented a purchase by that firm of a bank draft for IR£10,700 in the name of William Fry Solicitors on 21 May 1992, a transaction analysed in the accounts of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd detailed profit and loss account for the year end 31 October 1992 as 'legal and professional.'

22.59 Mr Dunlop, Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr McGrath all accepted that the IR£10,700 draft was paid to William Fry Solicitors, in order to discharge an indebtedness which Cllr McGrath had incurred to a third party, and which was the subject of litigation.

22.60 Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop gave broadly similar evidence relating to the circumstances as to how the payment of the IR£10,700 came about, which was that during the course of a meeting between Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Ambrose Kelly and Mr Dunlop on 21 May 1992 in Mr Dunlop's office, a telephone call was received from Cllr McGrath who wished to speak to Mr O'Callaghan or Mr Dunlop. Mr Dunlop took the call. Cllr McGrath had explained that he was at that time in the Four Courts, and that a Court Judgment against him for IR£10,000 approximately was imminent. Cllr McGrath sought financial assistance to discharge the debt, and thereby avoid a Judgment. Mr O'Callaghan agreed with Mr Dunlop that Mr Dunlop would provide a cheque/draft to William Fry Solicitors in discharge of Cllr McGrath's indebtedness and that Mr Dunlop would then include this outlay in the next invoice to Mr O'Callaghan/Riga Limited from Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd.

22.61 Mr O'Callaghan recalled the occasion in the following terms:

'...he rang me asking me to looking for me actually, I wasn't available. I was actually in Frank Dunlop's office but he rang Frank and passed the information on to Frank that he was in trouble, that he was in court and that he was looking for an amount. I think the total claim against him was about 8,000 pounds but together with fees I think it was about 10,700 pounds.'

22.62 Explaining the rationale behind his decision to discharge Cllr McGrath's debt, Mr O'Callaghan stated that his concern in May 1992 was that Cllr McGrath might be made 'bankrupt', and that this would adversely affect the Quarryvale rezoning process in which Cllr McGrath, as a local councillor, was strongly involved. Equally, Mr Dunlop testified that the 'over arching' concern at the time was that Cllr McGrath, a very significant supporter of Quarryvale, might have a judgment entered against him, a prospect which both Mr O'Callaghan and himself felt might have an adverse impact on Quarryvale.

22.63 Asked by Tribunal Counsel as to why or how Cllr McGrath's financial/legal difficulties were a relevant factor in Quarryvale, Mr Dunlop replied that Cllr McGrath himself felt sufficiently comfortable to make such a telephone call looking for financial assistance, and that Cllr McGrath's request for funds had emanated from the relationship which existed between Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr McGrath. Mr Dunlop also testified that neither Mr O'Callaghan nor himself had discussed the appropriateness, or otherwise, of acceding to Mr McGrath's request, and that their discussion had related solely to how Mr McGrath's request might be facilitated.

22.64 On 26 May 1992 Mr O'Callaghan wrote to Mr Dunlop and thanked him for having organised the payment to William Fry Solicitors and requested that Mr Dunlop include this sum in his next invoice to Riga Ltd. Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan both agreed that the IR£10,700 paid by Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd was most probably included in an invoice for IR£13,530.04 relating to 'ongoing costs and expenditure in relation to Quarryvale' furnished by Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd to Riga Ltd on 10 June 1992 and which was discharged by Riga on 28 August 1992, and that the subject matter of the invoice would have been, in general, agreed between them prior its issue.

22.65 On 2 October 1992 Barkhill Ltd in turn reimbursed Riga Ltd for this payment. Neither Barkhill Ltd nor Mr Gilmartin were apprised of the fact that Mr O'Callaghan/Riga had discharged a debt incurred by Cllr McGrath in the sum of IR£10,700, nor was the fact that such payment was made in order to assist Cllr McGrath recorded in the records of Riga Ltd or Barkhill Ltd. There was no record or memorandum furnished by AIB to the Tribunal which suggested that AIB, when it sanctioned the drawdown on the Barkhill No. 2 loan account to reimburse Riga Ltd for this payment, received an explanation, or that it queried the meaning of the term, 'ongoing costs', referred to on Mr Dunlop's invoice of 10 June 1992. Mr Kay suggested that AIB may have requested a detailed breakdown of the invoice, and having not received that breakdown, simply failed to follow up on the request for an explanation. Mr Kay also stated that he presumed that AIB took it for granted that Mr O'Callaghan was himself aware of the breakdown.

22.66 Cllr McGrath disputed that he had instigated the request to Mr Dunlop and/or Mr O'Callaghan for financial assistance. The thrust of his evidence was that on 21 May 1992 he had been telephoned by Mr Dunlop, who had inquired about his whereabouts because he, Cllr McGrath, was due to attend a meeting with Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop. Cllr McGrath had then explained to Mr Dunlop that he was in Court and had explained the nature of the legal proceedings in which he was involved. Cllr McGrath testified that, while he had been quite prepared to proceed with his court case Mr Dunlop offered to assist him, which Cllr McGrath accepted. He did not recollect discussing the matter with Mr O'Callaghan at that time.

22.67 The Tribunal rejected Cllr McGrath's evidence that he was not the instigator of the plea for financial assistance on 21 May 1992. The Tribunal preferred the account provided to it by Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop to that provided by Cllr McGrath. It was satisfied that Cllr McGrath sought financial assistance from Mr O'Callaghan to discharge a personal debt, and that the payment to William Fry, Solicitors was made on that basis.

22.68 Mr O'Callaghan first apprised the Tribunal of the fact of this payment on 16 May 2003. Mr O'Callaghan's earlier statements of 12 April 2000 and 3 May 2000 did not refer to the payment. In the course of his 2003 statement Mr O'Callaghan stated as follows:

In or about the month of June 1992 I paid the sum of £10,700 to Councillor Colm McGrath of Dublin County Council. When I made my original statement I did not remember this payment as I personally held no documentation which would have helped me to recollect it. It was only going over matters in my mind that I began to recall a payment made to Colm McGrath. I checked my records but still could not find any record of the payment. I asked Frank Dunlop if he had any recollection of the events. He told me that he would only deal with the matter through his Solicitor. In this regard I beg to refer to my third Supplemental Affidavit as to documents.

I believe that this payment was made in the following circumstances.

Colm McGrath had told me on a few occasions that he was being sued for money and expressed concern that he did not have the funds to meet this litigation. In or about 21st May 1992 I was in Frank Dunlop's office when he received a call from Colm McGrath. Colm McGrath informed him that the litigation case was due in Court that day and that he felt Judgment was about to be given against him for the sum of £10,700. He told Frank Dunlop that he had tried to contact me and asked him if he knew where I was. Frank Dunlop told him that he would ring him back. Frank Dunlop then discussed the matter with me and I agreed to pay the amount involved. I asked Frank Dunlop if he would make the payment on my behalf and that I would reimburse him. Frank Dunlop sent a bank draft in the sum of £10,700 by courier to William Fry & Sons Solicitors to resolve the matter. From a copy of my letter to Frank Dunlop dated 26th May 1992 it is clear that I asked Frank Dunlop to include this amount in his next invoice. I do not have any copy of this letter other than the copy sent to my Solicitors by the Solicitors for Frank Dunlop. I believe from correspondence I have received from Frank Dunlop's Solicitor that this amount was included in an Invoice dated the 10th June 1992 from Frank Dunlop & Associates in the sum of £13,530.04. This invoice was paid on the 28th August 1992.

22.69 Between 14 July and 5 October 2000 Mr O'Callaghan had initiated correspondence with Mr Dunlop with regard to the payment of the IR£10,700, seeking Mr Dunlop's assistance in relation to the matter for the purposes of Mr O'Callaghan's assisting the Tribunal. Mr O'Callaghan's correspondence with Mr Dunlop culminated in a letter written by his solicitors to Mr Dunlop's solicitors on 23 October 2000 which resulted in Mr Dunlop's solicitors furnishing Mr O'Callaghan's legal advisors with a copy of Mr O'Callaghan's letter to Mr Dunlop of 26 May 1992, and a copy of the Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd invoice of 10 June 1992.

22.70 In the course of his evidence on Day 809 Mr Dunlop took issue with portion of the content of the letter to him from Mr O'Callaghan of 14 July 2000. On that date Mr O'Callaghan wrote to Mr Dunlop as follows:

Dear Frank,

It has been on my mind that some monies were paid to a Solicitor in Dublin on behalf of Colm McGrath. I have no account of this.

I am anxious to establish if this has happened or not. It could have been some time in 1992. Can you throw some light on this subject?

I have spoken to Colm – who has some recollection of this happening, but is not quite sure.

I know you have confirmed to me that you never paid politicians on my behalf.

You might contact me after your holidays.

22.71 Mr Dunlop categorically denied that he had confirmed to Mr O’Callaghan that he had never made payments to councillors on behalf of Mr O’Callaghan, and he maintained that, as between himself and Mr O’Callaghan, the issue of whether Mr Dunlop had paid councillors on behalf of Mr O’Callaghan had never arisen in discussion between them. Mr O’Callaghan, on the other hand, was adamant that he received such confirmation from Mr Dunlop. Mr O’Callaghan recalled that in 2000 Mr Dunlop (referring to revelations that he had corruptly paid councillors) had said to him:

‘Don’t get involved in this, this had nothing to do with you, you are not aware of what happened, stay away from it. That was dismissing the whole show, this has been Frank Dunlop’s attitude always to this from the very, very beginning. His business was his open business and never informed me.’

22.72 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop gave no such assurance to Mr O’Callaghan, nor had Mr O’Callaghan sought such an assurance.

CLLR MCGRATH’S DISCLOSURE TO THE TRIBUNAL OF THE IR£10,700 PAYMENT

22.73 In the course of his private interview with the Tribunal on 12 October 1998 Cllr McGrath made no mention of having been the recipient of IR£10,700 in 1992, be it from Mr O’Callaghan or Mr Dunlop. Nor had Cllr McGrath referred to this issue when he furnished a written statement on 27 October 1998 which detailed payments received by him of IR£10,000 and IR£20,000 from Mr O’Callaghan, in 1991 and 1993, respectively. In evidence, Cllr McGrath acknowledged that he first apprised the Tribunal of the IR£10,700 payment on 16 August 2000, by which time Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop had brought it to the attention of the Tribunal. Mr O’Callaghan told the Tribunal that at some point between 3 May and 14 July 2000 he spoke to Cllr McGrath seeking to ascertain the detail of the circumstances in which the IR£10,700 was paid.

22.74 Irrespective of whether he believed it to be from Mr O’Callaghan or Mr Dunlop, it appeared to the Tribunal inconceivable that, when compiling his statement in 1998 for the Tribunal, Cllr McGrath had forgotten that he had been the beneficiary of funds to the extent of IR£10,700 in 1992, and in particular the unusual circumstances in which these funds had been requested by him, and had been paid to a third party on his behalf.

22.75 Cllr McGrath’s ultimate disclosure of the IR£10,700 payment on 16 August 2000, came about in a letter from Cllr McGrath’s solicitors, in the following terms:

Our client has asked us to bring one further matter to the attention of the Sole Member of the Tribunal. The latter part of the 1992 proceedings were issued by Durapak Limited against our client Colm McGrath trading as Clondalkin Distributors. This related to an unpaid debt of £7500. This debt and the costs of the action were subsequently discharged by Mr. Frank Dunlop and the proceedings were struck out.

22.76 On the 5 September 2000 Cllr McGrath elaborated as follows:

In relation to the discharge of a debt in 1992 by Mr. Frank Dunlop, to the best of my recollection the court date clashed with a meeting of the Council at which the Quarryvale development was on the agenda. Mr. Dunlop undertook to discharge the debt to the Plaintiff's Solicitors on my behalf and the case was not proceeded with. In the brief conversations that took place on the day and in answer to my questions Mr. Dunlop said that the matter would be 'sorted out later' and that my attendance at the meeting was of overriding importance.

22.77 Cllr McGrath acknowledged that no County Council meeting concerning the Quarryvale rezoning had been scheduled for 21 May 1992, and that the assertion in his statement of 5 September 2000 to this effect was entirely incorrect. He claimed that his incorrect version of events was his best recollection at the time he wrote his letter of 5 September 2000 to the Tribunal. The Tribunal was however satisfied that Cllr McGrath, in all probability, made that assertion in an attempt to justify the circumstances in which he came to be paid (indirectly) IR£10,700, by Mr O'Callaghan and/or Mr Dunlop.

22.78 When giving evidence in another module (predating his evidence in this module), Cllr McGrath described the IR£10,700 payment as a 'loan' by Frank Dunlop to him, not yet discharged.

22.79 On Day 823, in the course of his evidence in this module, the following exchange took place between Tribunal Counsel and Cllr McGrath:

'Q 'Would you agree, that where somebody decided a debt of 10,000 pounds it is clearly conferring the benefit of on you, isn't that right?'

A 'Well it depends now given that we have now decided that at one point I regarded it as a loan and now as time passed on it wasn't sorted out at a later date. So I wasn't invoiced for it. So now we have to regard it as a donation.'

Q 'When you say 'we' do you mean you, Mr. McGrath?'

A 'Yes'

Q ‘So it might be better it is your evidence to the Tribunal if you were to put that to the Tribunal in the first person if you wouldn’t mind. So it is your position now, Mr. McGrath, that originally you had considered this matter to be a loan which you would have to repay to Mr. Dunlop but having considered it over the years you have now decided it’s a political contribution?’

A ‘Yes. Not from Mr. Dunlop.’

Q ‘You consider it a political contribution from who?’

A ‘Mr. O’Callaghan’

Q ‘Is that because you have become aware of the fact that Mr. Dunlop was reimbursed by the monies?’

A ‘Yes’

Q ‘And when did you become aware of that?’

A ‘Well I suspected that from the very start.’

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE IR£10,700 PAYMENT

i. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr McGrath’s indebtedness was discharged by Mr Dunlop on behalf of Mr O’Callaghan solely because Cllr McGrath was a councillor who had undertaken in the past, and would continue to undertake in the future, a strategic and supportive role in the project to rezone Quarryvale. The fact that Cllr McGrath felt sufficiently comfortable to seek out Mr O’Callaghan to discharge a substantial third party debt served to emphasise the fact of their mutually beneficial relationship as it then existed, and which provided Mr O’Callaghan with accessible and reliable councillor support for Quarryvale, and which enabled Cllr McGrath to relatively easily access substantial funds when required.

ii. The Tribunal was also satisfied that at no time was the IR£10,700 deemed a loan, either in the minds of Mr O’Callaghan or Cllr McGrath. The Tribunal did not accept Mr O’Callaghan’s evidence that he requested Cllr McGrath to repay it. The Tribunal was equally satisfied that at all times, as reflected in Mr Dunlop’s June 1992 invoice, the IR£10,700 payment was understood and was treated by Mr O’Callaghan/Riga Ltd, as one of the ‘ongoing costs’ associated with the Quarryvale rezoning project.

iii. The payment of IR£10,700 was not, and never became (as suggested by Cllr McGrath) a political donation. The Tribunal found Cllr McGrath's opportunistic changed description of the receipt of money which he originally claimed was a 'loan' from one individual (Mr Dunlop) into a 'political donation' from another individual (Mr O'Callaghan) was not credible.

iv. The Tribunal was satisfied that the account given to it by Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop as to the circumstances in which Cllr McGrath sought financial assistance to the extent of IR£10,700 in order to settle a personal debt, and avoid a Court judgment against him was largely accurate. The Tribunal rejected the account given by Cllr McGrath to the extent that it conflicted with that given by Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop.

v. The Tribunal was satisfied that, in all the circumstances this payment of IR£10,700 was corrupt.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£20,000 ON 9 NOVEMBER 1993

22.80 In his May 2000 statement to the Tribunal, and under the heading 'Political Contributions/Benefits' Mr O'Callaghan, inter alia, described the circumstances in which he made a payment of IR£20,000 to Cllr McGrath on 9 November 1993. Mr O'Callaghan stated as follows:

On the 9th November 1993 I paid the sum of IR£20,000 to Councillor Colm McGrath. The circumstances of this payment are as follows. Councillor McGrath approached me and requested this payment on the basis that he had spent a considerable amount of money on the November 1992 elections as a result of which his business was in serious financial difficulty and he needed some financial help. As Councillor McGrath had supported me in my efforts in Liffey Valley and had supported Tom Gilmartin prior to I becoming involved in Quarryvale I felt obliged to offer support as a 'thank you' for all the help and assistance which he had given.

22.81 On Day 902 Mr O'Callaghan further elaborated on the issue by testifying that in November 1993 Cllr McGrath apprised Mr O'Callaghan of difficulties he had with the Revenue Commissioners. Mr O'Callaghan stated that it was agreed between himself and Cllr McGrath that when the latter sorted out his business affairs the IR£20,000 was to be repaid to Mr O'Callaghan. Accordingly, Mr O'Callaghan said he treated the payment to Cllr McGrath as a loan.⁶ Mr O'Callaghan however acknowledged that Cllr McGrath never repaid the money and that, as of 2008, he had never sought its repayment.

22.82 The payment to Cllr McGrath was effected by a Riga Ltd cheque for IR£20,000. As was the case with Mr O’Callaghan’s IR£10,000 payment to Cllr McGrath in October 1991, the November 1993 Riga cheque was similarly not discovered to the Tribunal, as the relevant AIB records were no longer available.

22.83 Riga Ltd’s cheque payments book documented the IR£20,000 payment to ‘Colm McGrath’ and analysed it under the ‘sundries’ column, as expenditure paid out by Riga on behalf of Barkhill/Quarryvale.

22.84 Riga Ltd’s auditors, likewise, attributed the payment as a Barkhill Ltd/Quarryvale expense, and for the year end 30 April 1994 the payment was posted to the Riga Ltd Barkhill Ltd inter-company loan account in the books of Riga Ltd. There was no reference in Riga’s books of the payment, being a ‘loan’ to Cllr McGrath, nor indeed to it being a political contribution.

22.85 While appearing in Riga’s books for the year end 30 April 1994 as money due to Riga Ltd by Barkhill Ltd, in its audited accounts for the year end 30 April 1995, the IR£20,000 which had been paid to Cllr McGrath was reposted to the Director’s Loan Account in Riga Ltd, a posting which removed it entirely from the remit of the Riga Ltd/Barkhill Ltd inter-company loan account, and therefore from the scrutiny of Mr Fleming, Barkhill’s auditor, and indeed from the scrutiny of any potential investor in Barkhill Ltd.

22.86 Cllr McGrath’s IR£20,000 payment was part of a total of IR£60,000 (comprising a IR£5,000 payment to Cllr John O’Halloran on 9 November 1993,⁷ a IR£10,000 reimbursement by Riga Ltd to Mr O’Callaghan on 24 September 1993 and a IR£25,000 cheque payment to Mr Dunlop on 14 September 1993), which appeared in Riga’s books at year end 30 April 1994 as monies owed by Barkhill Ltd to Riga Ltd, but which for the year end 30 April 1995 were attributed to the Director’s loan account within Riga Ltd.

CLLR MCGRATH’S EVIDENCE IN RELATION AS TO THE IR£20,000 PAYMENT

22.87 In a statement of the 26 September 2001, in which he dealt with the circumstances of the receipt by him of the IR£20,000, Cllr McGrath stated as follows:

1. During the period 1981 to 1995/6 I was a Sole Trader. My personal, business and political finances were inextricably linked.

In relation to the £20,000 received from Mr O’Callaghan the following circumstances pertained. My involvement in the Quarryvale development impacted seriously on my business affairs. When Mr. O’Callaghan became aware of my predicament he offered to help out and thankfully did.

Political income and expenditure is perpetual and relates to all Local Authority and Dáil Elections of the period and the time in between.

The £20,000 was used to pay creditors (£16,787.40). The balance was miscellaneous expenditure (copies requested from Irish Permanent Building Society).

22.88 In his evidence, Cllr McGrath described the payment from Mr O’Callaghan as a political contribution. In response to Mr O’Callaghan’s assertion that Cllr McGrath had requested financial assistance from him, Cllr McGrath stated that he had made no request of Mr O’Callaghan for a specific amount, rather, he had emphasised to Mr O’Callaghan the burden which had been put on his business by election expenses incurred by him.

22.89 No portion of the IR£20,000 paid to Cllr McGrath by Mr O’Callaghan found its way into Cllr McGrath’s Election Campaign Fund account in AIB. Cllr McGrath explained this fact by stating that the purpose of the AIB account was for political contributions received around election times but that donations received at other times were treated differently. On Day 824, Cllr McGrath categorised the ‘donations’ received by Mr O’Callaghan and which were not lodged into his ‘political account’ in AIB, as a ‘sort of a reimbursement back to my political expenditure.’

22.90 Documentation discovered to the Tribunal revealed that the Riga Ltd cheque for IR£20,000 was in fact lodged to Cllr McGrath’s Irish Permanent Building Society account on 19 November 1993 from which two withdrawals of IR£8,969.40 and IR£7,818 were made on 13 and 14 January 1994 respectively. Cllr McGrath told the Tribunal that the withdrawals were made to discharge debts accrued by his business, and which had been incurred because of his use of his business funds for political expenditure.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE PAYMENT OF IR£20,000 TO CLLR MCGRATH IN NOVEMBER 1993

22.91 The Tribunal was satisfied that no ‘loan’ was given by Mr O’Callaghan to Cllr McGrath in November 1993, and it thus rejected Mr O’Callaghan’s description of the money as a ‘loan.’ The payment of IR£20,000 was made to Cllr McGrath in the immediate aftermath of the Quarryvale confirmation votes of 28 October 1993.

22.92 The Tribunal was satisfied that the IR£20,000 payment was in reality a reward or, as Mr O’Callaghan himself put it in his May 2000 statement, a ‘thank you’ to Cllr McGrath for assistance rendered by him in respect of the Quarryvale rezoning.

22.93 The Tribunal did not consider it to be a coincidence that on the day Mr O’Callaghan/Riga Ltd paid IR£20,000 to Cllr McGrath, Riga Ltd likewise paid IR£5,000 to Cllr John O’Halloran, who, like Cllr McGrath, had provided wholehearted support to the Quarryvale rezoning process.

22.94 The Tribunal also noted that the payments made to Cllrs McGrath and O’Halloran on 9 November 1993 were preceded, by only 8 weeks approximately, by a payment by Riga Ltd of IR£25,000 to Mr Dunlop on 14 September 1993, a cheque which was encashed by Mr Dunlop on that date and in respect of which proceeds Mr Dunlop maintained (which the Tribunal did not accept) that he could not account, save that he conceded it was likely that he was in possession of the IR£25,000 in cash on the evening of 17 September 1993 when he visited Powers Hotel.⁸

22.95 As occurred with the discharge, some seventeen months earlier by Mr Dunlop, on behalf of Mr O’Callaghan, of the IR£10,700 debt payable by Cllr McGrath to a third party the payment of IR£20,000 by Mr O’Callaghan to Cllr McGrath in November 1993 followed upon a request for financial assistance made by Cllr McGrath to Mr O’Callaghan. The Tribunal rejected the contention that it was, or could ever have been categorised as a political donation. Similar to the IR£10,700 payment, it was clearly the case that Cllr McGrath felt sufficiently comfortable to request substantial financial assistance from Mr O’Callaghan in circumstances where he and Mr O’Callaghan were aware of the crucial assistance already provided by him, in his role as an elected councillor, to the Quarryvale project, and the probable perceived need for ongoing assistance of a similar nature into the future.

22.96 The Tribunal was satisfied that the said payment of IR£20,000 was, in effect, solicited by Cllr McGrath and readily acceded to by Mr O’Callaghan. This payment was entirely connected to the role played by Cllr McGrath in the, by then, successful Quarryvale rezoning. The connection between Cllr McGrath’s soliciting and Mr O’Callaghan’s payment of IR£20,000 was Quarryvale. As such, the payment was corrupt.

⁸ For the Tribunal’s consideration of this payment see Part Five.

MR GILMARTIN'S CLAIM THAT HE WAS TOLD BY MR O'CALLAGHAN THAT CLLR MCGRATH WAS 'ON HIS PAYROLL'

22.97 Mr Gilmartin described an encounter he had with Mr O'Callaghan subsequent to a meeting which had taken place in AIB Bank Centre. Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Gilmartin had shared a taxi to the Airport. Mr Gilmartin claimed that in the course of the journey Mr O'Callaghan taunted him by saying that Mr Gilmartin did not know how business was done in Dublin, and that he had Cllr McGrath 'on his payroll.' He stated, according to Mr Gilmartin, that he was meeting Cllr McGrath at the Airport for the purposes of giving him money, and had waved a cheque for either £10,000 or £20,000 in front of Mr Gilmartin saying to Mr Gilmartin 'that will be £30,000 I've given to McGrath.'

22.98 It was also alleged by Mr Gilmartin that, in the course of this journey, Mr O'Callaghan made reference to Cllr Sean Gilbride as being on his payroll and that Cllr Gilbride had given up his job and was working for Mr O'Callaghan.

22.99 Prior to giving evidence, in his May 2001 statement Mr Gilmartin had made reference to this issue in the following manner:

I never paid Colm McGrath any money, but I do recall at some time in 1992, when I was travelling in a taxi to Dublin Airport with Mr. O'Callaghan, he told me he was meeting with Mr. McGrath, and that Mr. McGrath was always after money. Mr. O'Callaghan then put his hand into his pocket and he pulled out what looked to me like a cheque or a bankers draft. While I did not see the sum of money written on the cheque or draft, Mr. O'Callaghan told me that he had already given Mr. McGrath £20,000 and he indicated to me that the cheque or draft represented a further £10,000.

22.100 In evidence, Mr O'Callaghan denied that he had ever told Mr Gilmartin of payments he had made to Cllr McGrath. Mr O'Callaghan also denied that any conversation or cheque waving incident, as described by Mr Gilmartin, had taken place between them.

22.101 The Tribunal noted the fact that prior to any disclosure being made to the Tribunal by Mr O'Callaghan of payments by him to Cllr McGrath, Mr Gilmartin advised the Tribunal that Mr O'Callaghan had paid a substantial sum to Cllr McGrath.

22.102 In the course of a telephone conversation with Counsel for the Tribunal on 17 April, 1998, Counsel noted the following:

Mr. Gilmartin said that Colin (sic) McGrath a councillor from Clondalkin got £30,000 from Callaghan (sic).

22.103 In a further telephone conversation between Mr Gilmartin and Counsel for the Tribunal on 13 October, 1998, Counsel noted that Mr Gilmartin had referred to a sum paid by Mr O’Callaghan to Cllr McGrath at Dublin Airport. It was also noted that Mr Gilmartin had said that Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Deane had met Cllr McGrath at Dublin Airport. Counsel noted:

Gilmartin was waiting for a taxi to the airport. O’Callaghan and Deane had earlier ordered a taxi and outside the Bankcentre, they offered Gilmartin a lift to the airport. Gilmartin accepted the offer and in the course of the journey, O’Callaghan said that he had to meet McGrath at the airport and said ‘I’ve already paid him and he’s looking for more.’ O’Callaghan insisted that Gilmartin should not be seen at the airport by McGrath. Gilmartin went to the Ryanair desk.

O’Callaghan later said that McGrath had seen him (Gilmartin) to which Gilmartin replied ‘so what.’

22.104 And that: ‘O’Callaghan said it was important that McGrath should not see Gilmartin at the airport.’

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS AS TO WHAT MR O’CALLAGHAN TOLD MR GILMARTIN IN RELATION TO CLLR MCGRATH

i. In relation to the issue as to whether or not, as a matter of probability, Mr O’Callaghan informed Mr Gilmartin as to payments made by him to Cllr McGrath, and that Cllr McGrath was on his payroll, the Tribunal accepted as substantially accurate, the account given to it by Mr Gilmartin, and rejected Mr O’Callaghan’s denial that any such conversation had taken place.

ii. The Tribunal also accepted Mr Gilmartin’s evidence that Mr O’Callaghan had waived a cheque for IR£10,000 or IR£20,000 that he intended paying Cllr McGrath in front of him, and that Mr Gilmartin understandably interpreted this gesture as a taunt by Mr O’Callaghan, whether or not in fact it amounted to such.

22.105 In particular, the Tribunal took cognisance of the relative accuracy of Mr Gilmartin’s assertions to the Tribunal in 1998 to the effect that Cllr McGrath had been paid IR£30,000 by Mr O’Callaghan. The Tribunal has established that Cllr McGrath received two round figure payments totaling IR£30,000 from Mr O’Callaghan in the period October 1991 to November 1993 and that it was Mr O’Callaghan himself who had personally handed over the two payments to Cllr McGrath.

22.106 Moreover, the Tribunal was satisfied, that Mr O’Callaghan occasionally boasted to Mr Gilmartin of his political connections and influence that he probably did as alleged by Mr Gilmartin on occasion refer to politicians, including Cllr McGrath, being on ‘his payroll.’

CLLR MCGRATH’S COMPLAINTS THAT HE WAS SHORT OF MONEY

22.107 While there was considerable divergence in the evidence of Messrs Gilmartin, O’Callaghan and Dunlop on a range of issues, one of the few matters in respect of which they displayed virtual unanimity in their respective testimonies was that Cllr McGrath constantly complained of being short of money.

22.108 Mr Dunlop testified as to Cllr McGrath’s many references to the adverse financial effect on his business which he claimed was caused by his involvement with Quarryvale. Mr O’Callaghan also gave broadly similar testimony. Mr Gilmartin testified that in encounters with Cllr McGrath the latter had talked about needing ‘£100,000’ but that ‘...it wasn’t as bluntly as say Lawlor or Hanrahan.’ Later in his testimony (Day 765) Mr Gilmartin gave somewhat conflicting evidence on this issue which suggested that no sum of money had been alluded to by Cllr McGrath. However, the thrust of his evidence, which was similar to that of Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop, was that Cllr McGrath had talked about being in need of money.

PAYMENTS MADE BY RIGA LTD/BARKHILL LTD TO ESSENTIAL SERVICES LIMITED IN THE PERIOD 1995 TO 1997

22.109 Cllr McGrath’s company, Essential Services Limited, was the beneficiary of the following payments directly from Riga Ltd/Barkhill Ltd, in the period 1995 to 1997:

- 27 April 1995 IR£8,500
- 2 June 1995 IR£1,055
- 21 March 1996 IR£1,412
- 18 July 1996 IR£874.83
- 25 April 1997 IR£500
- 6 May 1997 IR£10,000
- 30 June 1997 IR£1,121.57
- 16 September 1997 IR£1,149.50
- 4 November 1997 IR£762.30

22.110 All but one of these payments were stated by Cllr McGrath and Mr O’Callaghan to have been made by Riga Ltd/Barkhill Ltd to Essential Services for the provision of security and miscellaneous services on the Quarryvale site. Mr

O’Callaghan stated that Cllr McGrath provided security services to the Quarryvale site ‘for a long time.’

PAYMENT OF IR£10,000 ON 6 MAY 1997

22.111 On 6 May 1997 Essential Services Ltd received a IR£10,000 cheque from Riga Ltd. An invoice marked ‘RECEIVED’ by Riga Ltd on 26 June 1997 and which post-dated the payment by some seven weeks, was said by Mr O’Callaghan to describe the service rendered by Essential Services Limited for which Riga paid IR£10,000. The invoice claimed the money for: ‘To provision of serviced office accommodation in the period January to June 1997, as agreed.’

22.112 Mr O’Callaghan claimed that he had been provided with such a facility at Cllr McGrath’s Clondalkin office. However, Mr O’Callaghan also told the Tribunal that from 1991 he had been provided with office facilities by Mr Dunlop, in Mr Dunlop’s offices.

22.113 The IR£10,000 payment to Essential Services was posted in Riga Ltd/Barkhill Nominal ledger of the Inter-company Loan Account.

22.114 In the course of his evidence Mr O’Callaghan rejected any suggestion that this payment had been made in connection with Cllr McGrath’s candidature in the General Election which was called on 15 May 1997, and stated that if Cllr McGrath had requested a political contribution for that election, he would have paid him.

22.115 The Tribunal was satisfied that the payment of IR£10,000 was not, as claimed, a payment for the provision of office accommodation. The Tribunal believed that the payment, which was the fourth substantial round figure payment to Cllr McGrath from Mr O’Callaghan in the period 1991 – 1997, was in reality a payment made in connection with Cllr McGrath’s ongoing supportive role in Quarryvale, and was corrupt.

THE ASCON LTD /JOHN SISK & SON LTD (AND OTHER) PAYMENTS TO ESSENTIAL SERVICES LIMITED

22.116 Over a two year period Essential Services Ltd received almost IR£800,000 from contracting companies Sisk and Ascon and other companies involved in the construction of the Liffey Valley Shopping Centre. From the documentation provided by Cllr McGrath, Essential Services Limited was paid IR£53,403.73 in the period March to December 1996, a total of IR£277,274.78 in the period January to December 1997; IR£70,358.45 for the period January to February 1998; IR£72,091.20 for the months of March to April 1998;

IR£104,055.78 in the period May/June 1998; IR£78,098.78 for the period July/August 1998; IR£108,564.60 for the period September/October 1998.

22.117 Cllr McGrath told the Tribunal that his company provided security and earth moving services for the contractors and sub contractors employed on the Quarryvale site. Cllr McGrath stated that Essential Services Ltd had tendered for a number of contracts, in respect of some of which (for example the Ascon and Sisk contracts), it had been successful.

22.118 In a statement provided to the Tribunal in November of 2007 Mr O'Callaghan stated as follows:

At the time of the proposed development for Liffey Valley, there was a concern developing locally to the effect that there would be nothing in the development which would be of benefit to the locals. It was asserted, from time to time, to me that I would simply bring in all my own people and there would be nothing for the locals.

I endeavoured, in so far I could, to ensure that people from the local area would be taken on in relation to certain activities. In this regard the following local people were involved in the provision of services to the development:

- 1. John O'Halloran, Canteen Services*
- 2. Colm McGrath, Security Services and Small Plant Hire*
- 3. Colm Tyndall, Insurance Services*
- 4. Joe O'Sullivan Security Services*
- 5. Colm McHale & Plant Hire etc.*

In addition I encouraged Sisk, the main contractors, to employ local people. Many of those local people who sought employment were unsuitable and so we initiated, following consultation with FAS, a FAS training scheme.

22.119 Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that Cllrs McGrath, O'Halloran and Tyndall, whom he described as his main councillor supporters in relation to Quarryvale, all benefited commercially during the construction of the Liffey Valley Shopping Centre, and justified their employment on the basis that he was 'employing local people.'

22.120 Cllr McGrath maintained that he was unaware that Mr O'Callaghan had encouraged contractors and sub contractors on the Quarryvale site to use local services and labour during the construction of Quarryvale. The Tribunal considered it extremely unlikely that Cllr McGrath was unaware of Mr O'Callaghan's efforts, particularly having regard to the fact that from 1995 to 1996 his company, at Riga's behest, was already engaged in providing security services on the lands.

MR DUNLOP'S ALLEGED PAYMENTS TO CLLR MCGRATH IN THE CONTEXT OF QUARRYVALE

22.121 On Day 147, and on Day 148, in his '1991 Local Election Contributions' and his '1992 List' respectively, Mr Dunlop named Cllr McGrath as the recipient of IR£2,000 cash at the time of the Local Election in June 1991, and IR£2,000 cash at the time of the November 1992 General Election. Mr Dunlop in his October 2000 and December 2003 statements, and in his sworn evidence linked both payments to the support Cllr McGrath was giving to Quarryvale.

22.122 Explaining why he had given Cllr McGrath, and indeed the other elected councillors named on his 1991 list, election contributions, Mr Dunlop stated that all were strong supporters of the Quarryvale rezoning project and for this reason Mr Dunlop had supported them electorally in May/June 1991, when they approached him for financial support. According to Mr Dunlop, when requesting financial support for his Local Election campaign, Cllr McGrath averted to that very support. Mr Dunlop stated that the IR£2,000 cash was duly paid over to Cllr McGrath at his office in Clondalkin in June 1991.

22.123 Mr Dunlop also told the Tribunal that on 10 November 1992 he had met Cllr McGrath at a public house in Clondalkin and handed him IR£2,000 cash for his General Election campaign. Mr Dunlop stated that an entry 'Clondalkin' in his diary for that date referred to his pre-arranged meeting with Cllr McGrath. As was the case with the 1991 Local Election, Cllr McGrath had sought the contribution and had referred to the support he was providing to the Quarryvale project.

22.124 Mr Dunlop claimed to have been unaware that Mr O'Callaghan had given IR£10,000 to Cllr McGrath in October 1991 or that a further sum of IR£20,000 had been given by Mr O'Callaghan to Cllr McGrath in November 1993. Mr Dunlop maintained that it was not until some years later that a journalist had brought the matter of payments from Mr O'Callaghan to Cllr McGrath, to his attention for the first time.

22.125 Cllr McGrath acknowledged that he had been the recipient of political contributions in cash from Mr Dunlop on a few occasions, ranging from IR£500 to IR£2,000. Cllr McGrath recalled receiving sums of IR£500 on two occasions, IR£1,000 on one occasion and IR£2,000 on another occasion. Documentary evidence revealed that in 1999 Cllr McGrath was the recipient of a cheque for IR£500 from Mr Dunlop on foot of a written request made by Cllr McGrath on 7

May 1999 for support from Mr Dunlop towards a golf fundraiser to raise money for Cllr McGrath's campaign as an independent candidate in the 1999 Local Election.

22.126 The thrust of Cllr McGrath's evidence was that, insofar as he had received political contributions from Mr Dunlop in relation to the 1991 Local Election and the 1992 General Election, (which he acknowledge he probably received), such contributions fell into the group of four cash contributions (already referred to above), he recalled receiving from Mr Dunlop. Cllr McGrath denied that he had ever received money from Mr Dunlop in connection with the rezoning of Quarryvale or in connection with any other rezoning.

22.127 While acknowledging a probable political contribution in cash from Mr Dunlop in November 1992, Cllr McGrath took issue with Mr Dunlop's testimony that the cash had been paid to Cllr McGrath in a public house in Clondalkin. He maintained that while he may have met with Mr Dunlop in a public house in Clondalkin on occasions, he had never met him at such a location for the purpose of receiving a donation, Cllr McGrath stated: 'In fact I would have been abhorred if he attempted to give me a donation in a public forum like that' as it could be 'misconstrued'.⁹

22.128 It was Cllr McGrath's contention that Mr Dunlop had given his political donations to him either at his home or at his Clondalkin office. Cllr McGrath said that on one occasion Mr Dunlop gave him IR£2,000 in cash in his (Cllr McGrath's) office wrapped in a newspaper. Mr Dunlop's position, vis-a-vis his handing to Cllr McGrath IR£2,000 in cash wrapped in a newspaper, was that that particular cash payment was given to Cllr McGrath in connection with a rezoning motion (unrelated to Quarryvale) and that it was a payment separate to the cash payments of IR£2,000 each made to Cllr McGrath in May/June 1991 and on 10 November 1992 respectively.

22.129 On 6 October 1998 the Tribunal invited Cllr McGrath to attend an interview with Tribunal Counsel on 12 October 1998, in connection with Quarryvale, and requested Cllr McGrath, prior to such attendance, to provide a narrative account of his knowledge of and involvement with the Quarryvale rezoning.

⁹However, in his statement to the Tribunal on 27 October, 1998, Cllr McGrath suggested that he received the payments of IR£10,000 (October 1991) and IR£20,000 (November 1993) from Mr O'Callaghan in hotels in Dublin.

22.130 By letter of 7 October 1998 Cllr McGrath responded as follows:

As an elected member of Dublin County Council for the Clondalkin area one of my most serious concerns was the failure of the designated Town Centre lands at Neilstown/Balgaddy to get off the ground despite the fact that it had been zoned since 1972.

It was generally perceived that the location was wrong as no multiple/anchor tenants would commit themselves to the site.

An alternative site in a more strategic location was identified at Quarryvale. Several multiple/potential anchor tenants immediately expressed strong interest in the alternative site and a proposal for its development was prepared outlining the employment creation potential in a disadvantaged area. The promoters, Mr. Tom Gilmartin and Mr. Owen O'Callaghan sought the support of the Planners and the elected members in having the Town Centre designation relocated to Quarryvale. To achieve this the lands would require a change in zoning and having satisfied myself that the developers were determined to advance the project without delay I submitted an appropriate Motion to the Development Plan Review which was eventually passed, as amended, by a substantial majority. My support for this project was unconditional.

22.131 In the course of that private interview on 12 October 1998 Cllr McGrath, while acknowledging political donations from Mr O'Callaghan¹⁰ which he stated were 'always at the time of election' (a timeframe that was not in fact accurate), when asked if he had received any payments indirectly through Mr Dunlop, replied in the negative, other than stating that Mr Dunlop: 'may have supported one of my golf outings, maybe even twice, once anyway.'

22.132 Cllr McGrath sought to account for his failure in 1998 to apprise the Tribunal of the fact that he had received money from Mr Dunlop by stating that he had not informed the Tribunal of cash political contributions received from Mr Dunlop because he had simply been asked about 'payments' from Mr Dunlop, whereas, he pointed out: '...there is a very clear distinction between payment and a political contribution.'

22.133 On 20 December 1999, the Tribunal requested Cllr McGrath to provide a statement outlining his involvement in the Quarryvale rezoning, and also requested details of financial support provided to him by anyone connected to the Quarryvale rezoning. In the course of his response, furnished on 18 February 2000, Cllr McGrath stated:

I received two personal donations from Mr O'Callaghan the details of which I have outlined to you already and which I regard as strictly private and confidential. I provided printing services to Frank Dunlop & Associates in relation to the notification of public meetings. Mr. Dunlop entered teams in my golf classics.

22.134 On the 14 December 2000, in response to the Tribunal informing Cllr McGrath that it had come to its attention that he had, directly or indirectly, received money from Mr Dunlop in connection with a number of land rezoning, Cllr McGrath, while denying receipt of any monies directly or indirectly from Mr Dunlop in connection with land rezonings, advised the Tribunal that:

I did receive a number of unconditional political donations from Frank Dunlop in response to fundraising requests to defray election expenses and the costs of running my full time constituency office. These ranged in amounts from £500 to £2,000 in the form of cash and cheques. Cheques were lodged to my bank account, details of which have been supplied to the Tribunal. Cash was expended on day to day election and constituency expenses.

Full details have already been supplied to the Tribunal in relation to the discharge of a debt in the sum of £7,500 plus costs by Frank Dunlop on my behalf...

22.135 In his evidence Cllr McGrath denied that there was any substantial difference between what he had told the Tribunal on the 12 October 1998, when he stated that Mr Dunlop may have supported one or two golf classic outings, and the contents of his 14 December 2000 statement. Cllr McGrath maintained that it was in effect the same information and pointed out that Mr Dunlop:

...would enter teams in my golf classics. I would write to him inviting him to participate and he would invariably turn up and take a team or two teams, as he did in one case.

22.136 At one point in the course of his evidence, it was Cllr McGrath's position that other than taking teams in his golf classics, Mr Dunlop had not otherwise given him political donations. He, however, also advised the Tribunal that on the occasion Mr Dunlop had turned up at his Clondalkin office with IR£2,000 in cash wrapped in a newspaper, he had done so in response to Cllr McGrath's request to him to support a fundraising event. Later in his evidence, Cllr McGrath appeared to distance himself from his hitherto apparent stated position, namely that all political contributions from Mr Dunlop had emanated from requests to support golf classics to stating:

‘one of these donations may have been a donation that fell between a fundraising event having been finished and an election pending’

and,

‘that some of those donations may not have actually found themselves in the overall. May not have been a team in a golf classic. It may have been a straight contribution just at election time.’

22.137 Cllr McGrath acknowledged that, by and large, none of Mr Dunlop’s cash political contributions were lodged to his AIB Bank election account and that no record of such contributions had been maintained by him. Large cash donations received by him in between elections were simply retained in cash.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO PAYMENTS TO CLLR MCGRATH BY MR DUNLOP

i. The Tribunal was satisfied that, as alleged by Mr Dunlop, cash donations of IR£2,000 were paid to Cllr McGrath at the time of the Local Elections in 1991 as well as during the course of the General Election campaign in 1992. As was the case with other councillors who were the beneficiaries of money from Mr Dunlop between 16 May and 27 June 1991, Cllr McGrath’s IR£2,000 was paid to him in the immediate aftermath of the Quarryvale vote of 16 May 1991. Likewise, the 1992 contribution was provided to Cllr McGrath immediately prior to the second Quarryvale vote of 17 December 1992.

ii. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop’s primary motivation in making the 1991 payment to Cllr McGrath (and indeed to others) was to consolidate his support for Quarryvale.

iii. The Tribunal was also equally satisfied that Mr Dunlop’s IR£2,000 cash payment to Cllr McGrath in November 1992, albeit given again under the guise of an election contribution, was in consideration of Cllr McGrath’s important role as an advocate of the Quarryvale rezoning. The Tribunal accepted Mr Dunlop’s contention that Cllr McGrath solicited both payments.

iv. The Tribunal was satisfied, given the key role played by Cllr McGrath in the Quarryvale rezoning process from as early as February 1991 and given his role as a Quarryvale strategist that Mr Dunlop’s payments to Cllr McGrath were in all the circumstances corrupt.

AN OVERVIEW OF THE FOUR ROUND FIGURE PAYMENTS MADE BY MR O'CALLAGHAN (DIRECTLY OR INDIRECTLY) AND THE PAYMENTS MADE BY MR DUNLOP DIRECTLY TO CLLR MCGRATH IN THE PERIOD 1991 TO 1993

22.138 Cllr McGrath received, directly or indirectly, four payments totalling IR£41,700 from Mr O' Callaghan within a two year period, approximately between late 1991 and late 1993, which was a crucial period in the project to rezone Quarryvale for retail development. The four payments were solicited by Cllr McGrath, and were paid to him at a time when he was, in his capacity as a councillor, involved with the rezoning of the Quarryvale lands (and related issues). Mr O'Callaghan transparently described Cllr McGrath (in the context of the IR£10,000 payment in October 1991) as a '...linchpin of the Quarryvale vote'

22.139 The Tribunal was satisfied that the payments of IR£10,000, IR£10,700 and IR£20,000 could not justifiably or reasonably be described as bona fide or legitimate political donations, nor could the payments of IR£10,700 and IR£20,000 be accurately described as 'loans' to Cllr McGrath, as contended.

22.140 The statement made by Mr O'Callaghan to Mr Gilmartin – that Cllr McGrath was 'on his payroll', and which the Tribunal has found was indeed stated by Mr O'Callaghan to Mr Gilmartin, aptly and accurately summarised the basis of the relationship which existed between Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr McGrath from 1991 onwards.

22.141 The recipient of the four payments was not disclosed to the auditors of Barkhill Ltd or to Mr Gilmartin. The payments to Cllr McGrath were effected unbeknownst to Barkhill Ltd, yet this company ended up discharging three of them – the October 1991 IR£10,000 payment, 1 May 1992 IR£1,000 payment and the May 1992 IR£10,700 payment.

22.142 Mr O'Callaghan's claimed 'political contribution' of IR£10,000 in October 1991 to Cllr McGrath was assigned to Mr Gilmartin's Directors Loan account without his knowledge or consent.

22.143 In the books of Riga Ltd the IR£20,000 November 1993 payment to Cllr McGrath was posted in the Riga Ltd/Barkhill Ltd, Intercompany Loan Account, until removed in 1995.

22.144 The Tribunal was satisfied that over the course of the Quarryvale rezoning process between 1991 and 1993, while Cllr McGrath was publicly perceived as an elected councillor discharging his duty as an elected representative, he was in reality, and secretly, acting in the role of strategist for and advisor to Mr O’Callaghan in relation to Quarryvale, as well as a supporter at County Council meetings, and as such was in receipt of very substantial financial benefits. On that basis, the said payments were corrupt.

22.145 Quite clearly, Cllr McGrath’s ability to disinterestedly perform his duties as an elected councillor was hopelessly compromised in relation to the rezoning of the Quarryvale lands, because of his corrupt financial relationship with Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop.

PART 7 - CLLR OLIVIA MITCHELL (FG)

23.01 Cllr Mitchell was a Fine Gael councillor in Dublin County Council from 1985 to December 1993, and a member of Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council from 1994, where she served as Cathaoirleach from July 1995 to July 1996. Cllr Mitchell was a Dáil candidate for Fine Gael in the November 1992 General Election.

23.02 Documentation discovered to the Tribunal by Mr Dunlop in July 1999 concerning political contributions made by him personally in the period 1 September 1991 to 1 September 1993 listed Cllr Mitchell as one of the four councillors to whom Mr Dunlop claimed he made political contributions in the year ending 31 December 1992. Cllr Mitchell was stated to have received IR£500.

23.03 On 11 April 2000 (Day 145) Cllr Mitchell's name was one of a number of Cllrs listed by Mr Dunlop as having been lobbied by him in relation to Quarryvale. Cllr Mitchell was also listed by Mr Dunlop on Day 146 as a councillor who had requested legitimate political contributions from him.

23.04 On Mr Dunlop's '1992' list (provided on Day 148/9 May 2000), Cllr Mitchell was listed as the recipient of IR£500 in cash.

23.05 Although Cllr Mitchell did not dispute that she was the beneficiary of a cash donation from Mr Dunlop in November 1992, she vehemently denied that she had ever solicited a political donation from him.

23.06 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that an entry in his diary for 10 November 1992, 'Ashton's Clonskeagh', denoted the meeting with Cllr Mitchell in the course of which he gave her the IR£500 donation.

23.07 Although Cllr Mitchell agreed that she met with Mr Dunlop at Ashtons on 10 November 1992, she disagreed with elements of Mr Dunlop's account of how that meeting came about and she queried whether it was, in fact, IR£500 she received. She believed it more probable that Mr Dunlop had donated a sum in the region of IR£200 to IR£300 at the time of the 1992 General Election. Cllr Mitchell described a IR£500 political contribution as 'huge', and one she believed she would recall, if made.

23.08 Cllr Mitchell testified to a discussion she had with Mr Dunlop within three years of the establishment of the Tribunal, when Mr Dunlop had telephoned her asking her to confirm that he was correct in his recollection that the contribution he had given her in November 1992 was IR£200. Cllr Mitchell's belief, prior to being contacted by Mr Dunlop, was that the contribution was IR£300 but Mr Dunlop had confirmed that it was IR£200.

23.09 Cllr Mitchell provided the same figure of IR£200 to the Tribunal on 7 February 2003 in response to an inquiry from the Tribunal as to whether she had had, post the establishment of the Tribunal, contact with Mr Dunlop. However, previously, in a statement furnished to the Tribunal on 6 January 2000, in response to the Tribunal's inquiries, inter alia, as to her involvement with Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan regarding Quarryvale, Cllr Mitchell had advised the Tribunal that, to the best of her recollection, she received a IR£500 donation from Mr Dunlop in November 1992, and a donation of either IR£300 or IR£500 for the 1997 General Election.

23.10 Both in her written statements to the Tribunal, and in her evidence, Cllr Mitchell acknowledged that she could not recall with any degree of certainty the amount received from Mr Dunlop in November 1992. As a matter of probability, given the extent to which Mr Dunlop was cash rich in November 1992, the Tribunal considered it likely that Ms Mitchell was the recipient of a IR£500 cash donation from Mr Dunlop.

Mr Dunlop testified that he gave Cllr Mitchell the IR£500 contribution following a request from Cllr Therese Ridge that he make a political contribution to her colleague, Cllr Mitchell.

23.11 Cllr Ridge denied being the instigator of the suggestion that Cllr Mitchell would receive an election contribution from Mr Dunlop. She testified that it was Mr Dunlop who raised the issue in conversation, and that she had advised him to contact Cllr Mitchell.

23.12 Cllr Ridge was adamant that while she may have alerted Cllr Mitchell to the likelihood of contact from Mr Dunlop in the context of an election donation, she had not suggested the idea to Mr Dunlop. Cllr Mitchell accepted that Cllr Ridge forewarned her of an approach from Mr Dunlop.

23.13 Cllr Mitchell told the Tribunal that in the course of her telephone conversation with Cllr Ridge, she learned that Cllr Ridge herself had received an election contribution from Mr Dunlop and that he had told Cllr Ridge he that wished to make an Election contribution to her. Cllr Ridge had told Mr Dunlop to contact Cllr Mitchell which he did. They duly met on 10 November 1992 at Ashton's Public House in Clonskeagh. Cllr Mitchell told the Tribunal that she assumed that Mr Dunlop was making election contributions to a number of General Election candidates, but was unsure whether she had given any thought to this at the time.

23.14 Asked on Day 811 about his purpose in giving IR£500 cash to Cllr Mitchell in November 1992, Mr Dunlop maintained that while it was given to her in the context of her candidacy in the General Election, it had also been given in the context of a request which had been made by Cllr Therese Ridge, who was a supporter of Quarryvale and someone who had sought Cllr Mitchell's support for Quarryvale. Mr Dunlop stated as follows:

'The payment was made to Ms. Olivia Mitchell in the context of the election and in the context of the representation that had been made to me by Therese Ridge who was an inhabitant supporter of Quarryvale and who had garnered the support of Olivia Mitchell. I, my orientation on the payment to Ms. Mitchell of the £500 was in the specific context that Olivia Mitchell was, had already declared or was on the cusp of declaring her support for the Quarryvale project and it was in that context that I made the payment to her.'

23.15 Mr Dunlop acknowledged that in his discussions with Cllr Mitchell regarding Quarryvale she had never intimated to him that her support for the Quarryvale rezoning project came at a 'cost' to Mr Dunlop. Mr Dunlop also stated that, while he could not say so specifically, it was 'highly probable in the context of the imminence of the vote that Quarryvale was discussed in that conversation' (a reference to his meeting with Cllr Mitchell on 10 November).

23.16 County Council records indicated that Cllr Mitchell was one of a small number of Fine Gael Councillors who voted for the rezoning of Quarryvale on 16 May 1991. Cllr Mitchell's voting pattern on the second Quarryvale vote on 17 December 1992 was likewise supportive of the Quarryvale Town Centre proposal.

23.17 While there was no written reference of contact by Mr Dunlop and/or Mr O'Callaghan with Cllr Mitchell regarding Quarryvale prior to 1992, as a matter of probability the Tribunal believed that she was lobbied by Mr Dunlop and/or Mr O'Callaghan in the period leading up to 16 May 1991 vote. Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that he knew Cllr Mitchell at the time of that vote.

23.18 Documentation furnished to the Tribunal by Mr O'Callaghan suggested that a scheduled meeting between Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr Mitchell was arranged for 25 March 1992, at the Gresham Hotel. Mr Dunlop's diary for 4 June 1992 also documented a meeting with Cllr Mitchell at the Gresham Hotel. Cllr Mitchell recalled the former meeting with Mr O'Callaghan/Mr Dunlop at the Gresham Hotel, and while she did not recall the latter meeting, she conceded that it may have occurred.

23.19 Mr Dunlop's 'contact report' of 17 June 1992 prepared for Mr O'Callaghan certainly indicated that by that date Cllr Mitchell had been contacted by Mr Dunlop and by Mr O'Callaghan.

23.20 Mr Dunlop's diary for 6 November 1992, (the day following the calling of the General Election), suggested that a meeting between Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan with Cllrs Therese Ridge, Mary Elliott and Olivia Mitchell had been scheduled for that date (the lines drawn across the diary entry suggested that this meeting may in fact not have taken place). The Tribunal was however satisfied that Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan met with Cllrs Mitchell, Ridge, Elliott and Devitt for dinner at the Le Coq Hardi Restaurant on 8 December 1992, some nine days prior to the Quarryvale vote of 17 December 1992. While Cllr Mitchell claimed that she had no recollection of the dinner in question, she conceded that, given the imminence of the forthcoming Quarryvale vote, the Quarryvale rezoning was likely to have been a topic of conversation on that occasion.

23.21 The Tribunal believed, as a matter of probability, that one of the likely topics of conversation at the dinner was the motion in the names of Cllrs O'Halloran, McGrath, Ridge and Tyndall, which was subsequently lodged with the County Council on 9 December 1992, and which advocated, inter alia, the adoption of the Manager's Report which had been circulated on 2 December 1992 to the extent that that Report recommended the development of Quarryvale with a 'C' and 'E' zoning.

23.22 On Day 148 (9 May 2000), Mr Dunlop identified Cllr Mitchell as one of the individuals who was involved in counselling Mr O'Callaghan/Mr Dunlop to accept a retail cap of 250,000 square feet on Quarryvale. Cllr Mitchell denied this suggestion. While the Tribunal believed that Cllr Mitchell may not have been the principal contributor to this topic, it was satisfied that almost certainly, she was party to a discussion on the matter on 8 December 1992. Cllr Ridge on the other hand acknowledged that she may have discussed the matter with Mr Dunlop prior to the vote (on 17 December 1992), although she denied that she ever gave him advice. While the motion to cap the Quarryvale retail development at 250,000 square feet was not lodged or placed before the County Council until 17 December 1992, the Tribunal believed it probable that the issue of a reduction in the retail development area of Quarryvale to 250,000 square feet was a matter of discussion on 8 December 1992.

23.23 On 1 December 1992, Mr O’Callaghan advised AIB that County Council officials¹ were by then thinking in terms of ‘...a smaller centre for Quarryvale of approximately 250,000 square feet.’ In the Tribunal’s view it was improbable that Mr O’Callaghan would not have shared this information with Cllrs Mitchell, Ridge, Elliott and Devitt on 8 December 1992, or that he did not discuss with them whether or not the proposed reduction in the retail area limit would be sufficient to satisfy those councillors who were opposed to the rezoning of Quarryvale.

23.24 Cllr Mitchell acknowledged social contact between herself and Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop. She was one of four Fine Gael councillors (the others being Cllrs Ridge, Elliott and Devitt, and occasionally Cllr L.T. Cosgrave) with whom Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop socialised on an occasional basis (the ‘4x2 Club’).

23.25 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Mitchell was probably in attendance at such social engagements on 8 December 1992, 24 March 1993, 28 July 1993, 2 December 1993, 21 January 1994, 26 April 1995, 24 October 1997, 8 May 1998, 15 January 1999 and 8 October 1999, based on information found in Mr Dunlop’s diaries.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO A PAYMENT OF IR£500 TO CLLR MITCHELL FROM MR DUNLOP

23.26 The Tribunal was satisfied that, as a matter of probability, Cllr Mitchell received a sum of IR£500 from Mr Dunlop at the time of the 1992 General Election. At that time Cllr Mitchell had had meetings with Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan in relation to the Quarryvale project, and was a supporter of that project. While the available evidence would suggest that Cllr Mitchell herself did not solicit the contribution, she nonetheless accepted it in the knowledge of Mr Dunlop’s close association with the Quarryvale rezoning project. In all those circumstances it was inappropriate for her to have accepted the cash donation.

¹ Mr O’Callaghan also told the Tribunal that, at 5pm on 8 December 1992, he met with the County Council’s senior planner, Mr Willie Murray.

PART 7 - CLLR TOM MORRISSEY (FG)

24.01 Cllr Morrissey was first elected a County Dublin councillor in the Local Elections of 1991. In that election, he stood on a 'pro Blanchardstown, anti Quarryvale ticket.' Cllr Morrissey told the Tribunal that the Quarryvale issue was one of the main issues in the Local Elections in the west Dublin area.

24.02 The telephone records maintained by Mr Dunlop's office indicated that a number of telephone calls were made, either from Mr Dunlop's office to Cllr Morrissey, or from Cllr Morrissey to Mr Dunlop's office. Those referred to in evidence included telephone calls on 16 October 1991, 26 November 1991, 29 November 1991, 29 April 1992 and 1 October 1992. Mr Dunlop's diaries included references to meetings with Cllr Morrissey on 1 November 1991 (an entry that was subsequently crossed out), 30 April 1992 (probably the meeting in Mr Dunlop's office when he met Mr O'Callaghan) and 1 October 1992.

24.03 Cllr Morrissey was in the business of producing diaries and calendars for the corporate sector. In 1992, he fulfilled an order to Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd for the provision of 100 diaries, at a cost of IR£377.52.

24.04 Cllr Morrissey was at all times a known opponent of the Quarryvale project. He testified that on the one occasion when he met Mr O'Callaghan, he had listened to what Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan said in support of that project and the Stadium project but had explained to them the reasons for his opposition to Quarryvale.

24.05 On 25 June 1992, the following reference to Cllr Morrissey appeared in a memorandum written by Mr Gerard Leahy, an Auctioneer with Gunnes Auctioneers, following a meeting on that date involving himself, Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan: 'Tom Morrissey was very wound up and Owen and Frank were working hard on him.'

24.06 This brief reference of Cllr Morrissey in Mr Leahy's memorandum was apparently related to efforts by Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop to tone down, or alter Cllr Morrissey's opposition to Quarryvale.

24.07 On 9 December 1992, Cllr Morrissey, together with Cllr Sheila Terry, lodged a motion with Dublin County Council which sought to, in effect, reverse the Quarryvale Town Centre zoning.

24.08 On 17 December 1992, Cllr Morrissey voted in favour of the motion to cap the Quarryvale retail element at 100,000 square feet. That motion was lost. He also voted in favour of motions to rezone Quarryvale to E (industrial). Those motions were also lost. He voted against the, ultimately successful, motion to place a retail ‘cap’ on Quarryvale at 250,000 square feet.

24.09 Cllr Morrissey confirmed the content of a newspaper article published at the time which stated that, following the County Council meeting on 17 December 1992, and the success achieved for Quarryvale, ‘the developer of the Quarryvale project’ made a passing remark to him to the effect that, (in time), the 250,000 square feet ‘cap’ would be over turned, and that he (the developer), would then proceed to develop the project at its original intended size of 500,000 square feet. Cllr Morrissey, given the passage of time between the occasion when that comment was made to him, and the date of giving evidence to the Tribunal, was uncertain who the person described as ‘the developer’ was but suggested it might have been either Mr Dunlop or Mr O’Callaghan or Mr Gilmartin.

24.10 That developer may have been Mr O’Callaghan, as on 23 December 1992, Mr O’Callaghan stated the following in a letter written by him to his Bank of Ireland Manager in Cork:

Quarryvale has come through, and we have got all we wanted, despite a lot of opposition.... As soon as the existing Dublin County Council is divided into three separate Counties, and this will happen officially in January 1994, we would be in John Fitzgerald’s new County i.e. Dublin South, and we can then get as much retail space as we can fill ¹

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO CLLR MORRISSEY’S EVIDENCE

24.12 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Morrissey, as maintained by him, at all times remained staunchly opposed to the rezoning of Quarryvale as a Town Centre.

24.13 The Tribunal was also satisfied that there was no improper motivation on the part on either Cllr Morrissey or Mr Dunlop in Cllr Morrissey’s firm producing diaries for Mr Dunlop’s firm at a cost of IR£377.52. The Tribunal was satisfied that this was simply a commercial arrangement between the two men.

¹ On 1 January 1994, Dublin County Council split into three separate Councils. Quarryvale from that date was in the area of South Dublin County Council. Mr John Fitzgerald was appointed the Manager of South Dublin County Council from that date.

PART 7 - CLLR ANN ORMONDE (FF)

25.01 Cllr Ormonde was a Fianna Fáil councillor representing the Rathfarnham ward of Dublin County Council, having been first elected in 1985, and re-elected in 1991. From 1 January 1994, she was a member of South Dublin County Council.

25.02 On Day 146 (18 April, 2000) Cllr Ormonde's name featured, at number 9, on the list compiled by Mr Dunlop of people who Mr Dunlop alleged, asked him for election contributions.

25.03 In his October, 2000 statement Mr Dunlop, with reference to Cllr Ormonde, stated as follows:

Ms. Ormonde never requested money from me for support in any vote in Dublin County Council. I gave Ms. Ormonde a sum of £1,000 in January 1993 (Appendix 1) at the time of the Senate Election in 1993 and supported subsequent fundraisers for her.

25.04 Documentary evidence produced by Mr Dunlop established that Cllr Ormonde was one of four Seanad Election candidates, (the others being Cllrs L.T. Cosgrave, Don Lydon and Michael J. Cosgrave), to whom Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd paid IR£1,000 each by cheque in January, 1993. It was lodged by Cllr Ormonde on 18 January, 1993 to her savings account in Bank of Ireland.

THE INVOLVEMENT OF CLLR ORMONDE IN THE REZONING OF QUARRYVALE

25.05 Cllr Ormonde voted in favour of the successful Quarryvale rezoning motion of 16 May 1991, and also voted to restrict retail development on the site to that permissible for the Neilstown lands – approximately 500,000 square feet. On 17 December, 1992 Cllr Ormonde's voting pattern remained supportive of Quarryvale, with her voting against a motion which sought to reverse what had been achieved for Quarryvale on 16 May 1991, and also voting against an attempt to rezone Quarryvale 'C1' with a retail limit of 100,000 square feet. Cllr Ormonde voted in support of the O'Halloran/McGrath/Ridge/Tyndall motion, dated 9 December, 1992, which proposed to rezone Quarryvale 'C' and 'E', and she supported the amending motion in the names of Cllrs O'Halloran, McGrath, Ridge and Tyndall to restrict retail development in Quarryvale to 250,000 square feet. Moreover, Cllr Ormonde voted in favour of the addendum which attached to the O'Halloran, McGrath, Ridge and Tyndall 9 December, 1992 motion, which proposed the reinstatement of the 'D' (town centre) zoning on the Neilstown lands.

25.06 Cllr Ormonde described the decision on 17 December, 1992 to reduce the retail square footage permissible on Quarryvale to 250,000 square feet as a ‘very good compromise’, which pleased her, as her philosophy was to develop the three town centres. Cllr Ormonde described herself as a committed supporter of Quarryvale. She also stated that while she supported the reinstatement of Town Centre zoning for Neilstown, she had not in fact given much thought as to what should happen to the Neilstown lands.

25.07 Cllr Ormonde testified that from the outset she had been aware that the Quarryvale rezoning proposal was a contentious issue. She acknowledged that during the course of the Quarryvale rezoning campaign she was lobbied by Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan, and she recalled meeting Mr O’Callaghan when he addressed the Fianna Fáil group of councillors in the County Council.

25.08 Mr Dunlop’s diary for 7 September 1992 noted an intention on Mr Dunlop’s part to meet Cllr Ormonde. This meeting, according to the diary, took place on 8 September 1992.¹

25.09 Cllr Ormonde told the Tribunal she had no recollection of a meeting on 8 September 1992 with Mr Dunlop, nor of having contacted Mr Dunlop’s office on 11 November 1992, as suggested by Mr Dunlop’s office telephone records.

25.10 Cllr Ormonde believed that insofar as she has had telephone contact with Mr Dunlop, it had occurred following the establishment of the Tribunal, in response to Mr Dunlop’s efforts to contact her.

25.11 Cllr Ormonde had no recollection of making telephone contact with Mr Dunlop’s office on 7 or 8 January 1993, despite the records of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd indicating that such telephone contact had taken place. She stated that she had no reason to contact Mr Dunlop’s office in January 1993.

25.12 Cllr Ormonde was a candidate in the Seanad Election in January 1993.² The IR£1,000 cheque which Cllr Ormonde acknowledged receiving from Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd was dated 12 January, 1993. She told the Tribunal that she had not solicited this election contribution and she maintained that she did not know why she was selected by Mr Dunlop to be the beneficiary of this payment. Mr Dunlop testified that Mr Lawlor and Cllr Sean Gilbride approached him with regard to making an election contribution to Cllr Ormonde. Cllr Ormonde denied knowledge of any such request.

² She was also a candidate in the November 1992 General Election.

25.13 On Day 818, the following exchange took place between Tribunal Counsel and Cllr Ormonde:

Q.719 'Yes. And if you look at 10670, Ms. Ormonde, you will see that at 10.30 on the 17th of January, the day before those funds are credited to your bank account you again telephone Mr Dunlop's office?'

A. I don't remember that at all.

Q.720 And what I am suggesting to you, Ms. Ormonde, is that it's likely that telephone call would have been a telephone call of thanks probably to Mr. Dunlop in respect of the cheque that he had given to you or sent to you?'

A. Uh-huh.

Q.721 On the 12th. Doesn't that seem logical?'

A. It does seem but I don't recall those phone calls.'

25.14 The Tribunal, was satisfied that there was contact by Cllr Ormonde with Mr Dunlop (at his office) in September and November 1992, and also on 7 and 8 January 1993 as suggested by Mr Dunlop, and his office records.

25.15 Documentation produced to the Tribunal from the internal Fianna Fáil Inquiry conducted in May 2000 (following Mr Dunlop's April 2000 revelations to the Tribunal) recorded, inter alia, that in the course of Cllr Ormonde's meeting with the Inquiry, she said she believed that the money she received from Mr Dunlop 'was from Owen O'Callaghan.'

25.16 Cllr Ormonde acknowledged having conveyed this information to the Fianna Fáil Inquiry and she stated 'And now that I see it, it's probably the way it was at the time but right now I can't recall that.' Cllr Ormonde explained the basis of her belief in 2000 that the January 1993 IR£1,000 cheque, although coming to her via Mr Dunlop, was connected with Mr O'Callaghan by saying that in January 1993 she had taken it to be from Mr Dunlop, and added 'and then when you have time to think of it at a later stage and time to reflect well it could have been through Mr O'Callaghan.'

25.17 Cllr Ormonde had no recollection of any meetings with Mr Dunlop on 3 September 1996, 2 October 1996, 9 October 1996 and 14 October 1996, as noted in Mr Dunlop's diary. Cllr Ormonde did not recall either seeing or meeting Mr Dunlop in and around South Dublin County Council in 1996 as she had done in and around Dublin County Council prior to 31 December 1993.

25.18 In the course of her 14 January 2000 statement to the Tribunal, Cllr Ormonde had acknowledged receipt of the IR£1,000 cheque from Mr Dunlop and in that statement also she apprised the Tribunal of receipt of a IR£400/£500 political donation from Mr O'Callaghan in 1999, 'towards her local Golf Classic', and also of receipt of a cheque of IR£250 from Mr Dunlop in 1997 for the May 1997 General Election. Cllr Ormonde stated that these payments were made 'through Frank Dunlop from Owen O'Callaghan.'

25.19 In 1998, during the course of the making of the Development Plan for South Dublin County Council, Cllr Ormonde was lobbied by Mr O'Callaghan and urged to support the removal of the 250,000 square feet retail 'cap' which had been imposed on Quarryvale in December 1992, and confirmed in October 1993. Cllr Ormonde believed that she was lobbied by Mr O'Callaghan on this issue when she met him in and around the offices of South Dublin County Council.

25.20 Mr O'Callaghan's lobbying of Cllr Ormonde (and other councillors) followed the publication by the Manager of South Dublin County Council in 1998 of the Draft Plan for Quarryvale without reference to a retail 'cap', and against the backdrop of attempts, subsequent to the publication of the Draft Plan, made by Cllrs who opposed Quarryvale to have the 'cap' reinstated. On 7 September 1998 Mr O'Callaghan wrote directly to Cllr Ormonde seeking her support for the Manager's decision to remove the retail restriction on Quarryvale.

25.21 Cllr Ormonde supported the removal of the retail cap, in that she voted against the O'Connell/Muldoon motion to retain the cap at 250,000 square feet, on 24 September 1998.

25.22 The Tribunal was satisfied that in the period January 1993 to 1998 Cllr Ormonde received, in total, at least IR£1,650 from Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan. The acceptance by Cllr Ormonde of money from Mr Dunlop in the knowledge that he was Mr O'Callaghan's lobbyist, and in circumstances where she herself associated such money with Mr O'Callaghan were entirely inappropriate and consequently, by soliciting election contributions in such circumstances Cllr Ormonde negated her responsibility to undertake her duties as an elected public representative in a disinterested fashion.

CONTACT BETWEEN MR DUNLOP AND CLLR ORMONDE AFTER THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE TRIBUNAL

25.23 In evidence given to the Tribunal by Mr Dunlop on 5 February 2003 he alluded to individuals (whom he indentified) with whom he said he had been in contact subsequent to the establishment of the Tribunal. Mr Dunlop furnished a statement to the Tribunal, on 11 February 2003 in which he made the following reference to Cllr Ormonde:

Subsequent to her receipt of queries from the Tribunal Ann Ormonde rang me to confirm that a contribution of £1,000 by way of a cheque for her candidacy in the 1993 Senate Election was a legitimate political donation. I so confirmed. A short discussion followed about the ridiculousness of the whole affair, i.e. the Tribunal and I have not met or spoken to Ann Ormonde since then. I believe the conversation took place in 1999.

25.24 Cllr Ormonde furnished the Tribunal with a statement on this issue on 6 February 2003 in which she stated:

At some stage after the Tribunal was established, Frank Dunlop telephoned me to remind me that he had given me a donation of £1,000 in the 1992 General/Seanad Election. I did not make contact with him. He initiated this contact. After he advised me of this donation, I examined all of my bank account records dating back to 1989 when I opened a political account. The Tribunal has this bank information already. I could not trace any reference in any of the statements to the donation Frank Dunlop said he made to me. When I instructed my Solicitor Paul McCormack of Brendan B. McCormack & Son to write to this Tribunal on the 14th January, 2000 I decided to accept the word of Frank Dunlop and to indicate that I had received the sum of £1,000 by way of donation. I should say that I was satisfied that I had received the sum of £250 and £500 referred to in my letter of the 14th January 2000. Given what Frank Dunlop had told me I decided to advise the Tribunal about this sum. I assumed that if he said he gave the donation to me, then he did.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR GUSS O'CONNELL (IND)

26.01 Cllr O'Connell was elected in June 1991 as an independent councillor for the Palmerstown area. Cllr O'Connell was an employee of FAS, based at its Baggot Street headquarters.

26.02 Prior to, and after his election, Cllr O'Connell opposed the zoning of Quarryvale as a town centre.

26.03 In his evidence, Cllr O'Connell told the Tribunal that over the course of 1991 and 1992, he attended many public meetings on the issue of the Quarryvale rezoning, and during that period also, he met Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan on numerous occasions. Mr O'Callaghan, in evidence, surmised that he met with Cllr O'Connell at least twenty times during the course of the rezoning process.

26.04 During his meetings with Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop, Cllr O'Connell made known his opposition to the Quarryvale rezoning. However, in his capacity as a public representative he was prepared to meet them and listen to their point of view, but he had never been persuaded on the merits of Quarryvale as a town centre location.

26.05 Mr Dunlop's telephone records and diary entries for the years 1991 and 1992 revealed contact between Cllr O'Connell and Mr Dunlop. Cllr O'Connell believed that the contact he initiated with Mr Dunlop's office in 1992 was probably related to a particular issue which arose with regard to a section of the Quarryvale lands. Other occasional contact with Mr Dunlop probably related to attempts being made by Cllr O'Connell to secure the preservation of a period house on the Quarryvale lands, something which ultimately was not achieved.

26.06 In the lead up to the Special Meeting of 17 December 1992 in relation to on Quarryvale, Cllr O'Connell, together with Cllr Joe Higgins, were signatories to a number of motions lodged with the County Council before 7 December 1992, which motions sought 1) the re-instatement of 'D' Town Centre zoning on the Neilstown lands, 2) a reversion to 'E' Industrial zoning for the Quarryvale lands, and 3) certain changes to be made to the County Council's draft Written Statement.

26.07 Cllrs O’Connell and O’Higgins were in effect seeking a reversion to the 1983 Development Plan zoning for the Neilstown and Quarryvale Lands.¹

26.08 The Manager’s report, circulated to councillors on 2 December 1992, while primarily recommending a reversion to the 1983 plan (with some modifications) for the Neilstown and the Quarryvale lands, contained, in the event that this recommendation was not acceptable, an alternative recommendation that the Quarryvale lands be zoned ‘C’ and ‘E’, with the Neilstown lands reverting to a ‘D’ Town Centre zoning with the specific objective to encourage the development of specialised commercial, recreational, industrial and residential uses in this area. The ‘specific objective’ was, according to Mr O’Callaghan, a reference to the development of a stadium.

26.09 By 9 December 1992, the promoters of Quarryvale (Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Dunlop and certain councillors) were preparing to adopt this alternative position, as proposed by the Manager. This was evident from the motion lodged on 9 December 1992, in the names of Cllrs McGrath, Ridge, Tyndall and O’Halloran.

26.10 On 17 December 1992 (the date of the second Quarryvale vote), the O’Connell/Higgins motion seeking a reversion to ‘E’ (Industrial) zoning for Quarryvale fell because a similar motion, in the names of Cllrs Ryan and Burton, had been put and lost by a margin of 5 votes (32 voted in favour and 37 against).

26.11 Cllr O’Connell was not present in the Council chamber on 17 December 1992 and thus did not participate in any vote in relation to Quarryvale on that day.

THE REASONS FOR CLLR O’CONNELL’S ABSENCE FROM THE SPECIAL MEETING OF 17 DECEMBER 1992

26.12 As a result of certain opinions expressed by Mr Dunlop in the course of a private interview with the Tribunal on 1 June 2000, the Tribunal determined it appropriate to inquire as to the reason for Cllr O’Connell’s absence from the Council chamber on 17 December 1992.

26.13 In the course of that private interview, Mr Dunlop suggested that Cllr O’Connell’s absence from the meeting on 17 December 1992 was because he had been sent on a ‘junket’ by his employer, FAS. Mr Dunlop, in that private interview stated as follows:

¹ Other similar motions were lodged with the Council by Cllrs Ryan, Burton, Walsh and Hanrahan.

'My understanding, I cannot prove it, my understanding is that John, Owen O'Callaghan and John Lynch, Chairman and our Chief Executive of FAS at the time was very friendly, John Lynch was either Chairman of Bord Gais or had been and Owen O'Callaghan had been a member of Bord Gais and Gus O'Connell was sent on a foreign junket.'

26.14 The Tribunal was satisfied that insofar as Mr Dunlop was making this claim, he was speaking about the vote which took place on the Quarryvale issue 17 December 1992. Dublin County Council records indicated that Cllr O'Connell was present at all special meetings except those on 17 and 18 December 1992.

26.15 In a subsequent statement furnished in 2007 Mr Dunlop stated:

Mr. Gus O'Connell, an Independent/Community councillor, did not attend one of the meetings with regard to the Quarryvale proposal at which a vote was taken. I cannot state precisely which vote this was but I do recall some surprise being expressed by some of his fellow councillors at his absence particularly in circumstances where he was believed to have serious reservations about the project. I should add that Mr. O'Connell did express such reservations to both Mr. Owen O'Callaghan and to me, together or separately, on a number of occasions. He never expressed his voting intentions to me.

I cannot recall, at this remove, from whom I heard that Mr. O'Connell was missing from the vote due to being sent on a junket by his superior Mr. John Lynch. However, I did hear this being proffered as an explanation. I am unaware of the truth or otherwise of such a statement.

26.16 In his testimony Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that Cllr O'Connell's absence from the council chamber had been the subject of discussion among his council colleagues.

26.17 When questioned, in the course of his evidence, as to his understanding of the reason for Cllr O'Connell's absence on 17 December 1992, Mr Dunlop largely repeated what he had told Counsel for the Tribunal in the course of his private interview, namely that Cllr O'Connell's absence from the meeting was due to him being sent on a 'junket.' Mr Dunlop clarified that his view was based on what had been suggested by others and not based on his own knowledge.

26.18 When asked to clarify whether he believed Cllr O'Connell's absence from the Council on the date in question was merely a coincidence or whether he believed he had been sent away purposely, Mr Dunlop stated:

'Oh, from my understanding from rumours that I heard was that he was away on a junket, whether that was deliberate or accidental, coincidental or otherwise.'

26.19 When asked the following question 'But was the rumour, was there a rumour or an aspect of any of the rumours that he had been purposely taken away or that?', Mr Dunlop replied:

'Yes, I would have to say, Chairman, I would have to say that there was while that may not have been directly said, there was an imputation to that effect that he had been sent away on a junket which in retrospect and at that time I probably would have found somewhat surprising because we had done a very careful tally on the vote. And whether Mr. Gus O'Connell was going to support or not the likelihood is that we were going to succeed. But notwithstanding that, I think, yes, there was an imputation that he had, he was missing because had been, because he was on a junket and that the possibility was that he had been sent deliberately.'

26.20 Evidence to the Tribunal established that over the course of two days (17 and 18 December 1992), Cllr O'Connell was part of a three-person delegation sent by FAS to the UK on a study visit.

26.21 In the course of his evidence, Cllr O'Connell outlined the circumstances in which he came to be part of that study visit, as follows: in or about mid December 1992 (Cllr O'Connell said it may have been 10 December 1992), at a meeting with Mr John Lynch, then Director General of FAS, Cllr O'Connell was requested by Mr Lynch to participate in a FAS delegation due to travel to the UK on 17 December 1992. Cllr O'Connell told the Tribunal that he understood that arrangements for the trip to the UK were already in place when he was asked by Mr Lynch to join the delegation. Cllr O'Connell said that in the course of his meeting with Mr Lynch, he informed Mr Lynch that the proposed trip clashed with the County Council vote on Quarryvale, scheduled for 17 December 1992. Cllr O'Connell stated that he inquired whether the trip could be put back until after Christmas, but had been advised by Mr Lynch that the trip needed to take place, and could not be put off. Cllr O'Connell testified that in light of what he had told Mr Lynch about the Quarryvale vote, the latter had said to him that he would understand if he did not go to the UK, but Mr Lynch had also stressed that he would like him to be part of the delegation. It had been agreed between them that Cllr O'Connell would consider the situation. He duly did so, and he decided to participate in the delegation. Cllr O'Connell explained to the Tribunal that he had concluded that his greater loyalty was to his employer FAS. He said that FAS had generally been very facilitating of his duties as a councillor. While in the UK on 17 December 1992, Cllr O’Connell contemplated the possibility of returning later that day for the Quarryvale vote due later that evening, but travel arrangements and other circumstances prevented him from so doing.

26.22 In his evidence, Mr Lynch acknowledged that in his capacity of Director General of FAS in December 1992, he requested Cllr O’Connell to participate in the UK trip. Mr Lynch acknowledged that he had made the request of Cllr O’Connell while knowing that the trip coincided with a County Council ‘planning vote of some importance’ scheduled for 17 December 1992. However, Mr Lynch said that it was after he had requested Cllr O’Connell to participate in the UK trip that he learned of the impending Quarryvale vote. He said he was uncertain as to who had informed him, but he was satisfied that there was a discussion about the matter between himself and Cllr O’Connell. Mr Lynch stated:

‘The only thing that stood out is the first time ever that I was confronted with a case where somebody was going away and they were also a local councillor and there was a vote coming up. That’s how I remember it.’

26.23 Mr Lynch told the Tribunal he had left it to Cllr O’Connell to make up his mind as to whether or not he would go on the UK trip. Mr Lynch did not dispute Cllr O’Connell’s assertion that the itinerary for the trip had been arranged prior to Cllr O’Connell being requested to join the delegation. In his statement to the Tribunal, and in his evidence, Mr Lynch vehemently disputed the suggestion that he had ever sent anyone on a ‘junket.’

26.24 Mr Dunlop’s record of telephone calls made to his office in the month of December 1992 recorded three calls made by, or at the behest of, Mr Lynch. On 2 December 1992, Mr Dunlop’s office recorded the following ‘OOC please call John Lynch – FAS 601324.’ On 15 December 1992, Mr. Dunlop’s office recorded: ‘9.45 John Lynch – FAS 601324.’ And for 16 December 1992, his office recorded ‘10.33 John Lynch – FAS.’

26.25 Mr Dunlop’s telephone attendance records indicated that Mr Lynch contacted Mr Dunlop’s office on a number of other occasions in 1992 namely on 15 and 27 January, 6 February, 19 March, 23 March, 5 June and 17 September 1992. It was the case that Mr Dunlop’s firm, Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd, was retained as PR advisors to FAS in 1991 and 1992. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that in his capacity as PR advisor to FAS he would not normally have had a direct line of communication with Mr Lynch, other than for ‘plenary meetings’. Mr Lynch agreed and said that direct contact between himself and Mr Dunlop would only have occurred when issues could not be resolved as between Mr Dunlop and the PR department of FAS.

26.26 Mr Lynch told the Tribunal that he could not recall the subject matter of the contact between himself and Mr Dunlop's office in December 1992. Mr Lynch maintained that he himself would not have made the calls, and that they had probably been made by his secretary. Mr Lynch had no idea if a call had been made on his behalf to Mr Dunlop's office on 2 December 1992, leaving a message for Mr O'Callaghan to call Mr Lynch. Mr Lynch accepted that in 1992, Mr O'Callaghan and he knew each other through their mutual association with An Bord Gais, where Mr Lynch served as Chairman and Chief Executive, and Mr O'Callaghan served as a Director.

26.27 Mr Dunlop also claimed to have had no recollection of the purpose for which contact with his office was made by or on behalf of Mr Lynch in December 1992. Mr Dunlop opined that Mr Lynch might have been attempting to contact him in relation to some contractual issue concerning Mr Dunlop's business relationship with FAS, or that he could possibly have been attempting to contact Mr O'Callaghan through him. Furthermore, Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he 'could not specifically say' why Mr Lynch was seeking to contact Mr O'Callaghan on 2 December 1992.

26.28 Mr Lynch replied 'categorically no', and 'absolutely not', to an inquiry by Tribunal counsel as to whether his telephone contact with Mr Dunlop's office was related to whether or not Cllr O'Connell was going to be present at the County Council on 17 December 1992. Mr Dunlop did not recall any such discussion with Mr Lynch. Mr Lynch however agreed that two of the recorded telephone contacts he made with Mr Dunlop's office (15 and 16 December 1992) occurred after Cllr O'Connell was first asked to accompany the FAS delegation to the UK (possibly 10 December 1992) and before Cllr O'Connell's flight to the UK on 17 December 1992. He also agreed that he would have known that Cllr O'Connell intended to go on the trip to the UK when he telephoned Mr Dunlop on 16 December 1992.

26.29 Mr Lynch agreed that his acquaintance with Mr O'Callaghan arose solely from their mutual association with An Bord Gais and that he had no other common interest with Mr O'Callaghan (other than the opening of a FAS training centre in Quarryvale).

26.30 However, he strongly refuted any suggestion that he arranged for Cllr O'Connell to be unavailable for the 17 December 1992 Quarryvale vote, at the behest of Mr O'Callaghan or otherwise.

26.31 Mr O’Callaghan, in evidence, agreed that the thrust of what Mr Dunlop suggested in the course of private interview with the Tribunal in 2000 was that Mr Lynch had sent Cllr O’Connell on a ‘junket’ at the behest of Mr O’Callaghan, so as to ensure that he would be absent for the crucial vote on Quarryvale. Although he knew Mr Lynch ‘reasonably well’ in 1992, Mr O’Callaghan denied any involvement on his part in ensuring Cllr O’Connell was on a foreign trip at the time of the Quarryvale vote.

26.32 Asked why Mr Dunlop would have suggested such a thing Mr O’Callaghan replied ‘I don’t know but that was a standing joke, I heard that story too from quite a few people’.

26.33 And when asked: ‘Yes but did you hear the story that you were the person orchestrated Mr O’Connell to be out of the country?’ Mr O’Callaghan replied ‘Absolutely’.

26.34 Mr O’Callaghan’s explanation as to why Mr Dunlop’s office telephone records would have recorded the message from Mr Lynch on 2 December 1992, ‘OOC Please call John Lynch – FAS 601324’, was that it probably related to Mr O’Callaghan’s attempts in 1992 to organise a FAS training scheme for Quarryvale. He said that it was in this context that he dealt with Mr Lynch, who was the only person he knew in that organisation. Discussions on this topic commenced in November/December 1992, according to Mr O’Callaghan. Mr Lynch confirmed that this issue had been the subject of discussion between himself and Mr O’Callaghan in 1992. The documentation furnished to the Tribunal did not indicate that any such dealings/negotiations were ongoing with FAS at the end of 1992.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS

i. The Tribunal was satisfied that having been requested to join the FAS delegation to the UK, and having been offered an opportunity to decline the invitation (although it was stressed by Mr Lynch that he would like Cllr O’Connell to go on the trip), Cllr O’Connell made the decision to accompany the FAS delegation for the reasons stated by him.

ii. The issue for consideration by the Tribunal was whether evidence of events which pre-dated and post-dated the request made to Cllr O’Connell to travel to the UK could lead it to conclude that Cllr O’Connell’s absence from the County Council on 17 December 1992 had, in some way, been ‘orchestrated’, as suggested by Mr Dunlop. There were certainly rumours to that effect in circulation at the time, as testified to by Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan.

iii. There was no doubt but that Cllr O’Connell’s absence benefited Mr O’Callaghan, although had Cllr O’Connell been present and voted in opposition to Quarryvale on 17 December 1992, the outcome of that vote would not have been materially altered.

iv. From an early stage (mid 1992), Mr Dunlop listed the likely voting intentions of certain councillors vis-à-vis Quarryvale in his various voting ‘scenarios’. Cllr O’Connell was invariably listed as voting against Quarryvale save for one document where he was listed by Mr Dunlop as ‘abstaining’. Mr Dunlop testified that there were means by which councillors who opposed a proposal could be ‘neutralised.’ He explained that this meant he would try to persuade them to abstain or to be absent on the day of the vote.

v. On 6 March 1992, in a letter written to AIB Capital Markets which took issue with a third party prediction as to the likelihood of success for the Quarryvale rezoning, Mr Dunlop, inter alia, stated:

‘Don’t be surprised if the number of those expressing opposition to Q’vale have to attend their grandmother’s funeral in Kerry on the day of the vote!’

vi. Thus, the Tribunal was satisfied that it was likely that consideration was given as to how a councillor (such as Cllr O’Connell), who genuinely opposed the Quarryvale rezoning might, in Mr Dunlop’s words, be ‘neutralised’.

vii. The coincidence in time between Mr Lynch seeking to speak to Mr O’Callaghan on 2 December 1992, which contact was followed by two further calls to Mr Dunlop’s office by or on behalf of Mr Lynch on 15 and 16 December 1992, and the imminence of the Quarryvale vote, was remarkable. The Tribunal also noted Cllr O’Connell’s late addition as a member of the UK FAS delegation. As a matter of probability, Mr Lynch’s telephone calls to Mr Dunlop on 15 and 16 December 1992 related to some extent to Cllr O’Connell’s trip to the UK. However the Tribunal was not satisfied that Cllr O’Connell’s absence from the County Council on 17 December 1992 had been ‘orchestrated’, as suggested by Mr Dunlop.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR JOHN O'HALLORAN (LAB/IND)

CLLR O'HALLORAN'S INVOLVEMENT IN THE REZONING OF QUARRYVALE AND RELATED MATTERS

27.01 Cllr O'Halloran was first elected to Dublin County Council in June 1991 for the Lucan Ward in West County Dublin, and was a member of the Labour party until 1993.

27.02 According to Cllr O'Halloran some six to eight weeks following his election he was contacted by Mr O'Callaghan who outlined to him his plans to develop Quarryvale. As an elected councillor he became aware of the Council's plan for the development of the three western towns at Tallaght, Neilstown and Blanchardstown, and of the fact that the Town Centre, originally proposed for Neilstown, had been effectively transferred to Quarryvale, following the passing of the Quarryvale related motions at the County Council Special Meeting of 16 May 1991.

27.03 It appeared to the Tribunal that by July 1991 Cllr O'Halloran clearly supported the proposal for a Town Centre for Quarryvale, as was evidenced in a letter written by him to the Irish Press newspaper on 23 July 1991. On 26 July 1991 Mr O'Callaghan was faxed a copy of that letter by Cllr McGrath.

27.04 Cllr O'Halloran believed that he first met Mr Dunlop at a meeting of Palmerstown Community Council, probably on 19 September 1991, their introduction being effected by Mr O'Callaghan. Cllr O'Halloran spoke in support of the Quarryvale rezoning proposal at that meeting. On 30 September 1991 Mr O'Callaghan wrote thanking him for his 'positive and objective approach' at the meeting. Cllr O'Halloran, together with other councillors and County Council officials, attended a meeting of Neilstown Community Centre in November 1991, at which Mr O'Callaghan spoke.

27.05 From telephone records maintained by Mr Dunlop's secretary it was clear that he and Cllr O'Halloran had established contact by October 1991. Cllr O'Halloran acknowledged that he had several meetings with Mr Dunlop, post September 1991.

27.06 In Mr Dunlop's 'contact report' of 17 June 1992 Cllr O'Halloran was identified as someone who would speak to/lobby Cllr Richard Greene regarding Quarryvale. Cllr O'Halloran acknowledged that he approached Cllr Greene. The Tribunal was satisfied that by this time (June/July 1992) Cllr O'Halloran was, if not a member of the Quarryvale ‘strategy’ team, certainly a councillor whose support for Quarryvale was absolutely assured, and was someone with whom Mr Dunlop liaised for advice regarding interaction with local communities. This was evident from Mr Dunlop’s handwritten note where he undertook to check with Cllrs Lawlor, Ridge and O’Halloran concerning the provision of funds for a Summer Camp for local Quarryvale youth.

27.07 Mr Dunlop’s diary for 4 November 1992 recorded a meeting with Cllr O’Halloran.¹ Cllr O’Halloran, while he accepted that he could well have met Mr Dunlop on that date, maintained that he had no recollection of the meeting. The Tribunal was satisfied that the anticipated second Quarryvale vote was, inter alia, a topic likely to have been discussed.

27.08 Mr Dunlop’s office telephone records revealed a number of telephone calls made by Cllr O’Halloran throughout November and in the early days of December, 1992 – telephone contact which was almost certainly related to the then forthcoming scheduled meeting of the County Council at which the Quarryvale rezoning was to be debated. On 2 December 1992, in advance of that meeting, a report of the County Council Manager was circulated to councillors, which included a number of references and recommendations relating to the zoning of the Quarryvale lands.

27.09 Cllr O’Halloran was one of four councillors who signed the motion (lodged with the County Council on 9 December 1992) which proposed the adoption of the Manager’s recommendation of ‘C’ and ‘E’ zoning for Quarryvale, and which also proposed the restoring of the ‘D’ Town Centre zoning for the nearby Neilstown lands. It was likely that Cllr O’Halloran was asked to sign this motion by Mr Dunlop when they met on 9 December 1992. Four councillors are recorded in Mr Dunlop’s diary on that day, three of whom, Cllrs Ridge, O’Halloran and McGrath were signatories to the motion. Cllr O’Halloran did not believe that he had had any input into the drafting of the motion.

27.10 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal in evidence in another module that he had no need to pay Cllr O’Halloran to support Quarryvale, as Cllr O’Halloran was ‘in the vanguard of support of people leading in relation to support for Quarryvale.’

27.11 Cllr O’Halloran, while acknowledging that on 17 December 1992 he signed a motion to limit retail development on Quarryvale, claimed that he had no recollection as to how he came to sign it.

27.12 Prior to signing the aforementioned motion and voting in support of Quarryvale related proposals on 17 December 1992, Cllr O'Halloran wrote to either all or a number of his fellow councillors urging them to support Quarryvale. This was evidenced by a copy of a letter sent to Cllr David Healy by Cllr O'Halloran on 11 December 1992.

27.13 In April 1993 Cllr O'Halloran was one of a number of signatories to a motion (which was, according to Mr Dunlop, drafted by Mr Lawlor), the purpose of which, as acknowledged by Mr Dunlop, was to render less restrictive the 250,000 square feet retail cap on Quarryvale which had been incorporated into the amended Draft Written Statement by the County Manager. Following debate on, and amendments made to, the April 1993 motion at a Special Meeting of the County Council in June 1993, the objective sought by the signatories of the April motion was achieved.

27.14 The 'C' and 'E' zoning for Quarryvale, with the less restrictive 250,000 square feet retail cap, was ultimately confirmed by the County Council on 19 October 1993. Some three weeks following this confirmation meeting, Cllr O'Halloran received a IR£5,000 cheque from Mr O'Callaghan/Riga. On 4 December 1993, within three weeks of the receipt of that cheque, Cllr O'Halloran was one of five signatories (the others being Cllrs McGrath, Ridge, Tyndall and Brady) to a letter written to the Minister for Finance, Mr Bertie Ahern, in which tax designation was sought for Quarryvale, on a par with the Tallaght Town Centre. It read:

Dear Minister

We are members of Dublin County Council representing both the Lucan and Clondalkin Wards. These Wards contain an area popularly known as 'North Clondalkin.' You will already know that this area was the subject of an interdepartmental inquiry following an outbreak of social unrest in 1991.

The inquiry has recognised that the very high level of unemployment along with a lack of amenities almost certainly contributed to this particular incident. It also recognised the need for these problems to be addressed quickly.

Following the making of our Development Plan in County Dublin the area now has a much brighter future. A major shopping development is planned at Quarryvale. This development will include an Industrial Park, a Business Park and leisure facilities.

In order to help this project and indeed other projects that might come into the area we are asking for tax designation for Clondalkin. This would put the area on the same footing as Tallaght.

27.15 Cllr O'Halloran could not recall who presented the letter to him for signature, but he presumed it was either Mr Dunlop or Mr O'Callaghan.

PAYMENTS TO CLLR O'HALLORAN FROM MR DUNLOP AND MR O'CALLAGHAN

THE PAYMENT OF IR£250 ON 8 DECEMBER 1992 FROM FRANK DUNLOP & ASSOCIATES

27.16 Documentation produced to the Tribunal by Mr Dunlop² revealed the existence of a cheque in the sum of IR£250 drawn on the 067 account of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd dated 8 December 1992, and payable to Cllr O'Halloran. Cllr O'Halloran was unable to recall the circumstances in which he came to receive this cheque from Mr Dunlop but accepted that he may have received it, and had forgotten that he did so. In any event, Cllr O'Halloran maintained that there was no connection between the cheque and his signature on the Quarryvale motion lodged with the County Council on 9 December 1992. He acknowledged it was 'possibly' received by him on 9 December 1992 when he met Mr Dunlop. He also acknowledged that he was not a candidate in the November 1992 General Election, and stated that he was not in a position to categorise this payment.

A COMPOSITE PAYMENT NOT EXCEEDING IR£5,000 FROM MR DUNLOP

27.17 In the course of his evidence (Day 344) Mr Dunlop stated of Cllr O'Halloran, that he: '...was an enthusiastic supporter of motions in relation to rezoning, and I specifically refer that remark solely to motions and items that I was involved with.'

27.18 Mr Dunlop also stated that:

'During the course of the development plan, Cllr John O'Halloran approached me in Dublin County Council and complained is the word I have used, that he was getting nothing and others were coining it. In this conversation that I had with Councillor O'Halloran he alluded to his ongoing support for the development which I have referred to earlier, but is not relevant to this module.'

² Mr Dunlop was not questioned about this cheque.

27.19 Mr Dunlop alleged that in addition to a payment of IR£2,500 which he made to Cllr O'Halloran in 1996 (see below), he then paid 'small amounts, and not more than £5,000 in all during the course of the development plan' to Cllr O'Halloran. Mr Dunlop believed that these small payments were made in the period between late 1992 and the end of 1993, and related to Cllr O'Halloran's support for various developments with which Mr Dunlop was engaged.

27.20 Mr Dunlop was unable to provide the Tribunal with a detailed breakdown of these small payments not exceeding IR£5,000 in total.

27.21 Cllr O'Halloran denied receiving payments from Mr Dunlop in the 1991-1993 period other than the IR£250 cheque payment in December 1992 and a cash payment of IR£500.

CLLR O'HALLORAN'S CLAIM THAT HE RECEIVED A POLITICAL DONATION OF APPROXIMATELY IR£500 FROM MR DUNLOP BETWEEN JUNE 1991
AND DECEMBER 1993

27.22 On 25 November 2002, Cllr O'Halloran's solicitors advised the Tribunal of the following:

Our client John O'Halloran wishes to bring to the attention of the Tribunal an unintentional inaccuracy in his letter of reply dated the 20th December 2000 to the Tribunal's letter dated the 22nd November 2000. In the course of our client's reply he stated that the sole payment which he could recall having received from Mr. Dunlop was the sum of £2,500.00 paid by cheque as a political donation to our client to defray electoral expenses in the course of his campaign as a candidate in the County Dublin Bye-election in 1996.

Our client has now brought it to our attention that he has a recollection of receiving a political donation from Mr. Dunlop in the sum approximately £500.00 whilst an elected member of Dublin County Council. It is our clients further recollection that he received this donation at some time between June 1991 and December 1993 at or in environs of the Council Headquarters in Upper O'Connell Street. He believes that the donation was made by Mr. Dunlop following a conversation initiated by Mr. Dunlop and was unsolicited by our client. Our client cannot recall whether the donation was made in the course of his conversation with Mr. Dunlop or subsequently. Our client wishes to make clear that he accepted this donation as a straight forward political contribution without any express or implied agreement or understanding that its acceptance was in return for agreeing to support any land re-zoning proposals in the Dublin Draft Development Plan either concerning lands at Carrickmines or otherwise.

It is a matter of considerable embarrassment to our client that he did not recall this political contribution at an earlier stage. However, it is in the context of our client's absolute co-operation with the work of this Tribunal to date that our client has specifically instructed us to bring his recollection of this payment to the Tribunal's attention...

27.23 In evidence,³ Cllr O'Halloran told the Tribunal that this payment of IR£500 from Mr Dunlop was a 'once off', and the only cash payment ever made to him by Mr Dunlop. Cllr O'Halloran maintained that the payment was made after Mr Dunlop had raised the issue of fundraising with him, and that he had not solicited the payment. Cllr O'Halloran acknowledged that there was no election expected at the time of the payment.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£5,000 IN NOVEMBER 1993 FROM MR O'CALLAGHAN

27.24 Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that in October 1993 he was approached by Cllr O'Halloran who sought a political donation from him. Cllr O'Halloran advised Mr O'Callaghan that he had lost the Labour Party Whip,⁴ and had been expelled from the Labour Party as a result of his support for the Quarryvale rezoning. Cllr O'Halloran had explained that he was as a consequence operating as an Independent councillor and he had advised Mr O'Callaghan that he believed that his Council seat was under threat from Sinn Fein. Mr O'Callaghan stated that on this basis he made a political contribution of IR£5,000 to Cllr O'Halloran by cheque drawn on the AIB account of Riga Limited on 9 November 1993.

27.25 In a statement of 3 May 2000 Mr O'Callaghan put it as follows:

On the 9th November 1993 I made a payment to Councillor John O'Halloran in the sum of £5,000. Councillor O'Halloran approached me for this money. He stated that due to his support for Quarryvale he was asked to leave the Labour Party. In these circumstances he was without a party and without any financial support from the Labour Party. At that time I was fully conscious of not only the assistance which Councillor O'Halloran had given to Quarryvale but also the immense amount of work he had done (and continues to do) for the local community. In these circumstances I had no difficulty in making a contribution of £5,000.

27.26 Responding to questions put by Cllr O'Halloran's Counsel on Day 914, Mr O'Callaghan had the following to say in relation to who had raised the issue of a political contribution to Cllr O'Halloran in 1993:

'As I said in my statement, John O'Halloran was probably the best supporter Quarryvale ever had and probably still is. When he lost the party whip in '93 he approached me and asked me, told me that he was going to stand as an independent councillor, he was going to stand independently or remain in politics, which I certainly hoped that he would. And he asked me if I could support him and I was delighted to do it actually in that particular case, I can assure you. He actually said that, he asked me for at the time, he mentioned that he would like support of 5,000 pounds to help him get himself organised as an independent or to continue in politics and I provided that to him, I did that gladly.'

27.27 While he acknowledged receipt of a IR£5,000 political contribution from Mr O'Callaghan in November 1993, Cllr O'Halloran vehemently disputed Mr O'Callaghan's contention that he had solicited the contribution. It was his position that it was Mr O'Callaghan who had approached him with the offer of the contribution. He testified that to the best of his recollection Mr O'Callaghan told him that the cheque was being given to him to assist him in his political work. Cllr O'Halloran said he had no recollection of ever approaching Mr O'Callaghan for money on a personal basis.

27.28 Notwithstanding their conflicting accounts as to the circumstances which immediately preceded the payment of IR£5,000, both Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr O'Halloran maintained that the payment was a political contribution.

THE TREATMENT OF THE IR£5,000 PAYMENT IN THE BOOKS AND AUDITED ACCOUNTS OF RIGA LTD

27.29 Similarly to the manner in which the IR£20,000 cheque payment to Cllr Colm McGrath (also on 9 November 1993) was accounted for, the IR£5,000 Riga Ltd cheque to Cllr O'Halloran was posted in Riga's cheque payments book under 'sundries.'

27.30 In their analysis of 'sundries' to year end 31 December 1993, Riga's auditors attributed the IR£5,000 cheque payment as having been made on behalf of Barkhill Ltd/Quarryvale and for the year end 30 April 1994, in the nominal ledger of Riga Ltd, the IR£5,000 cheque payment was duly posted to the Riga/Barkhill Inter-company Loan account.

27.31 However, as with the IR£20,000 cheque payment to Cllr McGrath, in Riga's audited accounts for the year end 30 April 1995 the IR£5,000 payment to Cllr O'Halloran no longer appeared as part of the Riga/Barkhill Inter-company Loan Account. Rather, as with the McGrath payment (and certain other payments) it was posted, in Riga's nominal ledger, to Riga's Directors Loan Account – a posting which removed the connection between the O’Halloran payment and the Quarryvale project, previously made by the Auditors.

27.32 In the course of his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr O’Callaghan claimed that the IR£20,000 payment to Cllr McGrath, and the IR£5,000 payment to Cllr O’Halloran, had been erroneously attributed as a Barkhill expense in Riga’s books for year-end April 1994.

27.33 Yet, Mr O’Callaghan conceded that he was the person likely to have instructed Riga’s Auditors that the McGrath and O’Halloran November 1993 cheque payments were Barkhill/Quarryvale related. Mr O’Callaghan also agreed that it must have been his view in 1994, that the payments made to Cllr McGrath and Cllr O’Halloran in November 1993 were made for the benefit of Quarryvale. The Tribunal was satisfied that when making the IR£5,000 payment to Cllr O’Halloran (and the IR£20,000 payment to Cllr McGrath), Mr O’Callaghan regarded both as expenditure incurred in relation to the Quarryvale rezoning.

27.34 In her evidence to the Tribunal, Ms Cowhig (of Barber & Co, Riga’s Auditors) in referring to the postings of the two payments for the year end 30 April 1994 as Barkhill expenses paid by Riga, stated:

‘I knew what the payments were for and I – I knew that they were all related to Barkhill and I allocated them to the Barkhill loan in that particular period.’

27.35 Ms Cowhig told the Tribunal that notwithstanding the accounts to year end 30 April 1994 having been signed off by Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Deane in January 1995, she had advised Mr Deane subsequently that because of the absence of invoices for the payments, they (and other payments) should be removed from the Riga/Barkhill Intercompany Loan Account and posted into the Riga Director’s Loan Account in the books of Riga.

27.36 Ms Cowhig agreed that the absence of invoices for the IR£20,000 payment to Cllr McGrath and the IR£5,000 payment to Cllr O’Halloran (and indeed for a sum of IR£10,000 reimbursed to Mr O’Callaghan by Riga in September 1993) had not prevented her, for the year end 30 April 1994, from attributing such payments in Riga’s books as Barkhill related and she agreed that when Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Deane, as Directors of Riga, signed off on the year end 30 April 1994 account in January 1995, they were, at that time, attesting to the fact that Riga Ltd had expended such sums on behalf of Barkhill Ltd.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£2,500 IN 1996

27.37 In an invoice dated 20 March 1996, Frank Dunlop & Associates sought, inter alia, reimbursement of IR£2,500 from Riga Ltd for payment of a ‘political contribution (John O’Halloran).’ Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that in the course of the Dublin West by-election in 1996, Cllr O’Halloran approached him seeking a political donation. According to Mr Dunlop, Cllr O’Halloran regarded Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan as ‘joined at the hip’, and while Cllr O’Halloran made the approach to Mr Dunlop for the contribution, Mr Dunlop believed that Cllr O’Halloran probably knew that Mr O’Callaghan would be the person who would ultimately pay it.

27.38 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal⁵ that when soliciting the contribution Cllr O’Halloran had pointed out to Mr Dunlop ‘that he had been extremely helpful in relation to a number of developments, one in particular, and he would be grateful if I organised that the proposer of that particular development would assist him also.’

27.39 Mr Dunlop identified the ‘particular’ development to have been Quarryvale. In later sworn evidence to the Tribunal,⁶ Mr Dunlop expressed his view that he did not ‘on balance’ consider the IR£2,500 payment to have been a legitimate political donation.

27.40 In a statement of 20 December 2000, Cllr O’Halloran dealt with the receipt of the IR£2,500 from Mr Dunlop as follows:

... I have already indicated in my previous statement to the Tribunal that I did receive a sum of £2,500 from Frank Dunlop as a political contribution in the course of my campaign as an independent candidate in the Dáil By election in 1996. I personally solicited these funds from Mr. Dunlop as a political donation. I cannot now recall the precise date on which I made this request of Mr. Dunlop other than to say it was after the date of the proposed by-election had been announced and before the election date itself. I recall that payment was in the form of a cheque which I subsequently lodged into my bank account at Trustee Savings Bank in Clondalkin. I believe that the Tribunal is already in possession of my Bank Account details and transactions during this period. I further confirm that I did not distinguish this political contribution from my personal funds nor have I accounted separately the expenditure of the money received from Mr. Dunlop for expenses incurred by me in the course of running my campaign. I was not in a position to furnish the Tribunal with any documentary evidence other than information already available to the Tribunal from my disclosed bank accounts as to how these monies were spent. I further confirm that I did not issue an acknowledgement/receipt to Mr. Dunlop in respect of such a payment. I wish to reiterate that money received from Mr. Dunlop was not a payment 'in connection' with any rezoning proposal or planning matter as is implied in the text of your letter dated 22nd November 2000.

27.41 In evidence, Cllr O'Halloran stated that he was unaware that Mr Dunlop had recouped the IR£2,500 from Mr O'Callaghan/Riga. He could not assist the Tribunal as to how a figure of IR£2,500 had been arrived at when he made his request of Mr Dunlop. He could also not explain why he solicited a contribution from Mr Dunlop in particular. He said he was surprised at the large amount of the contribution.

27.42 Cllr O'Halloran specifically denied (when giving evidence in another module) that, when soliciting this payment from Mr Dunlop, he had reminded Mr Dunlop of his assistance in relation to the Quarryvale rezoning project.

27.43 In his statement of 16 May 2003, Mr O'Callaghan advised the Tribunal:
'In or about the month of March 1996 Frank Dunlop & Associates made a contribution on my behalf to John O'Halloran in the sum of £2,500. As far as I can recall, John O'Halloran contacted Frank Dunlop seeking a contribution from Frank Dunlop towards expenses in connection with the 1996 By-Election. Frank Dunlop rang me and asked me if I was prepared to contribute as well. I agreed to contribute the sum of £2,500 and I authorised Frank Dunlop to pay this amount of money on my behalf. I requested him to include it in his next Invoice to me. This amount was included in the Frank Dunlop invoice dated 30th March 1996.'

27.44 Mr Dunlop, when questioned about the content of Mr O'Callaghan's statement, told the Tribunal that while the cheque given to Cllr O'Halloran in 1996 was a Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd cheque subsequently reimbursed by Mr O'Callaghan/Riga, he himself had not made a separate payment to Cllr O'Halloran.

27.45 Mr O'Callaghan's evidence on Day 912 was to the effect that while Cllr O'Halloran approached Mr Dunlop directly seeking an election contribution in 1996, he considered that to have been, in reality, a request to himself and thus had agreed to make it. Mr O'Callaghan testified:

‘...as far as I know John O’Halloran was trying to contact me, wasn’t able to do it, contacted me through Frank Dunlop. I think that’s where that one came about actually. John O’Halloran spoke to Frank Dunlop and he in turn contacted me, but it was at John O’Halloran’s request that he spoke to me.’

27.46 Mr O’Callaghan was questioned about the reference in his May 2003 statement to Mr Dunlop having been asked by Cllr O’Halloran for an election contribution, and Mr Dunlop then inquiring of Mr O’Callaghan if he too would make a contribution to Cllr O’Halloran. This claim was at odds with Mr O’Callaghan’s sworn testimony that Mr Dunlop was, effectively, only the conduit for the contribution given to Cllr O’Halloran. Mr O’Callaghan stated:

‘... at the time I thought, when I wrote that statement I thought and I am still not 100 per cent clear on this one, that John O’Halloran rang Frank Dunlop for a contribution from Frank Dunlop towards his ‘96 by-election and at the same time asked Frank Dunlop to ask me to, would I give him a contribution. I still feel that will there might have been two contributions made at that time, one of 2,500 from me and the other from Frank Dunlop to John O’Halloran I am not clear about that point.’

27.47 Mr O’Callaghan testified that at the time he thought that ‘Frank Dunlop was also going to help John O’Halloran to elect himself as well.’ There was however no evidence that Cllr O’Halloran received a payment from Mr Dunlop in 1996, other than the IR£2,500 cheque.

27.48 Mr O’Callaghan agreed that the Riga payment, reimbursing Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd for the IR£2,500 given to Cllr O’Halloran, was duly attributed in the books of Riga as a Barkhill expense. It was not attributed as a political donation, although there were, in Riga’s nominal ledger, various codes under which political donations could be posted. On Day 912, in response to the question ‘In effect this payment is a payment for the benefit of Barkhill?’ Mr O’Callaghan replied ‘Yes, John O’Halloran would be Barkhill.’ The cheque payment was debited from Riga’s bank account on 4 April 1996.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE PAYMENTS MADE TO CLLR O’HALLORAN BETWEEN 1991 AND 1996

SMALL PAYMENTS NOT EXCEEDING IR£5,000 IN TOTAL IN THE PERIOD 1991 TO 1993

(i). There was substantial conflict between Mr Dunlop and Cllr O’Halloran on the issue of the number of small payments made by Mr Dunlop in the period 1991 to 1993. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr O’Halloran received IR£500 in cash from Mr Dunlop sometime between June 1991 and December 1993. The Tribunal was also satisfied that Cllr O'Halloran was paid a cheque for IR£250 by Mr Dunlop on 8 December 1992, in or about the time that he signed the Quarryvale motion which was lodged with Dublin County Council on 9 December 1992. Furthermore, the Tribunal accepted Mr Dunlop's evidence that there were other occasions on which he paid Cllr O'Halloran small sums (in the region of IR£500 each) during this period.

(ii). The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr O'Halloran did on occasion receive small payments in the region of IR£500 each from Mr Dunlop in the course of the making of the Development Plan 1991-1993. The Tribunal could not determine which of Mr Dunlop's development projects these payments related to. The Tribunal was satisfied that insofar as Cllr O'Halloran solicited and accepted such payments, he did so improperly in the knowledge that Mr Dunlop was a lobbyist in relation to rezoning issues current in Dublin County Council, including Quarryvale.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£5,000 IN NOVEMBER 1993

i. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr O'Halloran's solicited this payment from Mr O'Callaghan.

ii. While the fact that Cllr O'Halloran's parting company with the Labour Party may have resulted in some reduction of political funding for him, the Tribunal was satisfied that his request for money from Mr O'Callaghan was a deliberate act on his part to personally benefit from the support he had given to the proposal to rezone the Quarryvale lands. The coincidence in time between the making of this payment and the confirmation of the Quarryvale rezoning on 19 October 1993 indicated to the Tribunal that the payment was in effect a reward for Cllr O'Halloran's commitment to Quarryvale.

iii. The Tribunal did not believe it to be merely a 'coincidence' (as maintained by Mr O'Callaghan) that the cheque for IR£5,000 paid to Cllr O'Halloran bore the same date as the IR£20,000 cheque paid to Cllr McGrath. The Tribunal was therefore satisfied, notwithstanding the appellation 'political contribution' given to the payment by both Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr O'Halloran, that this payment was, as stated, made to Cllr O'Halloran in return for his support for Quarryvale. In making this payment Mr O'Callaghan, in all probability, took cognisance of the fact that Cllr O'Halloran's support might be required in the future given that he would be a member of the soon to be established South Dublin County Council.

iv. In his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Dunlop claimed that he had no knowledge in 1993 of this IR£5,000 payment. The Tribunal did not accept Mr Dunlop's evidence in this regard. The office telephone message records of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd listed a telephone call from Cllr O'Halloran on 8 November 1993, the day prior to the date of the IR£5,000 Riga cheque. Cllr O'Halloran was also noted as contacting Mr Dunlop's office twice on 10 November 1993. Mr O'Callaghan was himself recorded as telephoning Mr Dunlop's office on that date. The Tribunal rejected as not credible that the IR£5,000 cheque was not a matter of discussion between Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop.

v. Cllr O'Halloran's request for money, his acceptance of IR£5,000 from Mr O'Callaghan, and Mr O'Callaghan's payment of that sum, in circumstances where Cllr O'Halloran was involved in a process necessitating him to vote, as an elected representative, in relation to lands in which Mr O'Callaghan had an interest, was corrupt.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£2,500 IN 1996

i. It appeared to the Tribunal that Riga's treatment of the 1996 payment of IR£2,500 to Cllr O'Halloran was indicative of what Mr O'Callaghan considered the payment to have represented in reality, namely a payment associated with, and part of, the cost of the Quarryvale project. It was not a bona fide political contribution.

ii. The Tribunal accepted Mr Dunlop's evidence that Cllr O'Halloran solicited the payment from him in 1996 in the context of earlier assistance provided by him in his capacity as a councillor to, in particular, the Quarryvale rezoning project. In those circumstances, the Tribunal was satisfied that both the request for, and the receipt of the sum of IR£2,500 were corrupt, being in reality an attempt by Cllr O'Halloran to personally financially benefit from the exercise of his duties as an elected councillor.

THE FRANK DUNLOP & ASSOCIATES LTD IR£500 CHEQUE OF 18 MAY 1999

27.49 Cllr O'Halloran acknowledged that he was the recipient of a IR£500 cheque from Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd in May 1999. Cllr O'Halloran first acknowledged to the Tribunal receipt of this cheque when giving sworn evidence in 2003.

27.50 Cllr O'Halloran told the Tribunal that the IR£500 was paid as a political donation in relation to the Local Elections in 1999. It had been his intention to stand as a candidate in the election, and having commenced his campaign, he then dropped out, and did not stand. He did not return the donation to Mr Dunlop.

27.51 Cllr O'Halloran was unable to recall with certainty if he had solicited the payment. On Day 828, Cllr O'Halloran, when asked if he had solicited the payment, responded 'I'm sure I did. I don't recall exactly but I'm sure I did.'

27.52 Neither could Cllr O'Halloran recall whether or not the payment post dated his telephone conversation with Mr Dunlop on the subject of payments made by Mr Dunlop to Cllr O'Halloran, and which Cllr O'Halloran said took place after the establishment of the Tribunal (in late 1997).

PAYMENTS MADE BY MR DUNLOP AND MR O'CALLAGHAN TO SPORTING AND VOLUNTARY ORGANISATIONS AT THE REQUEST OF CLLR O'HALLORAN

27.53 Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that Cllr O'Halloran was always looking for small donations for charity from Mr Dunlop, in the knowledge that, ultimately, they would be paid by Mr O'Callaghan. Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that he did ultimately pay these contributions.

27.54 In January 1992 Cllr O'Halloran wrote to Mr Dunlop seeking sponsorship for a local youth project, a request which resulted in Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan respectively donating IR£1,000 and IR£500. Cllr O'Halloran wrote to Mr Dunlop on 10 January 1992 thanking him for his contribution and also thanking Mr Dunlop for a Christmas gift (most probably a Christmas hamper).

27.55 In his December 2000 statement Cllr O'Halloran referred to an approach made by him to Mr Dunlop in 1992 for a financial contribution to the Neilstown Boxing Club, which operated within his electoral area. Documentation produced to the Tribunal revealed that in December 1992, as part of a Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd invoice to Riga Limited for a total sum of IR£64,897.78, Mr Dunlop sought to recoup a sum of IR£2,460 attributed by Mr Dunlop to 'Neilstown Boxing Club John O'Halloran.' This invoice was paid by Riga Ltd on 21 December 1992.

CLLR O'HALLORAN'S CATERING CONTRACT WITH SISKS

27.56 For a number of years during the construction of the Quarryvale Town Centre, Cllr O'Halloran provided on-site canteen facilities to Sisks, one of the principal Quarryvale building contractors. In evidence, Cllr O'Halloran stated that after building works commenced, he had approached Mr O'Callaghan to enquire as to the possibility of his securing a catering contract on the site. Mr O'Callaghan referred him to Sisks. Mr O'Halloran secured the contract and went on to provide canteen services on-site over a number of years. While he acknowledged that it was likely that Mr O’Callaghan had intervened with Sisks on his behalf, he claimed that he had not requested Mr O’Callaghan to do so.

27.57 Cllr O’Halloran also acknowledged that he was unable to provide the Tribunal with any documentary record or estimate of the value of the catering contract secured by him. On 25 June 2001 his accountants advised the Tribunal that while they had been requested by Cllr O’Halloran to prepare income and expenditure accounts, they were unable to do so because cheque stubs, purchase invoices or sales records had not been provided to them by Cllr O’Halloran.

27.58 In the course of correspondence with the Tribunal, and in evidence, Mr O’Callaghan acknowledged that Cllr O’Halloran had approached him with regard to Mr O’Halloran securing a catering contract with Sisks. Mr O’Callaghan advised the Tribunal that he went to Sisks and suggested that they would interview him. Mr O’Callaghan said he was anxious that the development of Quarryvale would benefit local businesses as much as possible.

27.59 While the Tribunal cannot say what, in monetary terms, the benefit of the Sisks catering contract meant to Cllr O’Halloran, it was however satisfied that Cllr O’Halloran secured the Sisk contract following Mr O’Callaghan’s intervention on his behalf and that Mr O’Callaghan was requested by Cllr O’Halloran to approach the contractors in question.

THE SEQUENCE OF CLLR O’HALLORAN’S DISCLOSURE TO THE TRIBUNAL OF RECEIPT OF MONEY AND/OR OTHER BENEFITS FROM INDIVIDUALS/ENTITIES ASSOCIATED WITH QUARRYVALE

27.60 On 20 December 1999, Cllr O’Halloran was contacted by the Tribunal in connection with his involvement in the rezoning of Quarryvale. Among other queries he was asked if he:

at any time and for any purpose, [was] in receipt of any payment(s), donation(s) or benefit(s) (including any form of gift, assistance, service, facility, entertainment or any other benefit of a non monetary nature) from any parties who were involved in the development of the Quarryvale Shopping Centre or from any person(s) or company(ies) acting on behalf of the developers.

27.61 In his response of 26 January 2000, Cllr O'Halloran stated:

I received a political donation of £5,000 from Owen O'Callaghan sometime towards the end of 1993. I also received £2,500 from Frank Dunlop as a contribution towards election expenses during the by-election in Dublin West in April 1996.

27.62 In March 1999, prior to the exchange of correspondence referred to above, Cllr O'Halloran was privately interviewed by the Tribunal and was asked if he had received assistance from Mr O'Callaghan or Mr Dunlop in relation to his 1991 Local Election campaign. Cllr O'Halloran replied in the negative, stating that at the time of that Election he had not met with, nor did he know, either Mr O'Callaghan or Mr Dunlop. In the course of his response however he volunteered that he had, as a candidate in a by-election in 1996, received a cheque donation of IR£2,500 from Mr Dunlop. Asked if he had received financial assistance from Mr O'Callaghan for that by-election, Cllr O'Halloran replied in the negative. Cllr O'Halloran also replied to the following query in the negative, 'Did you ever receive any form of assistance of any kind from Mr. O'Callaghan?'

27.63 Asked on Day 828 as to why he had not volunteered, when questioned in 1999, the information that he had received IR£5,000 from Mr O'Callaghan, Cllr O'Halloran stated that he had 'misunderstood' the timeframe he was being questioned about. He conceded that there was no reason why he could not have given this information to the Tribunal in March 1999.

27.64 In his statement of January 2000, Cllr O'Halloran referred to the IR£5,000 cheque from Mr O'Callaghan in 1993, and to the cheque from Mr Dunlop in 1996, but did not mention that he had received a further cheque for IR£500 from Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd in May 1999, only eight months prior to making that statement.

27.65 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr O'Halloran had not been, in general, frank with the Tribunal, in the manner in which he responded to its requests for information of payments to him for Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan.

PART 7 - CLLR PAT RABBITTE (DL)

28.01 Cllr Pat Rabbitte was an elected member of Dublin County Council between June 1985 and December 1993 when he vacated his seat in order to take up a Government ministerial position. He was Chairman of Dublin County Council between July and December 1993. He was, and remains, an elected TD.

28.02 On Day 148, Cllr Rabbitte's name had appeared on Mr Dunlop's '1992' list (of recipients of election contributions) at number 23 as a recipient of IR£3,000 cash and on Day 148 also Mr Dunlop advised the Tribunal that the IR£3,000 had been later returned to him by means of a cheque.

THE ROLE PLAYED BY CLLR RABBITTE IN THE QUARRYVALE REZONING AND LIKELY CONTACTS MADE BY MR DUNLOP AND/OR MR O'CALLAGHAN WITH CLLR RABBITTE REGARDING QUARRYVALE

28.03 Cllr Rabbitte was an elected councillor for the Tallaght/Rathcoole Ward from 1985 to 1991 and a councillor for the Tallaght/Oldbawn Ward from 1991 to 1994. During the currency of the Quarryvale rezoning process from 1991 to December 1993, Cllr Rabbitte was a member of the Workers Party, and later the Democratic Left Party. He told the Tribunal that as a councillor he had an interest in promoting the development of the three Western towns, Tallaght, Blanchardstown and Neilstown, as provided for in the 1983 Development Plan.

28.04 An analysis of Mr Dunlop's diaries for late 1990 and early 1991 suggested that Cllr Rabbitte and Mr Dunlop met on 10 September 1990, and on 3 January 1991, although the Tribunal was satisfied that such contact was not in relation to Quarryvale. As acknowledged by Cllr Rabbitte, he met Mr Dunlop on many occasions in and around the County Council, and he agreed that he was likely to have been lobbied by Mr Dunlop regarding Quarryvale despite Democratic Left's well known position of opposition to Quarryvale.

28.05 While he was recorded as being present at some point in the County Council chamber on 16 May 1991, Cllr Rabbitte was not recorded as having voted on either of the Quarryvale Motions on that date.

28.06 There was no documentary reference suggesting that Mr Rabbitte met with Mr O'Callaghan in 1991. A schedule of meetings prepared by Mr Dunlop for

Mr O'Callaghan for the purposes of meeting councillor referred to a meeting with Cllr Rabbitte on 24 March 1992 in the Dáil. While Mr Dunlop's diary for 14 May 1992 recorded a reference to Cllr Rabbitte, a meeting on that date probably did not take place, given Cllr Rabbitte's telephone message of the same date, as recorded by Mr Dunlop's secretary. Mr Dunlop's 17 June 1992 'contact report' suggested that as of that date no meeting had taken place, between Cllr Rabbitte and Messrs Dunlop and O'Callaghan in relation to Quarryvale.

28.07 Cllr Rabbitte agreed, (although he had no recollection of the meetings) that it was possible that an entry in Mr Dunlop's diary for a meeting with Democratic Left on 23 June 1992 and with himself on 25 June 1992 were Quarryvale related meetings. Mr Dunlop's diary for 28 August 1992 recorded meetings with both Mr O'Callaghan and Cllr Rabbitte at 11am and 12pm respectively – a diary entry which Mr Dunlop, from the outset, disclosed to the Tribunal as Quarryvale related. Cllr Rabbitte acknowledged that on one occasion he met with Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan together when they produced plans regarding their proposal to develop the Neilstown lands as a stadium.

28.08 Documentation furnished by Mr Dunlop to the Tribunal indicated that in the period leading to the December 1992 Quarryvale vote, Mr Dunlop prepared a number of 'scenarios' in which he outlined the likely voting pattern of councillors. In one such 'scenario' Mr Dunlop cited all Democratic Left councillors (including Cllr Rabbitte) as supportive of Quarryvale. In another 'scenario', both Cllr Rabbitte and Cllr Denis O'Callaghan are cited as supportive of Quarryvale, while Cllr Don Tipping was stated to be in opposition to it. Mr Dunlop's third, (or 'worst case'), 'scenario' listed Cllrs Rabbitte, O'Callaghan and Tipping as voting against Quarryvale.

28.09 In a separate document Cllr Rabbitte was listed by Mr Dunlop under the description 'support lukewarm.' In yet another document entitled 'if Dáil sitting' Mr Dunlop described Cllrs Rabbitte, Eamon Gilmore and Sean Barrett (all then were also TD's) as supportive, but not available to vote (presumably due to Dáil commitments).

28.10 Cllr Rabbitte described the aforesaid 'scenarios' prepared by Mr Dunlop as merely 'doodlings', given his stated opposition to the Quarryvale rezoning proposal, and which was well-known to Mr Dunlop. Records showed that Cllrs Rabbitte and Gilmore did not in fact vote in support of Quarryvale on 17 December 1992. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Rabbitte took a decisive anti-Quarryvale stance on that date, voting to rezone Quarryvale back to 'E' Industrial and, (if Quarryvale were to be zoned C1), capping retail development on the site at 100,000 square feet. Cllr Rabbitte voted against the motion to cap Quarryvale retail at 250,000 square feet.

28.11 Cllr Rabbitte acknowledged that in the period leading up to 17 December 1992 vote he was lobbied by Mr Keating on behalf of Green Property plc to oppose the Quarryvale rezoning, and that he had on one occasion signed a document, at the behest of Green Property PLC, rejecting Quarryvale and in favour of the proposed Blanchardstown Town Centre. Cllr Rabbitte maintained that Mr Keating/Green Property was aware of Cllr Rabbitte's public opposition to Quarryvale from 1991.

MR DUNLOP'S CASH DONATION TO CLLR RABBITTE IN NOVEMBER 1992

28.12 Both Mr Dunlop and Cllr Rabbitte, over the course of two modules, Ballycullen/Beechill and Quarryvale, gave evidence of a meeting which took place between them at Cllr Rabbitte's home, in the course of the November 1992 General Election campaign, at a time when Cllr Rabbitte was an election candidate and when Mr Dunlop was actively lobbying Cllr Rabbitte for support for rezoning matters on behalf of at least two of his clients, Mr Christopher Jones Snr (Ballycullen/Beechill), and Mr O'Callaghan.

28.13 While Cllr Rabbitte acknowledged receipt of a cash donation from Mr Dunlop in November 1992 (which was later returned), there were issues of conflict between them as to the date of Mr Dunlop's visit to Cllr Rabbitte's home, whether the visit had been pre-arranged and the amount of the donation. The conclusion of the Tribunal in relation to these matters (see Chapter Four) was that Mr Dunlop visited Cllr Rabbitte in his home on 11 November 1992, probably by prior arrangement, and there gave him IR£2,000 in cash as an election contribution, and that that contribution was duly returned, to Mr Dunlop albeit in a different form (by cheque drawn on an account of Cllr Rabbitte's then political party), on 17 December 1992. The contribution was returned in circumstances where Cllr Rabbitte and his party colleagues were concerned that it was inappropriate to retain the donation because of the fact that they would, in the course of their role as councillors, be required to exercise their vote on matters in which Mr Dunlop would have an interest. This decision was commendable.

28.14 The content of the letter written by Cllr Rabbitte to Mr Dunlop on 17 December 1992, when returning Mr Dunlop's donation, indicated Cllr Rabbitte's belief that Mr Dunlop's proffering the election contribution was not unrelated to events which were then current in Dublin County Council.

CLLR RABBITTE'S MEETING WITH MR DUNLOP AND MR O'CALLAGHAN ON 18
OCTOBER 1993

28.15 Three motions were lodged with Dublin County Council on 19 October 1993. On their face, the import of these motions, as signed by Cllrs Tipping, Breathnach, O'Callaghan, Gilmore and Billane, would, if successful, result in the Quarryvale lands reverting to their pre-December 1992 status, i.e 'D' Town Centre zoning, as displayed on the Draft Development Plan 1991. These three motions therefore appeared to achieve for the Quarryvale lands a far more favourable zoning than that achieved on 17 December 1992. What was remarkable about these motions was that four of the five councillors¹ who were signatories thereto had indicated by their voting on 17 December 1992 that they were opposed to a Town Centre zoning for Quarryvale, when they voted in favour of a motion to have the Quarryvale lands revert to their 1983 'E' Industrial zoning. Cllr Rabbitte, although not a signatory to the October 1993 Motions, had likewise opposed the zoning of Quarryvale in December 1992.

28.16 Following the Special Meeting of 17 December 1992, the Quarryvale lands had been zoned 'C' and 'E' with a retail cap of 250,000 square feet. Prior to this vote their 1991 Draft Development Plan zoning was 'D' Town Centre with an estimated retail cap of 500,000 square feet (the result of 16 May 1991 vote).

28.17 The Tribunal accepted that the purpose of the motions was not to achieve a greater zoning or increased retail cap for Quarryvale, but rather to revert the zoning of Quarryvale to its original 1983 position. As already stated above, however, the effect of the wording chosen by the councillors in question to achieve this outcome, would, in fact, if the motions had been passed, have strengthened the December 1992 zoning on the Quarryvale lands to the extent that the lands would have been zoned 'D' Town Centre, with a retail cap restriction of 500,000 square feet. It appeared likely that when Cllr Rabbitte withdrew these motions from consideration by the County Council on the eve of the Special Meeting of 19 October 1993, he did so after being apprised by Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop of the implications of such motions. The Tribunal accepted as a matter of probability that even if Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop had not spoken to Cllr Rabbitte, these motions would probably have been withdrawn by the Democratic Left Councillors on 19 October 1993, when their implications of the Motions became clear.

28.18 In a letter of 21 October 1993 to Mr O’Farrell of AIB, in the aftermath of the 19 October 1993 Special Meeting, Mr O’Callaghan stated as follows:

Dear Michael,

This letter is probably irrelevant but I think I better set the record straight.

Tom G. has said to yourselves and indeed to Cllr McGrath, that we probably should have gone for the Motion put down by the Democratic Left for last Tuesday’s Zoning Meeting.

That Motion read that the Council should revert to the 1991 Decision and Display i.e. 500,000 sq.ft.

The real situation with this is as follows:

1. The Democratic Left withdrew their Motion on Friday last when they discovered their mistake. Their intention actually was to de-zone Quarryvale.

2. Pat Rabbitte, Chairman of Dublin County Council and member of the Democratic Left, himself withdrew the Motion on Monday last when he discovered how wrong it was from their point of view.

3. Before any Motion is taken, the Manager must explain at the actual Council Meeting the implications of such a Motion.

If the Motion had not been withdrawn prior to the meeting, it would certainly have been withdrawn after the Manager’s explanation.

4. The Chairman himself would have withdrawn the Motion at the meeting if it was still standing.

5. When the Fine Gael and Progressive Democrat Cllrs picked up this Motion on Friday last, the majority of them, who previously supported us, informed us they would not have supported the 500,000 sq.ft.

6. The Manager would not have supported the 500,000 sq.ft..

7. The real danger was that when this Motion appeared, I was accused of ‘squaring’ the Democratic Left and could have lost all our support.

In a nutshell, Tom G. just does not know what he is talking about.

All of this is now history, but I thought I should set the record straight.

As you know, I spoke to Tom G. on Wednesday night and I also explained this to him. He now understands and agrees, but it is just as well he is in Luton.

28.19 Mr Dunlop's diary for 18 October 1993 noted the following: 'OOC & FD to PR.' Although Cllr Rabbitte did not recall a meeting on that date, the Tribunal was satisfied that it probably took place, and that the likely purpose of the meeting was to discuss the implications of three motions which had been lodged with Dublin County Council in advance of a Special Meeting of the Council scheduled for 19 October 1993, when one of the topics for discussion was the Quarryvale zoning confirmation, as this matter would have been foremost in the minds of Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan at that time.

28.20 Although there was an element of disagreement as between Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop as to the reason for their approach to Cllr Rabbitte, it appeared to the Tribunal that Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop were motivated, on 18 October 1993, to approach him because of a concern on their part that any hint or suggestion that there was support for, or an attempt to achieve a, 500,000 square foot retail area for Quarryvale (one of the implications of the Democratic Left Motions, if passed), would alienate Fine Gael and Progressive Democrat councillors, who had theretofore been supportive of Mr O'Callaghan's proposals for Quarryvale, based on a 250,000 square feet retail cap.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - CLLR THERESE RIDGE (FG)

29.01 Cllr Ridge was elected as a Fine Gael councillor to the Clondalkin Ward of Dublin County Council in 1985 and thus, like Cllrs McGrath and Tyndall, was a ‘local councillor’ as far as the Quarryvale rezoning project was concerned.

29.02 It was common case that from the commencement of the campaign to rezone Quarryvale, Cllr Ridge was a staunch supporter of that campaign. In 1992 and 1993 she was a signatory to a number of motions which sought to advance the cause to secure a Town Centre zoning for Quarryvale. Cllr Ridge however did not vote on 16 May 1991 on any Quarryvale issue as she was absent from the chamber due to her attendance at a funeral. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal (and Cllr Ridge agreed) that Cllr Ridge was lobbied by him in relation to Quarryvale prior to the vote of 16 May 1991 and Mr Dunlop recalled Cllr Ridge, in particular, in the run up to the May 1991 vote asking about Mr Gilmartin’s whereabouts. Mr Dunlop had told her that Mr Gilmartin had ‘revenue’ difficulties.

29.03 Mr Dunlop and Cllr Ridge were known to each other prior to Mr Dunlop’s retention as a Quarryvale lobbyist, an association that went back to the early 1980s. During the course of the Review of the 1983 Development Plan there was frequent contact between Mr Dunlop and Cllr Ridge. In 1991 Mr Dunlop’s diary recorded six meetings with Cllr Ridge, and his office records suggested eight telephone contacts by her. In 1992 there were sixteen recorded meetings in Mr Dunlop’s diary and some 33 recorded telephone contacts to his office, relating to Cllr Ridge. For 1993 Mr Dunlop’s diary recorded twenty meetings with Cllr Ridge and his office recorded 73 telephone contacts with her. Mr Dunlop indicated to the Tribunal that his contact with Cllr Ridge in the years 1991, 1992 and 1993 was greater than appeared from his diary and office telephone records, an assertion not disputed by Cllr Ridge in her evidence.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT GIVEN TO CLLR RIDGE BY MR DUNLOP

29.04 Mr Dunlop stated that he gave Cllr Ridge a cash donation of IR£1,000 during her November 1992 General Election campaign and IR£500 during her January 1993 Seanad Campaign. Furthermore, Mr Dunlop asserted that for both of those campaigns he had provided Cllr Ridge with further assistance by discharging on her behalf election expenditure and outlay, which he subsequently recovered from Mr O’Callaghan. While Mr Dunlop stated that Cllr Ridge had not been the recipient of a direct political contribution from him for the 1991 Local Election, he revealed that he had also funded the production/distribution of election literature for her at that time, the cost of which had again been recouped from Mr O’Callaghan.

29.05 On Day 146 (18 April 2000), Cllr Ridge’s name appeared on Mr Dunlop’s ‘Preliminary List’ of councillors whom Mr Dunlop claimed sought monies from him. Mr Dunlop, when submitting this list did not make allegations of improper demands for money with regard to the persons identified on that list. Cllr Ridge’s name did not feature on Mr Dunlop’s ‘1991 Local Election contributions’ list but she did feature on the continuation list he made – the ‘1992 List’ – the list of persons, whom Mr Dunlop, on Day 148, claimed were recipients of payments made from withdrawals from his Rathfarnham account in 1992.

29.06 On the ‘1992 List’ Cllr Ridge was noted as a recipient of IR£500 cash.

29.07 In his October 2000 statement Mr Dunlop, with specific reference to Cllr Ridge, stated as follows:

There was a long association between us. There was no direct request for money at the time of the 1991 Local Elections. I visited her home and indicated that I was willing to support her campaign. A sum of £500 in cash was paid there and then. A further payment of £500 in cash was made in January of 1993 in connection with the Senate Election. It was Ms. Ridge who made the request for support on behalf of Ms. Mitchell. Ms. Ridge was very determined to see something take place in north Clondalkin and was a strong supporter of Quarryvale. I met her frequently with Mr. O’Callaghan. Other assistance would have been provided to Councillor Ridge by way of election literature which amounted to a sum in excess of £4,000 (Appendix 1). I accompanied her to Cork during the 1993 Senate Election campaign to meet Mr. O’Callaghan who introduced her to various councillors in Cork. We flew to Cork and back. I paid for the tickets.

29.08 In his December 2003 Quarryvale statement Mr Dunlop did not specifically address the issue of direct/indirect financial assistance provided to Cllr Ridge in the 1992/1993 General Election and Senate campaigns but he did make reference to indirect financial assistance provided to her in relation to the June 1991 Local Election.

29.09 Cllr Ridge’s disclosure of electoral financial assistance rendered by Mr Dunlop was set out in a letter furnished by her solicitors to the Tribunal on 14 February 2000 wherein, inter alia, in relation to Cllr Ridge’s electoral campaigns of November 1992/January 1993 it was stated:

Frank Dunlop contributed £500.00 towards the expenses of a general election campaign and £500.00 towards the expenses of a senate election campaign. He also assisted with printing. It should be noted in this respect that Frank Dunlop is a long standing friend of the Ridge family for approximately 20 years.

29.10 In a more formal statement from Cllr Ridge, which accompanied a letter from her solicitors dated 2 May 2000, the issue of Mr Dunlop's electoral financial assistance was again addressed in the following terms:

Frank Dunlop gave me a donation of £500.00 for the 1992 General Election and £500 for the Seanad Election 1993. Frank Dunlop has been known to me since 1980 / 1981 and we have maintained that friendship (from before I entered politics). He also assisted with some printing.

29.11 And, Cllr Ridge, with reference to Mr O'Callaghan stated:

'Owen O'Callaghan whom I first met in 1990 assisted me by driving me to call on a number of councillors in the Cork area during the Seanad campaign / elections.'

29.12 The Fine Gael Committee of Inquiry, established after Mr Dunlop's April/May 2000 revelations to the Tribunal, noted Cllr Ridge as having advised it that Mr Dunlop had given her '£500 (1992 Election Account) – cash – unsolicited' and 'She also received an unsolicited donation of £500 in cash from him at the time of the 1993 Senate Election.'

29.13 However Mr Dunlop and Cllr Ridge both testified that in November 1992 Cllr Ridge was the recipient of an IR£1,000 cash donation, given to her by Mr Dunlop at her home during the election campaign.

29.14 Thus, their respective testimonies deviated somewhat from what they had advised the Tribunal in their respective statements to the Tribunal in 2000.

29.15 On Day 835 Cllr Ridge accounted for the discrepancy between her sworn testimony and what she had set out in her correspondence with the Tribunal, (namely, that she had received IR£1,000 in two tranches) on the basis that in her mind when composing her statement she had 'split' the donation into two parts because of two elections, one immediately following the other.

29.16 As was apparent from the content of correspondence from her solicitors to the Tribunal on 12 February 2003, by the time Cllr Ridge advised the Tribunal in 2000 that she had received money from Mr Dunlop in two tranches, it appeared that, as early as 1998 she learned from Mr Dunlop that he had given her 'an unsolicited cash donation' in November 1992 of IR£1000.

29.17 Similarly, Mr Dunlop's testimony of handing Cllr Ridge IR£1,000 in cash in November 1992 was inconsistent with the content of his October 2000 statement, which had made reference to a payment of IR£500 for the 1991 Local Elections and a payment of IR£500 in January 1993.

29.18 In the course of his testimony, he maintained that, in addition to the IR£1,000 cash donation given to Cllr Ridge in November 1992, he believed he had provided her with a further cash contribution of IR£500 for her Seanad campaign in January 1993. However, he later appeared to accept that his IR£1,000 was in respect of 'either the General Elections or the Senate Election campaign.'

29.19 Cllr Ridge denied that she had received a further cash donation from Mr Dunlop in January 1993.

29.20 Although the Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Ridge was the beneficiary of IR£1,000 cash sum from Mr Dunlop in and around the time of the November 1992 General Election, it was not satisfied to make a finding that she received a further cash sum over and above that IR£1,000.

29.21 Cllr Ridge told the Tribunal of her 'amazement' and 'great delight' at receiving the IR£1,000 from Mr Dunlop, which she said was unsolicited. Mr Dunlop's evidence was however that his general election contribution to Cllr Ridge had been solicited by her.

29.22 On Day 813 the following exchange took place between Tribunal Counsel and Mr Dunlop on the circumstances in which the IR£1,000 was given to Cllr Ridge:

'Q. 219 Did you have any discussion with Ms. Ridge about Quarryvale?'

A: Yes. And for clarity, on a ongoing basis with Ms. Ridge and on the day that I gave her money, yes.

'Q.220 Ms. Ridge told the Tribunal herself on Day 700 that she was voting for Quarryvale no matter what, that she was an ardent supporter of the Quarryvale project?'

A: Well there is absolutely no doubt about that. I would not dispute that for one moment. She was a very significant supporter of Quarryvale from day one.

Q.221 And in fact I think you have described to the Tribunal that you understood that she was the person who advised you to go and see Mr Gerry Leahy about securing the support of Mr Peter Brady for Quarryvale, isn't that right?

A: That's correct.

Q.222 So that she was a pro-active member of the pro-Quarryvale team, is that right?

A: Yes, and an identified pro-active member.

Q.223 Do you say to the Tribunal, Mr Dunlop, that the payment of 1000 pounds to Ms. Ridge was an improper payment to secure and continue with her support for Quarryvale?

A: The payment was in cash. It was in relation to the 1992 General Election of which Ms. Ridge was a candidate. On the occasion which I gave the money to Ms Ridge a number of issues were traversed including Quarryvale.

Q.224 You understand my question?

A: Yes I do.

Q.225. Mr Dunlop, you have given unequivocal evidence, in relation to other Councillors that they sought support, they sought money for their support?

A. Yes.

Q.226 Now in relation to Ms. Ridge will you simply make your position absolutely clear to the Tribunal?

A. Yes.

Q.227 Are you saying that this payment of 1,000 Pounds to Ms. Ridge in November 1992 was an improper or corrupt payment to secure or continue her support for Quarryvale?

A. In the circumstances in which it was given and in the circumstances in which the issue of Quarryvale was discussed at the time that money was paid in cash in her home, therefore, it was in recognition of her support for Quarryvale and her ongoing support for Quarryvale. And in your terminology, therefore, it must be described as a corrupt payment.

Q.228 Did she ask you for 1,000 Pounds in return for her support for Quarryvale?

A. She did not ask me for 1,000 Pounds in return for her support for Quarryvale. She asked me for a contribution for her candidacy in the General Election of November 1992 on the basis that we were in daily contact and the main concern, the main issue of contact was Quarryvale.

Q. 229 Did she ask you for a cash contribution?

A. She did not ask me for a cash contribution. She asked me for a contribution.

Q.230 Was the person who made the decision to give her cash you, Mr. Dunlop?

A. Yes, it was.

Q.231 All right. And if I understand you correctly, you are not saying that it was on foot of a demand in return for her support?

A. No, I'm not saying it was on foot of a demand for her support, I am saying to you it was given in the circumstances which obtained which was an election in which she was a candidate, and in recognition of the support that she had given in relation to the Quarryvale matter.'

29.23 Under cross-examination by Counsel on behalf of Cllr Ridge, Mr Dunlop reiterated his evidence that, from day one, he regarded Cllr Ridge as an ardent supporter of the Quarryvale project, and he conceded that if Cllr Ridge's recollection was that on the day she received the donation, Mr Dunlop had called unannounced to her home, he would be prepared to accept her recollection in that regard.

29.24 Responding to Cllr Ridge's Counsel's assertion that as someone who was 'vehemently supportive' of a town centre for Quarryvale, Cllr Ridge's support did not need to be secured with money, Mr Dunlop responded:

'Well let me put it this way for you for convenience and expedition. She certainly wouldn't have got the support if she had not been a supporter of Quarryvale.'

29.25 In response to Counsel's assertion that Mr Dunlop had given the impression to Cllr Ridge that the donation made to her had come from him, and that Cllr Ridge was unaware that the monies in fact might have come from somebody else Mr Dunlop replied:

'Well I... I can't absolutely testify to the fact that she either asked or I told her the source of the funding, other than she was in receipt of funding for her election campaign. I don't think that there was any discussion between us as to the funding. She knew of the relationship that which had Mr. O'Callaghan. She knew what the project was. She knew the support that she herself was giving, had given it publicly. She hadn't said anything in private that she hadn't said in public. So I, if Ms. Ridge is saying that she did not know the source of the funding I can but accept that other than to say that I gave her 1,000 Pounds in cash.'

29.26 Cllr Ridge told the Tribunal that she could neither agree or disagree with Mr Dunlop's evidence that Quarryvale had been discussed on the evening Mr Dunlop had called with his election donation, but she stated that her support was never in doubt.

INDIRECT FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE GIVEN BY MR DUNLOP / MR O'CALLAGHAN TO CLLR RIDGE IN 1991, 1992 AND 1993

THE JUNE 1991 LOCAL ELECTION CAMPAIGN

29.27 Documentation discovered to the Tribunal by Mr Dunlop indicated that Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd discharged a number of bills for the printing and distribution of election literature associated with Cllr Ridge. In August 1991 Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd discharged an invoice from Keyline Studios Limited in relation to the preparation of an election brochure for Cllr Ridge, a cost Mr Dunlop, by the notation 'Owen' on the invoice, attributed as having been discharged on behalf of Mr O'Callaghan. Mr O'Callaghan accepted that this was the case. The amount of the invoice was IR£157.30.

29.28 On 28 June 1991 O'Donoghue Print Limited invoiced Frank Dunlop & Associates in the sum of IR£1,185 for the production of 15,000 election leaflets. A manuscript note on the invoice attributed the printing as having been done for 'TR' – a notation Mr Dunlop claimed referred to Cllr Ridge. Riga Ltd discharged this account on 27 September 1991, as part of an IR£8,484.29 payment, on foot of an invoice from Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd dated 6 August 1991. The outlay was then added to the Barkhill loan account in Riga.

29.29 Cllr Ridge disputed that she was the beneficiary of the 15,000 election leaflets described on the aforesaid invoice. On the invoice, as furnished to the Tribunal by Mr Dunlop, the printer's attribution as to who/what was the subject matter of the leaflets in question could not be identified because of an obliteration on the document and, as stated, the letters 'TR' were written in manuscript on the document. As it was impossible to determine from the original invoice for whom or for what the leaflets were printed, the Tribunal could not in these circumstances conclude with any degree of probability that the leaflets were printed for Cllr Ridge.

29.30 A further O'Donoghue Print invoice, also dated 28 June 1991, billed Mr Dunlop for IR£1,694 for the printing of 8,000 colour canvass cards and 8,000 A4 colour leaflets. In each case the invoices indicated that the subject matter of the work was 'Therese Ridge.' While accepting that she was the beneficiary of the 8,000 colour cards, Cllr Ridge told the Tribunal that she did not believe that she was the beneficiary of the 8,000 colour leaflets. On the balance of probability, the Tribunal concluded that the O'Donoghue Print invoice correctly identified Cllr Ridge as the subject matter of both the cards and the leaflets. The above outlay was again duly recouped by Mr Dunlop from Riga Ltd which in turn was reimbursed by Barkhill Ltd.

THE NOVEMBER 1992 GENERAL ELECTION CAMPAIGN

29.31 The Tribunal was also satisfied that in respect of her November 1992 campaign, Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd funded the production of election literature for Cllr Ridge. Documentation supplied to the Tribunal showed that it discharged a bill for IR£421.08 from O'Donoghue Print for the production of three lots of 6,000 leaflets/flyers on behalf of (i) Therese Ridge (ii) Therese Ridge and Liam Lawlor and (iii) Liam Lawlor. The 'flyers' produced for Cllr Ridge alone bore the heading 'Town Centre for Quarryvale' and described Cllr Ridge as 'the candidate in this election who fully supports a Town Centre for Quarryvale.' The combined Ridge/Lawlor 'flyers' likewise bore the heading 'Town Centre for Quarryvale' with the electorate in Dublin West being asked to vote only for those candidates (Mr Lawlor and Cllr Ridge) who supported a town centre for Quarryvale. Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd subsequently recouped the cost of this work from Mr O'Callaghan/Riga Ltd.¹

29.32 Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd also funded the production of 8,000 canvass coloured cards for Cllr Ridge in relation to her 1992 General Election campaign to the extent of IR£943.80 (IR£780 + Vat). Cllr Ridge stated that these cards also benefited two other Fine Gael candidates (Cllrs Tom Morrissey and Austin Currie). The O'Donoghue invoice ascribed the work to have been done for Cllr Ridge.

29.33 On the 23 December 1992 O'Donoghue Print appeared to have furnished a further invoice to Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd in the sum of IR£387 (IR£320 + Vat) in respect of 500 colour canvass cards for Cllr Ridge, utilised by her in her Seanad campaign.

29.34 Evidence was also given, and accepted by Cllr Ridge, that Mr Dunlop provided her with ‘headed notepaper’ in the course of her Seanad campaign. No invoice was identified in respect of this notepaper.

29.35 Cllr Ridge claimed to have been entirely unaware that the indirect financial assistance Mr Dunlop had provided in paying for election literature in the course of her Election campaign had been recouped from Mr O’Callaghan through Riga Ltd or Barkhill Ltd.

29.36 During the course of her 1993 Seanad Election campaign Mr Dunlop arranged for Cllr Ridge to travel to Cork for the purposes of canvassing councillors in that area. He accompanied her on her journey to Cork and paid for the flights and discharged Cllr Ridge’s hotel accommodation costs. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that it was likely that the costs involved were passed on to Mr O’Callaghan. Cllr Ridge maintained that she was unaware that the costs had been paid by Mr O’Callaghan.

29.37 Mr O’Callaghan personally drove Cllr Ridge around Counties Cork, Kerry and Limerick and introduced her to county councillors, as part of her 1993 Seanad canvassing. Cllr Ridge was however unsuccessful in her 1993 Seanad Election. Mr O’Callaghan again repeated this exercise for Cllr Ridge in the course of the 1997 Seanad Election campaign. She was elected as a Senator in 1997.

29.38 Mr Dunlop gave evidence that a Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd invoice of 26 November 1993 sent to Riga Ltd in connection with ‘costs associated with Quarryvale’ (total IR£7,300) arose from the provision and distribution of Christmas hampers to a number of Councillors to a total value of IR£4,500 and for subscriptions made by Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd to a number of charitable organisations, at the behest of Councillors. In the list provided by Mr Dunlop to Mr O’Callaghan there was reference to donations of IR£250 and IR£400 paid to named charities as suggested by ‘TR.’

29.39 Mr O’Callaghan gave evidence that in July 1996, having been advised by Mr Dunlop that Cllr Ridge was organising a fundraising dinner on behalf of Fine Gael, he instructed Mr Dunlop to contribute IR£1,000 on his behalf. The sum was duly repaid to Mr Dunlop by Barkhill Ltd pursuant to an invoice dated 17 July 1996.

29.40 In November 1997 following a direct approach by Cllr Ridge, Mr O’Callaghan again made a contribution of IR£1,000 to a Fine Gael fundraising dinner by personal cheque, a sum which has duly recouped by Mr O’Callaghan from Riga Ltd. In the books of Riga Ltd the IR£1,000 was analysed under ‘POLITICAL DON.’

29.41 Unlike all previous costs associated with Cllr Ridge’s election campaign or projects which were paid by Riga Ltd, the October 1997 IR£1,000 was not attributed in Riga’s books as an expenditure paid out on behalf of Barkhill Ltd.

CLLR RIDGE’S ON THE GROUND INVOLVEMENT IN THE REZONING OF QUARRYVALE

29.42 The Tribunal was satisfied that by mid-1992 Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan had established ongoing contact with Cllr Ridge in relation to Quarryvale. Mr Dunlop described Cllr Ridge as having been pro-active in advocating the Town Centre for Quarryvale. In this regard Cllr Ridge maintained extremely close links with Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Ridge was instrumental in lobbying her Fine Gael colleagues to support Quarryvale and she was specifically given the task by Mr Dunlop of approaching Cllr Mary Elliott in relation to Quarryvale.

29.43 According to Mr Dunlop, Cllr Ridge recommended to Mr Dunlop that Mr O’Callaghan might approach Mr Gerry Leahy (a local auctioneer) with a view to obtaining the support of Cllr Peter Brady, a Fine Gael councillor based in Lucan and whose pro-Quarryvale vote, Mr Dunlop stated, was important, given the proximity of Cllr Brady’s Lucan electoral base to the Quarryvale lands.

29.44 Cllr Ridge told the Tribunal that she had no recollection of advising Mr Dunlop to this effect. However, the Tribunal was nevertheless satisfied that she did so and that, at Mr Dunlop’s behest, she retained a close interest in Cllr Brady’s voting intentions in relation to Quarryvale. Cllr Brady went on to support ‘C’ and ‘E’ zoning for Quarryvale on the 17 December 1992.

CONTACTS BY CLLR RIDGE WITH MR DUNLOP IN THE WEEKS LEADING UP TO 17 DECEMBER 1992

29.45 Telephone contact was made by Cllr Ridge with Mr Dunlop’s office on 4, 5 and 6 November 1992, a timescale which coincided with the calling of the 1992 General Election.

29.46 Cllr Ridge, together with Cllrs McGrath, O'Halloran and Tyndall, was a signatory to the Motion lodged with Dublin County Council on 9 December 1992 and which sought to adopt that part of the Manager's report which recommended 'C' and 'E' zoning for Quarryvale, and which reinstated a 'D' zoning on the Neilstown lands. While Cllr Ridge could not recall who had given her the motion for the signature, the Tribunal was satisfied that she signed the motion at the behest of Mr Dunlop. On 8 December 1992, the day prior to the lodging of the motion, three of the signatories, (Cllrs Ridge, McGrath and O'Halloran) made contact with Mr Dunlop. Also on 8 December 1992, Mr Dunlop's diary stated the following: '7.30 Dinner Therese, Olivia Mary, Ann, Owen O'C Le Coq.' On the 9 December 1992 Mr Dunlop had scheduled meetings with Cllrs Ridge, McGrath and O'Halloran according to his diary.

29.47 The Tribunal was also satisfied that Cllr Ridge was one of the councillors who urged Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan to agree to a 250,000 square feet retail cap for Quarryvale so as to ensure support for the 'C' and 'E' zoning Motion scheduled for 17 December 1992. Cllr Ridge duly voted to cap retail at 250,000 square feet on 17 December 1992.

29.48 In his evidence, Mr Dunlop claimed to have 'orchestrated' with Cllr Ridge, in advance of the Special Meeting of 17 December 1992, that she would sit next to or near Cllr Brady. On Day 782 Mr Dunlop described events in the council chamber on that date regarding Cllr Brady and Cllr Ridge as follows:

'She was right beside him or two spaces away from him there was a gap in the bill [sic]. But I am sitting in the public gallery of Dublin County Council God between us and all harm which is two shop units in O'Connell Street, converted into a chamber. And it would be impossible not to even overhear sotto voce or whispers that were conducted in that room. And when the heart stopping moment came in relation to Peter Brady, who was high on the alphabetical list, Ms Dillon, once it started you got a very clear view as to the numbers that you had in favour if at the top of the alphabetical list people started voting against whom you had already put down as for, you suddenly began to get a bit weak kneed and that Ms... Therese Ridge said to Peter, 'for Peter for'.'²

29.49 Cllr Ridge told the Tribunal that she had no recollection of the events described by Mr Dunlop. As a matter of probability the Tribunal believed that this event occurred.

CONTACT IN 1993

29.50 While Cllr Ridge had no specific recollection of the June 1993 Special Meeting at which amendments were made to the Draft Written Statement on Quarryvale, and which effectively allowed for a looser interpretation of the 250,000 square feet retail cap, the Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Ridge, Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan were in contact in advance of that Special Meeting. Between 26 April 1993 and 1 June 1993, Mr Dunlop’s office telephone records noted Cllr Ridge making telephone contact with Mr Dunlop’s office on 13 separate occasions. During this period, Mr Dunlop’s diary records 4 pre-arranged meetings with Cllr Ridge.

29.51 Likewise, the Tribunal was satisfied that in advance of the Quarryvale confirmation of the Special Meeting of 19 October 1993, Cllr Ridge kept Mr Dunlop apprised of likely developments in relation to the Quarryvale project from the perspective of Fine Gael Councillors. On 7 October 1993 she telephoned Mr Dunlop with the message ‘everything looks OK.’ On the morning of the confirmation vote (19 October 1993) she telephoned Mr Dunlop to advise him of the likely attendance or otherwise of certain of her Fine Gael colleagues – providing Mr Dunlop with an effective ‘headcount.’

CLLR RIDGE AND THE ‘4 X 2 CLUB’

29.52 Cllr Ridge acknowledged that she, together with other councillors, engaged in occasional social contact with Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop from 1992 onwards, gatherings invariably described by Mr Dunlop as the ‘4x2 club.’

29.53 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Ridge was probably in attendance at such social engagements on 8 December 1992, 24 March 1993, 28 July 1993, 2 December 1993, 21 January 1994, 26 April 1995, 24 October 1997, 8 May 1998, 15 January 1999 and 8 October 1999, based on information noted in Mr Dunlop’s diaries.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO CLLR RIDGE’S ASSOCIATION WITH MR DUNLOP AND MR O’CALLAGHAN

i. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Ridge was not merely a strong supporter of the Quarryvale project, but was in fact someone who actively engaged in providing Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan with advice in relation to the strategy generally, and specifically in relation to motions relevant to Quarryvale. She was an acknowledged conduit of information to Mr Dunlop and actively encouraged fellow councillors to support the rezoning of Quarryvale.

ii. In that context, Cllr Ridge was handsomely rewarded by Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan both in the payment (by Mr Dunlop) of generous cash donations totalling IR£1,000 in or around the time of the Dáil and Seanad Elections in 1992/1993, and by Mr Dunlop discharging significant printing and other costs associated with her election campaigns and then passing on such costs to Mr O'Callaghan.

iii. In relation to the printing and other costs paid for by Mr Dunlop, irrespective of whether or not she knew that Mr Dunlop was being reimbursed by Mr O'Callaghan/Riga/Barkhill for that largesse, and notwithstanding her friendship with Mr Dunlop, it was the case that Cllr Ridge was the beneficiary of financial assistance (direct and indirect) from Mr Dunlop whom she knew at the time to be Mr O'Callaghan's lobbyist and with whom she met with and advised on a regular basis prior to the December 1992 Quarryvale vote and prior to the confirmation vote of 19 October 1993. While Cllr Ridge was not described by either Mr Dunlop or Mr O'Callaghan as part of the Quarryvale strategy team she was nonetheless an important contact for Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan in the campaign to rezone Quarryvale and 'pro-active' in that capacity.

iv. The Tribunal was satisfied that payments to Cllr Ridge by Mr Dunlop directly (IR£1,000), and indirectly (by the discharge of costs associated with her election campaigns), made during the currency of the Quarryvale rezoning process compromised the requirement on Cllr Ridge to discharge her duties as a councillor in a disinterested fashion. Given the extent of her association with Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan throughout the Quarryvale rezoning process, it was impossible to conceive of a situation where it could reasonably be stated that she could be perceived to have acted in a disinterested manner. In the circumstances, the payments to Cllr Ridge, totaling IR£1,000 were entirely improper.

PART 7 - CLLR COLM TYNDALL (PD)

30.01 Cllr Tyndall was elected as a Progressive Democrat (PD) Cllr in the 1991 Local Election, one of six newly elected PD Dublin councillors in that election. He was elected for the Clondalkin ward – the location in which the Quarryvale lands were situated.

30.02 At the time of his election Cllr Tyndall was employed as a salesman with Marine & General Insurance Limited (an insurance brokerage firm), having commenced his employment with that firm as a school leaver in 1982. He became its Sales Executive in 1988, and then a Director and shareholder in 1995 and 2001, respectively.

30.03 From 1993 Marine & General Insurance Limited provided insurance brokerage services to a number of companies associated with Mr O’Callaghan and Quarryvale.

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN CLLR TYNDALL AND THE TRIBUNAL PRIOR TO HIS SWORN EVIDENCE IN THIS MODULE

30.04 In his response of 20 April 2000 to a request for details of his involvement in the Quarryvale rezoning project, Cllr Tyndall advised the Tribunal that he attended a number of public meetings relating to Quarryvale and had had a number of meetings with Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop. Cllr Tyndall also stated that he had met Mr Pat Keating, a representative of Green Property plc, the owners of the Blanchardstown development.

30.05 In the course of that correspondence Cllr Tyndall also stated: ‘I was never offered nor indeed looked for any reward of any nature whatsoever in connection with my vote for Quarryvale.’

30.06 In response to a further request for information from the Tribunal, in September 2004, and in particular for a more detailed account of his Quarryvale involvement, including any dealings he may have had with, inter alia, Mr Dunlop, Mr O’Callaghan or any representative of Barkhill Limited, Riga Ltd or O’Callaghan Properties Limited, Cllr Tyndall, on 16 November 2004, advised as follows:

Further to our recent discussions and correspondence I set out details of background relating to lands at Quarryvale.

I was elected in June of 1991 and had no experience as to how the Council did or didn’t work. It became apparent that the Council was in the middle of a Development Plan and the level of correspondence and representations was phenomenal from all parts of the country.

In relation to the lands at Liffey Valley I met with Mr. O’Callaghan sometime in 1991. He went through the merits of a development on these lands, however, at the time I stated that I felt it wasn’t the ideal location for the people of North Clondalkin who badly needed investment in their area.

I then went about doing a lot of research into other lands proposed for a Shopping Centre in the area and quickly discovered that these lands had been sitting idle for years with no intention of being developed. Second, being from Clondalkin Village I also came to the conclusion that no town existed called Clondalkin/Lucan and that both needed to develop in their own right.

During this time I met with many different groups all over Clondalkin who were very supportive of the Quarryvale project and urged me as their representative to support it.

I also met with the representatives from the Blanchardstown centre namely, Pat Keating and Mr. Corcoran and felt that the Blanchardstown Centre was in jeopardy when the site at Liffey Valley was developed.

It became blatantly obvious that the people who were against the Liffey Valley development were afraid of the damage it might or not do to Blanchardstown. I didn’t accept that there should be any connection between the two and felt that the Liffey Valley site had to be looked at on its own merits.

It must also be stated that in the early 90’s the economic climate was totally different to what we have become accustomed to. Indeed there were parts of North Clondalkin that suffered with 70% unemployment.

Having weighed up all of the above I came to the conclusion that the Liffey Valley site was the only site that was likely to be developed in the Clondalkin area.

I then phoned Mr. O’Callaghan to say I would be supportive of the development.

I subsequently would have met Mr. Frank Dunlop and Mr. O’Callaghan on different occasions to discuss in detail the proposal for the site. At no stage did I ask or offered any inducement of any kind for my support for Liffey Valley or indeed any other development.

I would also like to point out that I would also have met Mr. Keating on different occasions to discuss his thoughts on Blanchardstown.

It was with hurt and dismay I learnt that there may have been improprieties relating to 'Liffey Valley' as I was convinced it stood on its own merits.

30.07 In his evidence, Cllr Tyndall acknowledged his involvement as a signatory to a number of motions relating to Quarryvale and which came before the County Council on 17 December 1992, and 3 and 4 June 1993.

30.08 Asked to explain his failure to allude to his role in the Quarryvale project when he wrote his letters of 28 April 2000 and 16 November 2004 to the Tribunal, Cllr Tyndall responded:

'Again, I am not a legal, I would have interpreted that letter and replied to it as best I could. I would have assumed be it rightly or wrongly, that it is of public record, as to what manner I would have conducted myself in those meeting. And that is if I did sign a Motion to it, as I say, be it wrongly at this moment in time, but it is on the public record. And whether I would have stated in the letter or not. I replied to that letter as best I could.'

30.09 In a letter of 22 November 2004 to the Tribunal, following correspondence which had been received by his employer Marine & General Insurance Limited from the Tribunal,¹ Cllr Tyndall provided the following account of the commercial relationship that was entered into between Marine & General Insurance Limited and companies associated with Mr O'Callaghan.

Further to your most recent correspondence I wish to refute any suggestion or innuendo that I used my vote at any stage as a Cllr as a result of business dealings with Mr. O'Callaghan or Riga Limited or its representatives.

There was never any secret a company I was an employee of did insurance business relating to the building of Liffey Valley Shopping Centre. Indeed, just before the local elections in 1999 political adversaries were trying to use it against me however, the facts then and now speak for themselves.

I was born in Clondalkin, went to school in Clondalkin and started working in Clondalkin in 1982 in a company called Marine & General Insurances Limited. Some years later I took over the role as Sales Manager.

In 1991 I was elected by the people of Clondalkin/Newcastle to Dublin County Council as a non-salaried public representative. As stated previously I never sought, looked for or was offered any inducement be it money, business or otherwise to carry out my duties as a Cllr since 1991.

The simple facts are a vote took place on Liffey Valley in 1991. Building works commenced in 1996. To suggest there could be anything other than a legitimate business connection for something commencing five years after the event is absurd.

I understand the Tribunal has very serious work to investigate and I have absolutely no difficulty in assisting you in any way possible however, I would ask you to be mindful of the damage that could be done involving a company in the Tribunal business solely because I, as a public representative, was an employee.

I have worked diligently both for Marine & General and Dublin County Council and since 2001 together with two partners took over the business of Marine & General business and Hibernian Auctioneers Limited...

30.10 Cllr Tyndall told the Tribunal that the reason why, in his correspondence with the Tribunal prior to 22 November 2004, he had not averted to this commercial relationship involving his employer and Mr O’Callaghan was that he had considered that there was no connection between the insurance business associated with Mr O’Callaghan and zoning/planning issues associated with Quarryvale.

30.11 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Tyndall’s letter of 22 November, 2004, on its face, suggested that:

- 1) The rezoning of Quarryvale was concluded in 1991 and
- 2) That Mr Tyndall’s employer’s business connection with companies associated with Quarryvale/Mr O’Callaghan commenced five years after such rezoning.

30.12 However, the Tribunal was satisfied, based on evidence heard by it and documentation furnished to it, that the commercial relationship which evolved between Marine & General Insurance Limited and companies associated with Mr

O’Callaghan had its genesis, most probably, in contact which took place between Mr O’Callaghan and Cllr Tyndall in or around the month of October 1992.

30.13 The Tribunal was also satisfied that between 15 October 1992 and 28 July 1993 (the date of the first Marine & General Insurance Ltd invoice to Riga Ltd) Cllr Tyndall was actively involved in successfully negotiating an agreement for the provision of insurance brokerage services to Riga Ltd by his employer.

30.14 The Tribunal considered the content of an undated document, compiled by a Mr Gerry Leahy (an auctioneer), most probably on a date in 1994 (and believed to have been compiled in the course of legal proceedings then being taken by Mr Leahy’s employer Gunne Auctioneers against Mr O’Callaghan/Riga). That document, inter alia, made reference to a meeting which apparently took place on 25 June 1992 between Mr Leahy, Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop. The document recorded Mr Leahy’s description of discussions he had with Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop as to the level of political support that then existed for the Quarryvale rezoning. It also recorded Mr O’Callaghan stating that the Progressive Democrat councillors were being coordinated by Cllr Tyndall ‘who was handling the insurance.’

30.15 On 15 October 1992 a meeting took place between Mr O’Callaghan and Cllr Tyndall. The fact that such a meeting took place was not disputed and indeed, Mr Dunlop’s diary for that date noted as follows: ‘OOO to meet C Tyndall.’

30.16 Approximately six days following this meeting, Mr Aidan Lucey of Riga Ltd wrote to Cllr Tyndall as follows:

*Re: All Purpose Stadium and Quarryvale Town Centre
Dear Mr. Tyndall,*

Owen O’Callaghan has asked me to write to you re the above. As you are aware, it is our intention to have a pretty extensive involvement in West County Dublin and consequently it is our intention to deal with as many people and companies as possible in this region.

As your company is located in Clondalkin we would be very interested in discussing the relevant insurances with your company.

The Stadium was lodged for planning permission on Monday 19th October, and we would hope to be in a position to commence building six to nine months time. The Quarryvale project, as you are aware, will take a little longer to commence, all things being equal.

However Owen has asked me to mention to other properties that we have in our portfolio in Dublin

- a) Cumberland House – an office building in Fenian Street, Dublin 2. Value £18m. The insurances on this property have just been renewed in the past month, and we would like to talk to you about this as well, in ten months time;
- b) Prize Bond House – Lower Mount Street. Value £3m. The insurances on this property are due for renewal in March 1993.

You might put these dates in your diary, and we will make contact again as the renewal dates draw closer.

30.17 Approximately four months later, on 16 February 1993, Cllr Tyndall wrote to Mr Lucey, referring to Mr Lucey's earlier correspondence and he reminded him that the insurance renewal for Prize Bond House on Lower Mount Street, (one of the premises referred to in Mr Lucey's letter), was due for renewal in the following month and Cllr Tyndall stated that he would 'be in touch over the next few days to discuss matters at your convenience.'

30.18 As matters transpired Marine & General Insurance Limited did not secure the contract to arrange insurance on the Mount Street premises.

30.19 However, the Tribunal was satisfied that by the end of June 1993 agreement had been reached between Cllr Tyndall's company and Mr O'Callaghan/Riga Ltd to the effect that Marine & General Insurance Limited would be appointed insurance brokers for the purposes of arranging property owners' liability insurance cover for the Quarryvale lands, and public liability/contractors all risks insurance cover for such construction works as would in due course commence on these lands. There was evidence that such an agreement was in place in correspondence sent by Cllr Tyndall to two insurance companies on 30 June 1993 and 1 July 1993 respectively wherein Cllr Tyndall, on behalf of Marine & General Insurance Limited, sought quotations for public liability insurance for the Quarryvale lands. In the course of correspondence with one of the insurance companies Cllr Tyndall informed it that Marine & General Insurance Limited had 'been appointed to deal with all the insurances relating to the construction of the development in Clondalkin estimated to be over £100m.'(A reference to Quarryvale)

30.20 Riga Ltd paid its first public liability insurance premium to Marine & General insurance Limited on 2 September 1993, on foot of an invoice Marine & General Insurance sent on 28 July 1993.

30.21 In December 1993 Cllr Tyndall met Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Lucey in Cork, following which Cllr Tyndall wrote to Mr Lucey on 15 December, 1993 expressing his delight that Marine & General Insurance Limited had been appointed brokers for ‘the Athlone, Quarryvale and Stadium developments.’ The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Tyndall met with Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Lucey in the days preceding 15 December 1993.

30.22 On 19 October 1993 the Quarryvale rezoning was confirmed at a Special Meeting of the County Council, and on 10 December 1993 the 1993 Development Plan for the County of Dublin was adopted by the County Council.

30.23 In his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr John McLoughlin, a co-director (with Cllr Tyndall) in Marine & General Insurance Limited, acknowledged that his company regarded Riga Ltd/Barkhill Ltd as a substantial client, and its commercial business with them as very valuable to his company.

30.24 Evidence to the Tribunal from Mr McLoughlin, coupled with an analysis of the documentation provided to the Tribunal by Riga Ltd/Barkhill Ltd revealed that in the period 1993 and 2004 Mr O’Callaghan’s companies paid insurance premia to Marine & General Insurance Limited amounting to circa IR£1.2M, (of which a small percentage represented commission earnings to Marine & General Insurance Ltd) broken down as follows:

1993:	IR£ 2,550.00
1995:	IR£ 2,550.00
1996:	IR£91,757.16
1997:	IR£430,272.10
21/4/98 to 11/2/99:	IR£313,193.80
7/5/99 to 25/2/00:	IR£95,874.48
19/5/00 to 22/2/01:	IR£59,327.56
22/5/01 to 13/2/02:	€25,052.62
09/4/02 to 21/2/03:	€64,156.38
28/6/04 to 16/8/04:	€47,436.00

30.25 Mr McLoughlin told the Tribunal that all of the foregoing premia had been paid to Marine & General Insurance by companies associated with Mr O’Callaghan. His company had not been favoured with any insurance business directly from Sisk or any of the other contracting companies employed on the construction of the Quarryvale. However, Mr McLoughlin confirmed that because the insurance business brokered on behalf of Mr O’Callaghan and his companies were ‘wrap around’² public liability policies, Marine & General had discussions with Quarryvale contractors (including Sisk) and their legal advisors to ensure that they were satisfied with the adequacy of the insurance cover provided.

30.26 Mr McLoughlin’s testimony on this issue was in conflict with information provided by Mr O’Callaghan in his November 2007 statement to the Tribunal wherein Mr O’Callaghan, inter alia, stated:

Initially, Colm Tyndall’s insurance services were provided, following a request by him to me, on foot of a tender for Sisk building risk insurances at Liffey Valley. Whilst I did endeavour to encourage Sisk to take on Colm Tyndall, he was taken on for the provision of building risk cover for them, following a tender process.

30.27 Cllr Tyndall gave somewhat contradictory testimony regarding the circumstances in which discussions were conducted between himself and Mr O’Callaghan relating to the commercial relationship which evolved between his company and Mr O’Callaghan/Riga/Barkhill.

30.28 Cllr Tyndall was asked if, in the course of his discussions with Mr O’Callaghan of issues related to the rezoning of the Quarryvale lands, he had raised the question of Marine & General Insurance Ltd providing insurance services for the Quarryvale lands. Cllr Tyndall replied ‘absolutely not.’

30.29 On being advised that Mr O’Callaghan, in his November 2007 statement to the Tribunal, had referred to insurance services being provided by Cllr Tyndall ‘following a request by him to me’, Cllr Tyndall agreed that Mr O’Callaghan was correct and went on to say that:

‘it’s the timing where it’s important. And there was never any question or it was never discussed in the same manner or indeed the same meeting relating to any correlation between planning or indeed insurance.’

30.30 Asked to identify the meeting when the issue of insurance contracts had been discussed with Mr O’Callaghan, Cllr Tyndall replied:

‘To be honest I can’t tell you exactly. I don’t recall exactly. What I can say to you as a sales person, I would try and use every opportunity that I would have to make a sales as was my job.’ and ‘What I can do and I know very clear in my own heart and soul that there was never a question in any shape or form between the zoning, planning or anything else relating to Mr. Owen O’Callaghan and what future business the company that I was employed of it did.’

²A policy to cover all public liability on the Quarryvale site.

30.31 Mr O’Callaghan told the Tribunal that his initial contact with Cllr Tyndall, and which related to Quarryvale, was in the latter’s capacity as a councillor, and that it was ‘much later’ when Cllr Tyndall informed him that he was in the insurance business, and ‘at a later stage’ sought insurance business from him.

30.32 Mr O’Callaghan emphasised that Cllr Tyndall’s company was not ‘given’ his insurance business, but was asked to quote competitively for it. Having done so, his insurance was placed with Marine & General Insurance because of their competitive quotations.

30.33 The time span between Mr O’Callaghan first meeting Cllr Tyndall (approximately June 1991) and Mr Aidan Lucey’s first letter to him seeking quotations for insurance business (21 October 1992) was approximately 15 months.

30.34 By 21 October 1992 therefore, Cllr Tyndall had achieved a measure of success in this regard having, on foot of Mr Lucey’s letter, the expectation of business going to Marine & General Insurance from Mr O’Callaghan, as it duly did in July 1993 when Marine & General Insurance Limited invoiced Riga Limited for the first time.

30.35 From correspondence discovered to the Tribunal it also appeared to be the case that in the immediate aftermath of the confirmation of the Quarryvale rezoning Cllr Tyndall/Marine & General Insurances Ltd consolidated their agreement with Mr O’Callaghan/Riga for the provision of insurance services.

CLLR TYNDALL’S INVOLVEMENT AS A COUNCILLOR IN THE REZONING OF QUARRYVALE

30.36 By the time Cllr Tyndall was elected to the County Council, Quarryvale had been rezoned ‘Town Centre’ with a retail cap of approximately 500,000 square feet. It was the case that between the time of his election and the subsequent Quarryvale vote – 17 December 1992, Cllr Tyndall attended a number of meetings with Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop.

30.37 Cllr Tyndall was one of four Councillors, the others being Cllrs McGrath, Ridge and O’Halloran who signed the motion, lodged with the Council on 9 December, 1992, which sought inter alia, to approve the C and E zoning on the Quarryvale site as recommended by the Manager to ensure the provision of a suitable Centre to meet the overall needs of the area.³

30.38 An addendum to that motion, also signed by Cllrs McGrath, Ridge, Tyndall and O'Halloran, was likewise lodged with the County Council on 9 December 1992 and it sought:

to approve the Manager's recommendation that the lands at Neilstown zoned for town centre uses in the 1983 Development Plan should be zoned 'D' (to provide for major town centre activities) with the specific objective, 'it is an objective of the Council to encourage the development of specialised commercial, recreational, industrial and residential uses in this area.⁴

30.39 By the 17 December 1992 Special Meeting of Dublin County Council (a meeting which was devoted entirely to the issue of Quarryvale/Neilstown), in addition to the aforementioned motion in the names of Cllrs McGrath, Ridge, Tyndall and O'Halloran, a number of other motions had been lodged with the County Council which effectively sought a reversal of the Quarryvale 'D' Town Centre zoning, achieved on 16 May 1991 (a return to 'E' industrial zoning).

30.40 Cllr Tyndall voted against the zoning reversal proposal put to the Council by way of a motion in the names of Cllrs Owen Ryan and Joan Burton. That motion was unsuccessful.⁵

30.41 Cllr Tyndall also voted against a motion in the names of Cllrs Maher and Laing to rezone Quarryvale 'C1' with retail a 'Cap' of 100,000 square feet.

30.42 The motion in the names of Cllr McGrath, Devitt, Tyndall and O'Halloran seeking to amend 9 December 1991 motion by placing a retail 'Cap' on the Quarryvale development of 250,000 square feet, was passed by a margin of eleven votes.

30.43 Cllr Tyndall denied that he had any discussion with Mr O'Callaghan about the reduction of the retail 'cap' on Quarryvale, and asserted that a decision to seek such a reduction to 250,000 square feet had arisen following discussions which took place on the floor of the County Council Chamber on 17 December

1992 Cllr Tyndall stated that a decision to reduce the retail 'cap' was arrived at in order to give comfort to the Blanchardstown councillors.

30.44 As a matter of probability the Tribunal was satisfied, that, in some shape or form, prior to 17 December 1992 Cllr Tyndall was privy to discussions that were then ongoing concerning the possibility of reducing the retail 'cap' on Quarryvale to 250,000 square feet.

30.45 On 1 December 1992 Mr O'Callaghan advised AIB that 'officials' of the Council were thinking of, inter alia, 'a smaller centre for Quarryvale for approximately 250,000 sq. ft.' The Tribunal believed it unlikely, given Cllr Tyndall's contact with Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop, that he was unaware that such a reduction was being contemplated by the promoters of Quarryvale so as to ensure that Quarryvale would obtain a Town Centre zoning, or similar. In November 1992 Cllr Tyndall himself submitted a question to the County Council, namely:

to ask the Manager to comment on the limiting of the size of commercial developments to 500,000 sq. ft. in the Draft Development Plan particularly in relation to the proposed site at (address supplied) and in commenting will he please state that this is an objective of the Plan that is to be strictly adhered to?

30.46 Cllr McGrath brought Cllr Tyndall's query to the County Manager to the attention of Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop on 4 November 1992.

30.47 The Tribunal was satisfied that in the lead up to the 17 December 1992 vote, Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop had discussions with Cllrs McGrath, Ridge, Tyndall and O'Halloran in the context of what might be permitted by way of retail development in Quarryvale.

30.48 Although Cllr Tyndall had no specific recollection of the circumstances in which he came to sign the 9 December 1992 motion, the Tribunal was satisfied that he probably did so at the request of either Mr Dunlop or Mr O'Callaghan.

30.49 Following the rezoning of Quarryvale 'C' and 'E' (with a retail development limit of 250,000 square feet.), the draft Written Statement, as prepared by the County Manager described the retail development to be permitted on Quarryvale in paragraph 5.4.9 as follows:

It is an objective of the Council to foster the creation of employment opportunities in the Quarryvale area and to facilitate the provision of a district centre to serve the larger community. It is proposed to designate a district centre site at Quarryvale. This district centre shall not exceed 250,000 sq. ft. of retail shopping.

The original town centre site retains its 'D' ('to provide for major town centre activities') zoning with the following objective 'to encourage the development of specialised commercial, recreational, industrial and residential uses in the area.

30.50 On 27 April 1993 a motion⁶ in the names of Cllrs O'Halloran, Ridge, McGrath and Tyndall was lodged with the County Council proposing that:

Dublin County Council hereby resolves to delete paragraph 5.4.9 of the draft Written Statement and to substitute the following: 'it is an objective of the Council to foster the creation of employment opportunities in the Quarryvale area and to facilitate the provision of a district town centre to service the larger community. It is proposed to designate a district town centre site at Quarryvale. This district town centre shall be in the order of 250,000 sq. ft. retail floor space.

The original town centre site retains its 'D' (to provide for major town centre activities) zoning with the following objective – 'to encourage the development of specialised commercial, recreational, industrial and residential uses in the area.'

30.51 Cllr Tyndall agreed that the purpose of the motion lodged on 27 April, 1993 was to seek a less restrictive interpretation of the 250,000 square feet limit that had been placed on retail development on Quarryvale, and incorporated in paragraph 5.4.9 of the draft Written Statement.

30.52 Over the course of two days on 3 and 4 June, 1993, the issue was debated by councillors, with changes thereto being sought by way of amendments in the names of Cllrs Tyndall and Gilbride and in the names of Cllrs Sheila Terry and Catherine Quinn (PD colleagues of Cllr Tyndall's). The Terry/Quinn motion, in effect, sought to block the changes to the draft Written Statement which were being proposed by Cllrs Tyndall, Ridge, O'Halloran and McGrath.

30.53 Ultimately, on 4 June 1993, the objective to achieve a less restrictive interpretation on the 250,000 square feet 'cap' on retail development on Quarryvale was achieved.

30.54 Cllr Tyndall did not recall discussing the 27 April 1993 motion with either Mr O'Callaghan or Mr Dunlop. The Tribunal however was satisfied that he did so.

⁶ The purpose of the motion was to amend the Draft Written Statement in order to give greater leeway to the promoters of Quarryvale in terms of the retail development that might be permitted in Quarryvale Mr Dunlop credited Mr Lawlor with the idea for the motion.

The Tribunal noted that Mr Dunlop's diary for 19 April 1993 recorded a meeting with Cllr Tyndall, some eight days prior to the lodging of the motion in question.

30.55 The Tribunal was satisfied, despite Cllr Tyndall's failure of recollection in this regard, that on 4 June 1993 Mr O'Callaghan discussed with Cllr Tyndall (and indeed others) how best to achieve a less restrictive interpretation of paragraph 5.4.9 of the Written Statement.⁷

30.56 Cllr Tyndall acknowledged that in June 1993 he had not disclosed to his councillor colleagues the fact that by that time he had embarked on discussions with Mr O'Callaghan about the provision of insurance services to Mr O'Callaghan's companies by Cllr Tyndall's employer/company. Cllr Tyndall told the Tribunal 'I don't believe it was incumbent upon me to tell anybody.'

30.57 Mr Dunlop's diary for 9 September 1993 noted a meeting between Mr O'Callaghan and Cllrs Tyndall, O'Halloran and Ridge, and his diary for 22 September 1993 noted further contact with Cllr Tyndall. The Tribunal was satisfied that contact with Cllr Tyndall at this time was connected to the Quarryvale confirmation rezoning Special Meeting which would take place in October 1993.

30.58 In 1997 and 1998, the 1993 Development Plan was reviewed by South Dublin County Council, of which Cllr Tyndall was a member. The Draft Development Plan was placed on public display in early 1998 and did not include the earlier restriction cap on retail shopping on the Quarryvale lands. Cllr Tyndall voted against a motion, proposed by Cllrs O'Connell and Muldoon on 24 September 1998, which recommended that the retail cap be reinstated on the Quarryvale development.

30.59 Cllr Tyndall said that he did not recall discussing the issue with Mr O'Callaghan prior to the vote, but pointed out that he had always favoured the removal of the cap, because of his belief that it had been imposed initially in 1993 simply to appease the people of Blanchardstown.

30.60 Councillor Tyndall was not in a position to confirm whether he received a donation of IR£500 from Mr O'Callaghan in 1999. He explained that any such donation would have been paid in the course of a golf classic fundraising event.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO CLLR
TYNDALL’S ASSOCIATION WITH THE REZONING OF THE QUARRYVALE
LANDS AND THE REMOVAL OF ITS RETAIL CAP (IN 1998)

- i. The Tribunal was satisfied that within the period June 1991 to October 1992, and during which period Mr O’Callaghan lobbied Cllr Tyndall in relation to the Quarryvale rezoning proposal, Cllr Tyndall (on behalf of his company Marine & General Insurance Limited), likewise lobbied Mr O’Callaghan for his company to be appointed insurance broker to companies associated with Mr O’Callaghan.

- ii. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Tyndall exploited his position as an elected councillor (and more particularly the role as a councillor exercising his entitlement to vote on matters relevant to the development of Quarryvale) in circumstances which benefited a company with which he was closely associated, Marine & General Insurances, and in doing so acted improperly. The prospect of securing valuable insurance business for his company could not have but compromised Cllr Tyndall’s required disinterested performance of his duties as a councillor in relation to his dealings with Quarryvale related matters which were before, or likely to come before the Council of which Cllr Tyndall was a member.

PART 7 - CLLR G.V. WRIGHT (F.F)

31.01 Cllr Wright was first elected to Dublin County Council in 1985 in the Malahide constituency. He was also elected to the Dail in 1987, 1997 and 2002. He was appointed to the Senate in 1989 and 1993.

PAYMENT OF IR£2,000 TO CLLR WRIGHT BY MR DUNLOP IN 1991

31.02 Both Cllr Wright and Mr Dunlop agreed that Cllr Wright was the recipient of a IR£2,000 cash donation from Mr Dunlop, paid in the course of the 1991 Local Election campaign. There was however a conflict as between Cllr Wright and Mr Dunlop in relation to how, and where, the payment was made¹.

31.03 In his October 2000 written statement to the Tribunal, Mr Dunlop had stated, referring to the said 1991 IR£2,000 payment, that same was 'handed over in the Visitors Bar of the Dail wrapped in a newspaper.'

31.04 On Day 420, Mr Dunlop resiled from this earlier description of the handing over of the payment to Cllr Wright at the time of the 1991 Local Elections, and claimed that he used this method of payment with Cllr Wright only in relation to another rezoning issue.²

31.05 In his 2003 statement to the Tribunal, Mr Dunlop had claimed that the 1991 payment was disbursed in the environs of Dublin County Council shortly after the vote of 16 May 1991.

31.06 Mr Dunlop maintained that his IR£2,000 cash payment to Cllr Wright, as with other payments made by him to other councillors at that time, although given under the 'umbrella' of the Local Election campaign, was in fact paid to Cllr Wright on foot of Cllr Wright's support for the Quarryvale rezoning project. There was no suggestion made by Mr Dunlop that he paid the money to Cllr Wright prior to the Quarryvale vote of 16 May 1991.

31.07 County Council records indicated that Cllr Wright was not present in the Council Chamber on 16 May 1991 and thus was not recorded as having voted on any motion on that date, including the Quarryvale motion.

² See Chapter Ten (Fox & Mahony).

31.08 Mr Dunlop nonetheless maintained that in the lead up to the Quarryvale vote he canvassed Cllr Wright who had indicated his support for the project, and that it was in that context that he decided to financially support Cllr Wright electorally in May/June 1991. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that Cllr Wright (and some other councillors) ‘wanted money in the context of the local elections...’, and gave ‘verbal assurances’ in relation to Quarryvale.

31.09 Cllr Wright agreed that he met Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan in relation to Quarryvale prior to the vote of 16 May 1991 but denied any link between his receipt of IR£2,000 from Mr Dunlop in May/June 1991 and his general support for the Quarryvale rezoning project.

31.10 The Tribunal regarded it as highly probable that the purpose of Mr Dunlop’s IR£2,000 cash contribution to Cllr Wright was to ensure Cllr Wright’s future support for the Quarryvale rezoning project, and was therefore improper. Mr Dunlop has been found by the Tribunal to have been put in funds by Mr O’Callaghan/Riga Ltd through Mr Dunlop’s company, Shefran, for the purpose of making disbursements to Local Election candidates.

PAYMENTS MADE TO CLLR WRIGHT BY MR DUNLOP AND BY MR O’CALLAGHAN IN 1992

31.11 By the time Cllr Wright voted in favour of the Quarryvale rezoning on 17 December 1992, he had received contributions totalling IR£10,000 from Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop, which were paid to Cllr Wright during the course of the November 1992 General Election campaign in which he was a candidate. It was likely that Mr Wright received these contributions on either 11 or 12 November 1992.

MR O’CALLAGHAN’S EVIDENCE AS TO THE CIRCUMSTANCES IN WHICH HE MADE A IR£5,000 CHEQUE PAYMENT TO CLLR WRIGHT IN NOVEMBER 1992

31.12 Mr O’Callaghan told the Tribunal that following the calling of the General Election on 5 November 1992 he met Cllr Wright in Jury’s Hotel. Cllr Wright asked him for a political contribution which Mr O’Callaghan agreed to give. Mr O’Callaghan then sought the advice of Mr Dunlop as to whether he should make a payment to Cllr Wright and Mr Dunlop had recommended to Mr O’Callaghan that he do so. Mr O’Callaghan said that he then resolved to pay Cllr Wright IR£5,000, but said that he did not discuss the actual amount with Mr Dunlop. He and Mr Dunlop duly travelled together to Cllr Wright’s constituency office in Malahide, Co. Dublin. According to Mr O’Callaghan while travelling with Mr Dunlop to Malahide, the amount of the contribution he intended to pay Cllr

Wright was not discussed. Mr O’Callaghan said ‘he didn’t ask me, he wouldn’t ask me, and I wouldn’t ask him, we didn’t discuss these things.’ Mr O’Callaghan stated that he ‘never discussed these amounts with anybody.’

31.13 Mr O’Callaghan brought with him a cheque for IR£5,000 payable to Cllr Wright dated 11 November 1992 (signed by Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Lucey, Riga’s book-keeper), and drawn on Riga’s Bank of Ireland account at South Mall, Cork. When Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop arrived at Cllr Wright’s constituency office another developer, known to Mr O’Callaghan, was already in attendance. When that individual left, Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop discussed with Cllr Wright his election prospects, Mr O’Callaghan describing Cllr Wright as being ‘very excited’ about the forthcoming campaign. Mr O’Callaghan gave Cllr Wright the cheque for IR£5,000.

31.14 Mr O’Callaghan acknowledged that at the time he decided to make the payment to Cllr Wright, in response to Cllr Wright’s request, he was aware that Cllr Wright was an ‘important’ councillor in Dublin County Council. Mr O’Callaghan however denied that Cllr Wright’s importance as a councillor was a factor in his decision to give him money.

31.15 Mr O’Callaghan acknowledged that the prospects of success for the forthcoming Quarryvale rezoning vote was raised by Mr O’Callaghan in his and Mr Dunlop’s discussion with Cllr Wright.

MR DUNLOP’S EVIDENCE OF HIS IR£5,000 CASH PAYMENT TO CLLR WRIGHT

31.16 Mr Dunlop described the circumstances in which he came to accompany Mr O’Callaghan to Cllr Wright’s constituency office in November 1992 on the basis that Mr O’Callaghan had approached him and informed him that Mr Batt O’Keeffe, TD³ had recommended that Mr O’Callaghan should make an election contribution to Cllr Wright. Mr O’Callaghan had asked Mr Dunlop’s advice about the matter and Mr Dunlop advised him that it was appropriate to make such a contribution.

31.17 Mr Dunlop’s testimony on this issue was strongly refuted by Mr O’Callaghan who denied that Mr O’Keeffe had made such a recommendation, or that he had advised Mr Dunlop as such.

³ Mr O’Keeffe acknowledged receiving an unsolicited election donation of IR£10,000 from Mr O’Callaghan on 7 November 1992. This was paid personally by Mr O’Callaghan and subsequently recouped by him from Riga Ltd.

31.18 Mr Dunlop said that on arrival at Cllr Wright’s constituency office, and after the other developer had departed, he and Mr O’Callaghan discussed the forthcoming General Election with Cllr Wright. In the course of that discussion, while Mr Dunlop could not recall who had raised it, the issue of the forthcoming Quarryvale rezoning vote arose. Cllr Wright had assured Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop of his support. After Mr O’Callaghan handed his contribution to Cllr Wright, and as he and Mr O’Callaghan took their leave he had returned to Cllr Wright and handed him an envelope containing IR£5,000 cash.

31.19 Mr Dunlop believed that he probably told Mr O’Callaghan that he too had given an election contribution to Cllr Wright, although Mr Dunlop was unable to say if he had advised Mr O’Callaghan that his payment was in cash. Mr O’Callaghan testified that he was unaware that on the very day he handed his IR£5,000 cheque to Cllr Wright that Mr Dunlop was also making a similar payment of IR£5,000 to him, although he said he did become aware of the payment ‘many months’ later.

31.20 Mr Dunlop described Cllr Wright as being:

‘recognised within his own party in the first instance at that time as being an influential figure. I cannot specifically state to you whether or not he held a specific role at that stage. He was never Chairman of Dublin County Council. He was whip of the party of the Fianna Fail party group at a specific, at a stage during the course of the Development Plan but that he was well recognised as a genial facilitator.’

31.21 Mr Dunlop testified that prior to attending at Cllr Wright’s constituency office on the day in question, Cllr Wright, in the course of a telephone discussion with him, had solicited an election contribution from him. Mr Dunlop stated:

‘Yes. I had lots of telephone conversations with Mr. Wright in or around this time and on other occasions but I had a telephone conversation with the, with GV in the immediate aftermath of the calling of the General Election. During the course of which Mr. Wright and myself discussed his prospects in relation to the General Election.’

Now, all politicians have this tendency... no matter how secure they feel they are or what their majority happens to be on a given election on whatever previous election they fought, certainly the spine and the steel begins to show some sort of fault because they indicate to people that they had a tough fight on their hands. Now, GV Wright and myself had a discussion of that nature and he indicated to me that he would welcome any support that I could give him. And in the context of that discussion I told him that I would give him a contribution.’

31.22 On Day 811, the following exchange occurred between Counsel for the Tribunal and Mr Dunlop:

'Q 411. Did you or he raise the subject of Quarryvale in the course of that discussion?

A. I think it is, I cannot specifically say that I did or did not. But Mr GV Wright and I were having ongoing discussions in relation to what was happening vis-a-vis Quarryvale and the main object of the exercise was twofold. One, was when this damn vote was going to come up. And secondly, to use the colloquialism that was involved at the time did we have the numbers.

Q 412. But specifically, Mr. Dunlop, I am asking you were you asked by Mr. GV Wright for a political contribution or political support which was premised on the fact that he was going to continue supporting Quarryvale?

A. I was asked for a contribution by Mr. GV Wright in the context of the election of 1992, in the circumstances that obtained vis-a-vis a vote in Dublin County Council which was imminent.'

31.23 On Day 811 Mr Dunlop testified that:

'...there would be absolutely no reason for Mr. O'Callaghan and myself to be going out to see GV Wright, if GV Wright was an ordinary candidate...who would have no connection with Dublin County Council or would not have a role in Dublin County Council and consequently would have no role in relation to a vote in the upcoming Quarryvale... project whenever it was going to take place. But we knew it was imminent.'

31.24 Mr Dunlop further stated:

'I have absolutely no doubt whatsoever, Ms. Dillon, that Quarryvale was a subject of discussion at that meeting in that room on that morning, consistent with the very fact that the person who was in the room when we arrived for the meeting with Mr. GV Wright was another developer builder who actually spoke to Mr. O'Callaghan in querying terms as to know how things were going with Quarryvale. So Quarryvale was on the issue almost the minute we walked in the door.'

31.25 Mr Dunlop described Mr Wright as:

'...very, I think the phrase I used was very positive and I can only speak for myself, when Mr. GV Wright wanted to be positive he was quite positive and he left neither Mr. O'Callaghan or myself in any doubt as to what his actual position was in relation to the Quarryvale project.'

CLLR WRIGHT'S ACCOUNT OF EVENTS

31.26 In his May 2000 statement⁴ to the Tribunal, Cllr Wright stated, as follows:

Before the local election in June 1991 I received a donation of 2,000 pounds in cash from Mr. Frank Dunlop in the run up to the November 1992 General Election, I received a political contribution of 5,000 pounds in cash from Mr. Frank Dunlop and a cheque for 5,000 pounds from Mr. Owen O'Callaghan. I should say that these donation were made at the same time in my constituency office in Malahide when Mr. Dunlop and Mr. O' Callaghan came to see me.

31.27 Cllr Wright acknowledged, in his sworn evidence, both the receipt of a IR£5,000 cheque from Mr O'Callaghan and the IR£5,000 in cash from Mr Dunlop. Cllr Wright provided the Tribunal with the following account of the visit to his constituency office by Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan, prior to Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop arriving at his constituency office in November 1992. He received a telephone call from Mr Dunlop asking if he and Mr O'Callaghan could call to see him. Mr Dunlop had not averted to the purpose of their proposed visit but Cllr Wright suspected that it was for the purposes of giving him an Election contribution. The initial discussion between himself and Messrs O'Callaghan and Dunlop had centred on Cllr Wright's election prospects. Cllr Wright however acknowledged that after being told 'to get yourself elected' by Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop, both raised the issue of Quarryvale and stated that they would appreciate his support in relation to that project. They indicated that as soon as the election was over they would be in touch with him in his capacity as 'whip and secretary' of the Fianna Fail Council Group. Cllr Wright put it thus: 'It was mentioned that obviously after the election was over the Quarryvale file would be back in front of all of the Council.'

31.28 Cllr Wright indicated to the Tribunal that the meeting with Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop was a brief affair, when he commented: 'In the context of the morning in question ten days before an election [...] the discussion was sharp and I was out the door canvassing.'

31.29 Cllr Wright denied any suggestion that his evidence on Day 833 contradicted what had been earlier stated by him in his September 2001 statement to the Tribunal, namely that 'the Quarryvale development was not discussed specifically at this meeting nor was my support sought for this development during the course of this meeting.'

⁴ For a consideration of Cllr Wright's sequence of disclosure prior to May 2000 see Chapter Ten (Fox & Mahony).

31.30 Cllr Wright sought to explain this apparent inconsistency when he stated ‘there was no detail in any discussions [...] in relation to Quarryvale.’

31.31 Cllr Wright strongly disputed that the payments received by him from Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop were in any way connected to the then forthcoming Quarryvale rezoning vote.

31.32 In the course of that Special Meeting on 17 December 1992, Cllr Wright voted against two motions which had been brought to effectively ‘de-zone’ Quarryvale from ‘town centre’ to E (industrial). He voted against the motion to impose a retail cap of 100,000 square feet on Quarryvale, and in favour of a retail cap of 250,000 square feet (a square footage promoted by Mr O’Callaghan at the time in an effort to obtain and retain councillors’ support for the Quarryvale Town Centre zoning). He also voted in favour of adopting the Manager’s recommendation in relation to Quarryvale as made on the day – all effectively being votes in favour of the Quarryvale project.

CONTEMPORANEOUS DOCUMENTARY REFERENCES TO MR O’CALLAGHAN’S CHEQUE PAYMENT OF IR£5,000 TO CLLR GV WRIGHT

31.33 The IR£5,000 cheque to Cllr Wright was initially recorded, by the attribution ‘5098’ in the ‘sundries’ column of Riga’s cheque payments book as a payment made for Barkhill Ltd/Quarryvale. Similarly, the 9 November 1992 cheque written to Mr Dunlop for IR£70,000 (later cancelled and replaced with a direct transfer of IR£70,000 into Mr Dunlop’s 042 Account) was initially attributed as a Barkhill Ltd expense, as was a IR£10,000 cheque payment from Riga Ltd to Mr O’Callaghan (reimbursing him for a cheque made to Mr O’Keeffe in the course of the November 1992 General Election campaign).⁵

31.34 Mr Lucey, Riga’s book keeper, was unable to account as to why a donation made to Mr Batt O’Keeffe, a Cork based politician, had been initially posted as a liability of Barkhill Ltd other than to state that it was probably done so at the direction of Mr O’Callaghan. Mr Lucey also stated that in recording the IR£5,000 cheque payment to Cllr Wright as a Barkhill Ltd expense, Cllr Wright’s status as a Dublin County councillor was unknown to him and he had probably recorded the payment as a Barkhill expense at the direction of Mr O’Callaghan. The Tribunal accepted Mr Lucey’s testimony in this regard.

⁵ See Part Six.

31.35 While the attribution as Barkhill Ltd/Quarryvale related expenses appeared to have been noted by Riga’s auditor Ms Cowhig in her working documents relating to the preparation of the audited accounts, the payments made to Mr O’Keeffe and Cllr Wright were ultimately treated by Ms Cowhig as expenses of Riga Ltd solely, and were duly posted under the heading ‘Advertising and Subscriptions’ – the column in Riga’s audited accounts used for the recording of political subscriptions. Accordingly they were never available for scrutiny by Mr Gilmartin, or by Barkhill’s auditors.⁶

31.36 The memorandum prepared by Mr O’Farrell of AIB dated 1 December 1992 (already referred to elsewhere), noted information provided to him by Mr O’Callaghan stated, inter alia, ‘His lobbying continues and he indicated that he had injected IR£85,000 into the situation from O’Callaghan properties.’ (The lobbying reference was a reference to lobbying activity related to Quarryvale).

31.37 Mr O’Callaghan acknowledged that the IR£85,000 figure included the IR£70,000 paid to Mr Dunlop (and fast tracked into his bank account on 10 November 1992), the IR£10,000 paid to Mr O’Keeffe, and the IR£5,000 paid to Cllr Wright on 11 November 1992.

31.38 The available contemporaneous documentary trail, in all the circumstances suggested that Mr O’Callaghan was minded in November 1992 to direct that a payment, maintained by him to be an election contribution to a Cork based politician, be attributed (initially at least) in the books of Riga as an expense paid out on behalf of Barkhill/Quarryvale. This attribution lent some credence to Mr Dunlop’s claim of having been told by Mr O’Callaghan that Mr O’Keeffe had recommended Mr O’Callaghan make an election contribution to Cllr Wright.

31.39 While the Tribunal noted Mr O’Keeffe’s emphatic denial of any discussion with Mr O’Callaghan of the type recounted by Mr Dunlop, it nevertheless, in all the circumstances believed it likely that some such discussion took place.

31.40 Mr O’Callaghan, while conceding that the wording in the memorandum suggested that all three elements in the IR£85,000 total figure represented payments made to advance the lobbying for Quarryvale, Mr O’Callaghan denied that the IR£70,000 paid to Mr Dunlop related to Quarryvale lobbying activity (insisting that it related to fees due for work relating to the Neilstown Stadium project). Mr O’Callaghan initially acknowledged to the Tribunal that the wording in

⁶ The IR£70,000 payment to Mr Dunlop was ultimately posted to ‘work in progress Stadium.’

AIB's memorandum associated the payments of IR£10,000 to Mr O'Keeffe and IR£5,000 to Cllr Wright with Quarryvale, but later indicated that only the Cllr Wright payments related to Quarryvale lobbying activity.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO PAYMENTS TO CLLR GV WRIGHT BY MR O'CALLAGHAN AND MR DUNLOP

- i. The soliciting and acceptance by Cllr Wright of an election contribution from Mr Dunlop in 1991 in the knowledge that Mr Dunlop was Mr O'Callaghan's lobbyist compromised Cllr Wright in the exercise of his duties as a councillor, and was improper.
- ii. The Tribunal was satisfied that the purpose of Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop's trip to Cllr Wright's constituency office on 11 or 12 November 1992 was to provide Cllr Wright with a substantial payment in the expectation that Cllr Wright, in his role as a councillor and as Fianna Fail whip in the Council, and in his capacity, as Mr Dunlop put it, as a 'genial facilitator' would do his utmost to consolidate and promote support for the Quarryvale rezoning vote, an issue all concerned knew would come before the County Council in December 1992. There was no doubt but that Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop were conscious of the influential position held by Cllr Wright within Dublin County Council at that time.
- iii. While Mr O'Callaghan sought to impress upon the Tribunal that his objective, in the first instance, was to get Cllr Wright elected to the Dáil, the Tribunal was not persuaded by this argument, having regard, in particular, to the evidence of Mr Dunlop, and indeed having regard to the accounting treatment that was initially attributed, within Riga's books, to Cllr Wright's election contribution from Mr O'Callaghan.⁷
- iv. The Tribunal considered it highly unlikely that Mr O'Callaghan was not aware, either before the meeting with Cllr Wright, or during it, or immediately thereafter, that Mr Dunlop was, similarly to himself, making (or had made) a payment of IR£5,000 to Cllr Wright.
- v. The Tribunal was satisfied that the primary motivation behind the payment of a total of IR£10,000 by Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop to Cllr Wright on 11 or 12 November 1992, was to ensure Cllr Wright's ongoing and continued support for the Quarryvale project, and had little (if anything) to do with Cllr Wright's candidature in the General Election, other than the election provided an opportunity to Cllr Wright to receive substantial payments of money under the guise of election donations.

vi. The Tribunal was also satisfied that Cllr Wright was fully aware of the true purpose behind both payments. Likewise, the Tribunal believed that Cllr Wright solicited the payment from Mr Dunlop.

vii. In all the circumstances, and particularly having regard to the proximity of the payments, totalling IR£10,000, and the crucial December 1992 Quarryvale vote, and having regard to the nature of the discussion which took place on 11/12 November at Mr Wright's constituency office, the Tribunal was satisfied that both the providers and the recipient respectively corruptly paid and received IR£10,000 under the pretence that the two payments were political donations.

viii. In relation to the conflict as between Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop regarding Mr Dunlop's assertion that Mr O'Callaghan had been advised by Mr Batt O'Keeffe to give an election contribution to Cllr Wright (an assertion which was denied by Mr O'Keeffe), the Tribunal was inclined towards the view (notwithstanding the somewhat late recollection by Mr Dunlop of Mr O'Keeffe's name) that Mr O'Callaghan had indicated to Mr Dunlop, in some fashion or another, that Mr O'Keeffe had a role in his decision to make a contribution to Cllr Wright.

ix. The Tribunal was unable to determine the true purpose of the payment of IR£10,000 to Mr Batt O'Keeffe, in circumstances where it was initially categorised, both in Riga's books and in information provided by Mr O'Callaghan to AIB, as a payment associated with Quarryvale.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - 'THE MEN IN DARK GLASSES'

INTRODUCTION

32.01 At the commencement of this part, reference was made to meetings with local resident groups as having been an important aspect of the campaign to rezone the Quarryvale lands. Evidence was given to the Tribunal of a number of such meetings, the necessity of such contact, and its importance, related to the fact that the proposed rezoning and development of the Quarryvale lands did not have widespread support within local communities. There was concern with the concept of, in effect, switching the retail zoning from Neilstown to Quarryvale, and there was also apprehension in some quarters that the development of Quarryvale would harm the nearby proposed development of the Blanchardstown lands (Green Property plc). One particular meeting with local interests, and which involved both Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Gilmartin attending a public house in Clondalkin, became, in the course of the public hearings in Quarryvale, an issue of some considerable controversy.

MR GILMARTIN'S TESTIMONY

32.02 Mr Gilmartin gave sworn testimony to the Tribunal that, on an occasion in or around the 'Autumn of 1990', he was taken by Mr O'Callaghan to a public house in Clondalkin for the purpose of meeting residents from the Quarryvale area, as part of the campaign to bolster local support for the Quarryvale rezoning project. Mr Gilmartin maintained that he accompanied Mr O'Callaghan for this purpose at the instigation of Mr Eddie Kay of AIB.

32.03 Mr Kay testified that, subsequent to Mr O'Callaghan becoming involved in Barkhill Ltd, and in the context of the process of lobbying then underway, that he may have requested Mr Gilmartin to go 'canvassing' with Mr O'Callaghan, so as to present a 'united front.' Mr Kay denied that he had requested Mr Gilmartin to meet politicians, or representatives of political parties, or that he instigated any such meetings. As a matter of probability, the Tribunal accepted that, insofar as Mr Kay had a role in the matter considered hereunder, it was as described by Mr Kay himself. In any event, Mr Gilmartin, in the course of his evidence, only maintained that he had been requested by Mr Kay to accompany Mr O'Callaghan to a meeting with a residents association.

32.04 Mr Gilmartin's description of what occurred when he arrived at the public house was as follows:

'..We arrived into a pub. And when I went in there, there was nobody there. There was one or two people at the bar. We went over and sat at a table and I asked Mr. O'Callaghan. I says, 'where are those residents I'm supposed to meet' and he says 'well just wait, just wait.' So we waited about five minutes or more, I'm not quite sure of the time. And then three people arrived, three people, two of them had dark glasses on them, they had dark sun glasses on them, they walked over and sat at a table looking at me but just looking in my direction and one came over and sat at our table. So I asked Mr. O'Callaghan, you know, what is this about and he says 'oh, well listen.' So this gentleman said to me 'I am the Sinn Féin representative for this area' and he said 'you are on our patch.'

32.05 Mr Gilmartin maintained that the man whom he said introduced himself as a Sinn Fein representative, said to him 'we have a file on you' (a reference which was understood by Mr Gilmartin to be to his previous involvement in a development in Bangor, Northern Ireland). Mr Gilmartin testified that, when he inquired of the individual if he, Mr Gilmartin, was being threatened, Mr O'Callaghan ordered him to listen to the man. Mr Gilmartin stated that following strong words from him to the individual in question, he, Mr Gilmartin, got up and walked out of the public house, whereupon he was joined by Mr O'Callaghan; both then travelled back into the city by taxi. Mr Gilmartin also stated that en route back to the city, he confronted Mr O'Callaghan about the nature of the meeting, but that Mr O'Callaghan merely advised him to take heed as to what had been said.

32.06 Mr Gilmartin identified the man with whom he spoke on the occasion in question, as Cllr Christy Burke, who was at the time an elected Sinn Fein Dublin City councillor.

MR GILMARTIN'S PRIOR DISCLOSURE OF THIS MATTER TO THE TRIBUNAL

32.07 Mr Gilmartin's first formal statement on this issue was made under cover of a letter from his solicitors to the Tribunal, dated 20 February, 2004. That letter advised as follows:

Our client has instructed us to write to you, concerning a meeting that he attended in Clondalkin in the Autumn of [1987][1997]¹.

You will recall that during one of the earlier interviews by Counsel for the Tribunal with our client, he recollected being taken by Owen O'Callaghan to a public house in Clondalkin which he was told by Mr. O'Callaghan was for the purpose of attending a resident meeting in connection with the proposed Quarryvale Development.

When our client arrived at the public house in Clondalkin, we are instructed that he was approached by two men wearing dark clothing and dark sunglasses and a third man who identified himself as a Sinn Féin Councillor for the area. We are further instructed that Mr. O'Callaghan stepped away from the group at that point.

At that time, our client instructs us that he did not know the identity of this person. Our client has since seen a photograph of the person, who described himself as a Sinn Féin Councillor, a copy of which we now attach. You will note that the photograph is of Christy Burke, a Sinn Féin representative.

32.08 Prior to the aforesaid communication from his Solicitors, Mr Gilmartin made a reference to an incident in a public house involving 'a man wearing dark glasses', in the course of a meeting with Counsel for the Tribunal on 26 February, 1998.

32.09 Counsel's notes of that meeting contained, inter alia, the following:

He recounted an occasion he was asked by Eoin O'Callaghan to Clondalkin. He felt that he was going to inspect a site and meet somebody of some significance. O'Callaghan took him to a pub and they sat for some time. They were then approached by a man wearing dark glasses who threatened Mr. Gilmartin and said they had a file on him in relation to his activities in the North.

Mr. Gilmartin explained that this meeting was intended to frighten him and to ensure that he would not continue any development in the Clondalkin area.

32.10 In the course of a taped question and answer discussion between himself and his then solicitor, Mr Noel Smyth in London on 20 May, 1998, Mr Gilmartin made reference to his travelling to a public house in Clondalkin in the company of Mr O'Callaghan, and there meeting a Sinn Féin Councillor. Mr Gilmartin was recorded as stating:

'...O'Callaghan invited me one day from a board meeting that I had to go out to Clondalkin because there was people out there would like to see me. And when I went out it was a Sinn Féin Councillor and others was there. And this fella came in and he sat down and he announced, I have his name incidentally at home, I've got a list anyway and he sat down. We met in a pub in Clondalkin. O'Callaghan paid the taxi all the way out. Introduced me to this fella, for him to announce to me they had a file on me. So I said who has. We have. I said who are you. All you need to know is I'm a Sinn Féin Councillor. And I said I don't give a fuck who you are. I said what's that got to do with me. So he said oh, you operated in Northern Ireland, he says, and the boys has got a file on you. But I said what is this supposed to mean, what does it mean I said you got a file on me.What's it in aid of I said, what's the bottom line here. And O'Callaghan said you better listen to him, to me....

So O'Callaghan said you better listen he said. I said listen to what. I said is this a threat, are you making a threat to me. He says well you take what you like...'

32.11 Mr Gilmartin was further recorded by Mr Smyth as making reference to his having taped the encounter he had with the individual in the public house in Clondalkin. In the course of his evidence, he explained that he had recorded the encounter with a dictaphone which he had with him at the time. Mr Gilmartin claimed that he had replayed the recording to himself on occasions, thereafter. However, according to Mr Gilmartin, this recording was destroyed in 1996.

32.12 In the autumn of 1998 Mr Pdraig Flynn, in the course of a telephone call made by Mr Flynn to Mr Gilmartin, noted Mr Gilmartin as having stated, inter alia, the following:

I was taken to pub – a Clondalkin pub – guy with dark glasses said he had a file on me.

You operated in the North and you won't here

To watch your step

He was a Sinn Féin Councillor

O'Callaghan sat on wall outside

I said are you threatening me

You had a thing in Bangor, you're not going to get involved in Ireland.

32.13 Notwithstanding the fact that Mr Gilmartin raised an issue involving a public house in Clondalkin, and of an encounter with a man who claimed to be a Sinn Féin representative (in circumstances where he felt his business interests in Clondalkin/Quarryvale were being threatened) with Counsel for the Tribunal in February, 1998 and with his own Solicitor, in May, 1998, an Affidavit sworn by Mr Gilmartin on 2 October, 1998, was silent on the matter. Nor did his initial formal statement, provided to the Tribunal on 17 May, 2001, make reference to the matter.

MR GILMARTIN'S IDENTIFICATION OF CLLR CHRISTY BURKE

32.14 Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that the man who had approached him in the public house in Clondalkin had not been introduced to him at the time, nor was the individual known to him. Mr Gilmartin stated that he was simply told by the man who approached him that he was a Sinn Féin representative.

32.15 Mr Gilmartin alleged that the man in question was Cllr Christy Burke. Mr Gilmartin said that a third party had given him the names of three individuals, one of whom might have been the man who had approached him in the public house. With his son's help, Mr Gilmartin identified Cllr Burke from an internet photograph of Cllr Burke. Mr Gilmartin said:

'...I did not identify or know Christy Burke at all [at the time of the encounter]. And neither did I know who the gentleman in front of me was for years after the event took place. And I was only able to identify him from a picture taken off the internet some years later.'

32.16 And Mr Gilmartin further stated: '...as the minute I saw Mr. Burke [from the picture taken off the internet] he was the gentleman who was sitting in front of me in the pub in Clondalkin.'

32.17 In the course of cross-examination by Counsel for Mr O'Callaghan, in the context of Mr Gilmartin having been recorded by Mr Smyth on 20 May 1998 as stating 'I have his name incidentally at home', Mr Gilmartin said that that statement by him was a reference to the fact that in or about that time he was in possession of the three names given to him by a third party. Mr Gilmartin was unable to recall the third party who provided him with the three names, but did recall the three names he had been given. In the course of his testimony on Day 761 Mr Gilmartin provided these names to the Tribunal, in a written list. He acknowledged that this was the first occasion on which he provided the names to the Tribunal. The thrust of Mr Gilmartin's evidence was that it was on the basis of the names he had been given by this third party, that the internet search had been conducted with his son's help. In correspondence from Mr Gilmartin's Solicitors, dated 20 February, 2004 a copy of the internet photograph of Cllr Burke was provided to the Tribunal. It was common case that the photograph in question was indeed that of Cllr Burke.

32.18 In the course of it being put to Mr Gilmartin that Cllr Burke had never met Mr Gilmartin (or indeed, Mr O'Callaghan), and that he had never been in a public house in Clondalkin, and that therefore Mr Gilmartin had been mistaken in identifying Councillor Burke, Mr Gilmartin stated 'the only admission I will make to making a mistake, if I see an identical face' (to Mr Burke's), and he went on to state 'it will have to be practically identical...down to the glasses...down to even his teeth..'

32.19 Asked by Cllr Burke's Counsel to describe the man he claimed to have met in the public house in Clondalkin, Mr Gilmartin stated that he recalled that the man had 'gingerish hair,' that he was 'smallish' and had 'a roundish face.' Asked if the individual had any distinguishing features or marks, Mr Gilmartin responded that he '...didn't see... any birthmarks on him, but I remember his teeth were uneven...' Mr Gilmartin also stated 'I didn't get the photograph wrong, that face is embedded on my memory.' Counsel informed Mr Gilmartin that Cllr Burke had in fact a birthmark on his neck.

CLLR CHRISTY BURKE'S EVIDENCE

32.20 Subsequent to the receipt of the copy photograph of Cllr Burke from Mr Gilmartin's solicitors, the Tribunal wrote to Cllr Burke advising him that it had received information that he had attended a residents' meeting in a public house in Clondalkin in the autumn of 1987,² and that one of the persons present at the meeting was Mr Gilmartin. The Tribunal advised Cllr Burke that it had received information that he had introduced himself to Mr Gilmartin as a Sinn Féin councillor for the area. Cllr Burke was asked to inform the Tribunal whether he had in fact attended such a residents' meeting in the circumstances described, and whether he had met with Mr Gilmartin, and if anything had been discussed between them. He was also asked to confirm whether or not he was accompanied by anyone to the meeting, and if so, to identify such persons.

32.21 On 13 April 2005, Cllr Burke telephoned the Tribunal and advised that, '(a) he had never attended a meeting in relation to Quarryvale, (b) he had never met Tom Gilmartin in his life, and (c) Quarryvale was not in his ward.' Cllr Burke was also noted as having informed the Tribunal that the only person he could think of who might have met Mr Gilmartin was a Sinn Féin representative named John McCann who had a similar appearance to his own.

32.22 Some days later, Cllr Burke's solicitors wrote to the Tribunal in the following terms:

We are instructed that Mr. Burke never attended a residents' meeting in a public house in Clondalkin in the Autumn of 1987. Mr. Burke has been a member of Dublin City Council formerly known as Dublin Corporation since he was first elected in June 1985. He represents the North Inner ² The date 1987 was referred to in the Tribunal's letter. In the letter from Mr Gilmartin's solicitors of 20 February 2004 the date given was difficult to decipher, although the letter suggested either 1987 or 1997.

City Ward and he never attended a meeting with the developers of the proposed Quarryvale site, now known as Liffey Valley Shopping Centre.

He has never met Mr. Thomas Gilmartin and certainly never met him at a residents' meeting in a public house in Clondalkin in the Autumn of 1987.

Please identify the person who has provided the information to the Tribunal that Mr. Burke introduced himself to Mr. Gilmartin as a Sinn Féin Councillor for the area at a residents' meeting in a public house in Clondalkin in the Autumn of 1987.

32.23 Consequent on Mr Gilmartin's statement to the Tribunal in relation to the matter having been provided to Cllr Burke, and following sworn testimony given by Mr Gilmartin, Cllr Burke provided a further statement to the Tribunal on 3 October 2007 in which he denied Mr Gilmartin's allegation that Mr Gilmartin and himself had met in a public house in Clondalkin. Cllr Burke's statement continued:

I have carried out inquiries within the Sinn Féin organisation and ascertained that Mr. John McCann was the Sinn Féin representative of the Clondalkin area in 1990. My Solicitors have spoken with Mr. McCann and he has confirmed that he attended a meeting on behalf of the Quarryvale Residents' Association accompanied by the Chairman of the Quarryvale Residents' Association at the Jenson Hotel in late 1990 or early 1991. This meeting was organised by Mr. Frank Dunlop on behalf of Mr. Owen O'Callaghan. I understand that Mr. Gilmartin attended the meeting, accompanied by Mr. O'Callaghan and Mr. Dunlop, and they outlined details of the proposals for the Quarryvale site to the representative of the Quarryvale Residents' Association.

The allegation by Mr. Gilmartin that I attended a meeting in Autumn 1990 in a public house in Clondalkin is completely untrue and unfounded. The description of how he identified the person who he met at the alleged meeting in Autumn 1990 not credible in my opinion. His identification of the person in question was not carried out until approximately fourteen years after the event. I understand that Mr. John McCann was of similar appearance to me in the Autumn of 1990, he wore a beard and glasses, similar to the beard and glasses I wore at the time.

32.24 In the course of his sworn testimony to the Tribunal, Cllr Burke reiterated his denial of ever having met Mr Gilmartin or having met him in the public house in Clondalkin. He also denied that he ever met Mr O'Callaghan. Cllr Burke acknowledged that he knew Mr Dunlop, and had been lobbied by Mr Dunlop in relation to matters unconnected to Quarryvale.

32.25 In response to questions posed by Tribunal Counsel, and by his own Counsel, Cllr Burke told the Tribunal that he was prepared to take a lie detector test verifying that he had never met Mr Gilmartin. The Tribunal did not require him to do so.

MR JOHN MCCANN AND MR PAT JENNINGS

32.26 In October 2007, the Tribunal wrote to Mr McCann and Mr Jennings requesting them to provide a brief narrative statement dealing with any contact they may have had with Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Gilmartin and Mr Dunlop.

32.27 Mr McCann’s statement was furnished to the Tribunal under cover of his solicitor’s letter of 21 November 2007, and it set out, inter alia, as follows:

I was the Secretary of the Quarryvale Residents’ Association for a number of years and we had our offices in the Co-op in Quarryvale. I recall having a meeting with Owen O’Callaghan, Tom Gilmartin and their liaison person, Frank Dunlop, in early Spring 1991. I am not certain of the date and as you will appreciate many years have passed since the events took place and information which I am setting out in this statement is my best recollection of the events in question.

By way of background to the meeting, I should explain that before any meeting took place our local community of Quarryvale under the aegis of the representative body the Quarryvale Residents’ Association held a number of public meetings to discuss what was then called the Quarryvale Development Project which is now known as the Liffey Valley Shopping Centre. The community proposed that the Residents’ Association conduct a fact finding process and gather as much information as it could about the project. At the time the project was receiving substantial coverage in the local and national media.

When the information was gathered the community asked the Residents’ Association to make contact with the Developers. It was unanimously agreed at the public meetings that the community would support this project as the community suffered from high unemployment, this project could only benefit the employment prospects of the local community and the community in general. There were also other matters to take into consideration, as to how this very big shopping centre would impact on our community physically as well as other social impact factors.

At this stage the Residents' Association delegated two of its members, myself and Patrick Jennings (being the Secretary and Chairperson respectively of the Residents' Association) to be spokesmen for the Association in any meetings to be held with the Developers. They contacted one of our local political representatives, Liam Lawlor of Fianna Fáil to organise a meeting with the Developers involved in the project. Mr. Lawlor organised the meeting on our behalf.

The first contact we received about the meeting was from Mr. Frank Dunlop who informed us he was acting on behalf of the Developers, Owen O'Callaghan and Thomas Gilmartin. He then organised a meeting between ourselves and the Developers at our request.

The meeting took place at the Jenson Hotel in Clondalkin Village in early Spring of 1991. Owen O'Callaghan, Thomas Gilmartin, Frank Dunlop, Pat Jennings and myself attended the meetings. Pat Jennings and myself were attending the meeting as representatives of the local Quarryvale Residents' Association. We were provided with tea and coffee and the discussion of the meeting was around the topic of the Quarryvale/Liffey Valley Shopping Centre development. The Developers outlined their involvement in the project, suggested that they would like to involve the local Residents' Association in some part of the process. They agreed to attend some local public meetings on the subject. An informal arrangement was arrived at whereby the Residents' Association would be consulted on a regular basis as to the progress of the development.

But for one unusual comment made by Tom Gilmartin the meeting was a very positive affair. During the meeting Tom Gilmartin began to tell myself and Patrick Jennings of his meetings with certain Government 'local and national' representatives and he ranted loudly about how they were a bunch of corrupt bastards. He was about to mention an individual by name and Owen O'Callaghan seemed to prod him under the table with a gentle tap of his leg with what seemed like a gesture to get him quiet and to say nothing more.

Before we left the meeting, we told the Developers that our community and our Association would be supporting their proposal and that if we could do anything to further the development process, we would. They said that they would get back to us in the near future and the meeting then concluded.³

32.28 On 29 October 2007, Mr Jennings provided a statement to the Tribunal, in which, after outlining the circumstances in which he and Mr McCann were mandated to make formal contact with the developers of the Quarryvale project, under the heading ‘Meeting No. 1’, he outlined the circumstances in which he attended a meeting with Mr Gilmartin, Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop in the company of Mr McCann:

Mr. Frank Dunlop subsequently arranged a meeting which I recollect was in the Spring of 1991. The meeting was held in the Jensen Hotel in Clondalkin which we were advised would be attended by Mr. Tom Gilmartin, Mr. Owen O’Callaghan and Mr. Frank Dunlop.’

Mr. McCann and myself went to the Jensen Hotel and were met by Mr. Frank Dunlop, who introduced Mr. Owen O’Callaghan. My recollection is that Mr. Thomas Gilmartin joined up sometime later while enjoying afternoon tea and biscuits. Mr. O’Callaghan outlined the genesis of the development and what it would encompass. He recounted the successful developments he had been involved with previously and canvassed for Q.R.A.’s support. Mr. Frank Dunlop gave a concise history of the Balgaddy site for the proposed Clondalkin/Lucan town centre and the unlikelihood of it proceeding. He further outlined the challenges of successfully redesignation of the lands at Quarryvale, the likely opposition of Green Properties who were looking to develop a similar project in Blanchardstown. He further invited QRA to evaluate the proposed development in Quarryvale and suggested that if there was a mutuality of interest QRA wished to consider the possibility of organising a number of public information meetings in the surrounding areas to inform residents of these areas and the benefits of the proposed development. It was at this juncture that Mr. Gilmartin joined the meeting. Following introductions, Mr. Gilmartin gave a brief biopic of his developments in England, particularly in Luton. He recalled that it saddened him to see young homeless Irishmen lying in the streets of Luton, often under the influence of alcohol. He informed that he built and provided a wet hostel for homeless Irish emigrants who had alcohol dependency. He said at this stage he decided to look at possible developments in Ireland as a means of offering construction jobs in Ireland preventing some of the problems experienced by his compatriots in Luton and other cities in England.

Mr. Gilmartin went on to share his experience of identifying potential development opportunities, including hiring a helicopter which assisted in identifying the development potential of the lands in Quarryvale at the juncture of the M50 and the Galway Road. The other site was an inner-city site at Bachelor’s Walk.

Up to this point the description had been positive and upbeat, however the tone changed when Mr. Gilmartin started to recount the difficulties and road blocks that had been put in his way by local authority officials and politicians. At one point he stated that ‘they were worse than the Mafia’ and were bleeding him dry by making outrageous demands for money. I took this to mean that these demands related to redesignation of the lands in Quarryvale and planning permission. Both Mr. O’Callaghan and Mr. Dunlop appeared discomfited at these disclosures [sic]. Mr. Gilmartin went further and stated that he had paid a single politician £50,000. At this point he yelped in pain clutching his shin, exclaiming, ‘Jesus Owen, what are you kicking me for.’ After an embarrassing lacuna Mr. Dunlop, quickly recovering, requested that we consider what was being proposed and that a follow-up meeting could be arranged to discuss the community response. We agreed to report on the information shared, contact Mr. Dunlop and arrange a follow-up meeting to discuss the community’s reaction.⁴

32.29 In his testimony to the Tribunal, Mr McCann acknowledged that at the time of his meeting with Mr Gilmartin, he was a member of Sinn Féin, and was a Sinn Féin representative in the Clondalkin area.⁵ However, it was Mr McCann’s evidence that his political affiliations were not raised at the meeting, and that it had been made clear that he was attending the meeting as a community activist, and more specifically in his capacity as the Secretary of the Quarryvale Residents’ Association. Both he and Mr Jennings had expressed their support for the proposed Quarryvale development.

32.30 Acknowledging that Mr Gilmartin denied that he had ever met with Mr McCann and Mr Jennings in Jenson’s Hotel, and acknowledging that Mr Gilmartin was claiming that at a meeting in late 1990 in a public house in Clondalkin, to which he had been brought by Mr O’Callaghan, he was threatened by a man who identified himself as a Sinn Féin representative, Mr McCann, in any event, denied that Mr Gilmartin was threatened, and denied that he was privy to any meeting involving Mr Gilmartin where events described by Mr Gilmartin took place. He acknowledged that Mr Gilmartin, in any event, did not identify him in this regard.

32.31 Mr McCann and Mr Jennings, in the course of their respective testimonies, reiterated what had been set out in their respective statements, namely that the meeting in Jenson’s Hotel had been a positive affair, save for Mr Gilmartin’s intervention alleging corruption in the context of his having met, in Mr

⁴Mr Jennings’ statement went on to recite dealings he had with Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop subsequent to the initial meeting.

⁵Mr McCann was not however an elected Sinn Féin representative.

McCann's words, 'local and national' representatives. Mr Jennings confirmed that Mr Gilmartin had referred to 'road blocks' having been put in his way by 'Local Authority officials' and 'politicians', and that Mr Gilmartin had stated 'they were worse than the Mafia', and were, 'bleeding him dry by making outrageous demands for money.'

32.32 They both testified that Mr Gilmartin in the course of their meeting had made reference to a sum of IR£50,000 having been paid to a politician. They further testified that it was at this juncture that Mr Gilmartin had been kicked or tapped under the table by Mr O'Callaghan. Mr McCann stated that Mr O'Callaghan's intervention had come at a point when it appeared that Mr Gilmartin was about to name an individual in connection with the IR£50,000 payment. Mr McCann told the Tribunal that, following the meeting, Mr Gilmartin's reference to IR£50,000 had been a subject of comment as between himself and Mr Jennings, because of the amount of money in question.

MR O'CALLAGHAN'S EVIDENCE

32.33 On 16 April 2007, Mr O'Callaghan was requested by the Tribunal to provide a detailed narrative statement in relation to a meeting involving Mr Gilmartin in a Clondalkin public house. In that letter, the Tribunal summarised Mr Gilmartin's account of the meeting in the following terms:

Mr. Gilmartin claims that your client took Mr. Gilmartin to a public house in Clondalkin; and that he told Mr. Gilmartin that it was for the purposes of attending a resident meeting in connection with the proposed Quarryvale development; that upon arrival at the public house in Clondalkin, Mr. Gilmartin was approached by two men wearing dark clothing and dark sunglasses and a third man who identified himself as a Sinn Féin Councillor; that your client stepped away from the group at that point.

32.34 On 19 April 2007, Mr O'Callaghan was advised that Mr Gilmartin, through his solicitors, had identified the Sinn Féin Councillor as Cllr Christy Burke of Sinn Féin.

32.35 Mr O'Callaghan responded to the Tribunal's request in the course of a statement provided by him on 26 April 2007, a portion of which was entitled 'Men with dark glasses and dark clothing/meeting with Christy Burke', and which stated as follows:

I once went to Finch's Pub in North Clondalkin with Tom Gilmartin. The purpose for our going there was to meet a group of 6 or 7 women representing the Quarryvale residents. Tom Gilmartin made a fool of himself and they left. These women were very genuine and wanted work for their husbands. I introduced Tom Gilmartin to them. I started to tell them about the proposal but Tom Gilmartin shut me up. He spent about twenty minutes boasting as to what he had achieved in the UK. He said that he would build a massive complex in Quarryvale and bring the barefoot Irish back from London and Luton to Ireland. The women all left, one by one.

The allegation that Tom Gilmartin was approached by two men wearing dark clothing and dark glasses and a third man who identified himself as a Sinn Féin Councillor and at which point I stepped away from his utter nonsense. It never happened.

The allegations contained in the transcript of Noel Smyth interviews in this regard comprised utter nonsense and are totally false.

I do not know Christy Burke. I did know John McCann who was a Sinn Féin community activist for North Clondalkin at the time.

32.36 On 7 December 2007, subsequent to Mr McCann's statement having been provided to the Tribunal (a copy of which was circulated to Mr O'Callaghan), the Tribunal received a further statement from Mr O'Callaghan in which he took issue with only one aspect of Mr McCann's statement relating to a matter⁶ which was unconnected to the 'men in dark glasses' issue.

32.37 Mr O'Callaghan did not, in his 25 April 2007 narrative statement make any reference to any meeting in Clondalkin involving himself, Mr Gilmartin, Mr McCann and Mr Jennings. Insofar as he had, prior to his sworn testimony, indirectly acknowledged any such meeting, it was by way of the concluding remark made in his December, 2007 statement: 'I do not take issue with the statement, which has been provided to the Tribunal by John McCann in any other respect.'

32.38 Questioned as to why he had failed to advise the Tribunal of that he had met Mr McCann and Mr Jennings in the company of Mr Gilmartin in the spring of 1991, Mr O'Callaghan stated that, when providing his statement in April 2007, he had confused two meetings which had taken place in Clondalkin with the Quarryvale community representatives and which had involved Mr Gilmartin. One of these meetings was with six or seven women, as referred to in his April 2007 narrative statement, and the other was a meeting he and Mr Gilmartin had had with Mr McCann and Mr Jennings. Notwithstanding Mr O'Callaghan's explanation in this regard, the Tribunal noted that in his April 2007 statement,

⁶ It related to dealings between himself and Messrs. McCann and Jennings in 1992, in the absence of Mr Gilmartin.

Mr O’Callaghan had made reference to the fact that Mr McCann was known to him as a Sinn Féin representative, that knowledge (which Mr O’Callaghan undoubtedly had at the time he composed his April 2007 statement), had not, apparently, aided his recollection of a meeting between himself, Mr McCann Mr Jennings and Mr Gilmartin.

32.39 Mr O’Callaghan’s testimony as to what had occurred at the meeting between himself, Mr Gilmartin, Mr McCann and Mr Jennings, largely accorded with the accounts given by Mr McCann and Mr Jennings.

32.40 Mr O’Callaghan’s description of the meeting was as follows:

‘At the meeting we discussed basically what I wanted to know. They wanted to know what was actually happening in Quarryvale and they themselves they would have been much more interested in the situation in Quarryvale more so than Neilstown because it was much closer to their own location. They were representing the actual Quarryvale township if you like, in North Clondalkin. And we tried, we started to outline to them the best way we could. We had no information, we had no plans, we had nothing. Just the two of ourselves. And I started to describe what his project was going to be like. But Tom more or less took it over and started just the same as he did actually started the same type of explanation as he did when we met the ladies a few weeks previous to that about his escapades in the UK etc. and what he had done. Spent a lot of time talking about these things and I could see that the two people we were talking to McCann and Jennings were not that interested, they were more interested in what was happening in Quarryvale or what was going to happen in Quarryvale. And again of course what the employment situation, potential employment etc. would be for themselves and members of their association etc.

And it drifted on to Tom talking about one thing that really I think upset me was he was talking about bringing, he referred exactly to the same type of thing that he was he mentioned when he met the ladies in Finch’s pub he started talking about bringing the barefoot Irish back to Dublin. This time it was it became the drunken barefoot Irish and I didn’t particularly like that and I can assure you that the two people we were talking to didn’t like that. And they started laughing at us. Tom’s situation seemed to get worse and he began to start talking about the mafia and I think it was he was referring to the Irish politicians giving him a rough time and he was heading in again, I think to talking about Liam Lawlor and Redmond when I actually gave him a kick under the table. I admit that, to get him to shut up and stop and stick to the point. And I think he did actually and we tried the best way we could to explain to the two people we were talking to, what this meeting was all about and what Quarryvale would be all about etc.'

32.41 To the extent summarised below however, there was apparent disagreement between Mr O'Callaghan and Mr McCann and/or Mr Jennings in relation to what transpired at the meeting.

- Mr O'Callaghan described the meeting as 'hopeless', while Mr McCann described the meeting as 'cordial' and 'very positive.'
- Both Mr McCann and Mr Jennings believed that Mr Gilmartin's reference to paying a politician IR£50,000 prompted Mr O'Callaghan to kick him under the table, whereas Mr O'Callaghan (who agreed that it was at that juncture he kicked Mr Gilmartin) suggested that the main reason he kicked Mr Gilmartin was to stop him 'talking about him and boasting about himself.' However Mr O'Callaghan conceded that when he (Mr Gilmartin) 'did get to this thing about politicians that's when I actually touched his shin and asked him to stop.'
- There were differences in the accounts given by Mr O'Callaghan on the one hand, and by Messrs McCann and Jennings on the other hand, as to how the meeting commenced. Mr O'Callaghan testified that he and Mr Gilmartin arrived at Jenson's Hotel in a taxi, whereupon they met with Mr McCann and Mr Jennings. Mr McCann however told the Tribunal that when he and Mr Jennings arrived at Jenson's Hotel, Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop were waiting for them, and that Mr Gilmartin had arrived later. Mr McCann stated that Mr Gilmartin had taken a taxi to the hotel and had arrived, 'a bit flustered.' Mr Jennings likewise testified that Mr Gilmartin joined the meeting at a later stage.
- While Mr O'Callaghan, Mr McCann and Mr Jennings testified that Mr Gilmartin talked about developments he was involved in in the UK, and of his experience of the Irish immigrant community in the UK, there were differences in their respective accounts as to the tone in which Mr Gilmartin talked about these matters. Mr O'Callaghan testified that Mr Gilmartin spoke about bringing the 'barefoot Irish' back to Ireland,⁷ whereas Mr McCann testified that Mr Gilmartin had spoken about his involvement in a project to build a hostel for alcoholics in Luton in response to Mr McCann having made reference to problems of heroin addiction in Clondalkin/Quarryvale community. Mr Jennings told the Tribunal that Mr Gilmartin had spoken about how it saddened him to witness young Irishmen on the streets of London, under the influence of alcohol.

- The Tribunal noted (notwithstanding the conflicts in their respective accounts), that Mr Gilmartin's and Mr O'Callaghan's description of their meeting, which included a representative of Sinn Féin, was palpably negative (albeit for different reasons).

MR O'CALLAGHAN'S RESPONSE, IN EVIDENCE, TO MR GILMARTIN'S TESTIMONY ABOUT THE MEETING

32.42 On Day 883 the following exchange took place between Tribunal Counsel and Mr O'Callaghan:

'Q. Now, you were aware that Mr. Gilmartin has made an allegation that you brought him out to a meeting in a pub in Clondalkin at which he met three men, one of whom was in dark glasses, isn't that right?

A. That's the meeting.

Q. Yes. And Mr. Gilmartin has told the Tribunal that one of the men introduced himself as the Sinn Féin representative of the area and a conversation took place and you told him to listen, isn't that right? Told Mr. Gilmartin to listen?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Gilmartin says that he was being threatened, if his evidence is correct, isn't that fair?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you agree with that evidence?

A. No, no. What Mr. Gilmartin has done here, is converted a meeting with himself to myself and two people, Mr. McCann and Jennings, into this fantasy of his where he met two people with dark glasses, told him that they knew all about his operation in Belfast and they had a file on him. And I think he has also said that they more or less threatened him to get out of the country, or something like that, he told them to go and so and so off. He turned that meeting with McCann and Jennings into that fantasy. That is one of his many, many, many fantasies...'

32.43 Mr O'Callaghan, in the course of his testimony denied ever knowing or having met with Cllr Christy Burke.

MR GILMARTIN'S RESPONSE TO THE SUGGESTION THAT HE PERSON
HE MET WITH MR O'CALLAGHAN WAS MR MCCANN

32.44 Mr Gilmartin denied that he had ever met Mr McCann, save to the extent that he may have been one of two men who remained at another table in the public house, while the man (whom Mr Gilmartin identified as Councillor Burke) sat with himself and Mr O'Callaghan.

32.45 In the course of his cross-examination by Counsel for Cllr Burke (Day 770) Mr Gilmartin strongly denied that at the meeting described by him he had mentioned corruption, or corrupt politicians. This denial was thus in conflict with the evidence given by Mr McCann and Mr Jennings as to Mr Gilmartin's references to corruption, and his reference to the 'Mafia.' The statements furnished by Mr McCann and Mr Jennings in October, 2007, were replete with such references, and their sworn testimony, and that of Mr O'Callaghan (albeit a somewhat late recollection on the part of Mr O'Callaghan as his 2004 statement did not deal with the issue) was that Mr Gilmartin had made such references, and that he had mentioned a payment of IR£50,000.

32.46 When Mr McCann's statement was put to him, Mr Gilmartin responded that insofar as Mr McCann would give that evidence to that effect, it was not the truth.

MR O'CALLAGHAN'S ACCOUNT OF A MEETING HE CLAIMED HE HAD IN THE COMPANY OF MR GILMARTIN WITH SIX OR SEVEN WOMEN FROM THE QUARRYVALE AREA

32.47 In the course of his testimony Mr O'Callaghan reiterated what he had set out in his April 2007 statement about a meeting which took place in Finch's public house in Clondalkin, with local women who were anxious to ascertain whether or not there would be employment prospects for themselves and their husbands when the Quarryvale proposal got under way. Mr O'Callaghan believed that this meeting took place in March 1991, prior to the meeting he claimed to have had with Mr Gilmartin, Mr McCann and Mr Jennings. The meeting with the women was arranged by Mr Lawlor.

32.48 In the course of his testimony to the Tribunal, and specifically in the course of responding to questions put by Counsel for Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Gilmartin vehemently denied that he was ever at a meeting in Finch's public house in Clondalkin with Mr O'Callaghan and six or seven women as described by Mr O'Callaghan in his April 2007 statement. On Day 761, Mr Gilmartin stated:

'I'll give you a little challenge, Mr. Sreenan, or the Tribunal for that matter. Find those women that I'm alleged to have met! Find them. Because it never happened. That is a pack of lies. That I never went or met anybody, particularly women, in Clondalkin with Mr. Owen O'Callaghan.'

32.49 Mr Gilmartin took particular exception to the suggestion that he had made a reference to 'the barefoot Irish' in the course of the meeting Mr O'Callaghan claimed to have had in his company with the six/seven women. Mr Gilmartin stated:

'...barefoot Irish reference never crossed my lips. It's an absolute lie! The only people referred to barefoot Irish was Liam Lawlor and Owen O'Callaghan. There is no way I would.'

He stated:

'...because there is no such thing as barefooted Irish. The Irish had arrived in Luton, got jobs and was given a lot of them. There were jobs waiting for them and they earned their keep. They paid for their houses. They paid for the churches. They paid for the schools. We had our own schools built and we paid for them. ..They weren't barefooted. They were some of the greatest people that ever left this country.'

EVIDENCE RELATING TO CONTACT WITH RESIDENTS/COMMUNITY ASSOCIATIONS, SINN FEIN REPRESENTATIVES AND OTHERS

32.50 In a letter written by Mr O'Callaghan to Mr Gilmartin on 24 January 1991, in the aftermath of the Heads of Agreement which had been signed in December 1990, as a result of which, effectively, Mr O'Callaghan became a partner in Barkhill Ltd, Mr O'Callaghan made reference, inter alia, to:

...rumours circulating in Dublin that we have teamed up with you so much so that Residents' Associations and other interested bodies are now hounding me for meetings, to clarify the situation for them. All this rumour and talk is clearly damaging our prospects of development own site in Clondalkin.⁸

32.51 Mr O'Callaghan testified that the reference to Residents' Associations in that letter was a reference to the residents of Quarryvale and especially the communities in Neilstown, some of which, he stated, had approached him as early as 1988 at a time when he was looking at the Neilstown lands, after purchasing the Merrygrove option.

32.52 It would appear that, by 3 April 1991, Mr O’Callaghan had commenced meeting at least some Residents’ Associations, as evidenced by an AIB memorandum of a telephone discussion between Mr Donagh of AIB and Mr O’Callaghan which noted, inter alia, as follows, in the context of the proposal to rezone the Quarryvale lands:

Owen O’Callaghan explained that he has, particularly over the last two weeks, been meeting City and County Managers and Planning Officers, local politicians and community associations. This process was delayed due to annual leave of officials prior to the end of their holiday year. He received great support for the scheme and he is very pleased that he has the right support to progress matters.

He feels a formal press announcement should be made next week as both Tom and himself meeting Jack Fagan, Irish Times. Contact names in community associations and local representatives will be given.

32.53 While there was no reference to Mr Gilmartin in the above memorandum, an AIB ‘mark-up’ document dated 15 April 1991, did contain a reference that:

Tom Gilmartin/Owen O’Callaghan have, in the past fortnight met with local elected representatives, community associations, planning officials, and city and county Managers all of whom had expressed support for the proposed retail development.

32.54 On 29 April 1991, Mr Donagh of AIB noted, inter alia, following telephone contact from Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Deane on 26 April, 1991, that: ‘Owen O’Callaghan has spent the past few days meeting Councillors. He met with F.F., Sinn Féin and Worker Party Councillors who all expressed support for the project.’

32.55 The Tribunal was satisfied (and Mr O’Callaghan did not dispute) that by 26 April 1991, Mr O’Callaghan at least, had been in contact with Sinn Féin representatives to some extent. Mr O’Callaghan could not say when he first met Mr McCann, but testified that their first meeting had taken place in Jenson’s Hotel in Clondalkin.

32.56 Mr O’Callaghan’s discovery of documents to the Tribunal included a letter written by Mr O’Callaghan to Mr McCann on 29 April 1991. A letter in identical terms was written by him on the same date to a Ms Wills who headed the North Clondalkin Development Association. Mr O’Callaghan appeared to have been assisted in drafting these letters by Mr Lawlor. Both letters referred to a meeting at which Mr O’Callaghan outlined the proposal for the ‘West Park Town

Centre Project for the greater Clondalkin area.’ Mr O’Callaghan, in his respective letters to Mr McCann and Ms Wills promised further engagement as the project progressed, and in both letters he made reference to, ‘...Our commitment and co-operation with FÁS to ensure that a maximum number of local personnel will be employed both during the construction phase and when the town centre opens.’ And, he went on to state: ‘we will establish an arrangement with FÁS (who have on the register the available personnel)’ and further stated ‘we will be pleased to co-operate with you as we fully recognised the importance of maximising the local employment...’

32.57 When it was suggested to Mr O’Callaghan that the letter to Mr McCann of 29 April 1991, may have been a reference to Mr O’Callaghan’s meeting (together with Mr Gilmartin) with Mr McCann and Mr Jennings, Mr O’Callaghan denied that this was the case, stating that the letter to Mr McCann on 29 April 1991, referred to a meeting separate to the meeting he had in the company of Mr Gilmartin with Mr McCann and Mr Jennings. As a matter of probability, Mr O’Callaghan was correct in this assertion. Mr O’Callaghan however advised the Tribunal that Mr Gilmartin’s meeting with Mr McCann and Mr Jennings had taken place in the same time frame, namely April 1991. Mr O’Callaghan acknowledged that Mr Dunlop organised the meeting, and that it had probably been instigated by Mr Lawlor.

32.58 On 19 August 1991, under the heading ‘Quarryvale Residents’ Association’, Mr McCann wrote to Mr O’Callaghan wherein he made a reference, inter alia, that the Quarryvale Residents’ Association:

...are in the process of launching a very extensive campaign to support the Quarryvale Town Centre proposal but we have very limited resources available to us. To most people in this area, seeing is believing. All the written articles on the development issue, which are mostly found in the business columns of newspapers, is but printed, boring rhetoric. We need something tangible. Physical models with glossy pictorial displays, development comparisons with scaled figures, projected employment figures, especially in relation to local employment, environmental information pertaining to safety and landscaping etc., we’re not asking for money, all we need is the relevant information and materials.

32.59 Mr O’Callaghan responded to Mr McCann on 22 August 1991, and advised that the information/material sought by the Quarryvale Residents’ Association was being prepared, and advised that it had been ‘decided six weeks ago to hold meetings in the general Clondalkin area starting early September, hence the preparation of this information.’ He said that he would contact Mr McCann the following week.

32.60 While Mr O’Callaghan, in his letter to Mr McCann, indicated an intention on his part to hold public meetings in the general Clondalkin area⁹, by 10 September 1991, Mr O’Callaghan was noting, in a letter to Mr Ambrose Kelly, (his architect) that ‘...the Lucan/Palmerstown Community Association called a meeting for 19th September. We will probably invite ourselves to this so we will want some display material available by then.’, and he advised Mr Kelly that ‘The Quarryvale Residents’ Association have called a similar meeting for 29th September, and they have specifically requested as much information as possible.’ On 16 September 1991, Mr Lawlor’s office faxed to Mr O’Callaghan an extract from the ‘Palmerstown Newsletter’, which made reference to the proposed meeting of 19 September 1991.

32.61 Mr O’Callaghan attended the Palmerstown meeting of 19 September, 1991, and on 20 September 1991, following a meeting between Mr Kay and Mr Donagh (of AIB) with Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Gilmartin, AIB noted as follows, under the heading:

Majority of speakers at this meeting were traders opposed to Quarryvale. Six Councillors attended meeting – O’Halloran, O’Connell, Hanrahan, Maginnis, Higgins and McGrath. Only Higgins who represents Blanchardstown was against Quarryvale. Austin Curry and Liam Lalor TDs also attended meeting. From mid-October the other 5 Residence Associations will be holding meetings and Owen O’Callaghan attend as guest to explain Quarryvale position.

32.62 Mr O’Callaghan acknowledged duly attending a number of public meetings in the months of October and November 1991. The meetings which Mr O’Callaghan (and his advisors on occasions) attended in the period September to November 1991 coincided with the duration of the first public display of the Draft Development Plan 1991 on which the Quarryvale lands were zoned D (town centre).

32.63 It was common case that Mr Gilmartin did not attend any public meetings regarding Quarryvale in the autumn 1991 (or indeed subsequently).¹⁰

¹⁰ The document compiled by Mr Davin (Council Planner) following a meeting in Neilstown Community Centre on 5/6 November 1991 – quoted Mr O’Callaghan as having advised the meeting that he had taken over the project and that Mr Gilmartin was no longer involved.

32.64 Both Mr O’Callaghan and Mr McCann acknowledged ongoing contact in the months of October and November 1991.¹¹

32.65 On 3 December 1991, Dublin County Council received a submission from the Quarryvale Residents’ Association in support of the proposal to rezone Quarryvale as a Town Centre. The letter of 2 December 1991, from the Association which accompanied that submission was signed by Mr McCann. In the same timeframe a further submission was also lodged by the Quarryvale Residents’ Association under cover of a letter of 2 December 1991. Enclosed with this letter were 10,000 signatures which had been gathered in favour of the ‘O’Callaghan Properties Development proposal in Quarryvale in North Clondalkin.’

32.66 On 9 December 1991, the Quarryvale Residents’ Association participated in a protest rally outside of the Council offices in support of the Quarryvale rezoning proposal. Mr McCann testified that this rally had been given complete support by Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop.¹² Mr McCann testified that at a second meeting which had taken place in Mr Dunlop’s offices, subsequent to the April 1991 meeting, at which Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Dunlop, Mr McCann and Mr Jennings had been present, he had been shown outline plans with regard to the Quarryvale rezoning proposal and he stated that he and Mr Jennings had agreed to organise a campaign of rallies in support of the Quarryvale project. It had been indicated at that meeting that expenses incurred in these endeavours would be paid for.

32.67 Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop, in the course of their evidence, acknowledged that Mr Dunlop had funded the buses which had transported those who participated in the rally in December 1991 to the offices of Dublin County Council and that Mr Dunlop had been duly reimbursed by Mr O’Callaghan.

32.68 In the spring of 1992, Mr Dunlop was instrumental in providing a word processor and printer to the Quarryvale Residents’ Association for which Mr Dunlop was duly reimbursed by Riga in June of 1992.

32.69 Mr O’Callaghan, Mr McCann and Mr Jennings all agreed that a further meeting took place in Mr Kelly’s office in 1992. Mr Jennings told the Tribunal that he and Mr McCann had been mandated by the Quarryvale Residents’ Association to seek a site for a community centre for the people of Quarryvale and at the meeting Mr O'Callaghan had agreed to provide such a site. Mr O'Callaghan did not dispute that he had made this agreement and it was, he stated, done so on the basis that the Council would build the community centre. Ultimately, a community centre was not built on the lands of Barkhill Ltd, and was instead built elsewhere in Quarryvale. Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that what was ultimately constructed was not a follow-on to what had been agreed in Mr Kelly's office in 1992, but advised the Tribunal that the construction of the centre had been funded by the Quarryvale developers, Mr O'Callaghan, and Grosvenor Properties, to the extent of fifty percent of its cost. They had provided IR£500,000 to the Council in two tranches, £250,000 on 15 February 2000, and £250,000 on 25 September 2001 for this purpose.

¹² Mr Dunlop’s testimony was that he only ‘reluctantly’ supported it. (Ref. pg. 6418, OOC Day 890)

32.70 Mr Jennings advised the Tribunal that at the meeting in Mr Kelly's office, in 1992, when the issue of the community centre was being discussed, discussion had also taken place as to what further assistance the Quarryvale Residents' Association could provide to the promoters of the Quarryvale rezoning proposal. He stated that he and Mr McCann had agreed to organise a second rally in support of Quarryvale in advance of the December 1992 Quarryvale rezoning vote. Ultimately, however, this did not materialise as, as Mr McCann had informed him that he had received a call from Mr Dunlop to say that there was no need for such a rally because the planning issues had been sorted out. Mr McCann told the Tribunal that his understanding at that time was that the December 1992 vote would be passed as Mr Dunlop had his numbers in place.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE CLONDALKIN MEETING

i. The Tribunal was satisfied that in or about the spring of 1991, Mr Gilmartin was taken by Mr O'Callaghan to a meeting in a licensed premises in Clondalkin, and that the meeting was attended by Mr Gilmartin, Mr O'Callaghan, Mr McCann and Mr Jennings. It was common case that by April 1991, Mr O'Callaghan was informing third parties of meetings with, among others, representatives of Sinn Féin. Thus, as a matter of probability, the Tribunal was satisfied that Mr McCann's association with Sinn Féin was made known to Mr Gilmartin in some shape or form at the meeting.

ii. The Tribunal was satisfied that this was the only occasion when Mr Gilmartin attended a meeting involving a representative of Sinn Fein. This meeting was arranged by Mr Dunlop, probably at the instigation of Mr Lawlor. Mr Dunlop was not at the meeting attended by Mr Gilmartin.

iii. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Gilmartin's identification of Cllr Christy Burke as being the individual whom he met in the course of this encounter was erroneous, and it was satisfied that Cllr Burke never met Mr Gilmartin or Mr O'Callaghan. The Tribunal believed it likely that Mr Gilmartin's erroneous identification of Cllr Burke arose from the fact that Cllr Burke and Mr McCann bore a strong physical resemblance to each other, and it was satisfied that Mr Gilmartin's identification of Cllr Burke was not borne of any malicious intent on the part of Mr Gilmartin towards Cllr Burke.

iv. The Tribunal was satisfied that the meeting in a licensed premises attended by Mr Gilmartin, Mr O'Callaghan and Messrs McCann and Jennings, as a matter of probability, was conducted in a strained atmosphere. The Tribunal was satisfied, as a matter of probability, that reference was made to Mr Gilmartin's previous business involvement in Northern Ireland. It was also satisfied that matters which almost certainly contributed to the strained atmosphere of the meeting included references made by Mr Gilmartin to corruption, and a reference by Mr Gilmartin to a payment of IR£50,000 to a senior politician (and which resulted in Mr O'Callaghan kicking him under the table).

v. While the Tribunal could not determine with any degree of probability whether or not Mr Gilmartin was threatened in the manner described by him, it was nevertheless satisfied that Mr Gilmartin believed himself to have been threatened in the course of the meeting. Conceivably, this belief by Mr Gilmartin may have arisen as a consequence of the negative tone of the meeting, and because of references made to him about his previous business dealings in Northern Ireland.

vi. Mr Gilmartin was vigorously cross-examined with regard to discrepancies and/or inconsistencies in the various accounts he gave (both informal and formal) concerning his encounter with 'men in dark glasses.' While, undoubtedly, there were inconsistencies in the account, the Tribunal was satisfied that there was a written record of Mr Gilmartin's claims in relation to the encounter, at least from February 1998, in the course of his early contact with the Tribunal.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 7 - THE TRIBUNAL'S GENERAL CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE INVOLVEMENT OF COUNCILLORS IN QUARRYVALE

33.01 In the preceding pages, the Tribunal has considered the involvement of 30 individual councillors in the Quarryvale project. In the following pages, the Tribunal considered the involvement of councillors in the project from a more general or global perspective and has made additional findings and observations in that context. While these additional findings and observations are, for logistical reasons, set out in this, the Quarryvale Chapter, they (save where the context indicates otherwise), are equally applicable to the involvement of some councillors in other Modules of inquiry conducted by the Tribunal.

33.02 In its deliberations concerning the conduct of councillors in relation to the Quarryvale project, and other rezoning projects considered by it, the Tribunal was cognisant of the absence of any statutory or other regulations or guidelines concerning the conduct of councillors prior to 1995. However, the focus of the Tribunal's inquiries was on the behaviour of councillors (and others) in the context of planning matters, which were based on reasonable perceptions, no less improper, inappropriate or corrupt (as the case may be) in the early to mid-1990's, than in the post-1995 era, and indeed up to the present time.

33.03 Having regard to the evidence heard by the Tribunal, the Tribunal was satisfied that it should make the following general observations in addition to those made in relation to identified councillors, and others:

- i. The acceptance of money (or monies worth or other favour) by an elected councillor (or a person standing for election to the office of councillors) from a developer/landowner (or his agent), in circumstances where it was known, believed, expected or suspected that a rezoning/planning matter relating to land in which the developer/landowner had an interest was (or was likely) to be the subject of a decision by a local authority in respect of which the councillor had any role (be that by virtue of an entitlement to vote, or otherwise), was, subject to a full consideration of all the circumstances, either improper, inappropriate, and/or corrupt.
- ii. The acceptance of money (or monies worth or other favour) by an elected councillor (or a person standing for election to the office of councillor), specifically in return for exercising his/her vote (or for undertaking any other act open to him/her to take in his/her role as a councillor), was corrupt. To have so acted in the expectation of a payment of money (or monies worth or other favour) was also corrupt.

iii. The soliciting of a payment of money (or monies worth or other favour) by an elected councillor (or a person standing for election to the office of councillor) from a developer/landowner (or his agent) in the knowledge, belief or expectation that land in which the developer/landowner had an interest, was or was likely to become, the subject of a decision by the County Council of which the councillor was an elected member (and in that capacity entitled to exercise his or her vote, or to otherwise act) was, subject to a consideration of all the circumstances, either improper, inappropriate and/or corrupt.

iv. The soliciting or acceptance of money (or monies worth or other favour) by an elected councillor (or a person standing for election to the office of councillor), from a developer/landowner (or his agent) in the circumstances identified in (i), (ii) and (iii) above compromised the councillor's disinterested performance of his/her duties as a councillor in relation to that councillor's role concerning any matter in which the developer/landowner (or his agent) in question had an interest.

v. The soliciting or acceptance of money (or monies worth or other favour) by a councillor (or a person standing for election to the office of councillor), in the circumstances identified in i, ii and iii above, constituted an abuse of the councillor's public office .

vi. The payment or promise (expressly or by implication) of the payment of money (or monies worth or other favour) by a developer/landowner (or his agent) to an elected councillor (or a person standing for election to that office), in circumstances where the developer/landowner, was or was likely to be, or to become, the subject of a decision by the County Council in which the councillor was an elected public representative (or if standing for election, might become an elected public representative) and in which capacity he/she would be entitled to exercise the right to vote, or to otherwise act, was, subject to a full consideration of all the circumstances, improper, inappropriate and/or probably corrupt.

vii. A councillor who, at the time he/she solicited and/or accepted money (or monies worth or other favour) from a developer/landowner (or his agent) in circumstances where, at the time he/she was unaware of any connection between the developer/landowner (or his agent) and lands which were (or subsequently became) the subject of any decision making process of a local authority in which he/she, (the councillor) was entitled to vote or otherwise act, ought having subsequently become aware of such a connection, to have either returned the payment to the donor, or publicly disclosed it prior to voting (or otherwise acting), in his/her capacity as an elected councillor.

Dear Taoiseach,

The promoter of the above project Mr. Tom Gilmartin has asked me to request an urgent meeting with you to discuss various problems, hitherto unforeseen, which are posing a serious threat to the realisation of this unique development.

I fully appreciate the pressures of time that you endure and would appeal to you in the context of the magnitude of this project to allocate fifteen minutes of your time to Mr. Gilmartin.

Looking forward to hearing from you and in the meantime if you need some background information do not hesitate to contact me by phone.

Dear Colm,

We would like to congratulate you on your recent election to the County Council. We wish you well in your position.

As you may be aware, we are the developers of the new Town Centre at Blanchardstown where work has been suspended as a result of the threat to its viability posed by the recent motion of the outgoing Council to rezone lands at Quarryvale.

We are anxious to recommence work on the site as soon as practical and in this regard we would welcome an opportunity to discuss the matter with you and your colleagues as soon as possible. If you are interested in meeting us, I would be grateful if you would contact me upon receipt of this letter.

9th July 1991

Dear John,

Thank you for your good wishes and congratulations on my recent re-election to Dublin County Council.

In my opinion, a further meeting to discuss the future of Blanchardstown Town Centre would serve no purpose as long as you continue to assert that the re-zoning of lands at Quarryvale poses a threat to the viability of Blanchardstown which I totally refute.

Your persistent targetting of the Quarryvale re-zoning decision is now, thankfully, being seen for what it is, a smoke-screen, to hide the real reason why you have not proceeded with the Town Centre to date. It is only a matter of time before the serious concern of your shareholders manifests itself in some form of corrective action.

I have no doubt that a Town Centre will be built at Blanchardstown, the question is, by whom? Equally, I am confident that a Town Centre will be built at Quarryvale to serve the people of Lucan/Clondalkin as provided for in the County Development Plan at an improved location.

Councillors must plan and act for the common good, not for the interests of any one property development company. I regard any attempt to deprive the people of Lucan/Clondalkin of their major Town Centre as an act against the common good and I will vehemently oppose any such action from whatever quarter.

Trusting you understand my position in the matter.

Yours sincerely,

4th September 1991

Dear Mr Keating,

As the proposer of the successful motion to re-zone 106 acres at Quarryvale for an alternative Town Centre for Lucan/Clondalkin to replace the failed site at Ronanstown I regard your attitude to this important Planning matter as flippant, patently prejudiced and grossly insulting to the integrity of the elected Members of Dublin Council who are fully aware that you are a paid servant of another Town Centre Developer whose bluff is now being called.

As far as the Development Plan Review is concerned you conveniently fail to mention the fact that the Planners have proposed the rezoning of the Ronanstown site to Industrial in favour of the Quarryvale site.

Your scaremongering is pathetic. The only 'uncertainty' about Blanchardstown is who is going to build it and what revised size it will be pro-rata to its catchment area. Green Property PLC failed to deliver the goods in Blanchardstown and decided instead to invest millions in the British property market leaving itself strapped for development cash. This is the real scandal in this whole affair and the Quarryvale excuse is only a 'oop-out' for the Directors.

I would suggest therefore that you desist from regurgitating hypocritical self-interest propaganda which insults the intelligence of Politicians, Planners and the general public who now know the truth behind the Green Property smokescreen.

No amount of your dubious lobbying will deprive the people of Lucan/Clondalkin of their long awaited Town Centre, which, unlike Blanchardstown will be commenced immediately on receipt of Planning Permission which I am confident will be forthcoming to the eminently more credible Developers.

Yours sincerely,

COLM MCGRATH M.C.C.

RE: LUCAN/CLONDALKIN - BLANCHARDSTOWN TOWN CENTRE

Dear Colleague,

In recognition of the fact that the coming months will see us all bombarded with vested interest representations in relation to the Development Plan Review I do not intend to respond to the tediously regular propoganda missives from the paid public relations servant of Green Property Company which continue to insult our intelligence.

My last response (copy enclosed) is still relevant although, unfortunately for us all, the advice therein was ignored.

If, however, you wish to witness what must rank as a classical case of the pot calling the kettle black I will gladly forward a copy of Green Property's 'West One' prospectus for the Blanchardstown Town Centre, a small sample of which I enclose, which speaks for itself.

Transparent propoganda will continue to be ignored, however, further attacks on the integrity of Councillors will be dealt with appropriately.

Kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

COLM McGRATH M.C.C.

Re: Our client Mr. Colm McGrath.

Dear Sir

Further to our informal meeting and subsequent telephone conversation we wish to confirm that our client received two political contributions from Mr. Owen O'Callaghan. The first of the contributions was received in October 1991 in the sum of £10,000 by way of personal cheque. The second contribution was received in November 1993 in the sum of £20,000 by way of personal cheque. Our client is unsure as to which Dublin Hotels in which the contributions were made.

Trusting this is of assistance and if we can be of any further help do not hesitate to contact the writer.

Yours faithfully

Mary O'Brien.

CHAPTER TWO – QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 8: MR ALBERT REYNOLDS AND QUARRYVALE

INTRODUCTION

1.01 Mr Albert Reynolds was Minister for Finance between 24 November 1988 and 7 November 1991, and Taoiseach from 11 November 1991 to 15 December 1994, when his Government left office. Mr Reynolds was succeeded at that time as Taoiseach by Mr John Bruton, and as leader of the Fianna Fáil Party by Mr Bertie Ahern.

1.02 Mr Reynolds gave sworn evidence to the Tribunal in the Lissenhall Module, and in the early part of the Quarryvale Module. When requested to give additional sworn evidence in the Quarryvale Module, Mr Reynolds submitted medical information to the Tribunal in support of his contention that he was medically unfit to give evidence because of cognitive impairment. Following a review by the Tribunal of Mr Reynolds' medical condition, the Tribunal excused Mr Reynolds as a witness.

1.03 Mr Reynolds provided a number of narrative statements to the Tribunal between 2002 and 2006 from which appropriate extracts are referred to in this section of the Report.

MR GILMARTIN'S CLAIM THAT MR O'CALLAGHAN TOLD HIM OF A PAYMENT OF IR£150,000 TO MR REYNOLDS, AND THE CORK PRIVATE DINNER

2.01 In the course of his evidence to the Tribunal on Day 730, Mr Gilmartin claimed that on a date between 12 and 17 March 1994, following a meeting with Mr O'Callaghan at AIB Bankcentre, Mr O'Callaghan informed him that on 11 March 1994 he had given Mr Albert Reynolds either IR£100,000 or IR£150,000 during a visit by Mr Reynolds to Cork. In the course of his evidence, Mr Gilmartin settled on the sum of IR£150,000, as the figure mentioned to him by Mr O'Callaghan.

2.02 Mr Gilmartin described the circumstances in which Mr O'Callaghan spoke to him about Mr Reynolds as follows:

'On that particular day, which was around 11th or 12th March, he told me that he was tired because they were up late the night before, that Mr Reynolds was at his house in Cork and had dinner at his house. And he was there to collect his money. And he told me that Albert was absolutely knackered, three o'clock in the morning, that he gave him the money. He gave him I think it was a cheque for over £100,000, £150,000 or something at three o'clock in the morning. And that Albert was, to use his words, and I quote, 'knackered' because he had to catch a flight to America. So the following morning they had to pick him up early by helicopter.'

2.03 The way Mr O'Callaghan had 'put it across', according to Mr Gilmartin, was that Mr O'Callaghan had given Mr Reynolds IR£150,000 of his own money. Asked to specify in detail what Mr O'Callaghan had told him as he and Mr O'Callaghan exited AIB Bankcentre on the relevant date in March 1994, Mr Gilmartin stated:

' . . . well I'm going back. I'm relying just on memory of the exact conversation which is rather difficult. But it went in the lines that Mr Reynolds had visited his house and it was around the 10th or 11th of March 94. And he was in Cork. He may have mentioned some kind of fundraising because he did mention a Mr Walsh and I think he mentioned a gentleman . . . I can't remember all the names now.'

2.04 Mr Gilmartin believed that the other 'gentleman' mentioned by Mr O'Callaghan was Mr Noel C. Duggan who, according to Mr Gilmartin, had some connection with Millstreet, Co. Cork. Mr Gilmartin, was adamant throughout his testimony that it was Mr O'Callaghan who had relayed this information to him and that he had done so within a day or two of Mr Reynolds having been in Cork. Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that he, Mr Gilmartin, was not making any allegation against Mr Reynolds, and he reiterated his position, namely that he was merely repeating to the Tribunal what had been relayed to him in March 1994 by Mr O'Callaghan. Mr Gilmartin believed that the payment to Mr Reynolds had some connection with 'Golden Island'.¹

2.05 Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that Mr O'Callaghan had relayed to him on a number of occasions how friendly he was with Mr Reynolds and that he had claimed that Mr Reynolds was on his 'payroll'.

2.06 Prior to his sworn testimony on the matter, the first record of Mr Gilmartin having conveyed information to the effect that Mr Reynolds had received IR£150,000 from Mr O'Callaghan was contained in a memorandum dated 26 November 1999 prepared by Tribunal Counsel, following a telephone call made by Mr Gilmartin to the Tribunal on the previous day. That memo, inter alia, noted the following:

¹ Golden Island was a development in Athlone with which Mr O'Callaghan had a connection.

TG then referred to the IR£150,000 paid by OOC to Albert Reynolds in Cork in 1994. This was a few days before St Patrick's Day. TG said that this was not, as alleged by AR, the result of a fundraising dinner. There was a dinner but it was in OOC's house and it was not a fundraising dinner. AR stayed in OOC's house that night. At 3 am in an upstairs bedroom OOC handed AR IR£150,000 in cash. TG said that this was a payment for tax designation in Athlone. TG said that Bertie Ahern got a cut out of this money.² AR was picked up by helicopter the following day. I asked TG if his informant would be prepared to talk to the Tribunal. TG said that people were wary of the Tribunal and is not prepared to disclose his name to me. He told me previously that his informant does not want to get involved.

2.07 In a memorandum dated 29 November 1999, relating to a further telephone call from Mr Gilmartin on 25 November 1999, Counsel for the Tribunal noted, inter alia, a reference from Mr Gilmartin 'that AR was given IR£150,000 in cash in OOC's house in Cork in March 1994.'

2.08 Prior to 25 November 1999, Mr Gilmartin was noted in two memoranda as having made reference to a visit by Mr Reynolds to Cork in March 1994. On 5 February 1998, in the course of his first recorded telephone call to the Tribunal, Counsel for the Tribunal noted Mr Gilmartin as stating, inter alia, that:

. . . on a particular date in 1994, the 11th March 1994, Albert Reynolds was in a particular private house in Cork to collect his views before flying off to America. He went to this house and got his 'bag' and then left in the Government helicopter. The house belonged to O'Callaghan. Noel C. Duggan was also involved. Gilmartin says that these people were blatant in relation to the influence they had and tended to talk about it.

There was also a huge collection in Millstreet where, again, Reynolds flew down in the Government helicopter and received a huge collection of donations.

2.09 In a tape-recorded interview on 20 May 1998 with his then solicitor, Mr Noel Smyth, Mr Gilmartin made brief references to a visit by Mr Reynolds to Cork in March 1994, as follows: 'like, for instance, Albert spent the night of the 11th March 1994 in O'Callaghan's house' and 'To make his financial collection of, there were three or four other notorieties there to pay him his money. And he flew from O'Callaghan's house in the morning to catch the plane to go to the St Patrick's do in America on 12th March'.

² Mr Gilmartin took issue with the memorandum in the following regard: he stated that Mr O'Callaghan had advised him that 'Bertie had to have his cut'. See below.

Mr Gilmartin was also recorded as stating: 'Because I know Albert Reynolds was in O'Callaghan's house that night'.

2.10 On 9 January 2002, following a telephone call from Mr Gilmartin, Tribunal Counsel noted that 'he believes that two senior politicians got IR£100,000 and IR£150,000 respectively from Mr O'Callaghan but he is unable to prove this.'

2.11 On Day 732 Mr Gilmartin testified that the IR£150,000 figure in the memorandum referred to Mr O'Callaghan's claim to him of having given IR£150,000 to Mr Reynolds. He believed that the reference in the memorandum to a senior politician getting IR£100,000 was a reference to Mr Lawlor. Notwithstanding the suggestions inherent in the two Tribunal Counsel memoranda, dated 26 and 29 November 1999 respectively, that Mr Gilmartin's information about Mr Reynolds' presence in Cork and the allegation that he had received IR£150,000 from Mr O'Callaghan, had come from a source other than Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Gilmartin was adamant, in the course of his evidence, that the information he had conveyed to the Tribunal had come to him from Mr O'Callaghan himself and that it had been relayed within a day or two of the event in question. Mr Gilmartin conceded, however, that other information he conveyed to the Tribunal concerning Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Reynolds³ had been provided to him by an anonymous source.

2.12 In the course of his examination by Tribunal Counsel, Mr Gilmartin acknowledged that information provided to the Tribunal, following inquiries by it, suggested that on 11 March 1994 a sum of IR£50,000 had been collected for Fianna Fáil at a fundraising dinner in Cork at which Mr Reynolds was in attendance. Questioned by Tribunal Counsel as to whether it was possible that, if Mr O'Callaghan had indeed apprised Mr Gilmartin of events which took place in Cork on 11 March 1994, he might have been 'teasing' Mr Gilmartin or 'spinning' him a story about having given Mr Reynolds IR£150,000, Mr Gilmartin remarked:

'As I said possible. Highly possible, but then Shefran existed and the monies were going out through Shefran and Riga was being reimbursed round sums of money and since O'Callaghan had been funded on my assets, in other words, the only security Mr O'Callaghan had to bring to the thing or the only money, even the loan he put in, as far as I, as far as I know, was actually secured on my, on Quarryvale, which was my company.'

2.13 In the knowledge that it had been established that on 11 March 1994 a Fianna Fáil fundraising event in Cork had taken place, Mr Gilmartin was asked the following question: 'Could your recollection, Mr Gilmartin, be flawed and could in fact Mr O'Callaghan have been referring to a collection of approximately IR£50,000 at a fundraising dinner, IR£10,000 of which he or his company had contributed and which is receipted?' Mr Gilmartin replied: 'I'm repeating what Mr O'Callaghan told me.'

2.14 In the course of his testimony, Mr Gilmartin appeared to suggest that he had also learned of the Reynolds IR£150,000 issue from his anonymous source.

2.15 In the course of vigorous cross-examination on behalf of Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Gilmartin acknowledged that neither in an affidavit sworn by him for the Tribunal on 2 October 1998, nor in his considered statement of 17 May 2001, was there any reference to payments to Mr Reynolds by Mr O'Callaghan or of Mr Gilmartin's claim that Mr O'Callaghan had informed him that he had made a payment of IR£150,000 to Mr Reynolds.

2.16 Mr Gilmartin's account of being told by Mr O'Callaghan of a payment of IR£150,000 to Mr Reynolds was also challenged on the basis that, while Mr Gilmartin had first mentioned Mr Reynolds to the Tribunal in the context of a visit to Cork in March 1994, he was not noted by the Tribunal as having made any reference to an alleged payment of IR£150,000 by Mr O'Callaghan in the course of a telephone conversation on 5 February 1998. Nor did Mr Gilmartin make reference to an alleged payment of IR£150,000 when he spoke about Mr Reynolds to Mr Smyth on 20 May 1998.

2.17 It was put to Mr Gilmartin that, although he had made reference to Mr Reynolds⁴ on 22 October 1998 and again on 6 November 1998 in the course of telephone calls to the Tribunal, he had not adverted to the 'equally dramatic if not more dramatic allegation' that Mr O'Callaghan had given Mr Reynolds IR£150,000 in March 1994. It was also put to Mr Gilmartin that it was not until his 25th telephone call to the Tribunal, on 25 November 1999, as noted by the Tribunal on 26 November 1999, that he had made reference to Mr O'Callaghan having paid Mr Reynolds IR£150,000. It was suggested also to Mr Gilmartin that the memorandum indicated that, insofar as he had conveyed such information, he had learnt of it from an 'informant'.

2.18 Mr Gilmartin was also reminded in cross-examination that in the course of his testimony he made reference to a cheque for IR£150,000 having been given to Mr Reynolds, yet the notes of his telephone calls to the Tribunal referred to IR£150,000 in cash. It was further put to Mr Gilmartin that he appeared to have been in a position on 22 October and 6 November 1998 to inform the Tribunal of an alleged payment of IR£40,000 by Mr O'Callaghan to Mr Reynolds, yet in the context of passing that information to the Tribunal he had not alluded to information which he claimed to have had since March 1994, namely Mr O'Callaghan's claim to have given Mr Reynolds IR£150,000.

2.19 Mr Gilmartin was also reminded that, in the course of his interview with Mr Smyth on 20 May 1998, Mr Smyth asked him to be specific with regard to names and amounts. While Mr Gilmartin had mentioned Mr Reynolds in the course of that interview he had not adverted to the information he allegedly had from Mr O'Callaghan regarding the issue of payment of IR£150,000 to Mr Reynolds.

2.20 Mr Gilmartin continued to maintain in testimony, however, that it was Mr O'Callaghan who had informed him of the matter. Moreover, Mr Gilmartin maintained that he had relayed this information to the Tribunal prior to 25 November 1999 and that he could not account for the manner in which the Tribunal may have noted this information. Mr Gilmartin repeated his assertion that the allegation about Mr Reynolds receiving IR£150,000 had come from Mr O'Callaghan and that he, Mr Gilmartin, was not himself making any such allegation.

2.21 Counsel for Mr O'Callaghan also put it to Mr Gilmartin that it was impossible, given Mr Gilmartin's claims of having threatened in 1991 to go to the 'fraud squad' regarding certain matters, that Mr O'Callaghan in March 1994 would have made such a claim to him.

2.22 Throughout his evidence and questioning by Counsel for Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Gilmartin repeated his contention that insofar as he relayed information about Mr O'Callaghan having given Mr Reynolds a sum of IR£150,000 in the bedroom of Mr O'Callaghan's house in Cork on 11 March 1994, he had done so on the basis that this was information given to him by Mr O'Callaghan within a day or two of the event itself and he had passed it on to the Tribunal.

2.23 Mr Gilmartin's description of the event on Day 761 in the course of cross-examination by Counsel for Mr O'Callaghan was as follows:

Q. 'Would you now be specific and tell us what exactly Mr O'Callaghan is alleged to have said to you about monies allegedly paid to Albert Reynolds?'

A. 'On 11 March '94, Albert Reynolds flew down by helicopter to Cork. I'm repeating what Mr O'Callaghan said to me, whether it's fact or not I cannot say.'

Q. 'That's what I want you to do. Is to repeat to the Tribunal what Mr O'Callaghan is supposed to have said to you.'

A. 'To collect money. Mr O'Callaghan told me that Mr Reynolds came to his house. He did not tell me about any fundraising thing in anywhere else. That he was in his house. And that he gave him a substantial sum of money. The figure I think was 150,000 pounds.'

Q. 'Did he mention the figure?'

A. 'Pardon? 150,000 pounds as far as I remember.'

Q. 'Did Mr O'Callaghan mention the figure to you?'

A. 'Yes.'

Q. 'And did he use the words 'a substantial sum of money'?'

A. 'He . . . to collect that he was there to collect money.'

Q. 'Did he say anything else to you about it?'

A. 'Yes, he told me that he gave him the money in a bedroom. Now, I took from that, that Mr Reynolds was staying, was staying at O'Callaghan's house. That's as I understood it. And he also added he was knackered. He didn't go to bed until three o'clock in the morning and he had to fly off to America the next day. He had to fly back. The helicopter picked him up and he had to fly back to Dublin. Now, as I remember, that's what Mr O'Callaghan told me.'

Q. 'And when did he tell you this?'

A. 'He told me shortly after the 11th March '94. Sometime shortly afterwards.'

Q. 'And did he tell you anything about where in the house this bedroom was?'

A. 'No, he just . . .'

Q. 'Did he tell you anything else about the incident?'

A. 'Did he tell me anything else?'

Q. 'Yes. I'm giving you the opportunity now to tell the Tribunal everything that you say Mr O'Callaghan told you about this alleged payment of 150,000?'

A. 'Well I can't recall every detail at the moment. There's no point in me . . .'

Q. 'When do you say Mr O'Callaghan told you about this?'

A. 'He told me sometime after.'

Q. 'How long?'

A. 'Very shortly after.'

Q. 'How long after?'

A. 'I'm not 100 per cent sure whether it was the day after or two days after but it was in before St Patrick's Day, that is 100 per cent certain.'

2.24 Questioned by Counsel for Mr O'Callaghan as to why he had told the Tribunal in the course of his evidence that Mr O'Callaghan had referred to Mr Reynolds as 'knackered' and why he had not, in any prior statement to the Tribunal, made a reference to this fact, Mr Gilmartin replied that it was only 'incidental to the story' and repeated his contention that Mr O'Callaghan had told him that Mr Reynolds 'didn't get to bed until 3 in the morning and he was knackered. He was, he had to fly off to America for the St. Patrick's Day the next day'. Mr Gilmartin denied that he was not telling the truth or that he was using 'little bits of words here and there to give a ring of truth' to his evidence. He also denied that what he had done, as put to him by Counsel for Mr O'Callaghan, was 'to take a hook of some piece of fact and on that to hang a lot of lies.'

MR O'CALLAGHAN'S EVIDENCE

2.25 In the course of a composite statement provided to the Tribunal on 25 April 2007, Mr O'Callaghan addressed Mr Gilmartin's claim that he had told him that he had paid IR£150,000 to Mr Reynolds. Under the heading 'Allegation that I gave Albert Reynolds IR£150,000 at 3 am in an upstairs bedroom of my house' Mr O'Callaghan stated as follows:

This allegation is utterly false and patently absurd. Albert Reynolds came to Cork, by car, for the fundraising dinner [referred to above] in T Niall Welch's house. He did not stay in my house. So far as I am aware, he went back to Longford that night by car. I did not give him IR£150,000 either at 3am or at any other time, either in my house or at any other place.

I never gave Albert Reynolds any money. Albert Reynolds was never in my home.

2.26 In the same statement and under the heading 'Fianna Fáil Private Dinner March 1994' Mr O'Callaghan stated as follows:

This dinner was held at the house of T. Niall Welch. The purpose for holding the dinner was to raise funds for Fianna Fáil. T. Niall Welch and I organised this dinner at the request of Fianna Fáil and the party secretary, Pat Farrell. I have already provided details to the Tribunal of the contribution which I made to the party at the dinner (see my statement to the Tribunal of 16th May 2003). So far as I can recall, the following people attended the dinner:

Mitchell Barry

Joe Donnelly

Noel C. Duggan

Pat Farrell

Bill Grainger

John McCarthy

Denis Murphy

Owen O'Callaghan

Eddie O'Connell

Albert Reynolds

Des Richardson

Joe Walsh

T. Niall Welch

2.27 In a prior statement to the Tribunal of 16 May 2003, Mr O'Callaghan had advised the Tribunal, inter alia, of having made a number of political contributions during the period January 1994 to 6 June 2002 and therein stated:

I have made a number of political contributions during the period of the 1st January 1994 to the 6th June 2002 and I would like to deal with political contributions of £1,000 or more as follows:

- 1. On the 14th March 1994 I made a payment of £10,000 to Fianna Fáil.*
- 2. On the 13th May 1994 I made a payment of £10,000 to Niall Crowley for the European Election Fund for Brian Crowley.*
- 3. On the 21st June 1994 I made a payment in the sum of £80,000 to Fianna Fáil.*

2.28 With regard to the payment of IR£10,000 to Fianna Fáil in March 1994, Mr O'Callaghan in his May 2003 statement went on to state as follows:

In or about the month of March 1994 I attended a fundraising dinner to which approximately twelve people were invited and at which it was indicated that Mr Albert Reynolds (then Taoiseach) would attend. It was expected that each of the invitees would contribute approximately £10,000 to the party. On the night of the dinner I handed over a cheque in the sum of £10,000 payable to Fianna Fáil.

2.29 In the course of his evidence to the Tribunal Mr O'Callaghan repeated his denial, as earlier set out in his statement of 27 April 2007, of ever having given Mr Reynolds a sum of IR£150,000, or any sum.

2.30 On Day 897 the following exchange took place between Tribunal Counsel and Mr O'Callaghan:

Q. 'Well, what Mr Gilmartin has told the Tribunal, Mr O'Callaghan, first and foremost, is that there was a meeting with Mr Albert Reynolds around the 11th or 12th March 1994 at a private house in Cork which he thought was yours, isn't that right, you agree he told the Tribunal that?'

A. 'Yes, he had, he said it was my house.'

- Q. 'Now, you say he was wrong insofar as it's in your house, isn't that right?'
- A. 'Yes.'
- Q. 'Would you say that, the balance of it, you have no substantial disagreement with the balance?'
- A. 'Well, I think it appeared in all the papers as well and most of Mr Gilmartin's stories came from stuff he read in the papers. So he could have picked it up there.'
- Q. 'Yes. I think this information comes to the Tribunal I think, Mr O'Callaghan, in fairness before there was any publication in the newspapers. That's why I am asking you is it possible that you are the person who first discussed with Mr Gilmartin the fact that there was a fundraiser in Cork on 11th March 1994, at which money was collected and Mr Reynolds was present?'
- A. 'It's possible, but I can't say for definite.'
- Q. 'Now, what Mr Gilmartin has told the Tribunal is, he says that you told him that Mr Reynolds was in your house in Cork on the night before to collect his money and that you gave over a cheque for over 100,000 pounds, 150,000 or something like that, at 3 o'clock in the morning, now is there any truth in that?'
- A. 'Oh my God. That's as far from the truth as it could possibly be. I think that's the morning Albert Reynolds took off in a helicopter as well from my house at 3 o'clock in the morning as far as I know.'
- Q. 'He was picked up the next morning I think Mr Gilmartin said, by helicopter to catch a flight to America?'
- A. 'That is not the greatest lie Gilmartin told, that is one of the greatest lies he told.'
- Q. 'Now, is it nonetheless I think a fact that on the night of the 11th or early the morning of the 12th, Mr Reynolds was taken by helicopter to Dublin, I think the records establish that?'
- A. 'Yes, I wasn't even aware of that, I found that out afterwards I thought he drove to Dublin, drove to Longford actually.'
- Q. 'Be that as it may, it would appear that Mr Reynolds was picked up and brought to Dublin, isn't that right?'
- A. 'Yes, he was.'
- Q. 'And insofar as the first figure that is mentioned by Mr Gilmartin in his evidence is concerned, where he says that you told him you gave a cheque for 100,000 pounds to Mr Reynolds at this meeting on the 11th March.'
- A. 'In my house?'
- Q. 'In your house.'
- A. 'At 3 o'clock in the morning?'

Q. 'Is there any truth first of all that you did such a thing, Mr O'Callaghan?'

A. 'Absolutely not.'

Q. 'Now, is it possible that you might have told Mr Gilmartin you had done such a thing.'

A. 'No.'

Q. 'Is it possible that what in fact might have happened is that you discussed with Mr Gilmartin your commitment to pay £100,000 to Fianna Fáil?'

A. 'No, No. This is just a complete make up by Gilmartin actually. It's so horrendous, it's so far from the truth that it is a complete fiction of his imagination.'

Q. 'Now, do you agree nonetheless that there was a fundraising dinner, it did happen in Cork, all of that is correct we have gone through that?'

A. 'Yes.'

Q. 'Now, Mr Gilmartin then went on to tell the Tribunal that Mr Reynolds was picked up the next morning by helicopter to catch a flight to America, isn't that right?'

A. 'That's right.'

Q. 'Now, I think you agree now although you didn't know it at the time Mr Reynolds was picked up that night by helicopter isn't that right?'

A. 'I don't know it was night or morning.'

2.31 Mr O'Callaghan was further questioned as follows:

Q. 'What I am asking you now about is where Mr Gilmartin could have got the information that Mr Welch and Mr Duggan were at the fundraising event, did that come from you, Mr O'Callaghan?'

A. 'As I said before, and I'll say it again, it's possible but I'm not sure.'

Q. 'Alright. Insofar . . . do you think that it's possible, Mr O'Callaghan, that you might have had occasion to discuss with Mr Gilmartin the political donations you were making to Fianna Fáil?'

A. 'It's possible, yeah, it is possible. It's possible that either I told Tom Gilmartin that I'd made, that I'd been asked by the Fianna Fáil party, by the Fianna Fáil National Treasurers to make a contribution to the party and that the figure I made was £80,000 and that that was based on a letter that was sent to me by Albert Reynolds and Bertie Ahern. That's quite possible that I told that to Tom Gilmartin, and that he actually turned that story around to the story he is telling, has told everybody that quite simply that I gave £80,000 to either Bertie Ahern or to Albert Reynolds. That's probably where his story has come from.'

2.32 Mr O'Callaghan went on to suggest that Mr Gilmartin could have obtained his story from a journalist, Mr Frank Connolly, although he agreed that, for Mr Gilmartin to have obtained the information from Mr Connolly, somebody had to provide the information to Mr Connolly in the first place, and he conceded that it would have had to have been someone with a very intimate knowledge of his financial affairs. Mr O'Callaghan conceded that 'it is possible that I told some part of the story to Gilmartin about the 80,000 pounds in particular. And it is possible that he gave it to his friend Connolly and Connolly has put the spin on it that's been going around for the past seven or eight or nine years.'

2.33 Mr O'Callaghan stated:

'In fact, my guess would be but I have no proof of this, my guess would be that is how this whole £80,000 thing happened and this how it has been blamed and put at the doorstep of Bertie Ahern and Albert Reynolds that I think the man who manipulated Gilmartin to do so is none other than Connolly.'

2.34 Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged, however, that certain of the detail relating to a visit by Mr Reynolds to Cork in March 1994 had been noted by Tribunal Counsel (in a telephone conversation on 5 February 1998), as having been conveyed by Mr Gilmartin long before a report of Mr Reynolds' visit to Cork in March 1994 appeared in a press article in August 1999.

2.35 Mr O'Callaghan agreed with Tribunal Counsel that, as far as the material facts pertaining to the fundraising event in Cork and the recorded information, as conveyed by Mr Gilmartin to the Tribunal, were concerned, the issues of dispute between himself and Mr Gilmartin related substantially to two items: 1) that the fundraising dinner did not take place in Mr O'Callaghan's house and 2) that Mr O'Callaghan did not pay IR£150,000 to Mr Reynolds, Mr O'Callaghan stating 'I never paid a penny in my life to Albert Reynolds.'

2.36 In the course of his evidence Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that he was instrumental, together with Mr Niall Welch, in organising a private fundraising dinner for Fianna Fáil which took place on 11 March 1994 at the home of Mr Welch and which Mr Reynolds attended. In evidence, Mr O'Callaghan confirmed that on the night in question he had made a payment by cheque of IR£10,000 to Fianna Fáil.

2.37 While Mr O'Callaghan denied telling Mr Gilmartin of a payment (of any sum) to Mr Reynolds at any location, he acknowledged that shortly after the event he may have informed Mr Gilmartin of the Fianna Fáil fundraising dinner which had been held in Cork and of Mr Reynolds' attendance at it. He also acknowledged that he may have informed Mr Gilmartin of the identity of some of those who attended the dinner and of his own contribution.

2.38 Inquiries made by the Tribunal established that on 11 March 1994 Mr Reynolds was flown by helicopter to Cork and that at half past midnight on 12 March 1994 Mr Reynolds, having attended the Fianna Fáil fundraising event in the home of Mr Niall Welch in Cork, was flown by helicopter from Cork Airport to Baldonnell, near Dublin, and that later on 12 March 1994, Mr Reynolds was flown from Baldonnell to the USA for engagements (apparently related to the St Patrick's Day festivities).

2.39 The Tribunal established that on 11 March 1994, a Fianna Fáil fundraising event was held in the Cork home of Mr Niall Welch, and was attended by at least 14 Cork-based businessmen.⁵

2.40 It was common case that the guest of honour on the night was the then Taoiseach Mr Reynolds. In addition to Mr Reynolds, individuals associated with Fianna Fáil who attended the dinner were Mr Joe Walsh, then Minister for Agriculture, Mr Pat Farrell, then General Secretary of Fianna Fáil, Mr Des Richardson, then an executive fundraiser for Fianna Fáil, and Mr Roy Donovan, a voluntary fundraiser for Fianna Fáil.

2.41 The Tribunal was satisfied that the primary purpose of the event was to raise funds for the Fianna Fáil party.

THE POSITION OF FIANNA FÁIL

2.42 On 20 January 2005, in the course of its private inquiries, the Tribunal wrote to the solicitors for the Fianna Fáil party under the heading 'Private Fundraising Dinner—1994' as follows:

I am directed by the Members of the Tribunal to write to you concerning the above mentioned matter.

The Tribunal Members understand from their inquiries that a dinner party for the purpose of raising funds was held in Cork in or around 11th March, 1994.

⁵ Including Mr Ed O'Connell, Mr Noel C. Duggan, Mr Colm O'Connaill, Mr Ed McNamara, Mr John McCarthy, Mr John Fleming, Mr Owen O'Callaghan, Mr Joseph Dowling, Mr Mitchell Barry, Mr Joe Donnelly, Mr Michael O'Flynn and Mr Niall Welch in whose house the event took place. Certain of the attendees who gave evidence to the Tribunal also recalled the presence of Mr Denis Murphy (deceased) and one or two of the attendees who gave evidence made a reference to the presence of a Mr Joe Kelly, but one later stated his belief that Mr Kelly did not attend.

The Tribunal Members are now anxious to ascertain the following information from your client:

- 1. Names of all individuals who were invited to the said dinner;*
- 2. The names of all individuals who attended at the aforementioned dinner;*
- 3. The venue of the aforementioned dinner; and*
- 4. Details of all funds raised together with details of where such monies were lodged.*

2.43 The reply to this correspondence was received on 29 April 2005 as follows:

My clients have made extensive searches in the Party Headquarters in an effort to locate any records relating to the event in question. Such efforts have proven unsuccessful and in those circumstances I regret that we are unable to provide you with a response to the first three queries raised by you.

With regard to details of funds raised my Clients have gone through the donations records for the calendar year 1994. However, it is not possible to relate any particular donation therein to this event. My Clients have no difficulty in providing you with a copy of the entire list of such donations if this might be of assistance to you.

2.44 Fianna Fáil provided documentation to the Tribunal which included two receipts, numbered 1496 and 1498 respectively. The sum on each document was IR£25,000. Both documents bore the words 'PRIVATE DINNERS, Cork private dinner 14-03-94'. While the words 'Received from' were printed on both of the documents there was no indication on their face as to who within Fianna Fáil had received the two payments of IR£25,000 following the 'Cork Private Dinner'.

2.45 Included also in documentation furnished by Fianna Fáil to the Tribunal was a Bank of Ireland (Lower Baggot Street) statement relating to a Fianna Fáil account (account No. 38621769), maintained in the names of Mr Reynolds and Mr Ahern. That document recorded that on 14 March 1994 there were two lodgements of IR£25,000 each to this account.

2.46 In the light of the inability of the Fianna Fáil party to provide details relating to the Cork private dinner of 11 March 1994 sought by the Tribunal under cover of its letter of 20 January 2005, the Tribunal duly requested the Bank of Ireland branch at Lower Baggot Street to provide all relevant documentation in its possession pertaining to the two lodgements of IR£25,000. The bank duly discovered such documentation to the Tribunal.

2.47 The information supplied by Bank of Ireland established that the sources of the two lodgements comprised respectively five and four elements. The first IR£25,000 lodgement was sourced to:

- 1) A bank draft dated 11 March 1994 for IR£6,000 payable to 'E O'Connell',
- 2) A cash sum of IR£4,000,
- 3) A cheque for IR£5,000 dated 11 March 1994 payable to Fianna Fáil and drawn on the account of Millstreet Horses Ltd,
- 4) A cheque for IR£5,000 dated 11 March 1994 payable to Fianna Fáil and drawn on the account of Radio County Sound Ltd,
- 5) A bank draft for IR£5,000 dated 11 March 1994 payable to Fianna Fáil from Sater Ireland Ltd (purchased by Mr Ed McNamara).

2.48 The second IR£25,000 lodgement was sourced to:

- 1) A cheque for IR£5,000 dated 11 March 1994 payable to Fianna Fáil and drawn on the account of 'Joan McCarthy,'
- 2) A cheque for IR£5,000 payable to Fianna Fáil dated 11 March 1994 and drawn on the account of Grainger Sawmills Ltd,
- 3) A cheque for IR£5,000 dated 11 March 1994 payable to Fianna Fáil and drawn on the account of John J. Fleming & Sons Ltd,
- 4) A cheque for IR£10,000 dated 11 March 1994 payable to Fianna Fáil and drawn on the account of Owen O'Callaghan.

2.49 It was established that eight of the nine sources which made up the total IR£50,000 lodged on 14 March 1994 were linked to specific individuals, as follows.

ATTENDEES AT THE DINNER

MR ED O'CONNELL

2.50 Mr O'Connell testified to the Tribunal that he had attended a fundraising event at the home of Mr Welch on 11 March 1994. While he could not recollect who had invited him it had been 'hinted' to him 'to make a donation towards Fianna Fáil', and that the amount was 'discretionary'. Accordingly, he had purchased a bank draft for IR£6,000 and handed it over on the night of the dinner. Mr O'Connell told the Tribunal that, mistakenly he had had the draft made out to himself and not Fianna Fáil. While he had no recollection of doing so, he surmised that he had probably endorsed the back of the draft on the night of the dinner.⁶ Mr O'Connell told the Tribunal that on the evening of the dinner he left the draft in a sealed envelope in Mr Welch's house for collection.

⁶ There was no evidence before the Tribunal that this was the case.

MR NOEL C. DUGGAN

2.51 Mr Duggan testified to the Tribunal that he attended the dinner on 11 March 1994 at the invitation of Mr O'Callaghan. Mr Duggan believed that in issuing the invitation, Mr O'Callaghan appreciated that he, Mr Duggan, might welcome the opportunity to speak to Mr Reynolds about matters which were of concern to him, namely the roads in Millstreet, Co. Cork. While he had not been specifically told in advance that it was a fundraising event Mr Duggan stated that he had an idea, from his conversation with Mr O'Callaghan, that there was a fundraising element to the dinner. Mr Duggan stated that he learned on the night that 'everybody else was doing it and I happened to have my cheque with me'. Accordingly he had made a contribution of IR£5,000. The Tribunal was satisfied that because of an entry in Mr Duggan's chequebook stub denoting 'Owen O'Callaghan' it was probable that Mr Duggan came to the dinner in the knowledge that he was going to make a donation to Fianna Fáil. Mr Duggan's evidence in this regard did not suggest otherwise. Mr Duggan's IR£5,000 cheque was recorded in the books and accounts of his company, Millstreet Horses Ltd, as referenced to 'Owen O'Callaghan' and 'Donations'.

2.52 Mr Duggan told the Tribunal that on the night in question there was a discussion amongst the attendees about the fundraising element of the dinner and what people were paying. Mr Duggan believed that the 'going rate' was, at a minimum, IR£5,000. He himself had discussed this with Mr William Grainger, another attendee. Mr Duggan believed that he had left his cheque in an envelope on the dinner table. Mr Duggan stated that he received no receipt or acknowledgement of his donation from Fianna Fáil. He had not made a donation to Fianna Fáil prior to 11 March 1994 and he stated that the donation of 11 March was the only one he had made to the party.

MR COLM O'CONNAILL

2.53 Mr O'Connail told the Tribunal that he had been invited to the dinner on 11 March 1994 by Mr Welch whose company at the time were doing a lot of work for Mr O'Connail's company, Radio County Sound Ltd. He had been advised by Mr Welch that it was an opportunity to meet the Taoiseach and that it was also a fundraising event. Mr O'Connail believed that he had asked Mr Welch, in advance of the event, what was the appropriate amount of money to contribute and he believed he must have been advised that it was IR£5,000, as he brought with him a cheque for that amount. Mr O'Connail stressed that at no point did he recall Mr Welch stating that it was necessary to have IR£5,000 to go to the dinner. Mr O'Connail acknowledged that it was likely he had had the cheque prepared prior to his attending on the night and that he probably filled in Fianna Fáil as the payee on the night.

2.54 Mr O’Connail did not recall any collection of donations taking place on the night nor did he recall seeing envelopes, but he acknowledged that he must have handed his cheque to someone on the night. Mr O’Connail did not recall receiving a written acknowledgement his donation.

MR ED MCNAMARA

2.55 Mr McNamara testified to the Tribunal that he attended the dinner at the invitation of Mr John McCarthy (another attendee). Mr McCarthy had advised him that as Mr Reynolds was attending the dinner it was an opportunity to discuss what was happening in Cork, and in business generally. He had also been advised by Mr McCarthy that it was a fundraising dinner and he had been told ‘that it would be £5,000 to attend the dinner’.⁷

2.56 While Mr McNamara acknowledged that in his statement he had written that on the evening in question he had handed over his IR£5,000 donation to ‘one of the Fianna Fáil officers’ his best recollection, in evidence, was that, having met Mr McCarthy at a hotel prior to the dinner event he had given the donation to Mr McCarthy. Mr McNamara told the Tribunal that he made the donation on behalf of Sater Ireland Ltd whose account had funded a bank draft for IR£5,000, purchased by him on the day of the dinner.

2.57 Mr McNamara could not assist the Tribunal as to whether a receipt had been received for the donation, stating that his company had moved offices and records had not been retained.

MR JOHN MCCARTHY

2.58 Mr McCarthy testified to the Tribunal that he was at the dinner on 11 March 1994 at the invitation of Mr Welch who told him that he could bring a friend to the dinner. Mr McCarthy brought Mr McNamara. In his evidence Mr McCarthy acknowledged that in the course of the dinner he had made a contribution of IR£5,000 by way of a cheque drawn on an account in the name of his wife. There was conflict between the accounts given by Mr McCarthy and by Mr McNamara as to what the state of Mr McCarthy’s knowledge was in March 1994 regarding the purpose of the dinner and regarding what he might have stated to Mr McNamara in advance of their attendance.

⁷ Mr McCarthy took issue with aspects of Mr McNamara’s recollection of what had been stated to him. See below under heading ‘Mr John McCarthy’.

2.59 A 'précis' of evidence furnished by Mr McCarthy in advance of his attendance at the Tribunal, stated, inter alia, as follows:

I vaguely recall being told that the purpose of the meeting was that our Taoiseach wished to meet up with some business people in the Cork area in an informal way to get ideas and a feel for what was needed, particularly in the jobs area. My memory is of a very cordial, relaxed enjoyable and indeed productive evening.

And:

The dinner was not in any way characterised to me as a Fianna Fáil dinner by anyone and I have no recollection or information concerning the background of the organising of the development. I simply received an invitation from Mr Welch which I gratefully accepted.

I note I made a contribution of IR£5,000 to the Fianna Fáil party by way of cheque signed by my wife Joan McCarthy. I have no recollection as to how or when I made this payment, nor indeed do I have any recollection or record of receiving any acknowledgement or receipt in respect of the payment. I certainly have no recollection of anybody demanding any such payment though I do have a vague recollection of two or three of us guests speaking with each other and suggesting that some form of contribution should be made for the evening.

2.60 While he acknowledged mentioning the matter to Mr McNamara and inviting him to the dinner, Mr McCarthy told the Tribunal that he had not advised Mr McNamara that it was a fundraising dinner, rather, he had said that there was a contribution expected as he 'knew there wasn't going to be any free dinner.'

2.61 Mr McCarthy, in evidence, accepted that Mr McNamara on the night in question had handed his contribution to him to pass on. He believed that he had left his and Mr McNamara's contributions on the dining table in Mr Welch's house. Mr McCarthy believed he had filled in the blank cheque in his wife's name which he had brought with him, following a discussion which had taken place in the courtyard of Mr Welch's house among guests as to how much ought to be contributed. Mr McCarthy stated that he did not receive a receipt for his contribution.

MR WILLIAM GRAINGER

2.62 Mr Grainger testified that he attended the dinner at the invitation of Mr Welch, who had advised him that Mr Reynolds would be in attendance and that it was a fundraising dinner and that there would be a 'contribution required', the amount of which had been left 'entirely up to ourselves'. In his statement to the Tribunal, Mr Grainger had advised that his company (Grainger Sawmills Ltd) had made a donation of IR£5,000 at a later stage than 11 March 1994.

2.63 While Mr Grainger was still of the belief, in the course of his evidence, that he had given his donation at a later stage than 11 March 1994, he accepted that a Grainger Sawmills Ltd cheque for IR£5,000 (which was dated 11 March 1994) comprised part of a lodgement of IR£25,000 made to the account of Fianna Fáil on 14 March 1994. (Mr Des Richardson told the Tribunal that one or two people came to his hotel on the morning following the dinner with cheques, and that some of the attendees at the dinner had subsequently forwarded donations to the party by post.) The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Grainger's cheque, if not provided on 11 March 1994, was in all probability handed over to Mr Richardson on the morning of 12 March 1994. Mr Grainger could not, given the lapse of time, assist the Tribunal as to whether a receipt had issued to him, or to his company, in respect of the donation he had made.

MR JOHN FLEMING

2.64 Mr Fleming told the Tribunal that he attended the dinner at the invitation of either Mr Welch or a Mr Joe Kelly (there was some doubt as to whether or not Mr Kelly was in fact present). Mr Fleming believed his invitation had come most probably from Mr Kelly as he was involved in organising the annual Taoiseach's dinner in Cork (an event separate to the 11 March 1994 event). Mr Fleming told the Tribunal that he was aware, probably from Mr Kelly, prior to his attendance at Mr Welch's house that he was going to a fundraising event for Fianna Fáil.

2.65 Mr Fleming acknowledged bringing a cheque for IR£5,000 drawn on his company's account to the event and he believed he left his contribution in an envelope on the dining table. Mr Fleming stated that he had seen envelopes being left on the table on the night in question. He did not recall any receipt issuing in respect of his contribution.

MR OWEN O'CALLAGHAN

2.66 Mr O'Callaghan testified to having attended at Mr Welch's house on 11 March 1994 and having been instrumental, together with Mr Welch and Mr Des Richardson of Fianna Fáil, in organising the dinner. With regard to the dinner, Mr O'Callaghan believed he had been Mr Richardson's first point of contact, contact which had been made some months prior to the event with a request from Mr Richardson that a dinner be hosted, the purpose of which was to raise funds for Fianna Fáil. Mr O'Callaghan stated that those invited to the dinner had been advised that they were expected to make a donation.

2.67 While amounts of donations had not been indicated, Mr O'Callaghan stated that if anyone had enquired, they would have been informed that the 'going rate' was IR£5,000 or IR£10,000. Mr O'Callaghan himself had made a contribution of IR£10,000⁸ to the event, by way of his personal cheque dated 11 March 1994 payable to Fianna Fáil. Mr O'Callaghan's account was debited with the amount on 16 March 1994. A Riga Ltd cheque for IR£10,000 dated 14 March 1994 was lodged to Mr O'Callaghan's account on the same date. This cheque was debited to the account of Riga on 14 March 1994. In Riga's audit working paper (Y9), the IR£10,000 cheque (to Mr O'Callaghan) is described as 'General Expenses Quarryvale' and is shown as being analysed under 'Nominal Account: 357 ADV & SUBS' (advertising and subscriptions).

2.68 Although he was instrumental in organising the fundraising event and was himself a donor on the night, Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that he did not witness anyone handing over money on 11 March 1994 or leaving cheques or envelopes for collection. It was his understanding that on the night, donations were not being handed over until the Taoiseach, Mr Reynolds, had departed. Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that he was 'pretty sure' that he had handed his donation to Mr Richardson on the evening of the event, after the dinner had ended.

2.69 Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that his contribution of IR£10,000 was a very substantial amount of money and that it was greater than 50 per cent of the net salary of a TD at the time. It was certainly the case, from an analysis of bank documentation supplied to the Tribunal, that Mr O'Callaghan's donation was the largest of the nine components which made up the two lodgements to the Fianna Fáil account on 14 March 1994.

2.70 Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that by March of 1994 there were two avenues of fundraising for Fianna Fáil emanating from him, namely his involvement in organising the fundraising event in Cork in respect of which invitees, including himself, were expected to contribute and his promise, as of December 1993, to donate IR£100,000 to Fianna Fáil, having been requested in writing by Mr Reynolds and Mr Ahern in September 1993 for a substantial donation. This request had been followed up by a direct approach in December 1993 from Mr McSharry who had put a figure on the substantial donation expected.

⁸ Mr O'Callaghan credited this IR£10,000 donation, together with IR£10,000 to Mr Brian Crowley's election campaign in May 1994, against his promised IR£100,000 donation to Fianna Fáil.

2.71 Mr O’Callaghan stated that, while by March 1994 he had concerns regarding the appointment of Mr McSharry to the board of Green Property Plc (in the context of the ongoing quest in 1994 of Green Property’s Mr John Corcoran for tax designation status for Blanchardstown) he had not, he claimed, spoken to Mr Reynolds about this issue on 11 March 1994, nor had he raised it with Mr Richardson. Mr O’Callaghan stated that the only person ‘that could make a decision, that did make decisions, and he was the only man capable of making decisions on designation that would have been Mr Ahern.’

2.72 Questioned about an entry in Mr Reynolds’ diary for 21 July 1994 noting a meeting between Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Welch and Mr Reynolds, Mr O’Callaghan could not say why he and Mr Welch were meeting with Mr Reynolds on that date, other than to surmise that it must have been because of something to do with Cork. Mr O’Callaghan rejected any suggestion that he and Mr Welch discussed the 11 March 1994 Cork private dinner with Mr Reynolds when they met on 21 July stating: *‘I’d say he’d long forgot that’.*⁹

MR NIALL WELCH

2.73 Mr Welch told the Tribunal that having been approached by either Mr Richardson or Mr O’Callaghan to host the dinner in his home, he had readily agreed to do so as Mr Reynolds, who was to attend, was a personal friend. The dinner had a dual purpose: firstly, to give people an opportunity to meet Mr Reynolds and discuss issues relating to their businesses and to Cork, and secondly, to fundraise for Fianna Fáil.

2.74 Mr Welch could not assist the Tribunal as to whether or not he, together with Mr Richardson, had attended a breakfast meeting with Mr Ahern on 9 March 1994 in the ‘Shelbourne’ (as recorded in Mr Ahern’s diary),¹⁰ although Mr Welch acknowledged meeting Mr Richardson prior to 11 March 1994 to arrange the dinner. Mr Welch also acknowledged having met with Mr Ahern over the years.¹¹

2.75 An expenses sheet completed by Mr Des Richardson recorded the following in relation to 9 March 1994: ‘Breakfast x3 Ahern/Niall Welch, DR. Re Cork event’. On balance therefore, the Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Welch’s and Mr Richardson’s meeting with Mr Ahern on 9 March 1994 was probably to discuss the Cork private dinner and its fundraising aspect.

⁹ Mr Welch, in evidence, could not say if the meeting with Mr Reynolds in July 1994 was connected to the Cork private dinner.

¹⁰ The diary noted Niall ‘Walsh’ but the Tribunal was satisfied, on balance, that it referred to Mr Welch.

2.76 Documents discovered to the Tribunal by Fianna Fáil included a copy of a letter addressed to Mr Welch from Mr Ahern dated 16 March 1994 thanking Mr Welch and his wife for hosting ‘such a successful evening on Friday 11th March last’.

2.77 Mr Welch told the Tribunal that when inviting guests to the dinner he had not discussed with them what contribution they might be expected to make and professed himself ‘shocked’ at the reference in Mr Ed O’Connell’s statement to Mr Welch’s advice that the expected contribution was IR£5,000.

2.78 Mr Welch stated that he himself had not made a contribution to Fianna Fáil on the night. He had paid for the dinner which had been catered by a local hotel and he had done so because of his friendship with Mr Reynolds. Mr Welch also advised the Tribunal that he did not know how the donations, known now to have been made by at least eight attendees at the dinner, had been collected on the night, although he could not rule out the possibility that envelopes had been handed to him on that evening. If this had occurred, Mr Welch believed that he would have handed the envelopes to Mr Richardson. Mr Welch told the Tribunal that after the dinner had ended he observed a number of envelopes in front of Mr Richardson on the dinner table and as Mr Richardson, Mr Pat Farrell and Mr Roy Donovan were awaiting a taxi to their hotel. Mr Welch assumed that the envelopes were taken by one of these three individuals.

MR JOSEPH DOWLING

2.79 Mr Dowling told the Tribunal that he had attended the dinner at Mr Welch’s house on 11 March 1994 at the invitation of the then Minister for Agriculture, Mr Joe Walsh. Mr Dowling stated that prior to the event he had been told by Mr Walsh that Mr Reynolds was a guest and that it was an opportunity to exchange views with him. Mr Dowling stated that no-one had apprised him of the fact that it was a fundraising event and no one had sought a contribution from him on the night, or subsequently. Mr Dowling also stated that he had not observed any contributions being made on the night. It had not occurred to him that it was a fundraising event, even though he knew that Mr Richardson was Fianna Fáil’s chief fundraiser at that time.

MR DAVID RONAYNE

2.80 Mr Ronayne told the Tribunal that he was invited to the dinner by either Mr Welch or Mr Denis Murphy (since deceased). Mr Ronayne had understood that the purpose of the dinner was social where local businessmen might take the opportunity to persuade the government to ‘kick-start’ Cork’s development.

Mr Ronayne stated that he had not been informed prior to the dinner that it was also a fundraising event, nor had he observed any sign of fundraising activity on the night. He had been introduced to Fianna Fáil personnel in the course of the dinner, and at some point in the evening Mr Richardson had given him his card.

2.81 Mr Ronayne said that following the dinner and a meeting with Mr Richardson subsequent to 11 March 1994, he made a decision to make a contribution to Fianna Fáil. Mr Ronayne duly made a contribution of IR£3,000 to Fianna Fáil, a contribution which was apparently received by Mr Richardson on 10 May 1994, having regard to the contents of a copy of an acknowledgement letter¹² sent to Mr Ronayne by Mr Ahern on 11 May 1994, and signed by him as Minister for Finance and Chairman of the National Finance Committee.

2.82 Discovery made by Fianna Fáil also included a document dated 9 May 1994 and headed 'Fianna Fáil the Republican Party' on which was printed receipt number 1552, and which had printed on it the words 'Cork Private Dinner 14-03-94 IR£3,000'. Mr Ronayne told the Tribunal that he could not recall having been furnished with a receipt, though he recalled Mr Ahern's acknowledgment letter.

2.83 Evidence was also adduced of a further contribution of IR£3,000 made by Mr Ronayne to Fianna Fáil in August 1994 in respect of which Mr Ahern again wrote a letter of thanks on 30 August 1994 to Mr Ronayne, and which Mr Ronayne recalled receiving.¹³

MR MITCHELL BARRY

2.84 Mr Barry told the Tribunal that he attended the dinner at the invitation of Mr Welch who advised him that a number of business associates and a special guest of honour would be attending. Mr Barry learned on the night that Mr Reynolds was the surprise guest. He told the Tribunal that no issue of the dinner being for fundraising had been discussed with him prior to his attendance and he stated that during the course of the evening no one had approached him seeking a contribution. Mr Barry stated that on the night he and Mr Reynolds had discussed Mr Barry's company having achieved an ISO award, and he stated that when informed of this Mr Reynolds had promised him he would send a letter of congratulations the following day to the hotel where Mr Barry's staff were to gather to celebrate the award. Mr Reynolds duly sent such a letter on 12 March 1994. Mr Barry's evidence was, that sometime after the dinner he was contacted by Mr Donovan by telephone, suggesting that they meet on Mr Barry's next visit to Dublin. After 'many weeks' they did meet, when the matter of his making a contribution to Fianna Fáil was discussed. Mr Barry however did not make a contribution on that occasion. Mr Donovan did not dispute making contact with Mr Barry.

¹²Discovered to the Tribunal by Fianna Fáil.

¹³This donation was recorded in a schedule of donations within Fianna Fáil as '30/8/1994 Mainport Cork Dinner IR£3,000'.

2.85 Mr Barry acknowledged, however, that by 12 April 1994 he made a contribution of IR£2,500 to the Fianna Fáil Party by way of a personal cheque, under cover of a letter to Mr Donovan. Mr Barry told the Tribunal that the reason for his change of mind about making a donation was that 'other events in or around that time took place and I felt it necessary to show appreciation to the Fianna Fáil Party.' Mr Barry stated that on the night of the dinner Mr Reynolds had promised to attend the official ISO presentation to Mr Barry's company, an event which was to take place (and did take place) within a couple of weeks of 11 March 1994. Mr Reynolds duly attended the presentation ceremony. In light of Mr Reynolds' personal support Mr Barry had reversed his original decision not to make a contribution to Fianna Fáil.

2.86 Discovery made by Fianna Fáil to the Tribunal revealed a copy letter dated 29 June 1994 from Mr Reynolds thanking Mr Barry for his contribution. Mr Barry recalled receiving that letter, but could not recall whether he had received an official receipt. Fianna Fáil records revealed a document headed 'PRIVATE DINNERS—Mr Mitchell Barry' and bearing the words 'receipt number 1531' in the sum of IR£2,500.

MR JOE DONNELLY

2.87 Mr Donnelly stated that he attended the dinner on 11 March 1994 at the invitation of Mr Welch who had advised him that it was a fundraising dinner for Fianna Fáil. At the time of the issuing of the invitation no discussion had taken place about the amount of any contribution Mr Donnelly might make. Mr Donnelly told the Tribunal, however, that towards the end of the dinner on 11 March 1994 he had approached Mr Welch to ask him how much he should contribute and Mr Welch had said he should send on a cheque for IR£5,000. Mr Donnelly testified that on the night in question he had not seen envelopes being left for collection, nor had he been privy to any discussion about contributions.

2.88 On 28 March 1994 Mr Donnelly duly sent a cheque for IR£5,000 to Fianna Fáil. When shown a copy receipt bearing the number '1506' dated 28 March 1994 and bearing the title 'PARTY FUNDS' 'Mr Joe Donnelly' Mr Donnelly could not recollect whether he had received such a document. Mr Donnelly recollected receiving a letter from Mr Ahern and said his recollection was aided by the fact that in that letter, Mr Ahern had addressed him as 'John' and not 'Joe'.

MR MICHAEL O'FLYNN

2.89 Mr O'Flynn confirmed having attended the dinner in Mr Welch's house on 11 March 1994. He stated that he did so at the invitation of Mr Welch who had advised him that he was hosting a Fianna Fáil function in his home at which the Taoiseach Mr Reynolds would be present. Mr O'Flynn knew it had a fundraising element and had been so informed by Mr Welch. However, Mr O'Flynn described what he believed was the basis of an invitation having issued to him in the following terms:

'Well, Niall Welch invited me if I can recall the exact detail of the invitation, but I knew Niall Welch well, I was very involved at that time in Cork as an industry representative in relation to the construction issues. I recall him telling me that the Taoiseach was to visit his home, that he was hosting or facilitating a Fianna Fáil function and that he was extending a personal invitation to me. He would be obviously be well aware of my involvement in the industry and he was keen that issues affecting Cork or obstacles to developing Cork would be discussed on the night. So I recall that, I also recall him saying to me that he was facilitating or hosting a Fianna Fáil event and that that was it.'

2.90 Notwithstanding his knowledge that the dinner included a fundraising element to it and that he had been a regular supporter of Fianna Fáil fundraising events prior to and subsequent to 11 March 1994, Mr O'Flynn told the Tribunal that neither he nor his company, O'Flynn Construction Ltd, had made any contribution to Fianna Fáil at the dinner or subsequent to the dinner, with reference to that event.

2.91 Mr O'Flynn again repeated what he believed to be the primary purpose of his invitation by Mr Welch in the following terms:

'He [Mr Welch] told me he was facilitating a Fianna Fáil event but he also told me that he had some personal invitations and he was very keen, in fact the day before the event he rang me to make sure that I suppose, the hard questions or the issues would be raised, at that time and every year since I would have had meetings with TD's and ministers and issues to do with Cork, so that's it, would be a regular occurrence for me, every year since then and before that. I am 20 year involved as a representative in Cork area.'

2.92 Mr O'Flynn stated that he did not see anything unusual about going to a fundraising event and not contributing given that he was going 'on the personal invitation of the owner of the house'. However, Mr O'Flynn acknowledged, as stated by Mr Welch in evidence, that Mr Welch, when issuing the invitation to him, had told him of its dual purpose, that of an opportunity to meet the Taoiseach and of fundraising.

2.93 Asked why he had decided not to contribute to the event on the night Mr O'Flynn stated 'I didn't see it as an inherent part of my attendance.'

2.94 Mr O'Flynn told the Tribunal that he had absolutely no recollection of seeing envelopes lying about or being collected on the night, and that no one had asked him for a donation on the occasion.

THE EVIDENCE OF THE FIANNA FÁIL REPRESENTATIVES WHO ATTENDED THE DINNER

2.95 Four¹⁴ of the five individuals associated with Fianna Fáil who attended the Cork private dinner on 11 March 1994 gave evidence to the Tribunal.

MR PAT FARRELL

2.96 Mr Farrell, who was General Secretary of Fianna Fáil in 1994, told the Tribunal that he attended the dinner which he knew to be a fundraising event to explain to the attendees how the resources raised would be used by Fianna Fáil. Mr Farrell stated: 'to put it succinctly, to make a pitch as to why it was important for a modern political party to function and realise its objective that it had to be funded.'

2.97 Mr Farrell was questioned about a number of contacts made by him and on his behalf to Mr Dunlop's office in the days immediately preceding the Cork dinner but he was unable to recall the purpose of such contact. He agreed that a meeting he had with Mr Reynolds on 10 March 1994, the day before the dinner, probably included discussion about the fundraising event in Mr Welch's house.

2.98 With regard to his presence on the evening in question, Mr Farrell believed that he had addressed those present on how funds raised at the event would be applied by Fianna Fáil.¹⁵ While he acknowledged that the event of 11 March 1994 was unambiguously for fundraising, Mr Farrell did not recall seeing ¹⁴Mr Reynolds did not give evidence to the Tribunal in relation to this matter.

¹⁵Some of the attendees at the dinner who gave evidence to the Tribunal stated that they did not recall Mr Farrell making a speech.

any fundraising taking place on the night. He himself had not collected any money, nor had he observed envelopes left for collection, as suggested by some of the witnesses who gave evidence to the Tribunal.

2.99 Mr Farrell told the Tribunal that he was not aware on the night in question whether money was in fact collected though he accepted, from the records available to the Tribunal, that at least eight of the persons attending had made donations on the night (in addition to a separate donation or donations amounting to IR£4,000, in cash), given that cheques or drafts from eight individuals/companies comprised the substantial portion of the two lodgements of IR£25,000 each made to the Fianna Fáil account on 14 March 1994. Mr Farrell also acknowledged that the documentary evidence established that a cash sum had been lodged on 14 March 1994. He agreed that someone had to have collected money on the night in question, for a total of IR£50,000 to have been lodged on the following Monday to Fianna Fáil's bank account.

2.100 Mr Farrell advised the Tribunal that it was normal practice within Fianna Fáil to maintain lists of individual donors to the party and to issue receipts to them. He could not give a reason why Fianna Fáil was unable to provide to the Tribunal a list of the individuals whose contributions comprised the total IR£50,000 lodged to the Fianna Fáil account on 14 March 1994.

2.101 Asked to comment on the two 'IR£25,000' receipts dated 14 March 1994, both bearing the heading 'Cork Private Dinner 14-03-94', Mr Farrell agreed that no individual or individuals were named on these two receipts. Mr Farrell stated that Mr Seán Fleming, the party's financial director, had the primary role of 'recording of receipts and accounting for money.'

MR ROY DONOVAN

2.102 Mr Donovan, a voluntary national fundraiser for Fianna Fáil in 1994, was present at the dinner on 11 March. He was there, he stated, in his capacity as a fundraiser who was familiar with the Cork scene. Mr Donovan claimed that he was not involved in collecting funds on the night in question and stated that he had not been given any contributions on the night and nor had he seen any money being collected and no money had changed hands in his presence. He agreed, however, that one of the aims of the dinner was to fundraise, and he maintained that in normal circumstances the money would come into the party subsequent to the fundraising.

2.103 Mr Donovan testified that he had no knowledge of the amounts raised as a result of the 11 March 1994 fundraiser, stating that he did not involve himself in that part of the fundraising exercise. Nor had he been aware on 11 March 1994 that a sum of IR£50,000 had been collected.

2.104 Mr Donovan's understanding of the procedures within Fianna Fáil upon receipt of individual donations, was that individual receipts would have issued to donors and moreover, Fianna Fáil would have kept a list of donors for its records, not least for the purpose of approaching such individuals again in the future. Mr Donovan could not assist the Tribunal as to whether any such list of the donors of the IR£50,000, which was lodged to Fianna Fáil's account on 14 March 1994, had been created or maintained. Nor could he assist the Tribunal as to why, within Fianna Fáil, only two 'global' receipts in the sum of IR£25,000 were to be found, each referenced to the Cork private dinner and on which no donors' names appeared, either individually or otherwise. Mr Donovan acknowledged that following the 11 March 1994 dinner he had approached Mr Barry for a donation for the party, although he had no recollection of doing so.

MR JOE WALSH

2.105 Mr Walsh (then the Minister for Agriculture) told the Tribunal that he did not recollect any fundraising element to the dinner he attended in Mr Welch's house in March 1994. He stated that when invited to the dinner he was completely unaware that it was a fundraising event. He was, he stated, present in his capacity, as the only Cork-based government minister, at an informal dinner the purpose of which, he understood, was to raise the profile of Fianna Fáil in Cork. He had not seen any evidence of fundraising in the course of the night, although from the material supplied to him by the Tribunal he acknowledged that the purpose of the dinner was to raise funds for his Party.

2.106 With regard to the absence of individual receipts for donations collected on the night, Mr Walsh told the Tribunal that he would have thought it reasonable that receipts should have issued to individual donors and that a record of their names would be kept by the Party. Mr Walsh himself kept such a record of those who contributed to his personal fundraising efforts.

MR DES RICHARDSON

2.107 Mr Richardson, who was an executive fundraiser with Fianna Fáil in the period, and operated out of the Berkeley Court Hotel (separate to Fianna Fáil HQ), provided a statement to the Tribunal on 20 January 2006. After making reference to his memory of the Cork private dinner of 11 March 1994 not being particularly distinct, Mr Richardson stated as follows:

I believe that a dinner was organised by Mr Niall Welch at his home in Cork. Mr Welch knew the then Taoiseach, Mr Albert Reynolds, and was aware that the Fianna Fáil party was organising fundraising events throughout the country at that time in an effort to defray the Party debt. I understand that Mr Welch offered to host a Dinner with a view to inviting some Cork business people to attend and envisaged that hopefully thereafter they would make a contribution to the Party.

I was invited to attend this Dinner and to the best of my recollection there were approximately fifteen other people in attendance. I do not recall many of the names, as they would have been Cork based people whom I had never met before. I do recollect the following people being in attendance from Fianna Fáil:

- Mr Albert Reynolds T.D.
- Mr Pat Farrell, General Secretary, Fianna Fáil.
- Mr Roy Donovan, who was then a member of the Fundraising Committee.

I understand that some of the guests subsequently did make a contribution to the Party and details of such contribution should be recorded in Party Headquarters.

2.108 On 17 October 2007, under the heading ‘Fianna Fáil Private Dinner 11th March 1994’ Mr Richardson’s solicitors wrote to the Tribunal on his behalf as follows:

My client wishes to clarify matters in relation to his attendance at the fundraising function on 11th March 1994.

My client believes that on the night of the fundraising dinner some of the individuals in attendance handed over donations for the benefit of the Party. My client believes that these donations were passed to him after the dinner by Niall Welch and by the late Denis Murphy who, at the time, was one of the principal party fundraisers in Cork.

My client recollects that he was asked by Niall Welch to delay his departure to Dublin the following morning as a couple of the individuals who attended the dinner wished to make donations but had not brought a cheque with them on the night. Mr Richardson believes that he did delay his return to Dublin for this reason. Mr Richardson believes that some of the attendees subsequently forwarded donations to the Party by post.

2.109 In the course of his evidence on Day 777, Mr Richardson told the Tribunal that information received from the Tribunal (prior to his scheduled appearance as a witness) which contained the names of people who had attended the dinner in Cork on 11 March 1994 had aided his memory sufficiently for him to recall that on the night of the dinner donations had been handed to him. Mr Richardson acknowledged, however, that, with regard to new information provided by him on 17 October 2007, namely that he had delayed his return to Dublin to facilitate the collection of donations, his recollection in that regard had not been prompted by anything contained in the documentation which had been circulated to him by the Tribunal, but rather by his own memory.

2.110 In neither of the statements provided by Mr Richardson, prior to giving evidence on Day 777, was there any reference to his involvement in organising, together with Mr Welch and Mr O’Callaghan, the fundraising event of 11 March 1994. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Richardson was involved in organising the event having regard to Mr O’Callaghan’s testimony and Mr Ahern’s diary reference to a meeting which took place between Mr Richardson, Mr Welch and Mr Ahern at the Shelbourne Hotel on 9 March 1994, two days prior to the fundraising dinner. Mr Richardson said he had no recollection of that particular meeting, or of ever having breakfast with Mr Welch and Mr Ahern.

2.111 Mr Richardson told the Tribunal that insofar as he had any involvement in the collection of money at the fundraising event in Mr Welch’s house, it was his recollection that donations had been passed to him by Mr Welch and by the late Mr Denis Murphy on the evening in question. On the morning following the dinner, two individuals, whose names he did not recollect, arrived at his hotel with cheques.

2.112 Questioned as to why Fianna Fáil were unable to provide the Tribunal with a list of the donors whose contributions comprised the total IR£50,000 lodged to an account of Fianna Fáil on 14 March 1994, Mr Richardson stated that he had given Fianna Fáil the names of the donors and the amounts donated. This information, Mr Richardson stated, would have been passed on to Fianna Fáil by him at the end of the year, as was his practice.

2.113 Mr Richardson acknowledged that insofar as the Fianna Fáil Party had any documentation connected to the events of 11 March 1994, such documentation consisted of two ‘receipts’ for IR£25,000 headed ‘Cork Private Dinner 14-03-94’, neither of which ‘receipt’ identified any individual or entity as the donor/donors of the IR£25,000 sums to which the two ‘receipts’ referred.

2.114 Mr Richardson stated that such ‘receipts’ had not been created by him and were probably for internal purposes within Fianna Fáil.

2.115 Mr Richardson's evidence was that he himself, as was his practice as a fundraiser for Fianna Fáil, had issued receipts and letters of acknowledgment to those who had made donations on 11 March 1994 and he stated that 'Sean Fleming would be aware that I would have sent out receipts and acknowledgment'. Mr Richardson also stated that all of his documentation in relation to the funds which had been generated as a result of the dinner of 11 March 1994 and which had come into his hands, had been maintained on his computer and this information 'to the best of' his knowledge had been duly passed to Fianna Fáil when he ceased his work as executive fundraiser for Fianna Fáil.

2.116 Mr Seán Fleming maintained that Mr Richardson was himself responsible for issuing acknowledgements of Party donations received through his, Mr Richardson's, Berkeley Court Hotel office, and that he periodically provided the Fianna Fáil head office with the names of donors and the amounts donated. However, Mr Fleming also told the Tribunal that Fianna Fáil head office would not necessarily be provided with the identities of all donors by Mr Richardson, and that if, for example, a donor (via Mr Richardson) wished to remain anonymous, his name would not be disclosed to the Party by Mr Richardson.

2.117 Mr Richardson appeared to suggest to the Tribunal that it was not necessarily the case that his letters of acknowledgment to the donors (which would have issued in the name of Mr Ahern) would have been transmitted by him through Fianna Fáil headquarters. Mr Richardson suggested to the Tribunal that the documentation that Fianna Fáil would have received from him, and which related to the donations collected on 11/12 March 1994, would have consisted of either a handwritten or a typed page, described by Mr Richardson as follows: 'the page of names and amounts on it as I have done for eight years.'

2.118 Mr Fleming told the Tribunal that he did not receive the names of the individual donors at the Cork dinner. However, discovery made to the Tribunal by Fianna Fáil provided a copy of a letter (from Mr Ahern) which issued to Mr David Ronayne (one of three attendees at the dinner who made a donation subsequent to 11 March 1994), and it was established that, insofar as Fianna Fáil had such a record, it had come from Mr Richardson's computer records.

2.119 Mr Richardson was unable to account as to why Fianna Fáil had a record of the acknowledgment sent to Mr Ronayne (whose IR£3,000 donation to Mr Richardson was received on 9 May 1994)¹⁶ but yet had no such records pertaining to the eight individuals who contributed sums of between IR£5,000 and IR£10,000 on the night of 11 March 1994. Tribunal Counsel put to Mr Richardson that this circumstance 'would suggest to you then, Mr Richardson, that for whatever reason, your documentation concerning the receipts for IR£50,000 was not in fact passed to Fianna Fáil'. To this suggestion Mr Richardson responded as follows: 'There is no reason in the wide world why that would happen. None.'

¹⁶Fianna Fáil also had records of letters of acknowledgment which were sent to other attendees (Mr Barry and Mr Donnelly) who had made donations subsequent to 11 March 1994.

2.120 Mr Richardson also rejected any suggestion that he might not have kept any record of the individuals who made contributions on 11 March 1994 or the amounts of such contributions.

2.121 Mr Richardson acknowledged having lodged a sum of IR£50,000 in total to the Bank of Ireland current account of Fianna Fáil on Monday 14 March 1994 and that the lodgement had been effected in two tranches of IR£25,000 each. He could not account for the reason why the lodgement of nine individual components (namely six cheques, two bank drafts and a sum of IR£4,000 cash) was effected in two tranches, other than to suggest that two lodgement dockets were required if names of the donors were written on the back of each. When it was pointed out to Mr Richardson that the evidence did not support this theory, he stated that he had 'no idea whatsoever' as to why two lodgements of IR£25,000 had been made, rather than one.

2.122 Having regard to the IR£4,000 cash sum which comprised one of the five components which made up one of the IR£25,000 lodgements, Mr Richardson acknowledged that there did not exist (save the bank lodgement docket) any document which identified the person/persons who donated that cash. Mr Richardson stated 'I didn't collect that £4,000 from the person that gave it that night.'

2.123 Mr Richardson stated that other than what his own computer records indicated, he had no independent recollection of how much money in fact had been collected on the night of 11 March 1994. He also acknowledged that discovery made by Fianna Fáil to the Tribunal had established that that party did not have in its possession any document which identified the donors of the nine individual sums that made up the two lodgements of IR£25,000 on 14 March 1994.

MR REYNOLDS' STATEMENT OF 26 JANUARY 2006

2.124 In a statement of 26 January 2006 under the heading 'private dinner—March 1994' Mr Reynolds set out as follows:

I have never attended a fundraising dinner for Fianna Fáil in the home of Owen O'Callaghan.

I have never received any payment whatsoever, political or otherwise in the sum of £150,000 or £40,000 from Owen O'Callaghan. For the avoidance of doubt, I have never received monies from any third party on behalf of Mr O'Callaghan or otherwise. The suggestion that I received money for my 'assistance in the tax designation of the Golden Island development in the Athlone, Co. Westmeath' is entirely without foundation and an outrageous allegation.

I did attend a dinner at the home of Mr Niall Welch on or about March 11th 1994. This dinner was in the nature of a 'get to know you dinner'. The dinner was to the best of my knowledge arranged by Mr Welch in consultation with members of the Fianna Fáil party. I cannot say with any degree of certainty who initially proposed the dinner. I was not involved in organising the dinner.

I have read the letter of Mr Welch to this Tribunal dated the 16th of June, 2005 and I have no reason to disagree with any of the contents of the letter. I would however wish to make it perfectly clear that while political contributions may have been received by the Fianna Fáil political party at the dinner, no money whatsoever was received by me in my personal capacity, nor did I handle any contributions received by the Fianna Fáil Party. I have no idea how much money was received by the Fianna Fáil Party on the night in question, but I believe that the records held at Party headquarters will confirm what monies were received.

2.125 In his 20 April 2007 statement Mr Reynolds stated, inter alia, 'The allegation that I stayed overnight in the home of Mr Owen O'Callaghan and received the sum of £150,000 from Mr O'Callaghan is absolutely untrue.'

MR GILMARTIN'S ALLEGATION OF A FUNDRAISING TRIP BY MR REYNOLDS TO THE USA

3.01 On 25 November 1999, immediately following Mr Gilmartin having been noted by Tribunal Counsel as stating that Mr Reynolds had been handed IR£150,000 by Mr O'Callaghan in Mr O'Callaghan's house in 1994, Mr Gilmartin was noted by Tribunal Counsel as having provided the following information:

AR then went on a fundraising trip to America. TG says that this was a massive fundraising effort. It was in the context of the euphoria over the Northern Ireland 'settlement'. AR was giving speeches about what he was doing for Ireland and a huge number of Irish Americans gave money generously. TG says that over $1m was raised on this trip which included Chicago, Boston and New York. However, only £70,000 was handed over to Fianna Fáil. The rest was lodged in accounts in the Dutch Antilles and in Lichtenstein.

3.02 Mr Gilmartin claimed that his sources for this information (which he claimed had been given to him sometime after St Patrick's Day 1994) were contacts in the US, including relatives of his working with CNN News Agency. Mr Gilmartin was requested to identify these individuals, but in a short narrative statement to the Tribunal on 6 March 2008, he identified only one individual who was by then deceased. Mr Gilmartin claimed that two of his US relatives who were in the past in a position to identify the whereabouts of three other individuals could not now do so.

3.03 The Tribunal heard evidence from Brigadier General Ralph James of the Air Corps. Brigadier General James confirmed to the Tribunal that Mr Reynolds flew in an Air Corps helicopter from Dublin to Cork on the evening of 11 March 1994, landing in Cork Airport at 18.50, and that the same aircraft brought Mr Reynolds back to Dublin, leaving Cork Airport at 00.20 on the morning of 12 March 1994. Brigadier General James also told the Tribunal that the Government jet left Dublin at 16.55 on 12 March 1994, and flew to JFK Airport near New York.

MR GILMARTIN'S CLAIM TO HAVE RECEIVED INFORMATION THAT MR O'CALLAGHAN PAID IR£40,000 TO MR REYNOLDS

4.01 In the course of his evidence on Day 731 Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that information given to him by an anonymous source (in 1998/9) included that Mr Reynolds had been paid a sum of IR£40,000 by Mr O'Callaghan. Mr Gilmartin stated that this was not something Mr O'Callaghan had ever told him, in contrast to March 1994 when, he claimed, Mr O'Callaghan had informed him that he had given Mr Reynolds IR£150,000. As with the IR£150,000 claim, Mr Gilmartin stressed that he was not making any allegations against Mr Reynolds with regard to payment of IR£40,000 by Mr O'Callaghan, he was merely telling the Tribunal what had been conveyed to him by an anonymous source.

4.02 Mr Gilmartin first made reference to the alleged receipt by Mr Reynolds of IR£40,000 in the course of a telephone call to the Tribunal on 22 October 1998, noted by Tribunal Counsel as follows:

Mr Gilmartin then told me about three Shefran payments that were made in or about May of 1992. It was either in late May or early June 1992. One of them was to Albert Reynolds for either £40,000 or £50,000. One was to Bertie Ahern for £30,000 and the other was either £15,000 or £20,000 and was to whoever was the Minister for Industry and Commerce in 1991/1992.

4.03 It was further recorded in that memorandum:

The payment to Albert Reynolds is connected with preventing Mr Gilmartin from getting the land across the way. The Corporation owned around 400 acres where St. Loman's was situated. The Corporation was going to sell this land and they had given Tom Gilmartin permission to include it in his brochure and in his maps. It was where he intended to put the conference centre and hotel. Tom Gilmartin wanted to buy 200 acres and the Corporation intended to give him an option to purchase it if the development was going ahead.

4.04 And:

Around that time, it was official policy that there was a ban on the IDA buying any more land. In fact, they had so much land that they were under instructions to sell some of the land which they held. Albert Reynolds and O'Callaghan blocked Tom Gilmartin getting the land by sending the IDA in to acquire the land. The IDA went to the Corporation and openly stated to McCloone and Derek Brady they were under instructions to stop Tom Gilmartin acquiring this land.

4.05 Prior to 22 October 1998, in the course of his taped interview with Mr Noel Smyth on 20 May 1998, Mr Gilmartin referred to Mr Reynolds as a 'coordinator' for Mr O'Callaghan when discussing the Corporation lands issue.

4.06 In a memorandum dated 9 November 1998, compiled following a telephone conversation between Mr Gilmartin and Tribunal Counsel on 6 November 1998, it was noted, inter alia, as follows:

Gilmartin says that he knows a part of the Chefran money went to Albert Reynolds.

And

He says that at the end of 1992/1993, a sum of £40,000 was paid to Albert Reynolds and £30,000 was paid to Bertie Ahern whom he believed were Prime Minister and Minister for Finance respectively. No money went into Chefran. The money was paid direct. Chefran was being used as a money laundering operation.

4.07 In a further memorandum dated 29 November 1999, compiled by Tribunal Counsel following a second telephone conversation with Mr Gilmartin on 25 November 1999, it was noted, inter alia, that Mr Gilmartin received information from a 'source', and that this 'source' had 'provided the information that Albert Reynolds got £40,000 from OOC'. In this memorandum Mr Gilmartin was also noted as stating that the information that Mr Reynolds had received IR£40,000 from Mr O'Callaghan was 'separate to the allegation that AR was given 150,000 in cash in OOC's house in Cork in March 1994.'

4.08 The prior utterances of Mr Gilmartin in relation to a claim that Mr Reynolds got IR£40,000 from Mr O'Callaghan (as noted on 22 October and 6 November 1998 respectively) did not indicate how Mr Gilmartin acquired this information.

4.09 The affidavit sworn by Mr Gilmartin on 2 October 1998 did not contain any reference to an alleged IR£40,000 payment to Mr Reynolds, nor did Mr Gilmartin's considered statement to the Tribunal of 17 May 2001 contain any such reference. In a Tribunal memorandum dated 21 February 2000 Mr Gilmartin was again noted as citing Mr Reynolds as having a role in preventing his acquisition of lands owned by Dublin Corporation. Mr Gilmartin testified that the absence of any reference to this matter in his May 2001 statement was an omission on his part.

4.10 In the course of questioning by Tribunal Counsel and by Counsel for Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Gilmartin maintained that, insofar as he had information regarding an alleged IR£40,000 payment to Mr Reynolds by Mr O'Callaghan, this information had come to him from an anonymous source as far back as 1993/4, and from telephone calls made to him by an anonymous source in or about 1998/9.

4.11 Mr Gilmartin was cross examined by Counsel for Mr O'Callaghan as to why, in the course of his testimony to the Tribunal, he suggested that the alleged IR£40,000 payment by Mr O'Callaghan to Mr Reynolds had been made in connection with Mr O'Callaghan's efforts to secure tax designation status for Golden Island, Athlone, yet in the memorandum of 22 October 1998 Mr Gilmartin was recorded as having linked the claimed payment of IR£40,000 to Mr Reynolds to alleged interference by Mr Reynolds, via the IDA, in the attempts being made by Mr Gilmartin in 1990 to acquire lands from Dublin Corporation¹⁷. Moreover, Mr Gilmartin had linked the alleged payment to payments made to Shefran Ltd by Barkhill Ltd. It was put to Mr Gilmartin that in his direct testimony on this issue he had not made reference to these claims.

4.12 Mr Gilmartin's response to such questioning was to state that having learned from his anonymous source that Mr O'Callaghan had made a payment of IR£40,000 to Mr Reynolds and, given the amount of money which had gone to Shefran Ltd from Barkhill Ltd in 1992, (money which was unaccounted for to Mr Gilmartin), he had surmised that the payment of IR£40,000 made by Mr O'Callaghan to Mr Reynolds had been channelled through Shefran Ltd.

4.13 Mr Gilmartin also testified that he had linked the claim that Mr Reynolds had received IR£40,000 to interference which he claimed had occurred in relation to his attempt to acquire lands from Dublin Corporation because, as he claimed, Mr O'Callaghan had boasted to him that Mr Reynolds was on his 'payroll'. Mr Gilmartin claimed that, after he told Mr O'Callaghan that officials (within Dublin Corporation/Council) had withdrawn an option previously given to him to purchase Corporation lands, in light of an interest being expressed by the IDA in those lands, Mr O'Callaghan told him that 'Albert seen to that'. Mr Gilmartin had taken this statement to mean that Mr Reynolds had intervened in his efforts to acquire the lands in question, at the behest of Mr O'Callaghan.

4.14 While so testifying Mr Gilmartin also continued to assert that he had been informed by his anonymous source that the alleged provision of IR£40,000 by Mr O'Callaghan to Mr Reynolds had been made in connection with Mr O'Callaghan's efforts to obtain tax designation status for 'Golden Island'.

4.15 Mr Gilmartin stressed to the Tribunal that while Mr O'Callaghan had told him that he had paid IR£150,000 to Mr Reynolds on 11 March 1994, and had stated to him on a number of occasions, that Mr Reynolds was on his 'payroll', Mr O'Callaghan had never specifically stated to him that he had bribed Mr Reynolds in relation to any matter.

MR REYNOLDS' RESPONSE TO MR GILMARTIN'S CLAIM THAT HE RECEIVED IR£40,000 FROM MR O'CALLAGHAN

4.16 In the course of his 20 April 2007 statement Mr Reynolds stated the following:

I am asked to comment on a further allegation by Mr Gilmartin that a sum of £40,000 was paid to me. Again there is absolutely no truth in this allegation and I never received any payment whatsoever from Mr Owen O'Callaghan as suggested [by] Mr Gilmartin or otherwise.

4.17 Mr Reynolds also stated:

I am concerned that such further statements had been requested of me, particularly in light of the clarification and narrative statement furnished to the Tribunal in January 2006. It is particularly noteworthy that Mr Gilmartin does not provide any grounds of any nature whatsoever to substantiate the false allegations. I take grave exception to these allegations made by Mr Gilmartin and request your confirmation that my statements have been recorded in full and with the same vigilance as the spurious, unfounded, defamatory and untrue allegations and misstatements made by Mr Gilmartin.

MR O'CALLAGHAN'S RESPONSE TO MR GILMARTIN'S CLAIM

4.18 In the course of his evidence on Day 915 Mr O'Callaghan denied that he had ever stated or intimated to Mr Gilmartin that Mr Reynolds was on his payroll or that he told Mr Gilmartin that Mr Reynolds had intervened at his behest to thwart Mr Gilmartin's attempts to purchase lands in the ownership of Dublin Corporation. Mr O'Callaghan denied that he had ever paid or authorised payment of any sum of money to Mr Reynolds in this regard or in any other regard. He said he did not pay Mr Reynolds IR£40,000 via Shefran or otherwise and he categorically denied that he had ever paid Mr Reynolds any monies (including a sum of IR£40,000) in relation to the issue of tax designation for Golden Island¹⁸ or for any matter.

MR GILMARTIN'S CLAIM THAT HE WAS INFORMED OF OFFSHORE PAYMENTS MADE TO MR REYNOLDS BY MR O'CALLAGHAN

5.01 In the course of his telephone conversation with a former Counsel to the Tribunal on 26 September 2002, Mr Gilmartin was recorded, inter alia, as having stated: 'Owen O'Callaghan made offshore payments to politicians including Bertie Ahern and Albert Reynolds' and that Mr Reynolds had 'accounts in Jersey, Liechtenstein and the Dutch Antilles.'

5.02 In the memorandum Mr Gilmartin was recorded as having informed Tribunal Counsel that the source of this information was a 'banker' in the UK with whom he had had two telephone conversations. Counsel for the Tribunal also recorded that Mr Gilmartin 'declined to tell me the identity of the person concerned because this person was extremely anxious not to become involved with the Tribunal although he did want to help Mr Gilmartin.'

5.03 In the course of cross-examination on Day 764 by Counsel for Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Gilmartin stated that he received two calls within a week, in or about September 2002, from this 'banker' source. Mr Gilmartin stated that following the second call he had himself dialled the number which had come up on his telephone. He had done this because he had concerns that what he had been told might have been a 'spook story'. Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that when his telephone call was answered by a person who claimed to do so on behalf of the Bank of Ireland, Jersey, his understanding was that he had in fact contacted that particular location in Jersey hence his assumption that his caller was a 'banker'.

5.04 Questioned as to why, in the course of giving testimony on this matter on Day 732, he had made reference to a named individual, Mr Gilmartin stated that he did so (and had given this person's name to the Tribunal in the course of telephone calls made by him) only in the context of identifying an individual whom he understood was connected to the Bank of Ireland, Jersey. Mr Gilmartin stated that he was unable to confirm that this was in fact the individual who had telephoned him in the first place. Mr Gilmartin stated that he passed on to the Tribunal the information he received from the person who had telephoned him in September 2002, after he had received the second telephone call. Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that he could not now recall the telephone number in question, nor had he retained his telephone bills.

MR GILMARTIN'S ALLEGATION OF INTERFERENCE BY MR REYNOLDS IN HIS UK REVENUE AFFAIRS

6.01 In the memorandum of 22 October 1998, compiled following a telephone call from Mr Gilmartin, Counsel for the Tribunal noted, inter alia, as follows:

Tom Gilmartin mentioned to the bank that he was negotiating with the Revenue in England for a claim they had for £7,000 in relation to his development in Northern Ireland. He mentioned this to Mary Basquille of the bank. She was Michael O'Farrell's assistant.

A week after he mentioned this to the bank, he was raided by the English Revenue at his home in Luton. Tom Gilmartin believes that the bank told O'Callaghan and that he got Albert Reynolds to set matters in motion with the English Revenue.¹⁹

6.02 On Day 732 when questioned about what he had advised Tribunal Counsel on 22 October 1998 Mr Gilmartin stated:

'I was going on something that the gentleman from the Revenue that came to raid, came back sometime later and apologised sometime later and apologised for what happened and also to assure me that he—that they had nothing whatsoever to do with the media arriving on the day they arrived’ and ‘he also said that the information supplied to them came from Dublin and he told me they came from a very high source. He mentioned the Ministry of Finance and I—Albert, since O’Callaghan was always bragging about it . . . I presumed that he was that the reference was made to Albert.’

¹⁹In notes compiled by Mr Pádraig Flynn in the course of a telephone call made by him to Mr Gilmartin in September 1998 the following appears: 'tax put writ on home for 10 million.' 'Dunlop and Callaghan to papers' 'I told AIB' 'Revenue tried even to take house' and 'Albert Reynolds had a hand in this too' and 'Callaghan ran to Albert with every problem he had with me.'

6.03 Mr Gilmartin acknowledged to the Tribunal that no one, including Mr O’Callaghan, had ever suggested an involvement on the part of Mr Reynolds in Mr Gilmartin’s UK Inland Revenue affairs and he acknowledged that his supposition in this regard had been based on words he claimed had been uttered by the gentleman who had called to his home (a Mr Lyons) and on what Mr Gilmartin himself, as he claimed, had been told by Mr O’Callaghan on occasions, namely that Mr Reynolds was on his ‘payroll’. These factors led Mr Gilmartin, in effect, to ‘presume’ an involvement by Mr Reynolds in his UK Revenue affairs.

MR O’CALLAGHAN’S RESPONSE TO MR GILMARTIN’S CLAIM

6.04 In his 25 April 2007 statement, under the heading ‘Pursuit of Tom Gilmartin by Inland Revenue in the UK’ Mr O’Callaghan stated that he:

...had absolutely no involvement in, or knowledge of, Mr Gilmartin being petitioned for Bankruptcy by the English Revenue authorities. I knew nothing whatsoever of this issue until it was drawn to my attention by Frank Dunlop following its publication in a British tabloid in May 1991.

MR REYNOLDS’ POSITION

6.05 In the course of his 20 April 2007 statement, in response to having been asked to comment on the allegation that he ‘set matters in motion with the English Revenue’ regarding Mr Gilmartin’s tax affairs, Mr Reynolds stated: ‘I never had any dealings whatsoever with the tax affairs of Mr Gilmartin. The allegation that I ‘set matters in motion with English Revenue’ is totally and utterly untrue.’

6.06 There was no evidence before the Tribunal to suggest any involvement of any nature by Mr Reynolds in Mr Gilmartin’s UK tax affairs nor did the Tribunal find any basis for Mr Gilmartin’s supposition in this regard.

MR GILMARTIN'S ALLEGATION OF A THEFT OF IR£1M FROM BARKHILL LTD

7.01 The notes taken of Mr Gilmartin's telephone call to the Tribunal on 26 September 2002 included the following statements by him: 'Over £1 million was stolen from Barkhill and it was from this money that O'Callaghan paid Bertie Ahern and Albert Reynolds'.

7.02 Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that this figure was simply his own estimate of the money which had been 'embezzled' from Barkhill Ltd.

7.03 When challenged, in the course of his sworn evidence, to withdraw this allegation, Mr Gilmartin declined to do so. He told the Tribunal that in compiling this figure he had included the 'hundred and some thousands of pounds to Lawlor, the quarter of a million or 300,000, whatever it was to Mr Dunlop'. Mr Gilmartin also stated 'that money was stolen, it was embezzled, without my authority, from my company and paid out in corruption money'.

7.04 Both Mr Reynolds and Mr Ahern denied receiving any money from Mr O'Callaghan.

MR GILMARTIN'S CLAIM OF AN INVOLVEMENT BY MR REYNOLDS IN BLOCKING TAX DESIGNATION FOR THE BLANCHARDSTOWN TOWN CENTRE DEVELOPMENT

8.01 In the course of his telephone call to Tribunal Counsel on 26 September 2002, in the context of a claim of an involvement by Mr Ahern in the 'blocking of tax designation for the Green Property Company', Mr Gilmartin said that *'John Corcoran was on the brink of getting tax designation. However it was blocked by Bertie Ahern and Albert Reynolds.'*²⁰

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO MATTERS CONCERNING MR ALBERT REYNOLDS

MR GILMARTIN'S ALLEGATIONS

THE CORK FUNDRAISING DINNER AND THE £150,000 CLAIM

9.01 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Reynolds was not the recipient of a IR£150,000 payment from Mr O'Callaghan on the 11 March 1994, or on any other occasion.

²⁰ Mr Flynn compiled notes in the course of a telephone call he made to Mr Gilmartin on 26 September 1998 and noted Mr Gilmartin as having made reference to an involvement by Mr Reynolds in the blocking of tax designation for Blanchardstown/Green Property Ltd.

9.02 The Tribunal was satisfied having regard to the events of March 1994, that at that time, Mr O'Callaghan relayed to Mr Gilmartin information concerning Mr Reynolds' attendance at a private dinner in Cork on 11 March 1994. Moreover, the Tribunal was satisfied, as a matter of probability, that in the context of relaying this information to Mr Gilmartin, Mr O'Callaghan may well have either directly stated or intimated to Mr Gilmartin that Mr Reynolds' attendance in Cork at the time in question was connected to fundraising activities then being conducted by Fianna Fáil. The Tribunal was satisfied that this information was given to Mr Gilmartin by Mr O'Callaghan at that time and it was satisfied that Mr Gilmartin relayed this information to the Tribunal as early as February 1998, and that he had no other source for this information than Mr O'Callaghan.

9.03 However, the Tribunal did not believe it likely that Mr Gilmartin, as he claimed, was told by Mr O'Callaghan of an overall amount paid or collected at the dinner. The Tribunal noted that the first reference by Mr Gilmartin to a specific sum connected with the events of March 1994 was made in the course of a telephone conversation with Tribunal Counsel on 25 November 1999, some 20 months following Mr Gilmartin having first advised the Tribunal of the March 1994 event, and some three months or so after reference was made in the media to a 'Reynolds dinner party' which it was claimed made '£150,000'. Given that no sum had been attributed to Mr O'Callaghan by Mr Gilmartin prior to 25 November 1999, either in his dialogue with the Tribunal in February 1998 or with his then solicitor Mr Noel Smyth in May 1998, the Tribunal took the view that as a matter of probability insofar as Mr Gilmartin alluded to a figure of IR£150,000 it was probably because he had learned of the figure from media reports.

9.04 The Tribunal was satisfied, however, that in March 1994 Mr O'Callaghan did inform Mr Gilmartin of the identities of at least some of the attendees at the dinner, and of his own contribution of IR£10,000, and that as a consequence of being so informed, Mr Gilmartin was left with the belief that a very substantial sum was, in total, collected in the course of the event.

9.05 The Tribunal accepted the truth, in general, of Mr Gilmartin's often repeated allegation that Mr O'Callaghan was inclined to claim (and on occasion boast) that he had paid substantial sums to politicians including Mr Bertie Ahern, Mr Albert Reynolds, Mr Liam Lawlor and Cllrs McGrath and Gilbride. Evidence to the Tribunal established that Mr Lawlor and both councillors (in addition to Cllr G. V. Wright and indirectly others) were indeed the recipients of substantial payments from Mr O'Callaghan.²¹

²¹ See part 10 of this chapter, and in particular the Tribunal's consideration of the evidence of Mr Eamon Dunphy.

9.06 Having regard to the general thrust of what Mr Gilmartin conveyed to the Tribunal in 1998, and while particular details given by him about the Cork event were inaccurate (for example his reference to the fundraising dinner having taken place in Mr O'Callaghan's house, as opposed to Mr Welch's house) other details given by Mr Gilmartin to the Tribunal on 5 February 1998, and to his then solicitor Mr Smyth on 20 May 1998, were largely consistent with events involving Mr Reynolds which did in fact take place over the course of 11 and 12 March 1994, in particular, that he attended at an event in Cork, travelled to, and departed from Cork in a helicopter, and that on the following day he travelled to the USA in connection with the St Patrick's Day festivities.

9.07 Generally, therefore, in the context of events which have been established as a matter of fact by the Tribunal to have taken place on 11/12 March 1994, the Tribunal was satisfied that within a short time thereafter, Mr O'Callaghan apprised Mr Gilmartin of those events and in all probability mentioned that a collection had taken place at the dinner (as in fact it had). The Tribunal believed it quite possible that information which Mr O'Callaghan conveyed to Mr Gilmartin concerning a substantial donation to the Fianna Fail Party was interpreted (albeit erroneously) by Mr Gilmartin as information that Mr Reynolds was the beneficiary of the fundraising event held on the 11 March 1994. It was certainly the case that the Fianna Fáil Party was a beneficiary of the fundraising event.

9.08 The Tribunal was satisfied that the primary purpose of the private dinner held in Cork on 11 March 1994 at which Mr Reynolds, the then Taoiseach, attended, was to raise funds for the Fianna Fáil Party from wealthy Cork-based businessmen.

9.09 The Tribunal was satisfied that the main organisers of the event were Mr Welch, Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Richardson.

9.10 The Tribunal was satisfied that many of those who attended were advised, prior to their attendance at the dinner, that their expected contribution was IR£5,000, and that they duly paid such sums. The known exceptions were Mr O'Callaghan, who contributed IR£10,000, and Mr Ed O'Connell who contributed IR£6,000.

9.11 For reasons unknown, and contrary to normal practice, no record of the contributors whose donations comprised the two lodgements made to the Fianna Fail bank account on the 14 March 1994, was maintained by Mr Richardson, the person, it would appear, whose responsibility this was. The Tribunal rejected Mr Richardson's assertion that he would have forwarded to Fianna Fáil 'the page of names and amounts' in respect of the event of the 11

March 1994. Had such information been passed to Fianna Fáil headquarters, then that party should have been in a position to provide such information to the Tribunal on discovery. Indeed it would appear that the Fianna Fáil Party, the recipient of the two IR£25,000 lodgements on 14 March 1994, was entirely unaware of the identity of the persons whose contributions comprised the lodgements. As it happened, it was the Tribunal that established for Fianna Fáil the identities of eight of the donors. It was also certainly the case, and indeed it followed as a matter of logic, that no receipt or acknowledgment letters were provided to the eight individuals duly identified by the Tribunal. It appeared that only Messrs Donnelly, Mitchell and Ronayne, whose contributions were made subsequent to the events of 11 March 1994, received receipts and/or written acknowledgements in relation to their contributions. The mystery as to the identity of the person or persons who provided the IR£4,000 cash included in one of the lodgements remains.

THE USA FUNDRAISING TRIP ALLEGATION

9.12 There was no evidence to support Mr Gilmartin's contention (albeit based on information he said was provided to him) that, following a fundraising trip to the USA by Mr Albert Reynolds only portion of the funds collected was lodged to the accounts of Fianna Fáil, with the remainder being lodged into offshore accounts in the Dutch Antilles and in Liechtenstein.

THE IR£40,000 CLAIM

9.13 The evidence before the Tribunal did not establish that Mr Reynolds received a payment of IR£40,000 from Mr O'Callaghan (either through Shefran or otherwise).

9.14 While the Tribunal believed that Mr Gilmartin was provided with information which led him to believe that Mr Reynolds had been paid IR£40,000 by Mr O'Callaghan, it was unable to determine the actual information conveyed to him, or indeed, the identity of the source or sources of that information. It was likely, as a matter of probability, that Mr Gilmartin conflated information (irrespective as to its truth) provided to him by Mr O'Callaghan and other sources, relating to the payment of money to Mr Reynolds, resulting in, in particular, Mr Gilmartin providing the Tribunal with a confused and unreliable account of the information which was actually provided to him.

THE OFFSHORE ACCOUNTS CLAIM

9.15 The Tribunal accepted Mr Gilmartin's evidence that he was informed by a third party, probably, as he maintained, by an individual he believed was a UK-based banker, that Mr Reynolds had offshore accounts, and had received money into them from Mr O'Callaghan. However, the Tribunal did not hear evidence which satisfied it as to the truth of the information which was furnished to Mr Gilmartin.

THE UK REVENUE ISSUE

9.16 While the Tribunal accepted that Mr Gilmartin genuinely suspected that Mr Reynolds had played a role in relation to his difficulties with the UK Revenue, or to its revelation in the media, the Tribunal heard no evidence which indicated that Mr Reynolds had been involved in any way in relation to the matter.

THE IR£1M THEFT FROM BARKHILL ALLEGATION

9.17 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Gilmartin's allegation that over IR£1m had been 'stolen' or 'embezzled' from Barkhill, was not established in evidence heard by it. The Tribunal has, however, made findings in this Chapter, that substantial sums of Barkhill's money²² were used, at the instigation of Mr O'Callaghan, to make corrupt payments to politicians (directly or indirectly).

9.18 The Tribunal was satisfied that this allegation was made by Mr Gilmartin, against the backdrop whereby substantial sums of Barkhill Ltd's money had been paid out from its accounts to, amongst others, Mr Dunlop, and against a backdrop whereby, in respect of certain payments made to Mr Dunlop/Shefran, Barkhill Ltd became indebted to Riga Ltd. Mr Gilmartin suspected that the purpose of the payments to Mr Dunlop was for ongoing disbursement to councillors. The Tribunal has found as a fact that the substantial portion of the IR£80,000 paid by Riga Ltd to Mr Dunlop in 1991 was used, in addition to other funds available to Mr Dunlop at this time, to fund payments to councillors, including a substantial payment of IR£40,000 to Mr Lawlor. Mr Gilmartin's allegations were further fuelled by substantial demands of money having been made of him by politicians and others (including Mr Lawlor, Mr George Redmond – via Mr Lawlor, Cllr Finbarr Hanrahan, an unidentified individual in Leinster House and Mr Pádraig Flynn – for Fianna Fáil.

²² Including funds paid on behalf of Barkhill, and which were subsequently reimbursed by Barkhill.

THE BLANCHARDSTOWN TAX DESIGNATION ALLEGATION

9.19 There was no evidence that Mr Reynolds ‘blocked’ tax designation for Blanchardstown.

9.20 The Tribunal was satisfied that the reference to same by Mr Gilmartin was in the context of his allegation that Mr O’Callaghan had informed him that he, Mr O’Callaghan, had paid IR£30,000 to Mr Bertie Ahern in relation to the issue of tax designation for Blanchardstown and Quarryvale.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 9 - MR LIAM LAWLOR'S INVOLVEMENT IN QUARRYVALE AND RELATED MATTERS¹

MR LAWLOR'S EARLY INVOLVEMENT IN QUARRYVALE²

1.01 Evidence to the Tribunal suggested that Mr Lawlor's first involvement with the Quarryvale lands was his meeting with Mr Gilmartin in the Deadman's Inn, a public house near Lucan in Co. Dublin, in May 1988.

1.02 Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Lawlor first met in the 1980s in Cork. At that time, Mr Lawlor was both an elected Dublin county councillor and a Fianna Fáil TD for West Dublin. Their contact relating to a development in Dublin (unrelated to Quarryvale) probably dated from approximately 1988. Mr O'Callaghan recalled attending a function in North Clondalkin and receiving expressions of support for the proposed development at Neilstown from local councillors including Mr Lawlor, Cllr Hanrahan and Cllr Ridge. Mr O'Callaghan also recalled being advised by Mr Lawlor in November 1988 that he and Mr Gilmartin were 'heading into a bit of a mess', a reference to Mr O'Callaghan's Neilstown site and Mr Gilmartin's Quarryvale site.

1.03 The Tribunal was satisfied (as set earlier in this Chapter) that Mr Lawlor was instrumental in ensuring that Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Tom Gilmartin would meet and discuss a partnership in relation to the Quarryvale lands. Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Gilmartin met in December 1988, and by December 1990 it had been agreed that Mr O'Callaghan would have an involvement in Quarryvale and a shareholding in Mr Gilmartin's company, Barkhill.³

1.04 Mr O'Callaghan frequently acknowledged Mr Lawlor's invaluable assistance and advice in relation to Quarryvale. However, at the same time, he sought to ensure the secrecy of his association with Mr Lawlor. He was concerned that any known link with Mr Lawlor might damage the project and in particular might adversely affect the land's rezoning and development prospects.

1.05 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Lawlor was, by December 1990, aware of Mr O'Callaghan's increasing engagement with Mr Gilmartin and the Quarryvale project and that by the time the second 'Heads of agreement' was signed on 15

³ A 'Heads of Terms' agreement dated 14 December 1990 was signed by Mr Gilmartin, Mr O'Callaghan and AIB (see Part 4 of this Chapter).

February 1991, he was proactively engaged with Mr O’Callaghan in promoting the project to have the Quarryvale lands rezoned.

1.06 Between 15 and 18 February 1991 Mr Lawlor lodged a motion with Dublin County Council, which had probably been drafted by him, and which was signed by Cllr Colm McGrath. This motion sought, in effect, to alter the zoning of the Neilstown lands from ‘town centre’ to ‘industrial and related uses’, and was prepared on the instructions of Mr O’Callaghan and his business partner Mr Deane. The County Council did not accept the motion because it was out of time.

1.07 On 18 February 1991, Mr Lawlor provided Mr O’Callaghan with a copy of this motion and he advised Mr O’Callaghan that he was in the process of preparing a strategy plan for the Quarryvale rezoning project in relation to:

- A. County Council management,
- B. Corporation management,
- C. Elected members,
- D. Community and Residents’ Associations,
- E. National and Local Media...

1.08 On 19 February 1991 Mr O’Callaghan faxed to Mr Kay of AIB a copy of the motion and of the points of Mr Lawlor’s strategy plan to be attended to, as well as a copy of the County Council agenda. Mr O’Callaghan was recorded as telling Mr Kay that Mr Lawlor had advised him to meet various County Council officials and elected councillors and that he suggested that this be done in the company of Mr Gilmartin. It was clear from the fax that Mr O’Callaghan intended to follow this advice.

1.09 On 26 February 1991, Mr Lawlor’s ‘strategic plan’ in relation to Westpark⁴ was provided to Mr O’Callaghan. In brief the ‘strategic plan’ indicated that:

- The Quarryvale re-zoning motion was likely to be rescheduled for 7 or 22 March 1991;
- The motion to ‘de-zone’ Neilstown had not been accepted by the County Council because it was out of time;
- Mr O’Callaghan should inform senior management within the County Council that ‘it is proposed by joint venture that Owen O’Callaghan will now pioneer the Westpark proposal and will negotiate a suitable arrangement with the Dublin Corporation to withdraw from pursuing the town centre proposal on the Fonthill site.’⁵
- It was ‘also important after these consultations to formally inform the County Council Chairman so that the elected members can fully understand the Westpark situation. At the moment community groups are actively lobbying for the Fonthill project and have objected to the board on the Paper Mills site. The situation at Westpark can be turned into a political football unless it is handled positively and in advance of the motion coming up for discussion in the Council to place town centres only on the Westpark lands.'

⁴ Another name for Quarryvale.

⁵ Another name for the Neilstown lands.

1.10 Mr Lawlor also advised Mr O'Callaghan to appoint a planning team, an investment consultant, and to agree a media strategy and a time programme for the project. Mr Lawlor advised Mr O'Callaghan that, 'with such a contentious motion presently on the County agenda and Local Elections now scheduled for mid June it is important (that) decisive action is taken.'

1.11 Mr O'Callaghan was also warned by Mr Lawlor of the complications for the Quarryvale project that would follow if Merrygrove Ltd was to receive planning permission for a town centre on the Fonthill site.⁶

1.12 Mr Lawlor advised Mr O'Callaghan to engage in a 'discussion with Ambrose Kelly to endeavour to ensure no decision is granted' (something which Mr O'Callaghan said he was already aware of).

1.13 Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that Cllr Marian McGennis arranged a meeting on 13 May 1991 between Mr John Corcoran of Green Property plc⁷ and his advisor Mr Garth May with Cllr Tommy Boland, the then Chairman of Dublin County Council, at which Mr Lawlor together with Councillors Ned Ryan and McGennis attended. Mr Corcoran and Green Property, who were pursuing their own development project in Blanchardstown, were opponents of the re-zoning and development of Quarryvale.

1.14 Mr Corcoran's evidence was that in the course of that meeting he was given to understand that Cllr McGrath's motion to rezone Quarryvale, which had been lodged with the County Council on 15 February 1991, and which was scheduled for determination by the councillors on 16 May 1991, was to be amended so as to ensure the future of the Blanchardstown Town Centre. Mr Corcoran's principal concern at this time was the scale of the proposed retail aspect of Quarryvale.

1.15 On 14 May 1991, Mr Corcoran wrote to Cllr McGennis furnishing her with a text of a revised motion (which Mr Corcoran believed reflected the agreement which had been reached at the meeting of 13 May 1991). On 15 May 1991 (the eve of the scheduled Quarryvale rezoning vote), Mr Corcoran advised the Council Chairman of his understanding that ‘a new motion is being drafted in connection with moving the Neilstown site to the Quarryvale site and I am happy with this.’ It was likely that, on 15 May 1991 Mr Corcoran believed that the changes that would be made to Cllr McGrath’s original motion would reflect the contents of the draft motion as furnished by him to Cllr McGennis. This motion read as follows:

Dublin County Council hereby resolves that within the area of land at Palmerston Quarryvale comprising approximately 176 acres between Fonthill Road and the Western Parkway an area of land be re-zoned for retail/civic uses to provide Town Centre facilities consistent with the strategic requirement of the Lucan/Clondalkin area as set out in the County Council’s Development Plan. The Planning Department shall define the location, access, acreage and square footage necessary to provide town centre facilities for Clondalkin/Lucan compatible with the 1972, revised in 1983, County Development Plan.

1.16 As matters transpired, the amendment made on 16 May 1991 to Cllr McGrath’s Quarryvale motion, and which was voted on and passed leading then to Cllr McGrath’s substantive Quarryvale motion (as amended) being put to a vote and passed successfully did not ease Mr Corcoran’s concerns as to the likely impact that a Quarryvale Town Centre might have on Blanchardstown. According to the contents of Mr Corcoran’s letter of 14 June 1991 to Cllr McGrath, on 16 May 1991 and immediately prior to the County Council rezoning meeting, Mr Lawlor had shown him the amendment to the McGrath motion which simply sought to restrict the retail development permissible on the Quarryvale site to that which had been provided for in the 1983 Development Plan in relation to the Neilstown lands. Mr Corcoran told the Tribunal that the proposed amendment did not reflect what Mr Corcoran believed had been agreed to at the meeting of 13 May, 1991 and therefore did not go far enough to protect the interests of Green Property plc. Mr Corcoran stated that the effect of the proposal would be the end of the construction of the Blanchardstown development.

1.17 On 16 May 1991, Mr Lawlor, who was then an elected county councillor, supported the motion to re-zone Quarryvale, as amended. The Tribunal believed it likely that Mr Lawlor exerted his considerable influence as the senior political representative in the Quarryvale area to persuade a number of his fellow councillors to support the Quarryvale motion, and the Quarryvale rezoning project generally.

1.18 According to Mr Corcoran, he and Mr Lawlor ‘fell out’ after the Quarryvale re-zoning motion on 16 May 1991. Mr Corcoran claimed that Mr Lawlor had misled him in relation to the Quarryvale re-zoning proposal, and in particular in relation to the nature of the amendment that would be made to Cllr McGrath’s Quarryvale motion.

1.19 Evidence to the Tribunal established that in February 1991, at a time when Mr Lawlor was assisting Mr O’Callaghan in promoting the interests of Quarryvale, he also billed Green Property Plc for IR£10,000 using a fictitious business name (Comex Trading Corp) to receive the payment.⁸ Mr Corcoran stated that he was unaware at the time that Mr Lawlor was also advising Mr O’Callaghan.

1.20 Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop both testified that notwithstanding the loss of his County Council seat in the June 1991 Election, Mr Lawlor continued to play a vital and strategic role in relation to the Quarryvale rezoning in the lead up to the second vote which took place on 17 December 1992 and beyond. Moreover by mid 1992 Mr Lawlor was also centrally involved in the Neilstown stadium project, not just as a strategist but also on the basis that he was to receive an interest in the venture.⁹ Mr Dunlop’s diary entries and office telephone records for the years 1992¹⁰ and 1993¹¹ indicated the extent of Mr Lawlor’s contact with Mr Dunlop over a prolonged period of time, much of which almost certainly related to Quarryvale (and the stadium project).

1.21 After the vote to rezone Quarryvale on 16 May 1991, the issues which were exercising the minds of Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Dunlop and Mr Lawlor included:

- The campaign conducted by Mr John Corcoran/Green Property to reverse the Quarryvale rezoning;
- The loss to the promoters of Quarryvale of the erstwhile Fianna Fáil support for Quarryvale within the County Council (a considerable number of Fianna Fáil councillors, including Mr Lawlor, having lost their Council seats in the Local Elections and Fianna Fáil having lost its majority on the Council);
- How best to win the support of newly elected councillors from all parties. In August 1991 Mr Lawlor provided Mr Dunlop with the names and addresses of all newly elected councillors in Dublin County Council and, according to Mr Dunlop, he and Mr Lawlor studied that list in order to identify those who would, or would not, support Quarryvale and those who might support Quarryvale ‘on foot of inducements’;

⁸ See Chapter Sixteen.

¹⁰ 18 scheduled meetings, and 205 telephone messages to Mr Dunlop’s office.

¹¹ 9 scheduled meetings, and 190 telephone messages to Mr Dunlop’s office.

- How best to address the question of the Neilstown town centre site (the ‘town centre’ designation having as of 16 May 1991 effectively been ‘transferred’ to Quarryvale) so as to appease those councillors, community groups and County Council officials who favoured the retention of a town centre zoning for Neilstown (as provided for in 1983 Development Plan).

1.22 In the course of his evidence Mr O’Callaghan credited Mr Lawlor as being the person with the idea of a national stadium for the Neilstown site, in lieu of a town centre. Mr O’Callaghan also credited Mr Lawlor as one of two people (the other being Mr Albert Reynolds) who introduced Mr Bill O’Connor of the Los Angeles firm of Chilton O’Connor as possible financiers of the stadium project – a concept which by mid 1992 had evolved, on the recommendation of Mr O’Connor, to the concept of an ‘all purpose national stadium.’

1.23 Evidence given by a number of witnesses, including Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop, established to the satisfaction of the Tribunal that Mr Lawlor continued in his role as a strategist and political advisor to Mr O’Callaghan throughout the currency of the Quarryvale rezoning campaign.

MR LAWLOR’S INVOLVEMENT IN A MEETING ARRANGED BETWEEN MR DUNLOP, MR O’CALLAGHAN AND MR GILMARTIN, AND RELATED MATTERS

1.24 Mr Dunlop credited Mr Lawlor as the person who initiated his involvement with Mr O’Callaghan and the Quarryvale project. Mr O’Callaghan agreed that this was the case. According to Mr Dunlop, Mr Lawlor, at short notice, arranged a meeting between himself, Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Gilmartin in Mr Dunlop’s office. Mr Gilmartin and Mr O’Callaghan agreed that a meeting, at some stage, took place in Mr Dunlop’s office when Mr Lawlor was also present. There was however a substantial dispute between Mr Gilmartin, Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop as to when this meeting occurred. Mr Gilmartin dated the meeting as having taken place in late April 1991. Mr Dunlop maintained it had taken place on or before 22 January 1991, and Mr O’Callaghan maintained that he and Mr Gilmartin met Mr Dunlop towards the end of February 1991. Mr Gilmartin, Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop were however in agreement that there was only one occasion when all four met together in Mr Dunlop’s office.

1.25 Insofar as Mr O’Callaghan maintained that he met with Mr Dunlop towards the end of February or in early March 1991, the Tribunal accepted that this may well have been the case, particularly having regard to the fact that Mr O’Callaghan, via Riga, became significantly involved in the Quarryvale rezoning subsequent to 15 February 1991 (the date of the signing of the second Heads of Agreement between Mr Gilmartin/Barkhill, Riga Ltd and AIB). The Tribunal could not determine with certainty if Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop were known to one another prior to February 1991. Mr O’Callaghan maintained that the first time he met Mr Dunlop was in the latter’s office in the presence of Mr Gilmartin and Mr Lawlor. Mr Dunlop placed his initial introduction to Mr O’Callaghan as having taken place in January 1991 and stated that Mr Gilmartin and Mr Lawlor were present. Mr Dunlop also maintained that this was his first meeting with Mr O’Callaghan. Neither Mr Dunlop nor Mr O’Callaghan could account for a reference to ‘Owen O’Callaghan’ in Mr Dunlop’s diary on 8 June 1990. Furthermore, Mr Gilmartin claimed that he saw Mr O’Callaghan together with Mr Dunlop and Mr Bertie Ahern in Dáil Eireann as early as 1989.

1.26 While there was no documentary record of any involvement on the part of Mr Dunlop, in his role as Quarryvale lobbyist, or of his having meetings with Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Gilmartin, either together or separately, until an entry in Mr Dunlop’s diary for 25 April 1991, the Tribunal was satisfied, that Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop probably did meet in relation to the Quarryvale project in January or February 1991. The Tribunal accepted that Mr Lawlor may well have brought Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop together but it rejected as unlikely Mr Dunlop’s and Mr O’Callaghan’s evidence that Mr Gilmartin was present when they first met. The Tribunal was satisfied that as from late February 1991 there was probably a general understanding as between Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Lawlor and Mr Dunlop that Mr Dunlop would become involved in the Quarryvale rezoning as a lobbyist. By then, they knew that the Quarryvale rezoning vote was likely to be scheduled for debate in the County Council in or about March/April of 1991. Indeed Cllr McGrath’s motion to rezone the Quarryvale lands was first listed for hearing for 26 April 1991. The Tribunal was also satisfied that Mr Dunlop’s engagement as a lobbyist was formalised in late April 1991, probably on 26 April 1991¹². On that date Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Deane were recorded in an AIB memorandum as having apprised Mr Donagh of AIB that they had retained Mr Dunlop ‘to advise on media issues.’

1.27 The Tribunal was also satisfied that Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Gilmartin, from 14 February 1991 onwards, on occasions, together and/or separately met with and spoke to councillors in relation to Quarryvale. Prior to this date, Mr Gilmartin had himself been in contact with a small number of councillors in relation to Quarryvale. As the vote on the rezoning motion drew closer (16 May 1991), contact with councillors in relation to Quarryvale was undertaken almost entirely by Mr O’Callaghan and his lobbyist Mr Dunlop.

1.28 The Tribunal was not persuaded that Mr Gilmartin's first face to face introduction to Mr Dunlop occurred in either January or February of 1991. It was more likely that this occurred at a later stage and probably on 25 April 1991. Mr Dunlop's diary entry for that date led the Tribunal to the conclusion that this was the occasion when Mr Gilmartin was taken by Mr Lawlor and Mr O'Callaghan to Mr Dunlop's office. Mr Lawlor was at this time playing a critical role in organising and planning a strategy for Mr O'Callaghan to follow in order to achieve the rezoning of the Quarryvale lands.

1.29 While Mr Gilmartin's first meeting with Mr Dunlop probably took place on 25 April 1991, this was not the first contact between the two men. Both Mr Gilmartin and Mr Dunlop confirmed that in mid to late 1989 Mr Dunlop initiated contact by letter with Mr Gilmartin offering his services as a lobbyist in relation to Quarryvale. Mr Gilmartin declined the offer. Moreover, in 1989 Mr Dunlop had provided Mr Gilmartin with newspaper extracts relating to the Garda corruption investigation then underway and in which Mr Gilmartin had an initial involvement. Mr Dunlop stated that at the time he faxed these newspaper extracts to Mr Gilmartin he suspected that the Garda complainant referred to in the newspaper reports (although not named), was Mr Gilmartin and that the unnamed politician referred to was Mr Lawlor. Mr Dunlop also told the Tribunal that his initial contact with Mr Gilmartin in 1989 took place after Mr Lawlor had recommended to Mr Dunlop that he contact Mr Gilmartin.

1.30 Notwithstanding the scheduled meeting between himself, Mr Gilmartin and Mr O'Callaghan recorded in his diary for 25 April 1991, Mr Dunlop disputed that such a meeting had taken place on that date. Likewise, Mr O'Callaghan did not believe that he and Mr Gilmartin had met with Mr Dunlop on 25 April 1991. Both Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan agreed that, irrespective of when the first meeting between Mr Dunlop and Mr Gilmartin occurred, a subsequent meeting took place between Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan in Mr Gilmartin's absence, either on the day after or within a few days of this first meeting.¹³

1.31 Mr Dunlop's diary for 26 April 1991 recorded a meeting between himself and Mr O'Callaghan. Forensic analysis of the diary revealed that Mr Gilmartin's name also appeared in Mr Dunlop's diary for this date but had been the subject of a deliberate attempt by Mr Dunlop to obliterate it.

1.32 Mr Gilmartin and Mr O'Callaghan provided substantially different accounts as to how they ended up in Mr Dunlop's office in the company of Mr Lawlor.

¹³ The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop met in the absence of Mr Gilmartin on 26 April 1991 (see Part 5 of this Chapter).

1.33 Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that having arrived early for a meeting at AIB Bank Centre in Ballsbridge, he met Mr O'Callaghan who requested that he accompany him to the Dail to meet a number of politicians. Mr Kay, according to Mr Gilmartin, encouraged him to accompany Mr O'Callaghan, and he agreed to do so.

1.34 Mr Gilmartin testified that en route to the Dáil, he and Mr O'Callaghan called to Buswells Hotel (opposite Leinster House), where they encountered Mr Lawlor. Mr Gilmartin said that he and Mr O'Callaghan then followed Mr Lawlor from the hotel through Leinster House and out into Mount Street whereupon they entered a building where they met Mr Dunlop in his office. Mr Gilmartin's impression at the time was that Mr Dunlop expected their arrival. On arrival into Mr Dunlop's office, neither he nor Mr O'Callaghan were formally introduced to Mr Dunlop. Mr Gilmartin said that it was his impression that Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop 'were familiar' to each other.

1.35 Mr Gilmartin testified that no actual meeting took place between the four men or indeed between himself, Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop. He maintained that on entering Mr Dunlop's office he, for all intents and purposes, was left alone, while Mr Lawlor immediately departed into a back office, quickly followed by Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan. It was Mr Gilmartin's belief that a fourth unidentified person was also in that other office. Mr Gilmartin said that on occasions as he sat alone in the front office Mr Dunlop emerged briefly from the back office and then returned thereto.

1.36 Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that as he sat alone in the outer office an argument or heated discussion appeared to develop in the adjoining office, and that voices were raised. Mr Gilmartin said that he then left the office and proceeded to walk along the street outside when he was followed by Mr O'Callaghan who enquired of him as to why he had left Mr Dunlop's office. Mr Gilmartin said he responded to Mr O'Callaghan to the effect that he believed the meeting had been a 'set up' and that he did not want any part of it. Mr Gilmartin said that as he and Mr O'Callaghan were engaged in this discussion on the footpath, a green Volvo car drew up, driven by Mr Dunlop. Mr O'Callaghan got into the car and Mr Gilmartin accepted an offer of a lift back to the AIB Bank Centre in Ballsbridge. Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that as he exited Mr Dunlop's car he overheard Mr Dunlop 'having a go at' Mr O'Callaghan on the basis that Mr O'Callaghan had left him, Mr Dunlop, alone with Mr Lawlor. Mr Gilmartin said that Mr Dunlop had stated to Mr O'Callaghan that Mr Lawlor 'went for him' because 'seemingly he was supposed to get 100,000. And he only got 40,000.' Mr Gilmartin said that Mr O'Callaghan responded to Mr Dunlop to the effect that he, Mr O'Callaghan, would 'try and square it' by giving 'a bit more' to Mr Lawlor.

1.37 Mr Gilmartin recounted that subsequent to this event when he queried Mr O'Callaghan as to what this was all about he was informed that Mr Lawlor 'was not happy with the money he was given' and that Mr O'Callaghan 'had to go back and give him extra money.'

1.38 Mr Gilmartin's evidence in relation to what occurred at the meeting and subsequently was disputed by both Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan.

1.39 Mr Dunlop said that Mr Lawlor had brought Mr Gilmartin and Mr O'Callaghan to his office for arrangements to be made to engage Mr Dunlop's professional services as a lobbyist for the Quarryvale project. Mr Dunlop said that the meeting in his office was dominated by Mr Gilmartin talking about his plans and ambitions for Quarryvale, and that there had been little input from Mr O'Callaghan. Mr Dunlop denied that any discussion had taken place between himself and Mr O'Callaghan in relation to Mr Lawlor or payments to Mr Lawlor. Mr Dunlop did however acknowledge that he had owned two green Volvo cars 'at some stage.' Mr Dunlop denied that Mr Lawlor had made a demand for a payment of IR£40,000 or for any money at the meeting, or that there had been any discussions in relation to money at that meeting.

1.40 Mr Dunlop did however admit to having made a payment of IR£40,000 to Mr Lawlor, in relation to Quarryvale in May/June 1991, but maintained that neither Mr Gilmartin nor Mr O'Callaghan were present when such an arrangement had been agreed between himself and Mr Lawlor, or at the time of the actual payment to Mr Lawlor. Mr Dunlop maintained that Mr O'Callaghan was unaware of his arrangement to pay Mr Lawlor IR£40,000 or of any arrangements to pay money to Mr Lawlor.

1.41 Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that the meeting in Mr Dunlop's office had been dominated by Mr Gilmartin and denied that Mr Gilmartin had left the meeting in the manner described by him or that Mr Gilmartin had accompanied Mr Dunlop and himself in Mr Dunlop's car to Ballsbridge subsequent to the meeting. Mr O'Callaghan denied that there was any discussion between himself and Mr Dunlop relating to payments to Mr Lawlor, or that he had indicated that he would pay any additional money to Mr Lawlor, in the manner described by Mr Gilmartin. Mr O'Callaghan also denied any knowledge of a payment of IR£40,000 having been made by Mr Dunlop to Mr Lawlor.

MR DUNLOP'S EVIDENCE RELATING TO THE PAYMENT OF IR£40,000 TO MR LAWLOR

1.42 On 19 April 2000 (Day 147), Mr Dunlop listed for the Tribunal the names of some sixteen councillors to whom, he alleged, he had made payments in the context of the Local Election campaign of May/June 1991. Mr Dunlop gave this information to the Tribunal to explain the purpose of certain withdrawals made by him from his 042 'war chest' account in 1991.

1.43 In his explanation to the Tribunal on Day 147 of the circumstances relating to a payment of IR£40,000 to Mr Lawlor, Mr Dunlop, in essence (although he did not name anyone publicly), told the Tribunal that a meeting had taken place in his office in April 1991 at which Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Gilmartin were present. It was on this occasion that Mr Dunlop said that he agreed to make the IR£40,000 payment to Mr Lawlor, although he did not say whether Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Gilmartin witnessed his discussion with Mr Lawlor.

1.44 On Day 147 Mr Dunlop said he agreed to pay IR£40,000 to Mr Lawlor because he was 'a powerful individual.' In the course of his evidence Mr Dunlop went on to explain that this 'powerful individual' had not proceeded to play an 'electoral' role in the Quarryvale issue subsequently. Mr Dunlop further apprised the Tribunal, on Day 147, that having made the agreement with Mr Lawlor in April 1991 to pay him money, he later paid over the IR£40,000 to him in the course of the Local Election campaign in 1991.

1.45 In his statement of December 2003 Mr Dunlop stated:

I gave Liam Lawlor 40,000 pounds in cash at my office at 25 Upper Mount Street, Dublin 2, in late May, early June, 1991, after the vote in Dublin County Council with regard to Quarryvale on 16th May 1991. Mr Lawlor was aware of the monies I was in receipt of at that time from Mr O'Callaghan. I had already agreed to pay him half my professional fee which he knew to be £100,000. He wanted £50,000. But by 30th May 1991, I had only received £65,000 although I had issued an invoice for the sum of £15,000 on or about 1st May 1991. And this was paid on or about 13th June 1991. I told Mr Lawlor that I had only received £65,000 and was due another payment of £15,000 shortly, making a total sum of £80,000. He then asked for £40,000. The £40,000 was in AIB sacking bags in a leather briefcase and I transferred the money into a plastic bag in the front office on the first floor of the building of the above address. There is only one entry concerning Liam Lawlor in my 1991 diary for this period that is Wednesday, 29th May and that refers to a meeting with a third party making it unlikely that the money was handed to Mr Lawlor at this time. I cannot therefore state specifically on what date this money was handed to Mr Lawlor at my office.

1.46 In the course of his sworn testimony in the Quarryvale module, Mr Dunlop, while standing over his claim to have paid IR£40,000 to Mr Lawlor in May/June 1991, resided in one important respect from his previous testimony on Day 147. Mr Dunlop specifically denied that the arrangement he had entered into with Mr Lawlor for payment of money to him had been negotiated when Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Gilmartin (although not necessarily privy to the arrangement) were in attendance in Mr Dunlop’s office.

1.47 Mr Dunlop’s sworn testimony in the Quarryvale module was that having told Mr Lawlor of his agreement with Mr O’Callaghan for a IR£100,000 fee, Mr Lawlor had demanded half of that amount but that, when Mr Dunlop informed him that he had only received IR£80,000 from Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Lawlor settled for a payment of IR£40,000. Mr Dunlop said he duly paid this sum to Mr Lawlor in cash in Mr Dunlop’s office during the course of the 1991 Local Election campaign. He was unsure whether he had withdrawn the money from the bank specifically to pay it to Mr Lawlor, or whether he already had it available in his home. He maintained that he did not inform Mr O’Callaghan of the payment.

1.48 In the following exchange between Counsel for the Tribunal and Mr Dunlop on Day 769, Mr Dunlop explained the circumstances in which he said the payment of IR£40,000 to Mr Lawlor was made.

‘Q And your payment to Mr Lawlor was in connection, was effectively 50% of what you had got or were about to get from Mr O’Callaghan, isn’t that right, from Riga?’

A. That is correct yes.

Q. Right. And this is out of your professional fee, as I understand your earlier evidence?’

A. Yes.

Q. Right. So that what you are going to give him or what you are agreeing to give him is half of what you are getting.

A. Yes.

Q. In reality?’

A. Mr Lawlor’s attitude was you are now, I have introduced you to a client, this is going to be very successful, this is going to go ahead, you are going to make a lot of money out of it and this is my fee.

Q. If Mr Gilmartin is correct in his evidence to the Tribunal, his evidence is that a payment was made on the 25th or had been made prior to the 25th, then that payment would have had to taken place if Mr Gilmartin is correct, prior to the 25th April 1991?

A. Of course I disagree with Mr Gilmartin.

Q. Except in that...

A. Yes, therefore that particular contention doesn't apply.

Q. Yes, but insofar as Mr Gilmartin tells the Tribunal of an arrangement to pay 40,000 pounds to Mr Lawlor, he is correct insofar as you did pay 40,000 pounds to Mr Lawlor isn't that right?

A. Yes, just for absolute clarity on this. I disagree with Mr Gilmartin in the outline that he gave in relation to the circumstances which he alleges there was a discussion in his presence, that did not take place. I have no argument whatsoever with Mr Gilmartin in relation to the payment of 40,000 pounds and I think Mr Gilmartin's evidence in that regard is probably, if I may suggest post hoc, Mr Gilmartin was told or found out in some fashion or other that I did give 40,000 pounds to Mr Lawlor.

Q. That's I wanted to come to, so did you ever tell Mr Gilmartin about paying 40,000 pounds to Mr Lawlor?

A. No, just for, again for clarity, so that we can proceed on the same basis or on parallel tracks as we go. I never had a discussion whatsoever with Mr Tom Gilmartin about payment of any monies to anybody, let alone Liam Lawlor.

Q. Yes. It is clear that Mr Gilmartin knew at some stage of a 40,000 pounds payment from you to Mr Lawlor, which was in some way connected to Quarryvale, isn't that right?

A. That is obvious from what he says. How he came by that knowledge, I just can't fathom.'

MR LAWLOR'S DENIAL THAT HE RECEIVED IR£40,000 FROM MR DUNLOP

1.49 In his statements to the Tribunal, Mr Lawlor denied receiving IR£40,000 (or any other substantial sum) from Mr Dunlop in 1991.

1.50 In a public statement in May 2000 (which he later provided to the Tribunal), Mr Lawlor stated that he recollected a payment of IR£4,000 from Mr Dunlop at the time of the 1991 local election. In later correspondence with the Tribunal (June 2003), Mr Lawlor claimed to have received IR£2,000 from Mr Dunlop in 1991.

1.51 The Tribunal did not identify any single substantial withdrawal of funds from Mr Dunlop's accounts prior to 25 April, 1991 with the exception of one unexplained withdrawal of IR£16,001¹⁴ on 18 April 1991. The Tribunal did not identify any payments made to Mr Dunlop (or Shefran Ltd) by Mr O'Callaghan/Riga prior to May 1991. However, as confirmed by Mr Dunlop in evidence, he frequently dealt in cash and particularly large amounts of cash and on regular occasions, substantial payments made to him were never lodged to any of his accounts. The Tribunal was therefore satisfied that the absence of evidence of withdrawal of a cash sum or sums amounting to IR£40,000 from Mr Dunlop's account in the period leading up to 25 April, 1991 could not be taken as a reliable indication that such a sum was not available to him in cash at that time.

1.52 The bank accounts operated by Mr Lawlor or for his benefit disclosed 15 lodgements between 16 May 1991 and 26 June 1991 amounting to IR£47,722, of which lodgements totalling IR£38,772 were unexplained.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE IR£40,000 PAYMENT TO MR LAWLOR

(i) The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Lawlor was the beneficiary of a substantial cash payment in May/June 1991 and it was satisfied that the circumstances in which this came about, in all probability, followed a demand made by Mr Lawlor for a substantial payment, whether directly to Mr O'Callaghan or through Mr O'Callaghan's agent Mr Dunlop. It may well have been the case that Mr Lawlor made the demand directly to Mr O'Callaghan, given that it was established, to the satisfaction of the Tribunal, that at a time when the Quarryvale Town Centre concept was being promoted by Mr Gilmartin, Mr Lawlor made demands of him, not only for substantial amounts of money, but also for an interest in the project itself. Mr Lawlor had also made such demands from Mr Gilmartin in relation to the Bachelor's Walk development proposal in 1988.¹⁵ The Tribunal believed that it was unlikely that Mr Lawlor's modus operandi would have radically altered in his dealings with Mr O'Callaghan.

(ii) The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Lawlor made Mr O'Callaghan aware of his considerable political influence and that Mr O'Callaghan appreciated and ¹⁴ Mr Dunlop maintained that he could not recall what he used this money for, but suggested that he used it 'for purposes that this Tribunal is investigating.' This Tribunal understood this to be a reference to the Tribunal's investigation of corrupt practices in the planning system.

¹⁵ See Part 3 of this Chapter.

believed that Mr Lawlor could exert such influence and that in this way, and in other ways be in a position to assist in achieving the rezoning of the Quarryvale lands (and indeed also the Neilstown stadium project).

(iii) In all the circumstances, the Tribunal was satisfied that a IR£40,000 cash payment was indeed made to Mr Lawlor by Mr Dunlop on a date in May / June 1991, and that it was made with Mr O'Callaghan's knowledge.

(iv) The Tribunal was also satisfied that Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop made provision, in the course of their discussion as to the extent to which Mr Dunlop would be put in funds for disbursement during the 1991 local elections, for the payment of a substantial sum of money to Mr Lawlor. Thus, the Tribunal was satisfied that the funds which were to be provided to Mr Lawlor were accounted for in the three payments Mr O'Callaghan/Riga made to Mr Dunlop in May/June 1991.¹⁶

(v) The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop's agreement to pay IR£40,000 to Mr Lawlor was concluded at around the time Mr Dunlop had agreed with Mr O'Callaghan (against a backdrop of a claim for money being made by Mr Lawlor), that IR£80,000 would be paid by Mr O'Callaghan for distribution to councillors in the course of the local election campaign of May / June 1991.

(vi) While no specific IR£40,000 lodgement was identified in the bank accounts of Mr Lawlor within this timeframe (although cumulatively there was a number of unexplained lodgements to accounts connected to him in this period totalling IR£38,772) the Tribunal was nonetheless satisfied that Mr Lawlor received such a sum in cash from Mr Dunlop.

(vii) The Tribunal did not regard as significant the absence of any record in Mr Lawlor's bank accounts or accounts associated with him of a lodgement of IR£40,000 or a similar substantial amount. In coming to this decision, it took into account the fact that payments totalling IR£40,000 made by Mr O'Callaghan to Mr Lawlor¹⁷ were likewise not reflected in any of the bank accounts under the control of Mr Lawlor.

¹⁶In addition to the IR£80,000 paid by Riga to Shefran in May/June 1991 a substantial portion of which was retained by Mr Dunlop in cash, he had also available to him at that time other cash funds amounting to approximately IR£80,000.

¹⁷These payments (dealt with below) were: IR£10,000 in September 1991 (which was found by the Tribunal to be linked to the IR£40,000 payment under discussion here), IR£10,000 in September 1994 and IR£20,000 in March 1995.

MR GILMARTIN'S KNOWLEDGE OF THE IR£40,000 PAYMENT
BY MR DUNLOP TO MR LAWLOR

1.53 In the period 1998 to 2002, prior to giving sworn testimony, Mr Gilmartin made a number of references to Mr Lawlor having been in receipt of money from Mr Dunlop.

1.54 On 11 October 1998, an article in the Sunday Business Post, which carried a story about payments made to Mr Lawlor by Arlington Securities plc, attributed Mr Gilmartin as having stated that 'a further £50,000 was paid to Lawlor when the Quarryvale project was being progressed.'

1.55 The article also stated:

Gilmartin claims this payment was handled by public relations consultant and former Fianna Fáil press officer, Frank Dunlop. Dunlop has forcefully denied making any such payment to Lawlor. He said that he met Lawlor for briefings on the Quarryvale project but made only one contribution of some £500 towards a golf classic organised by Lawlor. When contacted on Friday night, Lawlor refused to comment on the claims.

1.56 A note made on 3 December 1999 by Counsel for the Tribunal (Mr Hanratty SC) of a telephone call from Mr Gilmartin on 1 December 1999 referred to a meeting in Mr Dunlop's office in the following terms:

TG said that LL had received £50,000 from OO'C in connection with Quarryvale. There was a meeting in the offices of Frank Dunlop in Mount Street towards the end of 1991 when Lawlor demanded £100,000 from Dunlop. There was a big row. OO'C was in the next room when it was going on. Dunlop gave him a payment which brought the total he received from OO'C to IR£50,000.

1.57 In a subsequent telephone discussion between Mr Gilmartin and Senior Counsel for the Tribunal on 8 December 1999, Counsel noted the following:

I asked TG again about what he had told me about the payment of a total of £50,000 to Liam Lawlor and the row which happened in Frank Dunlop's office. I pointed out that LL lost his seat in the June 1991 election and queried whether any payment would have been made to him after that. TG said that it certainly would. LL was a man of considerable influence and who had to be kept onside. TG said that it was OO'C that told him about the Dunlop office incident.

1.58 In his written statement to the Tribunal on 25 May 2001, Mr Gilmartin stated the following:

Typical of Mr O’Callaghan’s style was that he told me in the course of 1992, that Liam Lawlor had been given £50,000 by Frank Dunlop and that Mr Lawlor was extremely annoyed because he had claimed that he had been promised £100,000 but he had not received it. Mr O’Callaghan told me that he was in a back office when Mr Lawlor came to collect the cash from Mr Dunlop and that, when a row developed between Mr Lawlor and Mr Dunlop, he remained in the back office listening to it. Mr O’Callaghan found it very humorous indeed that Mr Dunlop later rounded on him for not coming to his assistance in warding off an angry Mr Lawlor.

1.59 On 9 January 2002, following a telephone conversation with Mr Gilmartin, Counsel for the Tribunal noted inter alia, the following:

He then (Mr Gilmartin) went on to say that he was anxious to establish who was present in Frank Dunlop’s office at a meeting held there on the 28th April, 1991. I did not have the files readily available to me and asked him to remind me of what happened on that date. He said that he had been called by AIB to attend a meeting in their offices but there was no discussion or no meaningful discussion at that meeting and Owen O’Callaghan appeared. Eddie Kay said there were important people who wanted to meet TG. O’Callaghan had a taxi waiting at the bank. They went to Buswell’s Hotel. O’Callaghan got out of the taxi and went in to the Hotel followed by Gilmartin. Liam Lawlor was sitting at a table in Buswell’s. He got up and the three walked through the grounds of Dáil Eireann entering by the Kildare Street gate and exiting on the other side. They went to Frank Dunlop’s office. Gilmartin was left in a room and O’Callaghan went into another room with Liam Lawlor. There was someone else in the room with whom Lawlor and O’Callaghan had a discussion. Dunlop was in and out of that room and Gilmartin was left sitting on his own. He, Gilmartin, says that he believes that IR£40,000 was paid to Liam Lawlor on that day which was a few days before an important vote by DCC. He says that IR£40,000 had been taken out of his company before he had knowledge of it. He said that was the day that O’Callaghan said to him ‘you will never build a foot on that site.’

Gilmartin initially thought that Ambrose Kelly may have been the unknown person in Frank Dunlop’s office but he now thinks it may have been a representative of AIB, either Jim Donagh or – Ahern (of AIB, College St.).

He inquired if the Tribunal knew the identity of the unknown person and I explained that even if we did know we would not be able to give him that information. He understood our difficulty in this regard but he then went on to talk about Frank Dunlop and said that he had been warned about Dunlop on a previous occasion and although Dunlop had written personally to Gilmartin he was not anxious to employ him.

1.60 There were inconsistencies between Mr Gilmartin's prior statements to the Tribunal and his sworn testimony on the issue of the payment by Mr Dunlop to Mr Lawlor.

1.61 In particular, there were inconsistencies as to the circumstances in which Mr Gilmartin became aware of the existence of this payment. Indeed, in his sworn evidence, Mr Gilmartin said he overheard the payment being mentioned in the course of a discussion between Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan and that Mr O'Callaghan later confirmed to him that Mr Lawlor had received money. Mr Gilmartin's prior statements, however, do not record him having been present or having overheard Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan's conversation but only suggest that he became aware of the matter via Mr O'Callaghan. Notwithstanding such inconsistencies, the Tribunal took cognisance of the fact that Mr Gilmartin was, in the course of his communications with the Tribunal in 1999 (prior to Mr Dunlop's first appearance in public at the Tribunal in April 2000), alluding to the payment of a substantial sum by Mr Dunlop to Mr Lawlor, and suggesting knowledge thereof on the part of Mr O'Callaghan.

1.62 There were also inconsistencies as to the amount which Mr Gilmartin said Mr Lawlor had been paid by Mr Dunlop. In his prior statements, Mr Gilmartin said it was IR£50,000, while in sworn evidence he said it was IR£40,000. However, by the time Mr Gilmartin gave sworn evidence, he would have been aware, from Mr Dunlop's prior evidence and statements, that even though Mr Lawlor had requested IR£50,000 at the time, he had only been paid IR£40,000.

1.63 Moreover, there were inconsistencies as to when Mr Gilmartin became aware of Mr Dunlop's payment to Mr Lawlor. In his sworn testimony, Mr Gilmartin said he overheard the conversation between Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop in late April 1991. On 1 December 1999 however, he had alluded to this meeting as having occurred at the end of 1991 and in his statement of May 2001, he referred to having been told by Mr O'Callaghan 'in the course of 1992 that Liam Lawlor had been given £50,000 by Frank Dunlop.' In relation to such inconsistencies, it must be noted that Mr Gilmartin acknowledged being 'terrible on dates' and could have conflated the meeting of April 1991 with another meeting.

1.64 Indeed, Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal of another meeting which he attended with Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Dunlop and Mr Lawlor in Mr Lawlor’s Dáil office, which occurred within the week following the signing of the Barkhill share subscription agreement on 13 September 1991.

1.65 Mr Gilmartin stated that, at Mr Kay’s suggestion, he, Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop travelled together, in Mr Dunlop’s car to the Dáil for the purposes of meeting politicians in relation to Quarryvale. Mr Kay, in the course of his evidence, acknowledged that he may well, following a meeting in AIB, have suggested that Mr Gilmartin accompany Mr O’Callaghan to the Dáil to meet politicians. Mr Kay, however, refuted Mr Gilmartin’s suggestion that he would have been brought over from Luton solely for this purpose.

1.66 According to Mr Gilmartin, on arrival at the Dáil the group was led by Mr Dunlop into Mr Lawlor’s office, where they met Mr Lawlor (Cllr Marian McGennis was also present). Mr Gilmartin said he then left Mr Lawlor’s office and was duly followed by Mr O’Callaghan whereupon they had an exchange of words on the street.

1.67 In his sworn evidence to the Tribunal on Day 738, Mr Gilmartin confirmed his recollection of what occurred in the following terms:

‘I asked Mr Dunlop why I was there, but he would not give me a straight answer. I distrusted Mr Dunlop and I got fed up and I left the office. In the corridor I met with Mr O’Callaghan who was there talking to Albert Reynolds. When I passed Mr O’Callaghan he asked me to wait for a little while, but I declined and made my way out of the building. Mr O’Callaghan followed me out and we had a sharp exchange of words. I put it to Mr O’Callaghan that he was trying to use me as a ‘patsy.’ Mr O’Callaghan responded by saying that I would never put ‘an effing foot on that site and neither will any effing unionist. This is the best site in Europe.’

1.68 There were strikingly similar features between Mr Gilmartin’s account of the September 1991 meeting in Mr Lawlor’s Dáil office and its aftermath and his account of his earlier April 1991 meeting in Mr Dunlop’s office, and its aftermath. Both accounts involved Mr Kay encouraging Mr Gilmartin to accompany Mr O’Callaghan to the Dáil to meet politicians. Common attendees at both meetings were Mr O’Callaghan, Mr Dunlop, Mr Gilmartin and Mr Lawlor. Both accounts involved a journey in Mr Dunlop’s car, both involved Mr Gilmartin’s leaving the meeting and being followed on to the street by Mr O’Callaghan and some type of altercation involving Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Gilmartin taking place.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS AS TO MR GILMARTIN'S KNOWLEDGE OF THE IR£40,000 PAYMENT TO MR LAWLOR

1.69 The Tribunal was satisfied that at some point during the course of his involvement with Quarryvale, Mr Gilmartin learnt that Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan had a discussion concerning Mr Dunlop's payment of a substantial sum to Mr Lawlor and Mr Lawlor's displeasure as to the amount he was receiving. Indeed, Mr Gilmartin imparted to the Tribunal the knowledge he had of this issue, albeit in a somewhat different detail to that of his sworn testimony, long before Mr Dunlop himself admitted to paying Mr Lawlor IR£40,000. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he had not given this information to Mr Gilmartin, and could not 'fathom' how he came to know about it. But it was clear that Mr Gilmartin did know about it.

1.70 The Tribunal regarded as credible Mr Gilmartin's contention that he overheard a discussion between Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan in relation to the payment of a substantial sum to Mr Lawlor, and it accepted that he had done so.

1.71 It was also quite possible that Mr O'Callaghan, when subsequently queried on the issue by Mr Gilmartin, confirmed that a substantial payment had been made to Mr Lawlor but that the latter being unhappy with the amount, Mr O'Callaghan had to *'give him extra money.'*¹⁸

1.72 While the Tribunal accepted Mr Gilmartin's account of an overheard discussion between Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop regarding Mr Lawlor, the Tribunal could not regard as conclusive Mr Gilmartin's evidence that this conversation occurred in the timeframe suggested by him. The Tribunal believed it likely therefore that Mr Gilmartin conflated in his mind the occasions on which he, Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Dunlop and Mr Lawlor were together in an office, one being in the April 1991 in Mr Dunlop's office and the other being in September 1991 in Mr Lawlor's office.

OTHER PAYMENTS MADE TO MR LAWLOR BY MR DUNLOP

1.73 On 29 January 2001, Mr Lawlor in his 'B42' list¹⁹, as part of 'Income, including political contributions, donations and consultancy fees being approximate, and as recollected by Liam Lawlor, in respect of period 1973-2000' advised the Tribunal that he had received payments amounting to IR£60,000 from Mr Dunlop.

¹⁸It is Mr O'Callaghan's evidence that he made a payment of IR£10,000 to Mr Lawlor on 23 September 1991 (see below).

¹⁹In his supplemental affidavit of discovery sworn on the 10th January 2001, Mr Lawlor made discovery of a file, described as a 'Schedule of Receipts', which included details of income in the 1990s. The file was labelled by Mr Lawlor as his B42 file and was thereafter usually referred to as the 'B42 list.'

1.74 Subsequently in his schedule of political contributions for the period 1983 to 2000, provided to the Tribunal on 18 June 2003, Mr Lawlor, in schedule 6 thereof, attributed a total figure of IR£55,500, as having been received by him from Frank Dunlop & Associates, as follows:

1993 - IR£6,000
1994 - IR£6,000
1995 - IR£38,000

1.75 Mr Dunlop, for his part, advised the Tribunal prior to giving his sworn evidence that he had paid Mr Lawlor sums, in total, of between IR£153,500 and IR£155,500.

THE CHEQUE PAYMENT OF IR£5,000 BY MR DUNLOP TO MR LAWLOR ON 21 JANUARY 1991

1.76 Mr Dunlop claimed that he paid a cheque of IR£5,000 to Mr Lawlor in January 1991 at Mr Lawlor's request, and that the payment was a reward to Mr Lawlor for introducing Mr O'Callaghan to him as a client. This cheque was not available to the Tribunal but was in the cheque listing report of Frank Dunlop & Associates as paid to 'Comex Trad. Corp', and analysed as 'Outlay-Clients.'

1.77 The cheque for IR£5,000 was lodged to a current account in the name of Mr Lawlor's son, Mr Niall Lawlor on 29 January 1991. Mr Lawlor acknowledged to the Tribunal that this account at National Irish Bank, South Circular Road in Dublin, was operated 'wholly or partly' for his (Mr Liam Lawlor's) benefit.

1.78 In the course of his private interview with the Tribunal in May 2000, Mr Dunlop referred to a payment of IR£5,000 made in early 1991 to Mr Lawlor and which involved a company called 'Comex.' Mr Dunlop at that time made no specific reference to this payment being connected with Mr Lawlor's involvement with Quarryvale. Likewise, Mr Dunlop's October 2000 statement, although it referred to a payment of IR£5,000 to Mr Lawlor in early 1991, made no reference to any link between that payment and the Quarryvale rezoning project. However, in his December 2003 statement, and in his sworn evidence, Mr Dunlop attributed this payment as having been made to Mr Lawlor, after Mr Lawlor had requested it, in return for Mr Lawlor's introduction of Mr Dunlop to Mr O'Callaghan. The October 2000 statement was silent as to the nature of the IR£5,000 payment. Mr Dunlop's December 2003 statement described the IR£5,000 payment as a cash payment. In the course of his evidence Mr Dunlop accepted that the payment in January 1991 had been effected by way of cheque from Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd.

1.79 Mr O’Callaghan disputed Mr Dunlop’s claim that this payment to Mr Lawlor was connected to Mr Lawlor’s introduction of him to Mr Dunlop as Mr O’Callaghan maintained that this did not take place until late February 1991.

1.80 The Tribunal was satisfied that by January 1991, there was discussion between Mr Lawlor and Mr Dunlop in relation to the Quarryvale rezoning project and that both men at that time believed that Mr Dunlop’s retention by Mr O’Callaghan was imminent.

1.81 Thus, while the Tribunal could not definitively establish the precise purpose for the payment of IR£5,000 by Mr Dunlop to Mr Lawlor in January 1991, it was satisfied nevertheless that such a payment was made and that it probably related to Quarryvale.

THE CASH PAYMENT OF IR£5,000 BY MR DUNLOP TO MR LAWLOR IN APRIL 1991

1.82 On 5 April 1991, Mr Dunlop paid IR£5,000 in cash to Mr Lawlor. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that this payment was made through Mr Noel Lawlor, Mr Liam Lawlor’s brother, and was the proceeds of a Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd cheque for that sum encashed by Mr Dunlop prior to it being collected by Mr Noel Lawlor at Mr Dunlop’s offices. Mr Noel Lawlor denied any involvement in this payment and denied that he had ever been in Mr Dunlop’s office. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that the payment had been requested by Mr Lawlor and was paid to him ‘for his ongoing commitment to and advice on Quarryvale, but under the guise of an election contribution and at the time of an election.’

1.83 In its cheque listing report, Frank Dunlop & Associates analysed this IR£5,000 payment as ‘sundry expenses.’ A receipt for IR£5,000 dated 21 May 1991 was sent to Frank Dunlop & Associates from Mr Lawlor’s Director of Elections. On this acknowledgement docket a staff member in Mr Dunlop’s office noted, in manuscript: ‘IR£5,000 cash 5/4/91 to NL.’

1.84 The Tribunal was satisfied that a payment of IR£5,000 was indeed made by Mr Dunlop to Mr Lawlor in the form of the proceeds of a cheque payment drawn on the current account of Frank Dunlop & Associates on 5 April 1991. The Tribunal accepted Mr Dunlop’s evidence that the payment was made to Mr Lawlor in return for his ‘ongoing commitment and advice’ in relation to Quarryvale but under the guise of an election contribution, and that, notwithstanding Mr Noel Lawlor's denial of any involvement on his part in relation to it, the payment had been collected by him from Mr Dunlop's office on Mr Lawlor's behalf.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£3,500 BY MR DUNLOP TO MR LAWLOR IN MAY/JUNE 1991

1.85 On 17 July 1991 Mr Lawlor's election campaign fund acknowledged receipt of IR£3,500 from Mr Dunlop. A manuscript note on the acknowledgement letter made by a staff member in Mr Dunlop's office noted the payment as having been made on '6/91.' A cheque for IR£3,500 was debited to the account of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd on 17 June 1991. In its cheque listing report this cheque was attributed to 'Seapave.'²⁰ Mr Dunlop however assumed that this reference related to the cheque for IR£3,500 paid to Mr Lawlor. While it was not clear whether this cheque was paid directly to Mr Lawlor or if it was cashed and its value provided to Mr Lawlor, the Tribunal was satisfied that by 17 June 1991 Mr Lawlor was in receipt of IR£3,500 from Mr Dunlop representing the proceeds of this cheque.

1.86 Mr Dunlop maintained that the IR£5,000 cash payment made to Mr Lawlor in April 1991 and the IR£3,500 payment made in June 1991 represented the IR£8,500 he listed on Day 147 as monies paid to Mr Lawlor, in addition to the listed IR£40,000 payment also made to Mr Lawlor by him in May / June 1991.

THE CASH PAYMENT OF IR£40,000 BY MR DUNLOP TO MR LAWLOR IN MAY/JUNE 1991

1.87 As previously stated, the Tribunal was satisfied that such a sum in cash was provided to Mr Lawlor by Mr Dunlop in the circumstances described above.

THE CASH PAYMENT OF BETWEEN IR£26,000 AND IR£28,000 BY MR DUNLOP TO MR LAWLOR IN MARCH 1992

1.88 Mr Dunlop claimed that he made a payment to Mr Lawlor of between IR£26,000 and IR£28,000 in cash in March 1992 following a request by Mr Lawlor for such funds. Mr Dunlop referred to this payment in his private interview with the Tribunal in May 2000 as a IR£40,000 payment made by bank draft. In his October 2000 statement, Mr Dunlop said the payment was in the sum of IR£26,000. In his December 2003 statement, the figure referred to by Mr Dunlop was 'between IR£26,000 and IR£28,000' and Mr Dunlop stated that Mr Lawlor had sought the money.

²⁰'Seapave' was not a business disclosed by Mr Lawlor to the Tribunal as having ever been used by him to generate invoices, or payments to himself.

1.89 Mr Dunlop initially categorised the payment of between IR£26,000 and IR£28,000 as a loan to Mr Lawlor, although in evidence he altered his position and said that Mr Lawlor had merely sought money and not a loan. Mr Dunlop maintained that it was agreed between himself, Mr Lawlor and Mr Harry Dobson²¹ that such monies as Mr Dunlop would advance to Mr Lawlor would be reimbursed to Mr Dunlop by means of a shareholding in Citywest to be provided by Mr Dobson. Mr Dunlop claimed that the agreement whereby this would be achieved was arrived at in the course of meetings he had with Mr Lawlor and Mr Dobson in the offices of Davy Stockbrokers and in the visitor's room of Leinster House. Mr Dunlop's belief and understanding, in March 1992, was that Mr Dobson would cede to Mr Dunlop portion of his shareholding in Citywest²² to the value of IR£26,000 to IR£28,000, being the amount to be advanced by Mr Dunlop to Mr Lawlor.

1.90 Mr Dunlop could not produce to the Tribunal any documentary reference to his claimed agreement with Mr Lawlor and Mr Dobson or to the advance of the IR£26,000 to IR£28,000 to Mr Lawlor.

1.91 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that although he provided the funds to Mr Lawlor in or about March 1992 he never received the expected shareholding from Mr Dobson. Save for a number of attempts to contact Mr Dobson by telephone, and raising the matter with Mr Lawlor a number of times, Mr Dunlop did not take any steps to enforce this agreement. Mr Lawlor's response to him was to 'forget about it', and he never repaid him.

1.92 Mr Lawlor advised the Tribunal in correspondence that he did not 'recall being a party to Mr Dunlop's and Mr Dobson's 'dealings.''

1.93 In his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Dobson acknowledged a lengthy association with Mr Lawlor. Mr Dobson together with Mr Lawlor and others were involved in the 'Pentagon' pipe project that served the drainage needs of a substantial area of land in West Dublin.

1.94 Mr Dobson told the Tribunal that he recollected Mr Lawlor seeking to purchase from him a portion of his interest in the Citywest development but that Mr Lawlor had failed to produce the necessary funds. He believed that this request may have been made in Mr Dunlop's presence.

²¹ Mr Dobson was a shareholder in Citywest.

1.95 He acknowledged that he may have met Mr Lawlor and Mr Dunlop in the Dáil. However he denied that he had agreed to transfer portion of his equity interest in Citywest to Mr Dunlop in return for Mr Dunlop advancing money to Mr Lawlor, or that there had been any discussions with Mr Dunlop relating to any such proposal.

1.96 Mr Dunlop claimed to have provided the IR£26,000 to IR£28,000 to Mr Lawlor from cash available to him at the time. There was no record of a withdrawal of any such sum from any of Mr Dunlop's accounts.

1.97 However, the Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop had sufficient cash resources in the period February/March 1992 from which to advance a sum of IR£26,000 to IR£28,000 to Mr Lawlor and accepted Mr Dunlop's evidence that such a sum was advanced by Mr Dunlop to Mr Lawlor in March 1992.

1.98 While the Tribunal was unable to determine the true nature, purpose and intent of the tripartite discussions or negotiations that undoubtedly took place in February/March 1992 between Mr Dobson, Mr Dunlop and Mr Lawlor, it was not satisfied that the IR£26,000 to IR£28,000 paid to Mr Lawlor by Mr Dunlop was a loan. Firstly, there was no evidence that Mr Lawlor borrowed money from individuals (including Mr Dunlop who habitually made substantial cash payments to him). Secondly, there was no credible evidence that Mr Dunlop had taken any serious steps (including steps of a legal nature) to recover any such debt from Mr Lawlor.

1.99 The Tribunal was unable to determine with any degree of certainty the specific purpose of this payment to Mr Lawlor save that it was satisfied that at the time of this payment there was an ongoing financial relationship between Mr Dunlop and Mr Lawlor in the context of their endeavours in relation to Quarrvale and other matters.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£1,000 BY MR DUNLOP TO MR LAWLOR IN JUNE 1992

1.100 Mr Dunlop claimed that he paid IR£1,000 to Mr Lawlor through his brother Mr Noel Lawlor as a contribution to a golf classic fundraising event organised in aid of Mr Lawlor's political outgoings. The cheque payments book of Frank Dunlop & Associates identified a cheque payment of IR£1,000 to Mr Noel Lawlor dated 18 June 1992.

1.101 Mr Noel Lawlor told the Tribunal that this payment was in fact a contribution by Mr Dunlop to a surprise party to celebrate Mr Lawlor's ten years as a T.D., which was held in Finnstown House Hotel in Lucan. Mr Noel Lawlor recalled receiving the cheque from Mr Dunlop at the end of the function.

THE CASH PAYMENT OF IR£25,000 BY MR DUNLOP TO MR LAWLOR
IN NOVEMBER 1992

1.102 Mr Dunlop claimed to have given Mr Lawlor IR£25,000 in cash in November 1992, following a request from Mr Lawlor in the course of the November 1992 General Election campaign. According to Mr Dunlop, this payment was made to Mr Lawlor at the latter's office at his Lucan residence sometime between 5 and 20 November 1992.

1.103 In a public statement in May 2000, a copy of which he provided to the Tribunal, Mr Lawlor advised that in November 1992 Mr Dunlop called to his Lucan office and gave him a sum of IR£5,000 towards his General Election campaign. Mr Lawlor maintained that, subsequently, Mr Dunlop telephoned him to request a receipt which, Mr Lawlor claimed, he would have issued to Mr Dunlop in the form of a 'standard acknowledgement receipt.' Mr Dunlop rejected Mr Lawlor's position on this matter.

1.104 In subsequent correspondence in July 2002, in relation to lodgements to his accounts or accounts associated with him for the year 1992, Mr Lawlor said that a lodgement of IR£3,500 to an account of Mrs Hazel Lawlor on 11 November 1992 was 'election fundraising' and may have been sourced from IR£4,000 cash which he said he received from Mr Dunlop.

1.105 The bank accounts in question although replete with unexplained lodgements, did not show a single lodgement of either IR£4,000 or IR£5,000 (Mr Lawlor's figures) or one of IR£25,000 (Mr Dunlop's figure) in or about November 1992. Lodgements of IR£1,000, IR£3,500 and IR£2,000 between 12 and 19 November were described by Mr Lawlor as 'election fundraising.'

1.106 The Tribunal was however satisfied that Mr Lawlor was the recipient of IR£25,000 in cash from Mr Dunlop in November 1992. It may well have been that the lodgement of IR£3,500 to the account of Mrs Hazel Lawlor on 11 November 1992 was part of this payment. Mr Dunlop acknowledged that it was possible that he paid the IR£25,000 to Mr Lawlor on 11 November 1992. It has been established elsewhere in this Report, that Mr Dunlop on 10 and 11 November 1992, met with a number of individuals for the purposes of paying money to them. While not all of these individuals (including Mr Lawlor) are listed in Mr Dunlop's diary in November 1992, the Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop did make substantial cash disbursements to politicians (including Mr Lawlor) in the month of November 1992, most of whom were candidates in the General Election.

1.107 By mid November 1992 Mr Dunlop was in possession of considerable cash resources which included IR£8,500 from Mr Christopher Jones Snr²³ and the encashed proceeds of a IR£10,000 Shefran cheque provided by Mr Brendan Hickey.²⁴ Moreover, as already set out elsewhere in this Report, Mr Dunlop's 042 'war chest' account had been credited with IR£70,000 by Mr O'Callaghan/Riga on 10 November 1992, IR£55,000 of which Mr Dunlop immediately withdrew in cash. The Tribunal has found elsewhere in this Report that the principal purpose for the provision of this money by Riga to Mr Dunlop was to put him in funds to make disbursements to politicians. The Tribunal believed that one of the intended recipients of these funds was Mr Lawlor.

PAYMENTS TOTALLING IR£10,000 MADE BY MR DUNLOP TO MR LAWLOR BETWEEN 1992 AND 1995

1.108 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that between 1992 and 1995 he regularly made payments to Mr Lawlor on either a Thursday or a Friday afternoon following requests for money by Mr Lawlor for the purpose of paying his staff and other outgoings. These payments varied in amounts between IR£2,000 and IR£5,000 and Mr Dunlop estimated the total of such payments to have been approximately IR£10,000. Payments were usually made to Mr Lawlor in cash when they met in Mr Dunlop's offices.

1.109 Within this period, Mr Lawlor attributed the following lodgements to monies received from Mr Dunlop: IR£1,200 on 5 October 1992; IR£3,500 on 11 November 1992²⁵; and IR£1,200 on 12 January 1994.²⁶

1.110 The Tribunal was satisfied that payments totalling approximately IR£10,000 were made periodically to Mr Lawlor as claimed by Mr Dunlop.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£25,000 BY MR DUNLOP TO MR LAWLOR IN MARCH 1997 ON FOOT OF A GANLEY INTERNATIONAL INVOICE

1.111 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he paid IR£25,000 to Mr Lawlor on 11 March 1997 by way of a cheque drawn on the bank account of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd. The payment was made on foot of an invoice provided by Mr Lawlor to Mr Dunlop. The invoice in question was purportedly that of Ganley International Ltd of 128 Mount Street, London, which also had an office in Albania. The IR£25,000 was said to be payable by way of 'consultancy fee' for

²⁴ See Chapter 9.

²⁵ Mr Lawlor attributed this lodgement to a IR£4,000 cash election contribution received from Mr Dunlop in the course of the 1992 general election. The Tribunal rejected this contention, preferring Mr Dunlop's evidence that he provided Mr Lawlor with IR£25,000 in November 1992.

²⁶ In Mr Lawlor's documentation as provided to the Tribunal this lodgement was sourced to 'Brendan Hickey via FD.' The Tribunal was satisfied that this payment was made to Mr Lawlor by Mr Dunlop following Frank Dunlop & Associates having invoiced Mr Hickey for a sum IR£1,200 (see Chapter 9).

work done on behalf of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd 'in Eastern Europe and the Balkans regarding communications...'

1.112 Ganley International was a UK registered private limited company incorporated on 1 February 1994 with registered offices at 128 Mount Street, London. Its principals included Mr Declan Ganley and Mr Gary Hunter. The company was involved in international business, primarily in the countries of the former Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

MR DUNLOP'S REASONS FOR MAKING THE IR£25,000 PAYMENT TO MR LAWLOR IN MARCH 1997

1.113 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that this payment to Mr Lawlor was made in the context of ongoing complaints by Mr Lawlor that he had not been sufficiently recompensed for his efforts in relation to the Quarryvale project. Mr Dunlop maintained that in 1997 Mr Lawlor told him that Mr O'Callaghan, who had by that stage secured zoning and planning permission for Quarryvale, was then 'ignoring' him.

1.114 Mr Dunlop said that he spoke to Mr O'Callaghan in relation to Mr Lawlor's complaint and that Mr O'Callaghan had indicated that he did not intend to give 'any more money' to Mr Lawlor.

1.115 In any event, Mr Dunlop said he agreed to pay Mr Lawlor IR£25,000 on the basis that Mr Dunlop was receiving a payment of IR£100,000 (plus VAT) from Mr O'Callaghan/Riga for public relations work in relation to the *'Horgan's Quay'*²⁷ controversy in Cork which had arisen in 1996. Mr Lawlor, according to Mr Dunlop, had initially demanded fifty percent of the IR£100,000. This demand was refused by Mr Dunlop on the basis that tax was payable by Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd on the IR£100,000. Mr Dunlop stated that Mr Lawlor had 'reluctantly' agreed to accept IR£25,000, a payment Mr Dunlop only agreed to make if provided with an invoice. Mr Lawlor duly produced the Ganley International invoice dated 19 February 1997.

THE 'GANLEY INTERNATIONAL' INVOICE OF FEBRUARY 1997

1.116 In the course of questioning as to his knowledge, if any, as to how a Ganley International invoice was used to facilitate a payment of IR£25,000 from Mr Dunlop to Mr Lawlor, Mr Declan Ganley told the Tribunal that his company, Ganley International had never worked for or received payments from Frank Dunlop & Associates, and he described the invoice used by Mr Lawlor as 'fraudulent' and not a true invoice from his company. He said that the invoice had not been prepared or authorised by Ganley International. Mr Ganley agreed with his colleague, Mr Hunter, that the invoice constituted an ‘unauthorised reproduction of the official notepaper of Ganley International Ltd’, and was a ‘fabrication.’

1.117 Mr Ganley acknowledged that certain details on the invoice, namely the VAT number and the telephone numbers, were those of Ganley International. He also confirmed that certain bank details on the invoice related to a bank account held by the company in Barclays Bank, London.

1.118 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that the consultancy work described in the invoice was neither sought by, nor provided to Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd.

1.119 Bank documentation established that the cheque for IR£25,000 was lodged on 11 March 1997 to an account of Mr Pat Murphy (a publican in Inchicore), at the Lucan branch of Ulster Bank. Mr Murphy told the Tribunal that he had lodged the cheque to his account at the behest of Mr Lawlor and had paid its value to Mr Lawlor over a period of time.

1.120 The cheque, seen by the Tribunal, had written on its reverse what appeared to be the words ‘Gandley Intl Declan Gandley’ by way of endorsement. Mr Murphy told the Tribunal that these words were written in his presence by Mr Lawlor.

1.121 Mr Murphy told the Tribunal that he cashed cheques including third party cheques for Mr Lawlor from time to time.

1.122 Between 11 and 27 March 1997 Mr Murphy’s account showed cash withdrawals totalling IR£25,000: IR£5,000 on 11 March 1997; IR£5,000 on 14 March 1997; IR£7,500 on 21 March 1997; IR£7,500 on 27 March 1997.

1.123 The Tribunal was satisfied, having regard to Mr Murphy’s evidence, that these cash withdrawals were given to Mr Lawlor directly by Mr Murphy and constituted in effect the proceeds of the ‘Ganley’ cheque.

DEALINGS BETWEEN MR LAWLOR, MR DUNLOP AND GANLEY INTERNATIONAL

1.124 Mr Ganley and Mr Dunlop were known to one another and met on a number of occasions. Documentation discovered to the Tribunal indicated that a meeting took place between Mr Dunlop, Mr Lawlor and Mr Ganley on 4 July 1996, and that Mr Lawlor and Mr Dunlop were in communication with a Mr P. Ryan of Ganley International on 10, 11 and 12 July 1996. Mr Dunlop’s 1997 diary noted a meeting and telephone contact between Mr Ganley and himself on 21 and 22 January 1997 respectively.

1.125 In his statement of December 2003 to the Tribunal, Mr Dunlop stated that when he had queried Mr Lawlor about the Ganley invoice for IR£25,000, the latter had assured him that he had organised matters with the owner of Ganley International, Mr Declan Ganley.

1.126 This statement was rather disingenuous as it was clear that Mr Declan Ganley was known to Mr Dunlop when he was presented with the 'Ganley International' invoice by Mr Lawlor in February 1997.

1.127 The Tribunal was unable to establish why Mr Lawlor chose to receive the IR£25,000 payment using a Ganley invoice. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Lawlor set about the task of producing an invoice when such was requested by Mr Dunlop. The Tribunal was also satisfied that as of January 1997 Mr Lawlor was sufficiently knowledgeable about the affairs of Ganley International to enable him produce a Ganley invoice to meet that requirement.

1.128 The Tribunal was satisfied that the Ganley International invoice provided by Mr Lawlor to Mr Dunlop was fictitious. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Ganley or his company did not authorise the use of this invoice by Mr Lawlor.

1.129 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop's dealings with Mr Lawlor were such that Mr Dunlop was quite prepared to make a payment of IR£25,000 to Mr Lawlor on foot of what he knew to be a false invoice.

THE PAYMENTS OF IR£5,000 AND IR£8,000 BY MR DUNLOP TO MR LAWLOR IN AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER 1998

1.130 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he made payments of IR£5,000 and IR£8,000 in cash to Mr Lawlor, following requests from Mr Lawlor in August and September 1998. A note in Mr Dunlop's diary for 28 August 1998 read '5K LAL.' Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that, in respect of both payments, he wrote cheques to himself on the account of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd, then cashed the cheques, and gave the cash proceeds directly to Mr Lawlor.

1.131 Mr Dunlop stated that the IR£8,000 was paid to Mr Lawlor in cash in his office, following the encashment of a cheque drawn on the account of Frank Dunlop and Associates Ltd in the sum of IR£10,000. An entry in Mr Dunlop's diary for the 3 September 1998 read '8K LAL', being the same date on which Mr Dunlop said he made the payment.

1.132 In his correspondence with the Tribunal Mr Lawlor stated that he did not recall being the recipient of such monies and challenged the authenticity of Mr Dunlop's diary entries.²⁸

1.133 The Tribunal accepted Mr Dunlop's evidence that these sums totalling IR£13,000 were indeed paid by Mr Dunlop to Mr Lawlor, at his request, in August and September 1998.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO MR DUNLOP'S PAYMENTS TO MR LAWLOR

1.134 The Tribunal was satisfied that the aforesaid payments of between IR£153,500 and IR£155,500 found by it to have been made to Mr Lawlor by Mr Dunlop in the period 1991 to 1998²⁹ were made at a time when Mr Lawlor was heavily involved in endeavours associated with the Quarryvale project, and in promoting the concept of a stadium on the Neilstown lands. The Tribunal was satisfied that a substantial portion of these payments directly related to Quarryvale, and were solicited, paid and received corruptly.

PAYMENTS MADE DIRECTLY TO MR LAWLOR BY MR OWEN O'CALLAGHAN

1.135 In response to requests for certain information from the Tribunal on 29 January 2001, Mr Lawlor provided the Tribunal with a schedule detailing the payments he said he received from O'Callaghan Properties amounting to IR£25,000 in the 1990s. Mr Lawlor described the payments as 'income including political contributions, donations and consultancy fees being approximate and as recollected by Liam Lawlor in respect of period 1973 to 2000.'

1.136 According to Mr Lawlor, the dates of the payments, which he maintained were all made by cheque, were 'not available.' The purpose of the payments was described by him as 'political contributions towards my election campaigns and running of constituency organisation.'

1.137 On 18 June 2003 Mr Lawlor provided the Tribunal with a schedule (which he stated was mainly based on his recollection as only limited records were available), showing the following breakdown of the IR£25,000 he claimed he received from Mr O’Callaghan:

²⁸ Mr Lawlor contended that these diary entries were made after the event. The Tribunal requested the FBI to examine these entries in an effort to determine if this was the case. The FBI requested the United States Secret Service Office of Investigations Questioned Documents Branch to analyse these entries but their report was inconclusive, other than to state that the ink used was of a type of ink in existence in 1998.

²⁹ For further consideration of Mr Dunlop and Mr Lawlor's dealings, see Chapter Sixteen.

- IR£5,000 in 1987;
- IR£5,000 in 1988;
- IR£6,000 in 1990;
- IR£5,000 in 1991;
- IR£4,000 in 1992.

1.138 In the course of correspondence in May 2000 and May 2003, Mr O’Callaghan advised the Tribunal that he made payments totalling IR£36,000 to Mr Lawlor between 1991 and 1996, namely:

- IR£5,000 on 18 November 1991 (described by Mr O’Callaghan as a contribution for Mr Lawlor’s Local Election campaign in June 1991, six months earlier);
- IR£10,000 on 26 September 1994 (described by Mr O’Callaghan as ‘other payments’ associated with the Quarryvale and stadium projects);
- IR£20,000 on 13 March 1995 (described by Mr O’Callaghan as ‘other payments’ associated with the Quarryvale and stadium projects);
- IR£1,000 on 18 October 1996 (described by Mr O’Callaghan as a contribution made to a ‘golf classic’).

1.139 In the course of his testimony Mr O’Callaghan significantly altered his position regarding the payment of IR£5,000 on 18 November 1991, which he said was not actually a payment to Mr Lawlor.³⁰ Mr O’Callaghan’s revised evidence was that his first payment to Mr Lawlor was a payment of IR£10,000 made in September 1991.

1.140 The information provided by Mr Lawlor differed considerably to that given by Mr O’Callaghan in his evidence, both in respect of the total monies paid to Mr Lawlor and the times at which such monies were paid. Mr O’Callaghan asserted that his first payment to Mr Lawlor was made in September 1991, whereas Mr Lawlor credited Mr O’Callaghan as the provider of funds of IR£5,000 both in 1987 and 1988 and IR£6,000 in 1990. During the period from September 1991 to October 1996, when Mr O’Callaghan claimed to have paid Mr Lawlor a total of IR£36,000 (later revised upwards to IR£41,000), Mr Lawlor only acknowledged receipt of IR£9,000 in total (IR£5,000 in 1991 and IR£4,000 in 1992).

THE PAYMENT OF IR£10,000 BY MR O'CALLAGHAN TO MR LAWLOR
IN SEPTEMBER 1991

1.141 In a statement made by him on 3 May 2000, and in the course of his sworn evidence on Day 875, Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that in November 1991 he made a IR£5,000 cheque payment (drawn on his personal account) to Mr Lawlor, by way of a political contribution.

1.142 Riga's cheque payments book recorded, for 18 November 1991, a cheque for IR£5,000 payable to 'cash.' This cheque was analysed under the 'sundries' column as 'Expenses Westpark.' On Day 884 Mr O'Callaghan stated that this Riga cheque had been lodged to his personal account, having been debited from Riga's account on 21 November 1991. The Tribunal was told that this funded the cheque payment made to Mr Lawlor. Neither cheque was made available to the Tribunal.

1.143 In Riga's nominal ledger for the year ended 30 April 1992, the IR£5,000 cheque payment was attributed under the title 'adv and subs' (advertising and subscriptions), as a political contribution to Mr Lawlor and described as 'L Lawlor FF.' It was not attributed within the Riga / Barkhill intercompany loan account as a Barkhill expense, either as a political contribution paid by Riga on behalf of Barkhill or otherwise.

1.144 Notwithstanding Mr O'Callaghan's sworn testimony on 19 June 2008 (Day 875), Mr O'Callaghan's solicitors advised the Tribunal on 24 June 2008 that the IR£5,000 cheque of November 1991, heretofore described by Mr O'Callaghan as Riga's reimbursement to him for a political contribution made to Mr Lawlor, had in fact had been lodged to Mr O'Callaghan's account to part fund the purchase of a pony. Moreover, the Tribunal was advised that a cheque for IR£10,000 paid out by Riga on 23 September 1991, heretofore unidentified as to its payee, was in fact the payment made to Mr Lawlor by Mr O'Callaghan by way of political contribution. This cheque was stated to have been Riga's reimbursement to Mr O'Callaghan for a cheque drawn on his personal account and paid to Mr Lawlor. Payments were made in a similar fashion by Mr O'Callaghan to Cllr Colm McGrath (IR£10,000 in October 1991) and Mr Batt O'Keefe (IR£10,000 in November 1992).

1.145 Riga's cheque payments book recorded, for 23 September 1991, a cheque for IR£10,000 payable to 'cash.' This payment was analysed under the 'sundries' column as 'expenses Quarryvale/Westpark' with the attribution 5098 (the code in Riga's books for Barkhill/Quarryvale expenses). This cheque was lodged on 23 September 1991 to the personal account of Mr O'Callaghan, and on the 27 September 1991 his account was debited in the sum of IR£10,000. This debit, Mr O’Callaghan claimed, was the cheque given by him to Mr Lawlor. This cheque paid to Mr Lawlor was not available to the Tribunal. The sum was reimbursed by Barkhill to Riga on 24 January 1992.³¹

1.146 A second payment of IR£10,000 recorded in Riga’s cheque payments book on the 11 October 1991 as ‘Debit (Westpark)’ and given the attribution 5098 (indicating expenditure on behalf of Barkhill and the Quarryvale project) was said by Mr O’Callaghan to be Riga’s reimbursement to him of a payment from his personal funds of a political contribution to Cllr Colm McGrath. This was similarly attributed to Barkhill and duly reimbursed to Riga in January 1992, along with the above payment to Mr Lawlor.³²

1.147 The Tribunal was advised by Mr O’Callaghan that his altered position in relation to the payment to Mr Lawlor, namely that IR£10,000 was paid rather than IR£5,000, was prompted by him seeing a list of ‘Westpark expenses’ dated 14 November 1991, on which he had made a manuscript annotation ‘LL’ beside ‘expenses’ of IR£10,000 on 23 September 1991.

1.148 On that same list of ‘Westpark expenses’, the manuscript annotation ‘McGrath’ in Mr O’Callaghan’s handwriting also appeared beside a second figure of IR£10,000 dated 11 October 1991.

1.149 Mr O’Callaghan claimed that he was first asked by Mr Lawlor for money at the time of the June 1991 Local Elections and that he agreed to make a contribution to his campaign. Mr O’Callaghan said that the payment made by him to Mr Lawlor in September 1991 in the sum of IR£10,000 was in fact the payment requested of him by Mr Lawlor some months earlier, and was paid after Mr Lawlor had failed in his bid to get re-elected as a councillor. Mr O’Callaghan told the Tribunal that he paid the money because he had promised it to Mr Lawlor, who had subsequently reminded him of that fact.

1.150 Mr O’Callaghan maintained that Mr Lawlor himself had suggested the figure of IR£10,000. Mr O’Callaghan said he made a cheque to Mr Lawlor for this amount drawn on his personal bank account.

1.151 According to Mr O’Callaghan, this was one of two political contributions authorised by him for payment to Dublin politicians in 1991, the other being a political contribution of IR£10,000 to Cllr McGrath in October 1991, also following a request from the councillor in question during the course of the Local Election campaign.

1.152 When asked to explain the basis and reason for the payment of IR£10,000 to Mr Lawlor on 23 September 1991 and to Cllr McGrath on 11 October 1991, some months after the June 1991 Local Elections, in circumstances where he had made a contribution of IR£5,000 to Mr Micheál Martin in the course of these elections, Mr O’Callaghan stated:

‘With regard to the two Dublin politicians (a reference to Messrs Lawlor and McGrath) both of them also suggested to me before the elections in a different way, I suppose, asked me would I look after them for, that’s the words they used... for the June elections and I said I would. And I said to both of them we’ll see how you get on and we will look when the elections are over we’ll talk about it again. It was left as loose as that actually.’

1.153 Mr O’Callaghan acknowledged that he did not inform Mr Gilmartin, his co shareholder in Barkhill, of the payment to Mr Lawlor. He said:

‘Probably the main reason for not telling Mr Gilmartin is because he was not available number one, number two he didn’t have any interest in what was happening in Dublin, number three he left me holding the baby completely, number four, he had his own problems to sort out and they are the real reasons I’m afraid.’

1.154 Mr O’Callaghan agreed that his payment to Mr Lawlor was kept secret from Mr Gilmartin. He acknowledged that had Mr Gilmartin been made aware of the payment in 1991 he would not have agreed to it and would have reacted angrily to any payment to Mr Lawlor. Mr O’Callaghan acknowledged that when he made this IR£10,000 payment to Mr Lawlor, he was aware from Mr Gilmartin that Mr Lawlor had previously demanded substantial monies in connection with, inter alia, Quarryvale. Mr O’Callaghan was also aware that Mr Gilmartin had made complaints to the Gardaí in 1989 relating to, amongst others, Mr Lawlor arising out of which Mr O’Callaghan himself had been interviewed.³³

1.155 Mr O’Callaghan rejected any suggestion that Mr Lawlor’s payment of IR£10,000 in 1991 was anything other than a bona fide political contribution. It was not, he claimed, a payment for services rendered.

1.156 Mr O’Callaghan told the Tribunal that he did not discuss requests for payments from Mr Lawlor, or actual disbursements to him, with Mr Dunlop. However, Mr Dunlop, in his evidence on Day 766, said that Mr O’Callaghan told him in 1997 that Mr Lawlor ‘was not getting any more money’ from him. Mr Dunlop understood this to mean that Mr O’Callaghan had previously paid money to Mr Lawlor although he did not know how much. Furthermore, the Tribunal has found as a fact that Mr Dunlop’s payment of IR£40,000 to Mr Lawlor in May/June 1991 was known to Mr O’Callaghan at the time it was made. The Tribunal therefore considered it likely that Mr Dunlop and Mr O’Callaghan would also have discussed Mr Lawlor’s request for money from Mr O’Callaghan around the same time, and the subsequent payment of IR£10,000 to Mr Lawlor by Mr O’Callaghan in September 1991.

1.157 Mr Lawlor did not identify the September 1991 payment of IR£10,000 from Mr O’Callaghan in information provided to the Tribunal. He claimed, however, that he received IR£5,000 from Mr O’Callaghan in 1991, after this had been confirmed to his solicitors by Mr O’Callaghan’s solicitors. Indeed, Mr Lawlor’s solicitors wrote to Mr O’Callaghan solicitors on 13 November 1998 following media reports of an allegation by Mr Gilmartin of a payment of IR£50,000 to Mr Lawlor through ‘public relations consultant and former Fianna Fáil press officer Frank Dunlop’ who ‘was employed and paid by Cork based developer Owen O’Callaghan.’ Mr Lawlor’s solicitors requested ‘confirmation that no such alleged payment was made either directly or indirectly by your client to our client. [...] We would also be obliged to receive a note of any Political contributions by your clients to our client.’ Mr O’Callaghan’s solicitors responded on 17 November 1998 that their client was ‘a stranger to the matters canvassed in the first part’ of the letter but confirmed that ‘Mr O’Callaghan through his company Riga Limited, made a political contribution in the sum of IR£5,000 to your client in that company’s financial year which ended on 30 April 1992.’

1.158 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr O’Callaghan paid Mr Lawlor a sum of IR£10,000 on 23 September 1991 (in respect of which he was reimbursed by Riga). The Tribunal rejected Mr O’Callaghan’s contention that this payment to Mr Lawlor was a delayed political donation associated with the Local Elections of June 1991.

1.159 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr O’Callaghan paid the IR£10,000 to Mr Lawlor at the latter’s request for his ongoing political services as a strategist for the Quarryvale project, and that this was, as indicated by Mr O’Callaghan himself in his letter of 3 December 1991 to AIB, an ‘expense’ associated with the efforts to have the Quarryvale lands rezoned and developed.

1.160 The Tribunal believed that the IR£10,000 payment represented a ‘top-up’ to the IR£40,000 paid to Mr Lawlor by Mr Dunlop in May/June 1991, as a result of Mr Lawlor demanding additional money because of his disappointment with the IR£40,000 payment. As has been found by the Tribunal, Mr Gilmartin in 1991 overheard Mr O’Callaghan and Mr Dunlop refer to Mr Lawlor’s disappointment relating to the IR£40,000 payment. It was likely that, as reported by Mr Gilmartin, Mr O’Callaghan had told Mr Dunlop that he would ‘try and square it’ by giving ‘a bit more to Mr Lawlor’, which he then did.

THE PAYMENTS OF IR£10,000 AND IR£20,000 BY MR O’CALLAGHAN TO MR LAWLOR IN SEPTEMBER 1994 AND MARCH 1995

1.161 Mr O’Callaghan made payments of IR£10,000 and IR£20,000 to Mr Lawlor on 26 September 1994 and 13 March 1995 respectively. Mr O’Callaghan said that these payments were made by Riga cheques payable to ‘cash’ and given to Mr Lawlor, although he acknowledged that it was possible that he had cashed the cheques himself and in turn provided the cash to Mr Lawlor. As was the position with the payment of September 1991, the Tribunal did not have sight of either the September 1994 or the March 1995 cheques.

1.162 Riga’s cheque payments book recorded the payment on 26 September 1994 of a IR£10,000 cheque payable to ‘cash’, analysed under the ‘sundries’ column as ‘OOC / Pol C (LL’ and given the attribution ‘5098’, denoting it to be an expense paid out by Riga Ltd on behalf of Barkhill Ltd/Quarryvale. The cheque was debited to Riga’s account on 27 September 1994.

1.163 Similarly, on 13 March 1995, Riga’s cheque payment book recorded the drawing of a cheque for IR£20,000 to ‘cash’, again analysed under ‘sundries’ as ‘OOC Pol C (LL’ and similarly given the attribution ‘5098’ as a payment made by Riga on behalf of Barkhill/Quarryvale. This cheque was debited to Riga’s account on 13 March 1995.

1.164 Notwithstanding both payments being analysed under ‘sundries’ as political contributions to Mr Lawlor, Mr O’Callaghan confirmed in evidence that these monies were in fact paid to Mr Lawlor for political services. Indeed, having been asked by Counsel for the Tribunal to explain why these payments had been made, Mr O’Callaghan replied:

‘Well, it’s difficult to define it, it wasn’t really, it wasn’t, it was payment for services rendered really. It’s a fine line. You could claim that he was doing what he was doing from a political point of view, because it was in his constituency, and he was doing all of this for his constituents, also doing it for us. It’s a fine line as to what it is, but my opinion is even though political contribution is written down there, is that it was for services rendered.'

THE PAYMENT OF IR£10,000 IN SEPTEMBER 1994

1.165 According to Mr O'Callaghan this payment for IR£10,000 in September 1994 was for work done by Mr Lawlor over previous years relating to both the Quarryvale and stadium projects. It was made at the request of Mr Lawlor and following a number of reminders by Mr Lawlor. As to the purpose of the payment, Mr O'Callaghan evidence was in conflict with Mr Lawlor's position, which was that all payments to him from Mr O'Callaghan were political donations.

1.166 When asked to identify work done by Mr Lawlor to warrant the IR£10,000 payment in September 1994, Mr O'Callaghan stated:

'...first of all Mr Lawlor's intervention with Green Properties was very, very important if it had succeeded and it wasn't his fault that it did not succeed. If it had succeeded Green Property would say not have carried on like they did and we wouldn't have had the argument about Blanchardstown and Quarryvale which we had for the following years, which became a real political hot bed I suppose really for '91, '92 and even parts of '93.

If he had succeeded and he did his very, very best and only for John Corcoran and John Corcoran's company I think he would have succeeded, in fact he agreed with John Corcoran and the Chairman of the County Council that everything was agreed and there was members of Green Properties company I believe changed it after that agreement was made. Liam Lawlor could not have been blamed for that, if he was successful we wouldn't have had any of the shenanigans we had for the following two years.

Second point is; that he was responsible for suggesting the stadium project, and without him we probably wouldn't have come up with that idea because we weren't aware that it was recommend for a site in west county Dublin by the government, and one of the sites for the stadium in west County Dublin by the government.

Secondly, he had I think, I'm not clear on this, but he had some involvement in the original proposal to finance the stadium.

But probably fourthly and most importantly of all, he was of great assistance to Frank Dunlop and in turn to me through Frank Dunlop, to let us know how most of the councillors felt about Quarryvale and what their attitudes to Quarryvale was and how we could approach them when we were lobbying them. We had quite a few councillors supported us on the basis of friendship because of the relationships that we built up with these councillors because of the knowledge we had about them given to me by Frank Dunlop who in turn received it from Liam Lawlor.

And probably the – of that the most important thing was he was the man who introduced me to all the communities in North Clondalkin Groups that I could not have got near or anybody else could have got near, that was probably his political base really and he enabled us to meet groups of 200 or 300 people of all the various and there were various, various groups in Clondalkin and in particular north Clondalkin. And he arranged all these meetings, we met them all and were able to get the message to them and get our support. So Liam Lawlor did a lot of work for us in the background.'

1.167 Questioned by Tribunal Counsel as to the nature of the information relating to councillors imparted by Mr Lawlor to Mr Dunlop, Mr O'Callaghan described Mr Lawlor's ability to advise on the spheres of influence held by a number of named councillors within their respective political parties. On the basis of the information supplied by Mr Lawlor to Mr Dunlop, Mr O'Callaghan 'would know whether they (the Councillors) were people to stand alone and make up their own minds or supporting community associations or had to adhere with community associations etc. It wasn't just the political side of things. You would also be told personal details about family, and even where these people were from etc...'

1.168 According to Mr O'Callaghan, Mr Lawlor could also 'tell you how many people were in the family for example and even maybe give you the names of the people in the family which you know when you meet them for the first time.'

1.169 Asked if Mr Lawlor was providing these services to Mr O'Callaghan in the capacity of a consultant, Mr O'Callaghan stated as follows:

'No. I wouldn't really. I heard that name mentioned. I would actually say to you as a local T.D. and we were in the heart of his constituency remember, our two sites were right in the middle of his constituency, and I will say this against him, he always stuck his nose into everybody's business and it was very very hard to keep it out, but he was extremely helpful and everything he did seemed to be going in the direction of getting some development going in West County Dublin. As a consultant, not to the same extent as our consultants would be.'

1.170 Mr O'Callaghan said that Mr Lawlor had not been retained as a consultant in the way that Ambrose Kelly & Company and other professionals had been, but he was happy that Mr Lawlor 'was working' for him.

1.171 Mr O’Callaghan acknowledged that Cllr Colm McGrath provided similar services to him throughout the Quarryvale rezoning process as those provided by Mr Lawlor, but while Cllr McGrath was providing these services as a local councillor, as of June 1991 Mr Lawlor was providing these services as a national politician, having lost his Council seat in the Local Elections of 1991.

1.172 On Day 899 the following exchange took place between Tribunal Counsel and Mr O’Callaghan:

‘Q. Right. And in 1994 in September 1994, when Mr — when you paid Mr Lawlor, may I ask you, prior to the payment that you made, had Mr Lawlor sought money from you in 1994?’

A. Yes, he had.

Q. And on approximately how many occasions had Mr Lawlor raised the issue of money with you before you paid him the sum of 10,000 pounds?’

A. Maybe three or four times

Q. Right. In those conversations did Mr Lawlor give you an indication of the amount of money that he expected to receive?’

A. I think so yes, oh, yes he did, yes.

Q. And what did Mr Lawlor ask for?’

A. Well the figure he got

Q. He asked for 10,000 pounds?’

A. 10,000 yeah.

Q. That would have been slightly more than half of Mr Lawlor’s then take home salary as a TD, isn’t that right?’

A. Based on 18,000 pounds, yes.

Q. Isn’t that right? So that what Mr Lawlor was asking you for was to give him a sum that was then equal to half of his TD salary, indeed it was greater than [half] his TD salary, isn’t that right?’

A. Yes

Q. Right. Did you regard that sum as an excessive sum, Mr O’Callaghan?’

A. No, not really, not in the context of what Mr Lawlor was doing for it, he spent a lot of time, as I said to you, working for us indirectly.’

THE PAYMENT OF IR£20,000 ON 13 MARCH 1995

1.173 Mr O’Callaghan testified that subsequent to his having paid the IR£10,000 to Mr Lawlor in September 1994, he was approached by Mr Lawlor who ‘demanded’ a further IR£20,000 payment from him. He agreed to this and made the payment in March 1995. He agreed that this was a sum which was equivalent to Mr Lawlor’s then annual salary as a TD. Mr O’Callaghan was questioned as follows:

‘Q. So in anybody’s working life that is an enormous amount of money, isn’t it? Did Mr Lawlor regard it as an enormous amount of money?’

A. No, absolutely not.

Q. Did you regard it as an enormous amount of money?’

A. Not really, no, not really

Q. Did you pay him again for the same reasons?’

A. Same reasons, yes.

Q. So you were paying him in relation to the assistance that he had provided to Mr Dunlop in relation and yourself, in relation to the rezoning is that correct?’

A. Plus the stadium.

Q. Yes

A. Plus the Green...

Q. In the first instance in relation to the rezoning?’

A. Correct.

Q. In the second instance in relation to what he had done in connection with the stadium?’

A. Correct.

Q. In the third instance in relation to what he had done in trying to broker a deal with Green Properties in 1991?’

A. And in the fourth instance his connection [with] all the local community associations.

Q. And by December of course of 1993, the Development Plan had been made, isn’t that right?’

A. Yes, yes.

Q. And therefore between December 1993 and September 1994 although you know the level of work that Mr Lawlor has done you don't make any payment?

A. That's right.'

1.174 Questioned as to whom he might have told of the nature of his financial relationship with Mr Lawlor, Mr O'Callaghan stated that, other than Mr Deane, he did not believe he had apprised 'many more people.' He had not told Mr Dunlop nor had he told Mr Gilmartin. As for AIB, Mr O'Callaghan stated that they might have had some knowledge of it but he was *'not too certain about that.'*³⁴

1.175 Acknowledging that he was paying a national politician to provide services to him in relation to Quarryvale, Mr O'Callaghan stated:

'I had a national politician, because I was involved in the heart of his constituency, probably the only two projects ongoing in his constituency were being planned to be carried out by us. He got himself very much involved in it. I found it impossible to keep him away from it because he is that type of individual. He offered his services, he continuously offered his services, at times it was very difficult to avoid him and at times his advice was very good, he knew his way around the constituency very well, I did not know anybody. He was of great help to me initially. He became so much involved, or tried to get so much involved after a year or two that I had to avoid him. He did a lot of work for us, he gave us a lot of information that I outlined to you, and he said he wanted to be recompensed for that and I felt I was obliged to do it and I did it. That's it.'

1.176 Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that this national politician, Mr Lawlor, had received IR£30,000 from him over a seven month period.

1.177 Mr O'Callaghan was asked the following question:

'Would it be fair to say, Mr O'Callaghan, that if a politician provided assistance to you and asked you for money in relation to that assistance, or after they had given the assistance that you weren't averse to making a payment?'

1.178 He replied as follows:

'Depends on the circumstances. In these particular circumstances I arrived here in Dublin in the location that I knew absolutely nothing about. Into a horrendous situation really. I did not know any politician here, the only one I knew, and I know it was mentioned by [I] think by Frank Dunlop, I knew two politicians, one politician I had met him once before that was Liam Lawlor. I did not know my way around Clondalkin or North Clondalkin, it was totally new territory to me, and he offered his services to help me and guide me around through Frank Dunlop admittedly and in some occasions him directly me, I appreciated that help.

Admittedly that help, after a year or two became too much and I had to break contact with him because (I) felt that he was getting too much involved with us, and I suppose the main reason was that he dictated a little bit — he was a bit of a workaholic and he wanted us — he was quite anxious and wanted that these two projects would get going in west County Dublin and became too forceful actually. But initially he was of great benefit to me. Without him I wouldn't know where I was going, I accepted his help, it was difficult not to accept it because he was always there.'

1.179 Mr O'Callaghan was again asked:

'...whether as a principle, if a politician provided services for you and asked to be remunerated or asked to be paid by you that as a matter of principle you were not averse to paying a politician for services?'

He replied: 'If he provided services for us that we needed, yes.'

THE TREATMENT OF THE IR£10,000 AND IR£20,000 PAYMENTS IN THE AUDITED ACCOUNTS OF RIGA

1.180 Both of the payments to Mr Lawlor amounting to IR£30,000 fell into Riga's annual accounting period ending 31 April 1995.

1.181 Documentation provided to the Tribunal showed that (as had been the case in the Riga cheque payments book) the two payments were initially attributed by Riga's auditors, Barber & Co., to the Barkhill loan as denoted by the attribution '75A' which was Riga's auditors' attribution within the Riga accounts for payments made on behalf of Barkhill/Quarryvale. Subsequently, in the analysis of sundry cheques carried out by Ms Cowhig on behalf of Riga's auditors, the attribution of the two payments to the Barkhill loan was crossed out and replaced by '742', i.e. the directors loan account attribution.

1.182 Ms Cowhig said she had advised Mr Deane that because there were no supporting invoices for the payments of IR£10,000 and IR£20,000 to Mr Lawlor, these payments would have to be posted to the directors loan account in the books of Barkhill. However, she knew that Barkhill was at that stage looking for an outside investor, and she indicated to Mr Deane that if these payments were posted to the directors loan account of Barkhill, a potential outside investor would probably insist on such payments being cleared. Therefore a decision was made to post the two payments to the directors loan account in the books of Riga, thereby, as understood by the Tribunal, removing both payments from scrutiny from a potential outside investor.

1.183 Mr Deane confirmed Ms Cowhig's evidence on this point. He told the Tribunal:

'.....and the way as I understand or sorry as I recall the conversations, when these two items came up Clare was discussing the accounts with me. She made the point that because there weren't invoices they would have to go into the directors loan account within Barkhill. As we were getting outside investor in at that particular point in time they would insist on that being cleared, it would have had to have been paid anyway. So she advised that the thing to do was to put it into the directors loan account within Riga and then there was flexibility as to when it was paid subject to the payment of the benefit in kind tax.'

1.184 Mr Deane told the Tribunal that Mr. O'Callaghan had made the two payments out of his own directors loan account but that ultimately these payments were 'shared' between the loan accounts of Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Deane.

1.185 The Tribunal noted that at the time Mr Deane decided to post the two payments to Mr Lawlor totalling IR£30,000 to the directors loan account within Riga, Mr Fleming of Deloitte & Touche (Barkhill's auditors) was in the process of conducting an audit of the books of Barkhill. Had the two payments appeared in the Riga/Barkhill intercompany loan balance within the books of Barkhill, Mr Fleming would have sought explanations for these payments, a process which would inevitably have brought the two payments to Mr Gilmartin's attention. Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that he considered these two payments to Mr Lawlor to be Barkhill/Quarryvale expenses. However, he acknowledged that these payments were ultimately accounted for solely within the books of Riga in order to avoid them being queried by Barkhill's auditors and potential investors in Barkhill.

MR LAWLOR'S BANKING RECORDS

1.186 While an analysis of the banking records of Mr Lawlor revealed a number of unexplained lodgements to accounts connected with him between September 1994 and March 1995, it did not show a specific lodgement of IR£10,000 in September/October 1994 or of IR£20,000 in March 1995.

1.187 The Tribunal believed however that Mr Lawlor was the recipient of sums of IR£10,000 and IR£20,000 from Mr O'Callaghan in September 1994 and March 1995 respectively.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£1,000 BY MR O'CALLAGHAN TO MR LAWLOR IN 1996

1.188 On 18 October 1996, Riga paid IR£1,000 by way of cheque to Mr Lawlor's golf classic fundraising event. Unlike Mr O'Callaghan's previous cheque payments to Mr Lawlor, this cheque was provided to the Tribunal. It was payable to 'Liam Lawlor Golf Classic' and attributed in the 'sundries' column of Riga's cheque payments book as 'sponsorship.'

1.189 Bank records established that the cheque for IR£1,000 was credited on 25 October 1996 to the Irish Permanent Building Society account of Mr Lawlor's wife, Mrs Hazel Lawlor, having been duly endorsed by her.

MR GILMARTIN'S KNOWLEDGE OF PAYMENTS TO MR LAWLOR BY MR O'CALLAGHAN

1.190 Mr Gilmartin certainly suspected that payments were being made to Mr Lawlor by Mr O'Callaghan, given his knowledge of the relationship between Mr Lawlor, Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop, and given the knowledge he had of a substantial sum of money having been paid to Mr Lawlor in 1991. Indeed in February 1998, long before Mr Dunlop and Mr O'Callaghan provided to the Tribunal details of their payments to Mr Lawlor, Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that 'O'Callaghan got money [...] paid to Frank Dunlop (who was the 'bag man') and he paid off the councillors including [...] Lawlor and others.'

1.191 The Tribunal also believed Mr Gilmartin's evidence that Mr O'Callaghan told him on a number of occasions that Mr Lawlor was 'on his payroll.'

THE TRIBUNAL'S OVERALL CONCLUSIONS ON MR LAWLOR'S INVOLVEMENT IN QUARRYVALE, AND IN RELATION TO PAYMENTS MADE TO HIM BY MESSRS DUNLOP AND O'CALLAGHAN

1.192 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr O'Callaghan directly paid Mr Lawlor IR£41,000 between 1991 and 1996. In addition the Tribunal has already found that Mr O'Callaghan was aware of, and facilitated, the payment of IR£40,000 by Mr Dunlop to Mr Lawlor in May/June 1991, from payments to Shefran totalling IR£80,000, made between 16 May 1991 and 7 June 1991. It followed therefore that Mr O'Callaghan was, directly and indirectly, instrumental in Mr Lawlor receiving IR£81,000 in the period 1991 to 1996.

1.193 Mr Lawlor did not provide the Tribunal with a true account of his relationship, including his financial relationship with Mr O'Callaghan in relation to, in particular, the Quarryvale project.

1.194 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Lawlor abused his role as an elected public representative, and that he, in effect, corruptly sold political services for personal gain. In relation to Quarryvale in particular, Mr Lawlor provided to Mr O'Callaghan (and to Mr O'Callaghan's agent, Mr Dunlop) strategic advice in relation to rezoning and planning issues pertinent to his constituency. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Lawlor was motivated to provide such services because of the opportunity, whenever it arose, to extract substantial sums of money from Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Dunlop in the knowledge that they were unlikely to reject such demands, for fear of alienating the most senior politician in Quarryvale.

1.195 In all the circumstances, the Tribunal was satisfied that the relationship between Mr Lawlor on the one hand, and Messrs O'Callaghan and Dunlop on the other hand, was one firmly based on corruption.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 10 – THE TRIBUNAL’S INQUIRY INTO MR BERTIE AHERN’S FINANCES

THE REASONS FOR THE INQUIRY

1.01 The Tribunal undertook its inquiry into Mr Bertie Ahern’s personal finances in order to establish, if possible, whether Mr Ahern received substantial sums of money from Mr Owen O’Callaghan, directly or indirectly. The Tribunal did so following upon the provision to it of the following information:

- Mr Tom Gilmartin told the Tribunal that, sometime in 1992, Mr Owen O’Callaghan informed him that he, Mr O’Callaghan, had paid a total of IR£80,000 to Mr Bertie Ahern, while the latter was a government minister.
- In particular, Mr Gilmartin alleged that Mr O’Callaghan told him that IR£50,000 was paid to Mr Ahern in 1989 when Mr Ahern was Minister for Labour, and that IR£30,000 was paid to Mr Ahern at a later date, when he was Minister for Finance.

1.02 These allegations became a focus of inquiry by the Tribunal because of their obvious relevance to its substantive inquiry into the payment of money to politicians relating to the rezoning of the Quarryvale lands. Furthermore, the relatively precise nature of the information relating to both alleged payments, the availability of witnesses (who were directly or indirectly associated with the allegations) to assist the Tribunal with its inquiry, and the fact that the alleged source of the information provided to Mr Gilmartin (namely, Mr O’Callaghan) was himself a central character in the Quarryvale inquiry, were important factors in the Tribunal’s decision to comprehensively inquire into these matters.

1.03 The Tribunal’s inquiries were made in the context of its analysis of Mr Ahern’s banking transactions following his return¹ to personal banking in December 1993, after a period of approximately seven years. These revealed that lodgements made to Mr Ahern’s accounts in the year or so subsequent to December 1993 significantly exceeded his known annual net income.

1.04 Mr O’Callaghan emphatically denied that he told Mr Gilmartin at any time that he had paid the said sums amounting to IR£80,000, or any sum, to Mr Ahern, for any purpose, or that he had paid any money whatsoever to Mr Ahern. Mr Ahern also strongly denied that any money had been paid to him by Mr O’Callaghan.

¹ Mr Ahern Advised the Tribunal that he did not personally operate any bank account for a period of years following his separation from his wife.

INFORMATION RELATING TO THE ALLEGED PAYMENTS OF £50,000 AND £30,000 TO MR AHERN PROVIDED BY MR GILMARTIN PRIOR TO HIS SWORN EVIDENCE TO THE TRIBUNAL

1.05 References to payments to Mr Ahern were made by Mr Gilmartin in the course of five telephone conversations between himself and Counsel to the Tribunal, between 22 October 1998 and 26 September 2002. References to payments to Mr Ahern were also made by Mr Gilmartin in the course of a taped discussion between himself and his then solicitor, Mr Noel Smyth, in London on 20 May 1998, (on foot of which a draft statement had been made available to the Tribunal in June 1998), and also in a narrative statement provided to the Tribunal by Mr Gilmartin on 17 May 2001. Mr Gilmartin subsequently gave sworn evidence to the Tribunal of the circumstances in which he said that he was provided with the relevant information by Mr O'Callaghan.

1.06 Set out below is a summary of the information provided by Mr Gilmartin to the Tribunal, prior to his sworn evidence, and in which reference was made to payments allegedly made to Mr Ahern by Mr O'Callaghan.²

(I) A TELEPHONE CONVERSATION ON 22 OCTOBER 1998 BETWEEN MR GILMARTIN AND MR PAT HANRATTY SC COUNSEL TO THE TRIBUNAL

1.07 Mr Gilmartin and Counsel to the Tribunal spoke on the telephone on 22 October 1998. This telephone call was the ninth such call between Mr Gilmartin and Counsel to the Tribunal, and took place less than nine months after the first such telephone conversation, on 5 February 1998.

1.08 In the course of this telephone conversation on 22 October 1998, Counsel to the Tribunal noted the following references by Mr Gilmartin to the issue of money and Mr Bertie Ahern:

- When Mr Gilmartin was introduced to Councillor Gilbride, the latter would hear no criticism of Liam Lalor [Lawlor]. Councillors Gilbride and McGrath suggested that Mr Gilmartin should make a donation to the Party. Pdraig Flynn also suggested a donation. So did Bertie Ahern.
- Mr Gilmartin then told me about three Shefran payments that were made in or about May of 1992. It was either in late May or early June 1992.
- ... one was to Bertie Ahern for £30,000...³

² Mr Gilmartin's prior statements to the Tribunal are reproduced (subject to limited redaction) in part 2 of this Chapter.

- The payment to Bertie Ahern was connected with blocking the tax designation to Green Property Company. At the time, Albert Reynolds was the Taoiseach and Bertie Ahern was the Minister for Finance and Labour.
- Bertie Ahern's payment was connected with stopping the Green Property Company from getting tax designation.

(II) A TELEPHONE CONVERSATION BETWEEN MR GILMARTIN AND MR PAT HANRATTY SC COUNSEL TO THE TRIBUNAL ON FRIDAY 30 OCTOBER 1998.

1.09 In the course of this telephone conversation, Mr Hanratty noted Mr Gilmartin as making the following reference to a payment to Mr Ahern:

- Mr Gilmartin said that the £30,000 referred in the letter of 10 June 1992⁴ was for Bertie Ahern. He was told at the time by Eoin O'Callaghan that he (O'Callaghan) would see to it that Green Property Company would not get tax designation. He said that he had taken care of Bertie Ahern.

(III) A TELEPHONE CONVERSATION BETWEEN MR TOM GILMARTIN AND MR JOHN GALLAGHER SC COUNSEL TO THE TRIBUNAL, ON 6 NOVEMBER 1998

1.10 In the course of this telephone conversation, Counsel for the Tribunal noted Mr Gilmartin as having made the following references to payments to Mr Bertie Ahern:

- Gilmartin says that he know that part of the Chefran (sic)⁵ money went to Albert Reynolds, part to Bertie Ahern and a smaller sum to one other person whose names he did not know...
- He (Mr Gilmartin) says that at the end of 1992-1993, ... £30,000 was paid to Bertie Ahern whom he believed (was) Minister for Finance... No money went into Chefran (sic). The money was paid direct. Chefran (sic) was being used as a money laundering operation.

³ The Tribunal identified three Shefran payments made to Mr Frank Dunlop through Shefran (or Sheafra) Ltd. in 1991, and two such payments in 1992. One of the two 1992 payments was a payment for £30,000.

⁴ This was apparently a reference to a letter of 10 June 1992 written by AIB to Mr Gilmartin in relation to a payment to Shefran amounting to £30,000. The AIB letter did not make any reference to any connection between the payment and Mr Ahern.

⁵ 'Chefran' was a misspelling for 'Shefran.'

(IV) A TELEPHONE CONVERSATION BETWEEN MR TOM GILMARTIN AND MR PAT HANRATTY SC COUNSEL TO THE TRIBUNAL ON 25 NOVEMBER 1999

1.11 Counsel for the Tribunal noted⁶ Mr Gilmartin as making the following references in the course of this telephone call to payments to Mr Ahern:

- ... he said that he had received information to the effect that the Shefran payments were in fact reimbursements to OOC from the Barkhill account for payments to senior politicians which OOC had already made. OOC had paid around £150,000 to senior politicians in 1989 and, in total, had paid £250,000 to senior politicians in connection with Quarryvale. In 1989 £50,000 was paid to ... and £50,000 to Bertie Ahern. Bertie Ahern also got another £30,000 subsequently.
- He said that the information came to him indirectly through an intermediary and that the person providing the information was afraid to come forward (This was a reference to an individual whom Mr Gilmartin had earlier claimed had provided him with information).
- ... he said that the source had previously been a partner with OOC in a development in Cork (A reference to the individual who had provided information to Mr Gilmartin)

(V) A TELEPHONE CONVERSATION BETWEEN MR TOM GILMARTIN AND MR PAT HANRATTY SC⁷ COUNSEL TO THE TRIBUNAL ON 26 SEPTEMBER 2002.

1.12 According to notes made by Counsel to the Tribunal of a telephone conversation between Mr Gilmartin and himself on 26 September 2002, Mr Gilmartin provided the following information:

- Owen O'Callaghan made offshore payments to politicians including Bertie Ahern and ... He made the payments into Bertie Ahern's account in Jersey. Bertie Ahern and ... have accounts in Jersey, Liechtenstein and the Dutch Antilles. Bertie Ahern also has deposits in England. On one occasion he brought a brief case full of cash over with him when he was attending a Manchester United football match. He was met by a courier from the Bank of Ireland to whom he handed the money.

⁶ Counsel's note of this telephone conversation was dated 29 November 1999, some four days after the call.

⁷ Mr Hanratty had at that time recently left the Tribunal, and returned to private practice.

- Bertie Ahern got in excess of £100,000 from Owen O'Callaghan. Over £1,000,000 was stolen from Barkhill and it was from this money that O'Callaghan paid Bertie Ahern ...'
- Owen O'Callaghan himself ... told Mr Gilmartin ... that he (O'Callaghan) had made a payment to Bertie Ahern.
- In 1990 Owen O'Callaghan gave Bertie Ahern a large sum of cash at a football match in Cork. The second lot of money was paid by O'Callaghan to Bertie Ahern in 1992 in connection with the blocking of tax designation for the Green Property Company.
- John Corcoran was on the brink of getting tax designation. However it was blocked by Bertie Ahern and ... Owen O'Callaghan paid Bertie Ahern £30,000 after a Barkhill board meeting held in Bank of Ireland (Mr Gilmartin thinks) in 1992. This was the board meeting at which Mr O'Callaghan left the room for a period and came back and announced that Blanchardstown was not going to get tax designation (Mr John Corcoran was associated with Green Property Company, the developer of the Blanchardstown Town Centre)
- Large sums of money were taken from the O'Connell Street account to England.
- Bertie Ahern held an offshore facility with an Irish Bank, which Mr Gilmartin thinks is Bank of Ireland but says it might be Allied Irish ...
- Mr Gilmartin told me the story about the temporary chauffeur who drove Celia Larkin to a bank in O'Connell Street and withdrew a substantial sum in cash which was put in the boot of the car.

(VI) A LETTER DATED 28 OCTOBER 2005 FROM A&L GOODBODY SOLICITORS

1.13 On 16 May 2005, the Tribunal wrote to Mr Gilmartin's Solicitors and requested additional information as follows:

.... I am directed by the Members of the Tribunal to write to you concerning allegations made by your client during the course of telephone conversations with Counsel to the Tribunal. Your client indicated that he had received information that some senior politicians had received monies from Mr Owen O'Callaghan in connection with the Quarryvale project.

The Tribunal have now requested that your client provide to the Tribunal as a matter of urgency the source of this information.

1.14 Mr Gilmartin responded through his Solicitors on 28 October 2005 in the following terms:

In relation to the query raised by you in your letter of 16 May 2006, we are instructed by our client that he was told by Owen O'Callaghan himself that he (Mr O'Callaghan) had provided monies to some senior politicians.

(VII) INFORMATION PROVIDED BY MR GILMARTIN IN THE COURSE OF A TAPED DISCUSSION WITH HIS THEN SOLICITOR MR NOEL SMYTH ON 20 MAY 1998 (PROVIDED TO THE TRIBUNAL IN JUNE 1998).

1.15 In the course of a taped conversation with his then Solicitor, Mr Noel Smyth, on 20 May 1998 at a meeting in London, Mr Gilmartin stated the following:

- 'The next thing I discover was that Owen O'Callaghan had paid Bertie Ahern to block the designation on Blanchardstown and on this one. On a zoned site.'

1.16 Mr Gilmartin also said:

'... O'Callaghan left the meeting. ... He didn't come back for about the best part of an hour or so, and he then came back and he said there will be no designation on the site.... O'Callaghan openly stated that Bertie Ahern was ensuring that neither Green nor that site would get designation ... he was paid for doing that. Because he would have been out. I have no proof of that.'

1.17 Mr Smyth asked Mr Gilmartin if Mr O'Callaghan had ever said he gave Mr Ahern money, Mr Gilmartin responded:

'He did. He said Bertie was taken care of'

And

'He used to openly brag about it. O'Callaghan used to openly brag about it.'

(VIII) MR GILMARTIN'S NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF 17 MAY 2001

1.18 In the course of a lengthy narrative statement dated 17 May 2001, Mr Gilmartin said the following:

'I also recall Mr O'Callaghan telling me, again I believe that it was some time in 1992, that he had given £50,000 to Bertie Ahern in 1989 and that he had given him a further £30,000 some time later, when Mr Ahern had apparently been instrumental in blocking Green Property Plc getting special tax designation for Blanchardstown. I inferred from what Mr

O'Callaghan told me that, on the basis that he was paying monies to Bertie Ahern, he had been able to call on the support of Mr Ahern in his efforts to frustrate my project for Westpark/Quarryvale even though I thought at one stage that Mr Ahern was supportive of the project.'

THE EVIDENCE RELATING TO THE ALLEGATION OF A PAYMENT OF £50,000

1.19 Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that Mr O'Callaghan informed him that he had paid IR£50,000 to Mr Ahern. Mr Gilmartin initially stated that Mr O'Callaghan had given him this information in 1989, and that it was his understanding that the payment had been made earlier that year at a football match, which he identified as the Cork/Meath All-Ireland Final or an Irish International soccer match. Mr Gilmartin said that Mr O'Callaghan also remarked to him that Mr Ahern was on his 'payroll.'

1.20 Mr Gilmartin alleged that the information provided to him on this matter by Mr O'Callaghan arose in the following circumstances:

Mr Gilmartin had told Mr O'Callaghan that in the context of difficulties he was encountering in 1989 with regard to his purchase of the 'Irishtown lands',⁸ he had gone to Mr Ahern, as someone he could trust, for assistance and had told Mr O'Callaghan that Mr Ahern was 'the only man' who had assisted him in relation to his difficulties. Mr Gilmartin said that Mr O'Callaghan 'scoffed' at his reasoning for expressing trust in Mr Ahern, and that Mr O'Callaghan told him that he, Mr O'Callaghan, had to pay Mr Ahern IR£50,000 to ensure that the Green Property Company (the developer involved with Blanchardstown site), did not purchase the Corporation lands.

1.21 In later evidence, and when it was pointed out to him that the All Ireland Final in 1989 had not included Cork and Meath, but that these two counties did feature in the All-Ireland Final in the following year, 1990, Mr Gilmartin acknowledged, (although he still believed it to have been 1989), that the important date indicator for him was that Mr O'Callaghan had given him this information in the year in which Cork and Meath had played in an All Ireland Final. This suggested therefore that the year may have been 1990, rather than 1989.

1.22 Mr Gilmartin was also closely questioned in relation to a reference which appeared in a note of a telephone conversation between Mr Gilmartin and Mr Pat Hanratty SC, Counsel to the Tribunal to the effect that 'in 1990 Owen O'Callaghan gave Bertie Ahern a large sum of cash at a football match in Cork.'

⁸ See Part III

Mr Gilmartin told the Tribunal that he had never indicated that Mr O'Callaghan had told him that the money had been physically paid to Mr Ahern at a match in Cork, and, further, that the match in question was an All Ireland match involving Cork, but played in Croke Park. Mr Gilmartin, in evidence, referred to the match as 'a cork match' or 'a cork football match.'

1.23 Mr Gilmartin emphasised on a number of occasions that he personally had never alleged of his own knowledge that Mr Ahern had in fact been paid IR£50,000. Mr Gilmartin emphasised that his allegation was simply that Mr O'Callaghan had told him that he, Mr O'Callaghan, had made such a payment to Mr Ahern.

1.24 Mr O'Callaghan strongly denied that he ever informed Mr Gilmartin that he had paid IR£50,000, or any sum, to Mr Ahern. Mr Ahern equally strongly denied that he ever received any payment of money from Mr O'Callaghan in any circumstances.

THE EVIDENCE RELATING TO THE ALLEGATION CONCERNING A PAYMENT OF IR£30,000

1.25 Mr Gilmartin described to the Tribunal that while attending a Barkhill board meeting at AIB headquarters, he believed, in 1993, Mr Owen O'Callaghan announced that the Blanchardstown development would not receive tax designation, and that he had this information on 'good authority.' Mr Gilmartin said that he contradicted Mr O'Callaghan on this issue, and expressed his own understanding from his Government contacts, that Blanchardstown was indeed to get designation.

1.26 Mr Gilmartin described how Mr O'Callaghan then left the meeting room, and after an absence 'for some time', returned and announced that he had confirmation from 'the horse's mouth', that Blanchardstown would not receive tax designation.

Mr Gilmartin then alleged that when he and Mr O'Callaghan were leaving the meeting, he, Mr Gilmartin, expressed his amazement to Mr O'Callaghan that Mr O'Callaghan could give such an absolute categoric assurance in relation to the tax designation issue, whereupon Mr O'Callaghan said that he had a guarantee from the Minister for Finance (Mr Ahern) on the issue, and added that it had cost him IR£30,000.

1.27 Mr Gilmartin maintained that he understood Mr O'Callaghan to have told him that he, Mr O'Callaghan, had paid IR£30,000 to Mr Ahern to ensure that the Green Property Company did not receive tax designation in relation to Blanchardstown.

In an earlier statement in 2001, Mr Gilmartin had suggested that the date of this board meeting was in 1992. Mr Gilmartin said however that 'dates was a fierce problem' for him, and 'trying to remember what year, let alone what month' was difficult for him.

1.28 In the Smyth taped discussion in 1998, Mr Gilmartin had stated that he had 'discovered' that Mr O'Callaghan had 'paid Bertie to block the designation on Blanchardstown and on this one a zoned site.' Neither in that extract, nor elsewhere in the Smyth discussion, did Mr Gilmartin refer to the amount that had been paid to Mr Ahern. According to Mr Gilmartin, Mr O'Callaghan had also said to him that 'Bertie was taken care of.' Mr Gilmartin emphasised that he was merely repeating what Mr O'Callaghan had said to him.

1.29 In his draft affidavit of 2 October 1998, Mr Gilmartin referred to Mr O'Callaghan leaving a meeting in AIB and returning with a statement to the effect that neither Blanchardstown nor Quarryvale would receive tax designation. In this document, there was no mention of money being paid to Mr Ahern. Mr Gilmartin's sworn affidavit did refer to his belief that 'substantial sums of monies were paid as bribes by Owen O'Callaghan to politicians ...'

1.30 In a telephone conversation with Counsel to the Tribunal on 22 October 1998, Mr Gilmartin was noted as stating that a payment of IR£30,000 was made to Mr Ahern through Shefran Ltd in approximately May 1992, and that it was 'connected' with the blocking of tax designation to the Green Property Company (the developers of the Blanchardstown site). Whether or not Mr Gilmartin had, in the course of this telephone call, identified Mr O'Callaghan as the source of this information, the memorandum of the telephone call did not so state.

1.31 Mr Gilmartin's explanation for this reference to Shefran Ltd was that he had assumed that the IR£30,000 paid to Mr Ahern had in fact been routed through Shefran Ltd. On 25 November 1999, in the course of a telephone call between Mr Gilmartin and Counsel to the Tribunal, references to IR£50,000 and IR£30,000 being paid to Mr Ahern were noted. Mr Gilmartin said he was given this particular information by an anonymous caller. In his evidence, Mr Gilmartin stated that the anonymous caller repeated the same information as had been told to him, Mr Gilmartin, by Mr O'Callaghan.

MR O'CALLAGHAN'S EVIDENCE

1.32 Mr O'Callaghan denied that he had paid money at any time to Mr Ahern. He further denied that he at any time advised Mr Gilmartin that he had made any payments to Mr Ahern. It was Mr O'Callaghan's belief that Mr Gilmartin had never told him that he had spoken to Mr Ahern about difficulties which he was experiencing in relation to his acquisition of local authority lands in Quarryvale. Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged however, that Mr Gilmartin told him of those difficulties.

1.33 Mr O'Callaghan denied informing Mr Gilmartin that he had paid IR£50,000 to Mr Ahern to solve Mr Gilmartin's problems in relation to the acquisition of the lands. He described this allegation as 'absolute and total rubbish.'

1.34 Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that in March 1994 he met Mr Ahern in his office.⁹ This appointment was probably arranged by Mr Dunlop, possibly at Mr O'Callaghan's request. Mr O'Callaghan told the Tribunal that at the time he was concerned with the news that a former Government Minister and EU Commissioner, Mr Ray MacSharry had been appointed to the Board of Green Property Company plc, and that because of that, Green would possibly get tax designation for Blanchardstown. Mr O'Callaghan said that he probably told Mr Ahern that neither Blanchardstown nor Quarryvale needed tax designation, but that if Blanchardstown was to receive it, so should Quarryvale. In any event, Mr O'Callaghan said that he was assured by Mr Ahern that neither Blanchardstown nor Quarryvale would receive tax designation. Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that it was likely that he had informed Mr Gilmartin of his March 1994 meeting with Mr Ahern.

1.35 Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that at a board meeting at AIB, he informed the meeting of his discussion with Mr Ahern, and of Mr Ahern's assurances that neither Blanchardstown nor Quarryvale would receive tax designation. There was no written memorandum of this meeting. He denied Mr Gilmartin's claim, however, that he had left the meeting in the circumstances described by Mr Gilmartin. Mr O'Callaghan was 'not sure' if, when conveying what he had been told by Mr Ahern to the meeting, he had used the expression, as suggested by Mr Gilmartin, 'horse's mouth.'

1.36 Mr O'Callaghan also denied that on leaving the meeting he had told Mr Gilmartin that he had paid money to Mr Ahern.

1.37 Mr O'Callaghan acknowledged that he may have told Mr Gilmartin of the Fianna Fail request to him for a payment of IR£100,000, and the subsequent payment by him to Fianna Fail of IR£80,000 in June 1994. Mr O'Callaghan suspected that Mr Gilmartin might have taken the IR£80,000 figure paid to the Fianna Fail Party, and then turned it into a story that in fact this money had been paid to Mr Ahern in his personal capacity.

1.38 Mr O'Callaghan also acknowledged that he may have informed Mr Gilmartin of the fundraising dinner in Cork on 11 March 1994, which was attended by Mr Albert Reynolds, who was then Taoiseach. The Tribunal has found as a fact that Mr O'Callaghan informed Mr Gilmartin of his own contribution of IR£10,000 to Fianna Fail at that event.

1.39 Mr O'Callaghan maintained that he never suggested to Mr Gilmartin that he had politicians or any politician on his payroll.

THE EVIDENCE OF MR AHERN

1.40 Mr Ahern denied that he ever received money from Mr O'Callaghan, directly or indirectly. In a statement provided to the Tribunal by Mr Ahern through his solicitors on 5 November 2004, Mr Ahern:

- denied receiving IR£50,000 or IR£30,000 from Mr O'Callaghan
- claimed that he did not discuss tax designation for Blanchardstown with Mr O'Callaghan
- acknowledged that Mr O'Callaghan updated him in relation to the Stadium proposals in 1994 and again in 1996 and 1998.

In a letter from his solicitors dated 22 April 2005, the Tribunal was advised of Mr Ahern's denial that he had offshore accounts.

1.41 In the course of his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Ahern acknowledged that he met Mr O'Callaghan on 24 March 1994, but that as far as he was concerned did not 'at any time' discuss tax designation for Blanchardstown with him (although he recalled media references to same at that time). He accepted that he may well have outlined Government policy in relation to the tax designation issue in the course of his discussions with Mr O'Callaghan. Mr Ahern stated that, if he gave any assurance to Mr O'Callaghan in relation to tax designation for Blanchardstown/Quarryvale, it would simply have been in the context of him repeating Government Policy to Mr O'Callaghan which at that time did not envisage tax designation status for these sites.

1.42 Mr Ahern also acknowledged that he provided assistance through Councillor Joe Burke to Mr Gilmartin in relation to problems Mr Gilmartin claimed he was then having in relation to the purchase of the corporation lands¹⁰ in Quarryvale. (Originally in his December 2003 statement to the Tribunal, Mr Ahern stated that this assistance was in relation to the Bachelors Walk development).

THE EVIDENCE OF MR EAMON DUNPHY CONCERNING MR O'CALLAGHAN

2.01 Mr Eamon Dunphy, a journalist and broadcaster, was interviewed in private by the Tribunal on 26 February 2007. Subsequently, and at the Tribunal's request, Mr Dunphy provided a written narrative statement to the Tribunal on 28 March 2007. Mr Dunphy gave sworn evidence to the Tribunal in mid February 2008 (Day 822), in the course of which he was examined by Counsel for the Tribunal, and then cross examined by Counsel for both Mr O'Callaghan and Mr Ahern.

MR DUNPHY'S EVIDENCE TO THE TRIBUNAL

2.02 Mr Dunphy told the Tribunal that over a two to three year period approximately, he acted as, essentially, as a coordinator of a project to bring Wimbledon FC to Dublin, one of the aspects of which concerned Mr O'Callaghan's plan to build a football Stadium on Barkhill's Neilstown (Clondalkin) site. Mr Dunphy was not paid for his involvement, and in any event, the Stadium project did not materialise. Mr Dunphy said that he approached Mr O'Callaghan on becoming aware of Mr O'Callaghan's involvement with this Stadium project. Mr Dunphy held a high profile position both as a sports journalist, broadcaster and as a former professional footballer.

2.03 In the course of their association, Mr Dunphy and Mr O'Callaghan met on many occasions, sometimes on their own, and sometimes with others.

2.04 Mr Dunphy emphasised on a number of occasions in the course of his sworn evidence to the Tribunal that he considered Mr O'Callaghan to be a man of integrity, and a person who was 'honest in his dealings.'

2.05 Mr Dunphy told the Tribunal of informal discussions between himself and Mr O'Callaghan probably over a meal or coffee in either Dublin or London, and in the course of which Mr O'Callaghan made certain comments to him concerning, in particular, Mr Bertie Ahern.

¹⁰ See Part 3 of this Chapter for a more detailed analysis of the evidence heard by the Tribunal relating to meetings between Mr Gilmartin and Mr Joe Burke.

2.06 In particular, Mr Dunphy said that Mr O'Callaghan advised him as follows:

- That he, Mr O'Callaghan, felt that in 1994 (when Mr Ahern was Minister for Finance), Mr Ahern had failed to deliver on a promise to grant tax designation status to a development with which Mr O'Callaghan was involved with in Athlone (the Golden Island Shopping Centre Development),¹¹ and that Mr Albert Reynolds (the then Taoiseach) had had to 'put a gun' to Mr Ahern's head on the night before they left Government to deliver on that promise
- That Mr Ahern had 'been taken care of' but had failed to deliver on a commitment.

2.07 While in the course of his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Dunphy acknowledged that in all his discussions with Mr O'Callaghan, Mr O'Callaghan had never used the words 'money' or 'corrupt', he said he nevertheless understood or inferred from what Mr O'Callaghan had told him, the following:

- That he interpreted Mr O'Callaghan's comments in relation to dealing with Councillors as Mr O'Callaghan informing him that 'the only way you could work as a developer and get your projects through (was) by dealing with these people, these people being corrupt Councillors'
- That Mr O'Callaghan had used terminology or words, in the context of his comments relating to Mr Ahern such as 'looked after', 'he had been fixed up', 'he'd do a deal' and 'he'd been taken care of.'
- That Mr Ahern had been 'induced improperly by Mr O'Callaghan to grant tax designation to this project and had failed to deliver.'
- That the inducement in question was money, and that it was his impression from Mr O'Callaghan, that Mr Ahern had received a benefit in return for an agreed outcome.
- That Mr O'Callaghan, in order to succeed in his development projects had had no choice but deal with corrupt councillors. Mr Dunphy said 'I clearly understood him to mean that you had to get involved in bribery to get planning permission to do anything.'

¹¹ Golden Island is a shopping development in Athlone, County Westmeath. It was developed in the early 1990s by a consortium of developers/investors, including Mr O'Callaghan. The development was granted tax designation status by the outgoing Fianna Fail Government in December 1994. The Ministerial Order granting the tax designation to Golden Island was signed by the Minister for Finance, Mr Bertie Ahern on the last day in office of his Government. Mr O'Callaghan denied that he had had any contact with, or had paid money to, Mr Ahern in relation to this development. While in the course of its public inquiries, there were occasional references to Golden Island receiving tax designation status in 1994, the Tribunal did not undertake any public inquiry in relation to the matter.

- That it was his 'impression clearly gained from numerous conversations with Mr O'Callaghan is that favours were expected in return for being looked after, taken care of.'
- That 'Mr O' Callaghan's position when he discussed this with me was that he had to do it ('it' being a reference to bribery) in order to conduct his business as a developer. That it was pervasive, that everybody was doing it...' (a reference to Mr Dunphy's understanding that Mr O'Callaghan had been obliged to engage in corrupt practices in order to successfully conduct his business as a developer).
- That Mr O'Callaghan had given him information about bribery and that Mr O'Callaghan was involved in bribery, and that he had paid Mr Ahern, and that Mr Ahern had taken a bribe, in relation to tax designation in Athlone.

2.08 Mr Dunphy maintained that he clearly recalled his conversation with Mr O'Callaghan, and described it as 'vivid' in his memory. He said that the conversation had remained in his mind, as did the inference that he had taken from it, to the effect that that Mr Ahern had been given an inducement by Mr O'Callaghan. He did not know whether Mr O'Callaghan had paid money to Mr Ahern or if, in fact, he had been engaged in any corrupt activity.

2.09 Towards the conclusion of his cross examination of Mr Dunphy, Mr O'Callaghan's Counsel, Mr Sreenan S.C. questioned Mr Dunphy as follows:

Q. 'We looked earlier in your cross examination at references to how you evaluated Mr O'Callaghan that you described him as honest, first class and a thoroughly decent person. You remember those references?'

A. 'Yes I do.'

Q. 'Is that still your view of him?'

A. 'Yes it is'

Q. 'And if Mr O'Callaghan comes in here and says look, Mr Dunphy just drew the wrong inference from whatever I said, I've never paid a penny to Bertie Ahern for any purpose whatsoever, whether in relation to Athlone, Quarryvale or anything. Will you accept what Mr O'Callaghan says that you just drew the wrong inference'

A. 'Well I will accept firstly the findings of the Tribunal.'

Q. 'That wasn't my question.'

A. 'I understand it wasn't your question. I'll accept ... first of all, I would insist that my inferences were honestly drawn and ... '

Q. 'Okay let's accept that as part of the question. Honestly drawn but mistaken. If Mr O'Callaghan as an honest, first class, thoroughly decent person says look I never paid a penny to Bertie Ahern will you accept that? That you just must have been mistaken but honest in your inferences.'

A. '... that's an interesting question. I believed him when he expressed or made those remarks about his relationship with Mr Ahern. But I also accept that the inference I drew was an inference. And if Mr O'Callaghan were to come in here and say that I was mistaken well yes I would accept that'

2.10 In this exchange, Mr O'Callaghan's counsel challenged Mr Dunphy to accept that the inferences which he took from what was told to him by Mr O'Callaghan while honestly drawn, were nevertheless mistaken. In the event that Mr O'Callaghan was to tell the Tribunal that he had 'never paid a penny to Bertie Ahern...', Mr Dunphy agreed that if that was to happen he would accept that he had been mistaken in his inferences, and accept Mr O'Callaghan's contention that he had 'never paid a penny' to Mr Ahern.

MR O'CALLAGHAN'S EVIDENCE

2.11 This particular matter was later canvassed with Mr O'Callaghan in the course of his sworn evidence (on Day 915) while being examined by his own Counsel Mr Sreenan. On that occasion, the following exchange took place:

Q. 'He (Mr Dunphy) suggested that you had said to him that Bertie Ahern was a person who would take the money and didn't deliver and that you had either said or implied to him that you had paid money to Bertie Ahern in return for promised favours, but he also accepted in evidence that if you came in here and testified that you had never said that, that he would accept your testimony. Now did you ever say that to Mr Dunphy?'

A. 'No, I never did'

2.12 The above suggestion, as put to Mr O'Callaghan by his counsel, was markedly different to that which had been put by Mr Sreenan to Mr Dunphy on Day 822. When it was put to Mr Dunphy that if Mr O'Callaghan were to give evidence that he had never said nor implied that he had paid money to Mr Ahern, or that Mr Ahern was the sort of person who would take the money and not deliver, Mr Dunphy agreed he would accept that the inferences that he took were mistaken, albeit taken honestly. However, it was never suggested to Mr Dunphy that the words which Mr Dunphy had sworn were stated to him by Mr O'Callaghan, had not in fact been said by Mr O'Callaghan. Mr Dunphy merely indicated that he would accept Mr O'Callaghan's evidence that he, Mr

O'Callaghan, had never paid money to Mr Ahern, if Mr O'Callaghan was to so confirm. Mr Dunphy had never maintained that he was in a position to prove that Mr O'Callaghan had paid money to Mr Ahern. Mr Dunphy never withdrew or otherwise retracted his evidence that particular statements had been made to him by Mr O'Callaghan, and that he had drawn a particular inference from those statements.

2.13 Mr O'Callaghan was asked if he disputed Mr Dunphy's evidence that he, Mr O'Callaghan had, in effect, told him that 'while Mr Bertie Ahern had been taken care of, he didn't do the deal, and that you had to get Mr Reynolds to put a gun to Mr Ahern's head on the night before they were to leave Government...' Mr O'Callaghan responded that he 'completely and totally disputed it.' Mr O'Callaghan confirmed that not only did he dispute what Mr Dunphy said that he told him, but also that he had approached Mr Reynolds in the manner suggested, or that he paid money to either Mr Reynolds or Mr Ahern. Mr O'Callaghan denied that he had anything to do with the grant of tax designation status to Golden Island by the Government on 14 December 1994, although he acknowledged that some six months earlier, he and his business partners and members of Athlone UDC had lobbied Mr Smith, the Environment Minister, on the issue on two occasions.

2.14 Mr O'Callaghan was also questioned as follows:

Q. '...did you ever tell either Mr Gilmartin or Mr Dunphy anything to the effect that you had looked after Mr Ahern but that he hadn't delivered in relation to the matter?'

A. 'That's totally incorrect'

Q. 'But insofar as they have given this evidence to the Tribunal both Mr Dunphy and Mr Gilmartin are incorrect when they recollect you telling them that you had in fact taken care of or Mr Ahern, and that you had to get Mr Reynolds to intervene for you in order to get the tax designation through?'

A. 'Both are completely incorrect, I don't think Eamon Dunphy's evidence was that straightforward.'

Q. 'No, Mr Dunphy doesn't mention money in relation to the matter, I think his evidence was that you told him that Mr Ahern had been taken care of, but that you had to get Mr Reynolds to intervene, or ...'

A. 'That's totally incorrect on all accounts'

2.15 It was clear therefore that Mr O’Callaghan rejected not only the inferences which Mr Dunphy said he took from information provided to him by Mr O’Callaghan, but that he also denied in the strongest possible terms that anything of the nature of what Mr Dunphy suggested had been told to him was in fact said to Mr Dunphy by him.

THE FRANK CONNOLLY FACTOR

2.16 Mr Dunphy told the Tribunal that he was friendly with, and admired the journalist, Mr Frank Connolly. Mr Dunphy acknowledged that he had discussed with Mr Connolly the information which Mr Dunphy claimed Mr O’Callaghan gave him and which he had subsequently recounted to the Tribunal.

2.17 In cross examination, it was strongly suggested to Mr Dunphy that he, Mr Dunphy had come to the Tribunal in order to ‘wreak revenge’ for what he perceived to have been a wrong perpetrated on his friend and colleague Mr Connolly (and which was explained by Mr Dunphy as his perception that there had been improper use of Dáil privilege in connection with Mr Connolly, involving the disclosure of confidential information relating to Mr Connolly, by the then Minister for Justice to a journalist). Mr Dunphy said that it would be ‘an act of monumental irresponsibility and folly to embellish a story because something happened to Frank Connolly.’

2.18 Mr Dunphy also stated the following:

‘If you are suggesting for one minute that I would come to this Tribunal and perjure myself and damage the Taoiseach of this country and a businessman for whom I have the highest regard in order to wreak revenge as you put it, for what was done to Frank Connolly. I don’t want to be in any way bad mannered, but that is outrageous! And you must surely know it. It is a preposterous allegation to make. And if that is what you are suggesting, well then, you must be pretty short of material I have to say’ (Mr Dunphy was here responding to Mr Sreenan, Counsel for Mr O’Callaghan)

2.19 The Conclusions of the Tribunal in relation to Mr Dunphy’s evidence:

- I. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunphy gave his evidence honestly and in the belief that it was true and accurate.
- II. The Tribunal rejected any suggestion (to the extent that it was made) that Mr Dunphy embellished or otherwise altered his evidence to the Tribunal because of any sense of bitterness or anger on his part as to any past treatment of Mr Connolly or any issue relating to him, and which Mr Dunphy perceived as being unfair.

- III. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunphy, in his sworn evidence to the Tribunal, accurately recounted and described the words and terminology used by Mr O'Callaghan in discussions between the two men relating to Mr Ahern, Mr Reynolds and the issue of the granting of tax designation for the Golden Island development in Athlone.
- IV. The Tribunal accepted that the inferences taken by Mr Dunphy in relation to the information provided to him by Mr O'Callaghan were, as described by Mr Dunphy, honest inferences (and which were acknowledged as such by Mr O'Callaghan's Counsel), and were, in the Tribunal's view reasonable inferences for him to have taken, having regard to the words spoken by Mr O'Callaghan and the context in which they were spoken.
- V. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr O'Callaghan made verbal statements to Mr Dunphy, to the effect:
 - that Mr Ahern had been given an inducement or was 'taken care of' by Mr O'Callaghan in return for a promised favour.
 - that Mr O'Callaghan gave inducements to politicians
 - that Mr O'Callaghan found it necessary to engage in corrupt activity in order to successfully develop property in Dublin.

2.20 The foregoing findings assisted the Tribunal in making the following findings, some of which are replicated and considered in detail elsewhere in the Report.

- i) The fact that Mr O'Callaghan disclosed information to Mr Dunphy which, at least, implied or inferred that Mr O'Callaghan had corruptly paid money to Mr Ahern was corroborative of Mr Gilmartin's allegations that Mr O'Callaghan had, likewise, disclosed information in which he stated or implied that he, Mr O'Callaghan, had paid money to Mr Ahern in return for favours from Mr Ahern in connection with matters associated with the Quarryvale project.
- ii) The Tribunal was satisfied from its consideration of the evidence of Mr Gilmartin and of Mr Dunphy that Mr O'Callaghan was prepared to divulge, and did indeed divulge, to third parties, with whom he was at the time closely associated in the Quarryvale project (and which included the Neilstown Stadium project) information and statements which expressly or by implication suggested that he, Mr O'Callaghan, had made corrupt payments to politicians, including Mr Ahern.

- iii) The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr O'Callaghan informed Mr Gilmartin that he had paid sums totalling IR£80,000 to Mr Ahern. The provision of such information to Mr Gilmartin was not proof that such payments had indeed been made to Mr Ahern by Mr O'Callaghan.
- iv) Specifically in relation to the allegation that Mr O'Callaghan told Mr Gilmartin immediately following a Barkhill Board Meeting in AIB that he had paid IR£30,000 to Mr Ahern in return for an assurance that the Blanchardstown development would not receive tax designation status, the Tribunal accepted Mr Gilmartin's account as to the circumstances in which he was provided with such information.
- v) The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr O'Callaghan was advised by Mr Ahern, the then Minister for Finance, at a meeting on 24 March 1994 that neither the Blanchardstown or Quarryvale developments would receive tax designation status. However, the Tribunal believed it to have been quite possible that Mr O'Callaghan had received a similar assurance on an unknown date considerably prior to the 24 March 1994, and that the reason for Mr O'Callaghan's again raising the issue with Mr Ahern on 24 March 1994 arose from a concern on his, Mr O'Callaghan's part, that Mr Ray MacSharry's then recent or imminent appointment to the board of Green Property Plc (the developers of Blanchardstown) might precipitate a reversal of Mr Ahern's earlier stated position that Blanchardstown would not receive tax designation.
- vi) While Mr Gilmartin's evidence in relation to his allegation that Mr O'Callaghan had informed him that he, Mr O'Callaghan, had paid Mr Ahern IR£50,000 in order to ensure that the corporation owned lands in Quarryvale were not sold to Green Property Plc, was considerably less specific than his evidence in relation to the alleged IR£30,000 payment (paras (iv) and (v) above), and was probably mistaken in terms of aspects of its detail because of poor recollection on Mr Gilmartin's part, the Tribunal was nevertheless satisfied that Mr Gilmartin was provided with information by Mr O'Callaghan which led him to understand that Mr O'Callaghan had indeed advised him that he had paid IR£50,000 to Mr Ahern.

THE CONDUCT OF THE INQUIRY INTO MR AHERN'S FINANCES

3.01 The Tribunal's inquiry into Mr Ahern's finances effectively commenced in late 2004. On 15 October 2004, the Tribunal notified Mr Ahern's solicitors that Mr Gilmartin had alleged that Mr O'Callaghan had told him that sums of IR£30,000 and IR£50,000 had been paid by Mr O'Callaghan to Mr Ahern, and that as part of its inquiry into that issue, the Tribunal was considering making an Order for Discovery in relation to, inter alia, Mr Ahern's bank accounts. On 4 November 2004, Mr Ahern provided a detailed narrative statement to the Tribunal, in which he denied having received any money from Mr O'Callaghan.

3.02 As part of its private inquiry, the Tribunal requested details of Mr Ahern's finances from Mr Ahern and from a number of financial institutions. Because of information provided to the Tribunal, its inquiries also involved an examination of bank accounts held in the name of Mr Ahern's then partner, Ms Celia Larkin, and certain bank accounts associated with Mr Ahern's constituency organisation, as well as the purchase of Mr Ahern's house at No. 44 Beresford Avenue, Drumcondra, Dublin and, to a limited extent, bank accounts held in the names of Mr Ahern's then minor daughters.

3.03 For a number of reasons, the inquiry conducted by the Tribunal into Mr Ahern's finances was complex and lengthy. Mr Ahern did not keep records of income or expenditure. He did not himself operate any personal bank accounts between 1987 and 1993, and maintained that, within this period he saved in excess of IR£50,000 in cash, and that he kept this cash in safes in his constituency office and his departmental office. Mr Ahern's income during this period (and indeed subsequently) came from state sources (as Lord Mayor of Dublin, as a TD, and as a government minister)¹² with associated expenses.

3.04 The Tribunal sought to establish the source of these substantial funds and, in doing so, to ascertain if any were associated, directly or indirectly with Mr O'Callaghan. In the course of that process, the Tribunal heard sworn evidence from a number of individuals including Mr Ahern, bank officials and others, and it examined the content of documentation provided to it by Mr Ahern, and others, and by a number of financial institutions.

¹² TD (1977–2011); Dublin Corporation Councillor (1978–88); Minister of State at the Departments of Defence and An Taoiseach (9 March–14 Nov 1982); Lord Mayor of Dublin (1986/7); Minister for Labour (1987–91); Minister for Finance (1991–4); Minister for Industry & Commerce (4–12 Jan 1993); Minister for Arts, Culture and the Gaeltacht (18 Nov–15 Dec 1994); Tánaiste (19 Nov–15 Dec 1994); Taoiseach (1997–2008).

3.05 On 25 October 2005, the Tribunal requested Mr Ahern to provide an explanation on or before 30 November 2005 in respect of some 86 lodgements made to his bank accounts in the period 30 December 1993 to 22 December 1995. In later correspondence dated the 3 March 2006 to Mr Ahern's Solicitors, the Tribunal extended the response period to 24 March 2006, and requested that Mr Ahern prioritise information relating to specific lodgements. The letter stated:

'1. Our letter dated 25th October, 2005, which was to have been replied to by the 30th November, 2005, has not yet been replied to. A copy of this letter is enclosed herewith. I have been instructed by the Tribunal to extend the period for your client's reply up to the 24th March, 2006.

2. While the Tribunal Members are anxious to receive all the information sought in the Tribunal's letter of the 25th October, 2005, I have been directed to request that your client prioritise dealing with the following queries:

(a). £15,000 cash lodgement as part of a £22,500 composite lodgement to Allied Irish Banks, special savings account numbered 00401-177 on the 30th December, 1993;

(b). £30,000 cash lodgement into Allied Irish Banks, special savings account numbered 00401-177 (£27,164.44 cash and an amount in the sum of £2,835.56 in your client's current account numbered 0041-250 lodged on the 25th April, 1994;

(c). £20,000 cash lodgement into Allied Irish Banks account number 00004-096 in the name of Georgina and Cecelia Ahern on the 8th August, 1994;

(d). Transfer in the sum of £24,838.49 to your client's 7-day fixed interest account at Allied Irish Banks numbered 04519/011 on the 11th October, 1994;

(e). Transfer in the sum of £19,142.92 to your client's 7-day fixed interest account at Allied Irish Banks numbered 04519/011 on the 1st December, 1995.

As previously stated, the Tribunal is anxious that the lodgements set out at (a) to (e) above are dealt with as a priority to the other matters set out in my letter of the 25th October, 2005. The Tribunal is, of course, anxious to receive replies to all queries raised at the earliest possible opportunity.

In addition, the Tribunal is also anxious to receive your client's Affidavit of Discovery in compliance with the Tribunal's Order dated the 24th November, 2005.'

3.06 The Tribunal's consideration of these, and other lodgements of which it became aware in the course of its inquiries, are, inter alia, the subject of consideration by the Tribunal in Sections I to VIII of this Part of Chapter Two.

CHALLENGES TO THE VALIDITY, SCOPE AND DEPTH OF THE INQUIRY POST 2004, INTO MR AHERN'S PERSONAL FINANCES.

3.07 Between late 2004 and late 2008 a substantial volume of correspondence passed between the Tribunal and Mr Ahern's solicitors in relation to Mr Ahern's finances. Much of this correspondence was concerned with requests for additional information by the Tribunal, and the provision of such information by Mr Ahern through his solicitors. On occasion during this period, and in the course of some of this correspondence, Mr Ahern, through his solicitors, challenged the basis on which the Tribunal was pursuing its inquiries into his finances, and also on occasion took issue with the extent and depth of that inquiry. When such issues arose, the Tribunal endeavoured to provide explanations as to the nature and purpose of its inquiries to Mr Ahern.

3.08 For example, in a letter to the Tribunal from Mr Ahern's solicitors dated 10 July 2007, a number of questions were posed, namely:

- 1. Precisely what is the legal and evidential basis for the current inquiries into my client's personal affairs?*
- 2. Please identify each decision made by the Tribunal to proceed with inquiries into my client's personal affairs and please state the issue or Module to which each decision related.*
- 3. Please provide the precise date when each decision referred to above was made.*
- 4. The purpose for which the alleged payment of £50,000 was made to my client has not been explained by the Tribunal. How does the inquiry into the alleged payment relate to the Quarryvale II Module?*
- 5. How does the purpose for the alleged payment of £30,000 relate to the Quarryvale II Module?*

3.09 In its response to these queries, on 12 July 2007, the Tribunal stated, inter alia:

The evidential basis for the Tribunal's current inquiries, insofar as they involve inquiry into the finances of your client Mr Ahern, are to be found in the Quarryvale II brief of statements and documents circulated to you including, in particular,

1) The evidence of Mr Tom Gilmartin, including the allegation that Mr Owen O'Callaghan informed him that he had paid Mr Ahern £50,000 and £30,000.

2) The evidence of Mr Ahern, Ms Celia Larkin and Mr Michael Wall in relation to substantial cash transactions conducted in Irish currency and foreign currency which took place between October 1994 and December 1995.

3) The evidence of bank officials in relation to the financial transactions conducted through the accounts of Mr Ahern and Ms Larkin, which transactions are more particularly identified in the bank documentation circulated in the Quarryvale II Brief and referred to in detail in Counsel's Supplemental Opening Statement in the Quarryvale II Module (28th May 2007).

These inquiries involving Mr Ahern flowed directly from the decision of the Sole Member of the Tribunal taken prior to the 20th December, 1999 to conduct a public inquiry into allegations of planning corruption in relation to the rezoning of Quarryvale.

3.10 The Tribunal's letter further stated:

In furtherance of this decision, inquiries have been made of a large number of politicians, which included detailed examinations of their personal bank accounts. Where the Tribunal inquiries have raised issues as to the source or nature of financial transactions conducted through such accounts, they will be inquired into in the Quarryvale II Module...

and

The inquiries which are being made of your client in the Quarryvale II Module which touch upon your client's private and personal affairs do so only to the extent necessary to inquire into the sources of large cash lodgements made to Mr Ahern's bank accounts and to the accounts in the name of Ms Larkin being operated for his benefit and the purpose for which such payments were made...

The Tribunal has legitimately determined that these are matters which merit public inquiry in the course of the Quarryvale II inquiry into the allegations made by Mr Tom Gilmartin regarding corrupt payments made in connection with the redevelopment of lands at Quarryvale and in particular his allegation that he was informed by Mr Owen O'Callaghan that Mr O'Callaghan had paid Mr Ahern £50,000 and £30,000. The inquiries which have been made of your client, Mr Ahern, and persons associated with him in relation to the lodgements of large sums of cash to his accounts and those of Ms Larkin are proportionate to the importance of the matters being inquired into and reflect the level of information provided to the Tribunal by Mr Ahern and others in relation to such lodgements. The tracing of funds through the accounts of Mr Ahern and those with whom he has had financial dealings is in no sense 'extraordinary' nor is it exclusively a matter relating to Tribunal inquiries into tax designation...

The Quarryvale II inquiry is specifically concerned with the alleged payment of £50,000 said to have been paid by Mr O'Callaghan to Mr Ahern because:

- 1) Mr Tom Gilmartin, a witness in the Quarryvale Module, alleges that Mr O'Callaghan, another witness in the Quarryvale Module, allegedly made the statement to him to the effect that such payment had been made. Mr O'Callaghan denies having made any such statement;*
- 2) If the payment of £50,000 was made by a property developer Mr O'Callaghan, to a Government Minister Mr Ahern, that matter is an appropriate matter to be inquired into where the Tribunal is inquiring into the legitimacy of the rezoning of Quarryvale and the payment of monies to politicians by persons connected with Quarryvale;*
- 3) Where Mr O'Callaghan has denied making a payment of £50,000 to Mr Ahern and where Mr Ahern has denied receiving such a payment, if such payment was made, it would be a material issue in determining the credibility of both witnesses in the Quarryvale II Module.*

The allegation that Mr O'Callaghan made a statement to Mr Gilmartin that he had paid £30,000 to Mr Ahern in order to block the tax designation being sought by rival developers of the Blanchardstown Shopping Centre is material to the inquiry in the Quarryvale II Module because:

- 1) Mr Gilmartin maintains that such a statement was made by Mr O'Callaghan and Mr O'Callaghan denies the making of such a statement;*
- 2) The allegation is that Mr O'Callaghan told Mr Gilmartin that such payment was made in return for Mr Ahern blocking tax designation for Blanchardstown. In the circumstances, if Mr Ahern as a Ministerial office holder exercised his Ministerial powers so as to ensure that a favourable result was achieved by a person who had paid him money, he would have acted in a manner which amounted to corruption. It is alleged that such a payment was made in order to benefit the* developers of the Quarryvale Shopping Centre and accordingly the matter falls to be dealt with in the Quarryvale II Module of inquiry;

- 3) Where both the alleged donor, Mr O'Callaghan, and the alleged recipient, Mr Ahern, have denied the fact of any such payment, any proof of such payment having been made would materially affect the credibility of each witness in the Quarryvale II Module.

3.11 On 9 December 2008, by which time Mr Ahern had concluded his sworn evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Ahern's solicitors wrote to the Tribunal. In the course of that letter, it was submitted on behalf of Mr Ahern that:

...if the Tribunal is not in a position to find that Mr Ahern received the alleged payments of £50,000 and £30,000 from Owen O'Callaghan then it follows as a matter of law that the Tribunal is not entitled to report on or make findings in respect of his personal finances, or the other matters that were the subject of public hearings. To put it another way, the Tribunal is not an inquiry into the general circumstances or credibility of witnesses, it can only make findings of fact that directly relate to the specific planning matters contained in the Terms of Reference.

3.12 In response to that letter, the Tribunal wrote to Mr Ahern's solicitors on 15 December 2008. In its letter, the Tribunal stated the following:

The Tribunal rejects the contention advanced in your letter that if the Tribunal is not in a position to find that Mr Ahern received payments of £50,000 and £30,000 from Mr O'Callaghan, that it is not entitled to make findings in respect of his personal finances, or the other matters which were the subject of public hearings...

The Tribunal specifically rejects the suggestion, if it is to be drawn from your letter, that an inability to conclude that Mr Ahern received £50,000 and £30,000 from Mr O'Callaghan necessarily precludes the Tribunal from making any findings in relation to Mr Ahern's credibility as a witness before the Tribunal, or in relation to his participation with the Tribunal, whether in correspondence, in complying with Tribunal request or Orders, or as a witness.

As part of its function the Tribunal is entitled to report upon the evidence which it has heard in the course of its public hearings. It is entitled to report upon the extent to which such evidence assisted the Tribunal, or otherwise, in its efforts to resolve such issues as it deemed merited public inquiry. The Tribunal is entitled to report upon the matters in which it conducted its inquiry, including references to the assistance or lack of assistance it may have received in its inquiries and the extent to which its efforts were hampered, if such be the case, by persons whose cooperation was sought by the Tribunal in the course of the inquiry.

The absence of a conclusion by the Tribunal (as to which version of events, if any, is correct) on any particular issue, does not preclude the Tribunal from reporting upon its consideration of the issue and the state of the evidence adduced before it . . .

THE TRIBUNAL'S ANALYSIS OF MR AHERN'S FINANCES IN THE REPORT

3.13 In the following pages the evidence heard by the Tribunal relating to Mr Ahern's personal finances is considered in detail, and, where appropriate, findings of fact made on the balance of probability are set out. For convenience, the subject matter is subdivided into eight separate sections, under the following headings:

- (i) The lodgement of IR£22,500 on 30 December 1993
- (ii) The lodgements totalling IR£30,000 made on 25 April 1994 and the lodgement of IR£20,000 made on 8 August 1994
- (iii) The lodgement of IR£24,838.49 to a bank account of Mr Ahern on 11 October 1994
- (iv) The lodgement of IR£28,772.90 on 5 December 1994
- (v) The lodgements of IR£11,743.74 on 15 June 1995, and of IR£19,142.92 on 1 December 1995
- (vi) Mr Ahern's Irish Permanent Building Society accounts
- (vii) The B/T account

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 10 - SECTION I : THE LODGEMENT OF IR£22,500 ON 30 DECEMBER 1993

MR AHERN'S EXPLANATION OF THE SOURCE OF THE LODGEMENT

4.01 A lodgement of IR£22,500 to Mr Ahern's Special Savings Account with AIB, 37/38 Upper O'Connell Street, Dublin, on 30 December 1993 was one of the lodgements in respect of which Mr Ahern was requested by the Tribunal to provide an explanation as to its source.

4.02 In April 2006 Mr Des Peelo, Mr Ahern's accountant, provided the Tribunal with a report¹ in which, inter alia, he explained the source of the IR£15,000 cash element of the IR£22,500, based on information provided to him by Mr Ahern.

4.03 That report stated that this cash sum of IR£15,000, which, in turn, was comprised of six contributions of IR£2,500 each from Mr David McKenna, Mr Jim Nugent, Mr Fintan Gunne,² Mr Michael Collins, Mr Charlie Chawke and Mr Paddy Reilly,³ who were described as personal friends of Mr Ahern. In his Report, Mr Peelo stated: 'At the time ...when Mr Ahern had no home the £15,000 (£22,500 in total) was intended as a goodwill loan to help fund his legal costs... The loan was unsolicited by Mr Ahern.' In evidence, Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that the suggestion in Mr Peelo's report to the effect that the IR£22,500 was 'intended' as a loan was erroneous. Mr Ahern said that the true position was that the money had been intended as a gift, but was accepted by him on the basis of a loan.

4.04 The report further stated that IR£22,000 of the IR£22,500 was used by Mr Ahern to fund the repayments on a loan of IR£19,115.97 taken out by him in relation to legal costs. (Although this loan was taken out on 24 December 1993 – six days prior to the lodgement of the IR£22,500 – repayments of the loan did not commence until 2 June 1995).

4.05 Mr Peelo's report did not provide any detail in relation to the remaining IR£7,500 which represented the non-cash element of the IR£22,500. On 3 May 2006, the Tribunal, relying on information provided to it directly by AIB, sought an explanation from Mr Ahern as to the composition of the IR£7,500, which AIB documentation indicated included a bank draft for IR£5,000 and a cheque from *'Willdover Ltd'*⁴ for IR£2,500.

² Mr Gunne died in 1997.

³ Mr Reilly died in 1996. He is to be distinguished from another Mr Paddy Reilly, sometimes referred to as 'Paddy the Plasterer.'

⁴ Willdover Ltd was a company associated with Mr Des Richardson. See later paragraphs.

4.06 In a letter to the Tribunal from Mr Ahern's solicitors dated 6 June 2006, the following explanation as to the source of the balance of IR£7,500 was provided: 'The sum of £5,000 was provided by Mr Padraic O'Connor then of NCB Stockbrokers. The sum of £2,500 was provided by Mr Des Richardson, a director of Willdover Ltd.'

4.07 The letter categorised the eight contributions comprising the sum of IR£22,500 as: 'loans ...repayable on request ...provided on a goodwill basis by friends who wished to assist Mr Ahern during a difficult period of his personal life. They were not commercial loans. There was no interest payment and no fixed date for repayment.'

4.08 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that the IR£22,500 (which he said comprised IR£15,000 in cash, a bank draft and a cheque drawn on the bank account of Willdover Ltd) was given to him by his solicitor and friend, the late Mr Gerry Brennan in St Luke's, Drumcondra, Dublin (Mr Ahern's constituency office) on, he believed, 27 December 1993, following a day at Leopardstown Races. Mr Brennan advised Mr Ahern that the money was a gift from a number of Mr Ahern's friends, whom he identified, and Mr Ahern was told that the money was being given to him to assist him discharge legal costs incurred in relation to his matrimonial proceedings. Mr Ahern stated that he was also informed by Mr Brennan at the time that the Willdover cheque for IR£2,500 represented Mr Des Richardson's contribution, and that the IR£5,000 bank draft represented the personal contribution of Mr Padraic O'Connor.

4.09 Mr Ahern claimed that his initial reaction was to reject the gift, but having been prevailed upon by Mr Brennan to accept it, he did so on the basis that it would be treated by him as a goodwill loan from friends, and that it would be repaid.

4.10 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that on the evening of 27 December 1993, he briefly spoke to Mr Richardson about the money, and indicated his uncertainty as to what to do in relation to it.

4.11 Mr Ahern said that, subsequently, he acknowledged to each of the donors his gratitude for their respective contributions. Mr Ahern explained that while the purpose behind the collection of the fund was to facilitate him in discharging legal bills arising from his recently completed matrimonial proceedings, he believed that he had advised the donors of the fund that he proposed saving the money towards the purchase of a house as the discharge of his legal bills had been provided for by a bank loan.

4.12 Mr Ahern also told the Tribunal that he informed the donors (with the exception of Mr O'Connor) that he would accept their contribution on the basis that he would repay the money with interest, and that he had offered to repay them on a number of occasions subsequently.

4.13 On Day 869, Mr Ahern stated:

'...I didn't pay any of them back. But as I think so the individuals have said, all of them, if not all of them that I had offered to pay back those on a number of occasions and they said leave it until later on and leave it to another time. But if at any time any of those individuals were in a difficulty and required it, they would have got it back, as they ultimately did, with interest.'

4.14 In the case of Mr O'Connor, Mr Ahern stated that while he was certain he thanked him for the contribution of IR£5,000, he could not remember if he had told him of his intention to repay the money.

THE ACCOUNTS GIVEN IN EVIDENCE IN RELATION TO THE PROVISION OF IR£22,500 TO MR AHERN

4.15 The persons identified by Mr Ahern (and who were available to give evidence) as having contributed money were examined on oath to enable the Tribunal determine if as a matter of probability they had done so and to determine the reasons and circumstances in which such contributions were made.

THE ORGANISATION OF THE COLLECTION

4.16 Mr Richardson told the Tribunal that the idea of making a collection for Mr Ahern was that of the late Mr Brennan, and it was an idea which he, Mr Richardson fully supported.

4.17 Mr Richardson claimed that he himself had no idea of the amount of Mr Ahern's legal bills arising from his matrimonial proceedings, although he knew it to be a large figure. He considered the actual amount was a matter between Mr Brennan and Mr Ahern. However, Mr Richardson also told the Tribunal that the collection of the IR£22,500 was for the purposes of helping Mr Ahern 'pay off a legal bill that was anticipated to cost between £20,000 and £25,000.' Mr Richardson suggested that it may have been the case that his estimate was prompted by his knowledge of an alternative plan to raise funds which had been mooted by Mr Brennan, but rejected by Mr Ahern. This alternative plan was a fundraising event at a cost of IR£1,000 per head involving 'twenty five or so' of Mr Ahern's friends which would have raised a total of IR£25,000 for Mr Ahern.

4.18 Mr Richardson told the Tribunal that following Mr Ahern's rejection of the fundraising event suggestion, he and Mr Brennan drew up a list of potential contributors from Mr Ahern's circle of friends who were to be called upon to assist him financially (otherwise than by a fundraising event). It was agreed between them that contributions should be made in cash, in order to ensure acceptance by Mr Ahern, and in the interests of confidentiality. According to Mr Richardson, contributions were duly taken up from eight individuals, including himself. Mr Brennan was not himself a contributor to the collection, but Mr Richardson suggested that he may have indirectly contributed by abating or reducing legal costs due to him from Mr Ahern in relation to Mr Ahern's then recently concluded matrimonial proceedings. In due course he and Mr Brennan, either together or on their own, met with Messrs Chawke, Nugent, Collins, McKenna, Gunne and Reilly. The meeting with Mr O'Connor took place at the offices of NCB Stockbrokers. Mr Richardson claimed that all the foregoing contributed to the fund, whereupon the total collected, IR£22,500 was duly handed over to Mr Ahern at St. Luke's, Drumcondra on (Mr Ahern believed), 27 December 1993.

4.19 Mr Richardson informed the Tribunal that he learned of Mr Ahern's decision to accept the money as a repayable loan approximately one week later.

4.20 Four of the cash contributors who gave evidence, told the Tribunal of having been approached by Mr Brennan and/or Mr Richardson and of being informed of Mr Ahern's need for financial assistance.

MR CHARLIE CHAWKE

4.21 Mr Charlie Chawke, who described himself as a personal friend of Mr Ahern, Mr Richardson and Mr Brennan, told the Tribunal that in the course of a discussion between himself, Mr Brennan, and Mr Richardson in his own licensed premises, The Goat Inn, Mr Brennan had referred to Mr Ahern's 'legal bills' arising from his 'matrimonial difficulties', and, 'it had been decided to have a whip-round to help him defray some of those costs.' A sum of IR£2,500 was decided as the contribution he might make and that this was to be in cash. Mr Chawke said that he paid this sum in cash to Mr Brennan and Mr Richardson some days later. Mr Richardson said that, subsequently, Mr Brennan told him that the money had been passed on to Mr Ahern. Mr Chawke himself was not present at the handover of the money to Mr Ahern in St. Luke's. He said that as of December 1993 he had never been in St. Luke's.

MR JIM NUGENT

4.22 Mr Jim Nugent said that he was a close personal friend of Mr Ahern's since the 1970s. He advised the Tribunal that following a telephone call from Mr Brennan, he met him in the Berkeley Court Hotel. He was not apprised as to why Mr Brennan wished to meet him prior to the meeting. At some point Mr Nugent said that he and Mr Brennan were joined by Mr Richardson.

4.23 In the course of their discussion, Mr Brennan referred to Mr Ahern as having 'a very difficult time with his marriage', and that 'there was some bills to be met and they were legal bills.' Mr Nugent assumed that these related to Mr Ahern's marital separation, and that the bills were substantial. He stated that he 'knew life wouldn't be easy for him at that time.' Mr Nugent was uncertain as to the date of discussion at the Berkeley Court, other than to state that it was 'late in the year', and could not recollect whether at the time he spoke to Mr Brennan he himself knew that Mr Ahern had been involved in matrimonial proceedings.

4.24 Mr Nugent told the Tribunal that the figure proposed to him as a contribution was IR£2,500. He decided that he would be delighted to help out once he had a little time to put the money together as he regarded Mr Ahern 'as a great friend.' He believed that approximately a week or ten days later he gave the cash sum of IR£2,500 to Mr Brennan. The emphasis had been on a cash contribution for confidentiality for Mr Ahern, because of concern that Mr Ahern would not utilise any non cash element of the fund. Mr Nugent stated that 'The whole thing was not to transact a cheque at all.'

MR MICHAEL COLLINS

4.25 Mr Collins described how he came to make his contribution to Mr Ahern in the following terms: in the course of a general discussion with Mr Richardson in the Berkeley Court Hotel, he had inquired after Mr Ahern. Mr Richardson had responded to the effect that Mr Ahern was having 'a hard time financially... probably due to his separation.' Mr Collins said that he had no recollection of whether there had been any mention of legal expenses. The meeting with Mr Richardson had not been prearranged for the purpose of discussing an advance of money to Mr Ahern, but Mr Richardson had initially mentioned in the course of their discussion that Mr Collins might make a contribution in the context of a fundraising dinner then being considered as a means of raising funds for Mr Ahern.

4.26 Following a couple of further meetings Mr Collins said that Mr Richardson suggested a figure of IR£2,500 as the contribution he might make to Mr Ahern. It was Mr Collins' understanding at this point that others would also be making such a contribution, but he was not aware as to their identity. Asked if he was particularly friendly with Mr Ahern at the time Mr Collins stated *'Going back a long time I've known Bertie 20 years and I had a track record of initially of being a contributor to taking tables at the various functions that were held.'*⁵

4.27 Mr Collins said that he duly paid over the IR£2,500 to Mr Richardson in the Berkeley Court.

MR DAVID MCKENNA

4.28 Mr McKenna advised the Tribunal that he met with Mr Richardson and Mr Brennan in the Berkeley Court Hotel when the issue of Mr Ahern's legal bill was raised. Both Mr Richardson and Mr Brennan were known to him at the time. Mr Richardson was a business associate from 1989/1990, and a friend from approximately a couple of years prior to 1993. He had met Mr Brennan previously and knew him to be Mr Ahern's solicitor. He agreed that his meetings with Mr Brennan prior to December 1993 had not been of any consequence prior to the meeting in the Berkeley Court.

4.29 Mr McKenna described the background to the meeting as follows:

'Des rang me and said if I was around would I drop in for a cup of coffee with myself and Gerry. I said yeah no problem, I'm around tomorrow I'll drop in. Went in had a cup of coffee, sat down. Gerry said that there is an ongoing issue with our friend Bertie, he's got a number of bills to pay, legal bills. And we're looking for a number of people that can come together to help him.'

4.30 Mr McKenna maintained that he had not been apprised of the nature of Mr Ahern's legal liabilities, but subsequently became aware that they related to his matrimonial proceedings. Mr McKenna said that this was the first occasion that he, Mr Richardson and Mr Brennan had discussed Mr Ahern's personal affairs.

4.31 On Day 797 the following exchange took place between Tribunal Counsel and Mr McKenna in the context of Mr McKenna's knowledge of Mr Ahern's personal circumstances in 1993:

⁵ Mr Collins' association with Mr Ahern had been generally in the context of his association with Mr Richardson whom he knew for over 30 years.

'Q. But my question was probably more general than that and was asking you when it was that you and Mr. Richardson ever discussed the personal affairs of Mr. Ahern?

A. That would have been the first time.

Q. Is this the first occasion?

A. I would have been aware that you know things weren't great for him. Everybody in the country was who had an interest in politics.

Q. Yes. What things did you think were not great for Mr. Ahern in 1993, that you believed at the time.

A. He was sleeping above Drumcondra, he was sleeping in friends houses. So you can only assume things are not great.

Q. Yes. You knew that he was for example at that time and had been since 1991, a Minister for of Government he was the Minister for Finance.

A. He was Bertie.

Q. Yeah. He had been a government minister since 1987, even before you came back to Ireland, isn't that right?

A. He was Bertie to us.

Q. Sorry.

A. He was Bertie to me.

Q. I appreciate that is what he was. But those indicators would not indicate that he was somebody who was deserving of either your financial support or any other form of benefit or remuneration from you. He's a very successful man?

A. Well he was a politician and had been most of his life so you would assume he hadn't. You know, he had what he had. Like, I wasn't one to. I wasn't going to sit down and ask him how much have you got in the bank, what's the story.

Q. I'm not suggesting that you did but I'm indicating to you that there was nothing from his public demeanour or his public office which would suggest that he was in need of any financial assistance, would you not agree with that?

A. There was no reason for me to make a decision either way. I wasn't aware of anything.'

4.32 Mr McKenna was asked to make a contribution of IR£2,500 in cash, to which he agreed. He was unsure as to whether it had been explained to him why his contribution to Mr Ahern's legal bills was being sought in cash, other than stating to the Tribunal: 'One can only assume that Bertie is an extremely proud individual and if you give him cheques he's going to rip them up.' Mr McKenna told the Tribunal that at the conclusion of this meeting, Mr Richardson had asked if he might be prepared to make a contribution of IR£5,000 'to speed things along', which he agreed to do in two instalments. He duly provided IR£2,500 in cash to Mr Brennan in the Berkeley Court 'maybe a week before Christmas.' The second IR£2,500 was never sought from him, and it was his understanding, after inquiry was made of Mr Richardson, that Mr Richardson had successfully raised the required amount and did not therefore need the second installment.

4.33 Messrs Chawke, Nugent, Collins and McKenna all stated that their individual contributions of IR£2,500 were from cash resources available to each of them at the time. Consequently none of the four had, they said, needed to access any bank account for the funds. The four contributors told the Tribunal that having provided the funds, Mr Ahern thanked them for their contributions and indicated to each of them his intention to repay them. All four confirmed that at the time the fund was collected for Mr Ahern, their respective contributions were intended by each of them as a gift, but that Mr Ahern had insisted on treating the fund as a loan, to be repaid.

4.34 From their respective testimonies it appeared to the Tribunal that none of the four appeared to be aware of the fact that Mr Ahern had, or intended to obtain, a bank loan to cover his legal obligations arising from his matrimonial proceedings, and in the course of their evidence Messrs Chawke, Nugent and McKenna acknowledged that Mr Ahern did not apprise them of this fact. Similarly, Mr Collins' evidence did not suggest knowledge on his part of the fact that Mr Ahern had obtained or was about to obtain a bank loan.

4.35 In the course of an RTE television interview in September 2006 Mr Ahern had suggested that 'a good few' of the contributors to the IR£22,500 fund knew of the fact that he had taken out a bank loan. In the course of that interview Mr Ahern stated:

'They knew. A good few of them knew that I had taken out a loan with AIB in O'Connell Street to settle my legal bills, I had taken out the loan so I actually used the loan to settle the bills. I didn't want to take the money. I took it on the agreement it was Gerry Brennan and Des Richardson. I didn't deal with them all. They gave me 22,500 and I said that I would take this as a debt of honour, that I would repay it in full, that I would pay interest on it. I know the tax law. I'm an accountant And that I would pay that back in full and at another date when I could.'

4.36 In the course of his private interview with the Tribunal on 5 April 2007, and when responding to an inquiry as to whether he would have informed the donors of the IR£22,500 that, although accepting the money on the basis of their understanding that he required financial assistance to discharge legal bills, as a loan to be repaid, he had nevertheless made the decision to apply the money otherwise (i.e. save it towards the purchase of a house) rather than for the purpose for which it was given, Mr Ahern responded:

'I think I would have alerted them, I think I would have alerted - I mean six of the eight people that I would see every second day. So they were well aware I had lots of conversations. They were very close personal friends and political friends. I went back to say that I had taken out a loan. In fairness, I can't remember the precise effort. I was conscious that I had taken out the loan after they had given the money. I did make them aware of that. And I did say that I would hold money and that I would, you know, that I would use the money for my own requirements later on. Because these were when I said earlier on that these were the people that would have been concerned. I mean, most of the people on these were my own personal close political friends as well as my very good personal friends.'

4.37 Mr Chawke advised the Tribunal that the issue of repayment had been raised by Mr Ahern some weeks after he made his contribution, but he had told Mr Ahern that he did not want it back. Mr Chawke acknowledged that Mr Ahern did not seek to repay the money at any time prior to 2006.

4.38 Mr Nugent stated that Mr Ahern had thanked him, 'probably not long after the Christmas break', and he had thanked him on a number of occasions thereafter saying: 'I'll talk to you again and kind of let it roll over.' Questioned if his understanding was that Mr Ahern intended to repay the loan, Mr Nugent stated:

'From the very early stages I did have an understanding, where I got it from I'm not terribly certain. But I do have an understanding that it was being accepted by him on the basis that at some stage this would be repaid. I think I probably didn't even form an attitude towards that.'

4.39 Mr Collins advised the Tribunal that some time in 1994 he received a verbal acknowledgement of his contribution from Mr Richardson and Mr Ahern. Mr Ahern's acknowledgement had come via a telephone call some four to five months after the provision of the money. Mr Collins said that Mr Ahern thanked him and said that he could not accept it as a gift, and that it would be repaid. Between then and Mr Collins' departure for Australia (circa 2002) Mr Ahern mentioned repayment 'a couple of times.' Mr Collins was unable to recollect the dates or approximate dates Mr Ahern might have mentioned the matter, saying that the issue was never the focus of conversation. Mr Collins suggested that Mr Ahern's approach was '...look Mike, I want to sort that out I'm going to pay.' Mr Collins' response was to 'just shrug it off.' Mr Richardson also maintained that Mr Ahern had raised the issue of repayment with him on 'one or two occasions.'

4.40 Mr McKenna testified that subsequent to the provision of the money Mr Ahern had thanked him and had said that he had accepted it as a loan. Subsequently, the issue was raised again by Mr Ahern in the context of Mr Ahern saying words to the effect '...we must sort that thing out', to which Mr McKenna would have replied, '...look it's all right, grand, cool.' Questioned in the context of a statement furnished on his behalf on 24 July 2006 which included the suggestion that Mr Ahern had offered to repay him on two occasions, Mr McKenna acknowledged that other than having raised it in the manner described, Mr Ahern had never offered the money back to him.

THE CASH CONTRIBUTIONS OF MR FINTAN GUNNE, DECEASED AND MR PADDY O'REILLY, DECEASED

MRS MAUREEN GUNNE

4.41 Mrs Maureen Gunne, widow of Mr Fintan Gunne, told the Tribunal that she first heard of Mr Ahern's claim that he had been assisted financially by her late husband 'around the time' of Mr Ahern's appearance in an RTÉ interview in September 2006. She was aware of her husband having met Mr Ahern socially over the years. While she could not say whether they were personal friends, she believed that her husband considered himself a friend of Mr Ahern's. While Mr Ahern's claim of being assisted financially by her husband had come as a surprise to her, her husband had, during his lifetime, been generous to those in need. Mrs Gunne believed that her husband, by reason of the nature of one of his business enterprises, would have had ready access to cash in 1993. Mr Ahern had attended her husband's funeral in 1997 and had spoken with her. Subsequently, she said that she met Mr Ahern socially on one or two occasions. Mr Ahern had never alerted her to the fact that her husband had given him money, nor had he made any reference to her of his intention to repay such money.

MRS MARGARET GAFFNEY

4.42 Mrs Margaret Gaffney, a daughter of the late Mr Paddy Reilly, told the Tribunal that her father and Mr Ahern had a long standing friendship through politics. Mr Reilly had been a trustee of St. Luke's, and a constituency worker. Mr Ahern had attended Mrs Gaffney's wedding. She testified that, following Mr Ahern's television interview in September 2006, (in the course of which Mr Ahern referred to money having been given to him by her late father), her mother informed her, for the first time, that she had been aware in 1993/4 that her husband had provided Mr Ahern with IR£2,500 in respect of a personal matter. Mrs Gaffney herself had no knowledge of such a sum having been given and she herself first heard of it in September 2006. Mr Ahern had attended her late father's funeral in 1996, and had spoken to her on that occasion, but he had not made any reference to her then, or subsequently, to a payment to him from her late father. Mrs Gaffney commented that such a payment by her father to Mr Ahern was not something that she would likely have spoken about with her father, or over the intervening years with her mother. Mrs Gaffney expressed her belief that Mr Ahern, at the time of her father's funeral or shortly thereafter, 'would have spoken' to her mother about 'the loan.'

4.43 She also told the Tribunal that as of September 2006, her mother, having heard Mr Ahern, during the course of a television interview, avow his intention to repay the loan, had from then been expecting repayment. It duly arrived on 29 September 2006 when her mother received a cheque from Mr Ahern in the sum of €5,914.00⁶.

4.44 Mr Ahern's evidence was that he had advised Mr Reilly's widow of his intention to repay the contribution from her late husband. Mr Ahern stated: 'I had said it to Mrs Reilly that it was a payment that I would give back.'

THE NON-CASH COMPONENTS OF THE IR£22,500 LODGEMENT.

THE 'WILLDOVER' CHEQUE

4.45 One of two non-cash elements in the IR£22,500 lodged to Mr Ahern's account in December 1993 was a cheque for IR£2,500 payable to 'cash', dated 22 December 1993, and drawn on the account of Willdover Ltd at Bank of Ireland in Montrose, Dublin 4, and signed by Mr Richardson.

⁶ This issue is dealt with later in this Section.

4.46 Willdover Ltd was a company effectively owned and operated by Mr Richardson. He used this company to bill for services provided by him as chief fundraiser to the Fianna Fáil Party in 1993/1994 through invoices generated in the name of Willdover Ltd, and he used the company bank account in Bank of Ireland, Montrose, to receive payments made to him by Fianna Fail on foot of such invoices, as well as lodging other funds (including funds from Euro Workforce) to that account. Mr Richardson was not a director of Willdover Ltd, notwithstanding the contrary assertion made in a letter to the Tribunal from Mr Ahern's solicitor dated 6 June 2006.

4.47 The cheque for IR£2,500 made out to 'cash' as signed by Mr Richardson on 22 December 1993 was recorded in Willdover Ltd's payments analysis as a payment in respect of 'the Kilmain Function', which, the Tribunal was satisfied, referred to the O'Donovan Rossa dinner held annually in December, in the Royal Hospital, Kilmainham (Mr Ahern's constituency annual fundraising event).

4.48 The IR£2,500 cheque payment was recorded in the cheque journal as 'promotional outlay.'

4.49 Mr Richardson, in evidence, claimed that this cheque represented his personal contribution to Mr Ahern's fund. Mr Richardson was questioned by the Tribunal as to why, having asserted that he and Mr Brennan were at pains, in December 1993, to put together a cash fund for Mr Ahern in the belief that if the money were presented otherwise than in cash, Mr Ahern might decline to utilise it and/or tear up cheques, he, Mr Richardson had nevertheless made his contribution to Mr Ahern by way of cheque. Mr Richardson's response was that perhaps he had done so because of the 'inconvenience' of going to the bank to organise cash. Mr Richardson himself also had a personal account in Bank of Ireland, Montrose, but had not chosen to draw a cheque on this account or to use it to withdraw cash for provision to Mr Ahern.

4.50 An examination of bank and Revenue documentation relating to Willdover indicated that on 15 December 1993 Willdover Ltd's bank account, on which the IR£2,500 cheque of 22 December 1993 was drawn, was credited with the sum of IR£3,000 by way of a cheque from a company called Euro Workforce⁷ payable to Willdover. This fact was also confirmed by Mr Richardson in evidence.

4.51 On 20 December 1993, two days before the cheque for IR£2,500 was written, the Willdover account was overdrawn to the extent of IR£8,572.22.

4.52 On 22 December 1993, some seven days after the account was credited with the Euro Workforce cheque, IR£18,744 was lodged to the account from a cheque drawn on a Fianna Fáil bank account in the names of the then Taoiseach Mr Albert Reynolds and Mr Bertie Ahern.⁸ This Fianna Fáil payment was in respect of an invoice furnished by Mr Richardson to Fianna Fail for services provided by, and expenditure incurred by, Mr Richardson in his role as the party's chief fundraiser. The cheque was signed by Mr Ahern.

4.53 The lodgement of the Euro Workforce cheque for IR£3,000 together with the Fianna Fáil cheque for IR£18,744 to Willdoover Ltd's account, on 15 and 22 December 1993 respectively, moved the account from overdraft to a credit balance of approximately IR£10,000, and facilitated a number of cheques being drawn against the account. The two largest of these were a cheque for IR£5,000 (payable to 'D Richardson' and lodged to the personal bank account of Mr Richardson at Bank of Ireland, Montrose on 22 December 1993), and the cheque for IR£2,500 (made out to cash) which, it was said, represented Mr Richardson's contribution to the sum of IR£22,500, ultimately lodged to Mr Ahern's AIB Special Savings Account (SSA), on 30 December 1993.

THE DRAFT PAYABLE TO 'DES RICHARDSON'

4.54 The second of the two non-cash components of the IR£22,500 lodgement was a bank draft for IR£5,000 payable to Mr Richardson.

4.55 In their letter to the Tribunal dated 6 June 2006, Mr Ahern's solicitors stated that the IR£5,000 was 'provided by Mr Padraic O'Connor.' In his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Ahern explained that he received the IR£5,000 draft 'on the basis that it was a personal donation to me from Padraic O'Connor.'

4.56 Mr Richardson told the Tribunal that the bank draft for IR£5,000 represented the IR£5,000 donation made to Mr Ahern's fund from Mr Padraic O'Connor, who was at that time the managing director of the NCB Group (NCB Stockbrokers), and well known in the financial services sector in Ireland. Mr O'Connor had previously been a senior economist with the Central Bank in the early 1990s, and was in 1993 an occasional advisor to Mr Ahern as Minister for Finance in relation to economic and currency matters.

4.57 Mr Richardson claimed that he had solicited a contribution of IR£5,000 to Mr Ahern's fund from Mr O'Connor in December 1993.

⁸ The bank account was renamed the 'Bertie Ahern Fundraising Account' in January 1995.

4.58 Mr Richardson told the Tribunal that he approached Mr O'Connor on the same basis as the other contributors to the IR£22,500, namely on the basis of what he believed was a friendship between him and Mr Ahern. Mr Richardson said that at a meeting in the offices of NCB Stockbrokers, (NCB) he explained to Mr O'Connor that Mr Ahern had incurred a 'legal personal cost' and he invited him to contribute to a fund to assist Mr Ahern discharge this liability. Mr Richardson said that he requested IR£5,000 from Mr O'Connor and that this was one of two requests he made for IR£5,000, the other being to Mr McKenna. (As already indicated, Mr McKenna in fact contributed IR£2,500, although he claimed that he had been prepared to pay a second IR£2,500 if required). Mr Richardson said that at the time he sought the IR£5,000 personal contribution to Mr Ahern, he also requested a contribution from Mr O'Connor to the annual Kilmainham O'Donovan Rossa fundraising dinner (for Mr Ahern's constituency office).

4.59 On Day 790 Mr Richardson testified that while he was satisfied that the IR£5,000 draft, payable to himself and endorsed by him, and which had been provided to Mr Ahern, represented Mr O'Connor's contribution, he was unable to establish when he had been put in funds by Mr O'Connor. Mr Richardson claimed that he either had the funds from Mr O'Connor at the time of the purchase of the bank draft, or, alternatively, that he used his own funds to purchase the draft and had been recompensed later by Mr O'Connor.

MR PADRAIC O'CONNOR'S ACCOUNT OF MR RICHARDSON'S APPROACH TO HIM

4.60 Mr O'Connor acknowledged to the Tribunal that Mr Richardson called to see him in his office in, probably, December 1993, and requested a contribution for Mr Ahern. Mr O'Connor stated, however, that the request to him was for a contribution for Mr Ahern's constituency office and not a contribution to Mr Ahern personally. This was denied by Mr Richardson.

4.61 The essence of Mr O'Connor's evidence was that Mr Richardson had explained that as Mr Ahern had assumed the position within Fianna Fáil of National Treasurer, he was not in a position to engage in fundraising activity for his own constituency, hence the approach then being made by Mr Richardson to him on behalf of Mr Ahern. Mr O'Connor said that he was advised by Mr Richardson that the intention was to raise a sum of approximately IR£20,000–IR£25,000 the annual sum needed to fund St Luke's (Mr Ahern's constituency office).

4.62 Mr O'Connor in effect disputed the suggestion that his relationship with Mr Ahern in 1993 was such as might reasonably have allowed for the presumption, either on the part of Mr Richardson or Mr Ahern himself, that he and Mr Ahern were close personal friends. Mr O'Connor contended that at that time he and Mr Ahern had a friendly professional relationship, arising from Mr O'Connor's position as an occasional advisor to Mr Ahern, then Minister for Finance, on economic and currency issues. Mr O'Connor viewed the relationship within the context of professional contact. He and Mr Ahern did not socialise together, and Mr O'Connor told the Tribunal that in the eight years since leaving NCB, he had met Mr Ahern 'once or twice.'

4.63 Mr O'Connor stated that following Mr Richardson's visit he had consulted informally with colleagues within NCB about Mr Richardson's request for a contribution to Mr Ahern's constituency office. However, it was primarily his decision within NCB to make the contribution.

4.64 Evidence was given to the Tribunal by Mr Christopher McHugh, the then financial director of NCB, and Mr Graham O'Brien, the then head of accounts in NCB. Both recalled Mr O'Connor's approach to them when they were apprised of Mr Richardson's request for a contribution to Mr Ahern's constituency fund. Their understanding, as communicated to them by Mr O'Connor, was that the payment for Mr Ahern's constituency fund was to be made by NCB confidentially. Mr O'Connor testified that he had been anxious to ensure that the matter would be dealt with discreetly and in confidence.

4.65 Mr O'Connor was asked to explain the secrecy attached to NCB's payment to (as he understood) assist in the cost of running Mr Ahern's constituency office, in light of the fact that NCB, over a number of years, had made contributions to the annual O'Donovan Rossa dinner, and had done so with full accounting transparency. Mr O'Connor stated that the annual dinner event was viewed as a general fundraising event, while the contribution sought by Mr Richardson was viewed as a specific or targeted fundraising issue. Mr O'Connor deemed it 'wise' that this payment be treated 'in a discreet way.' Mr O'Connor explained himself as follows:

'The approach which was made in 1993 was as I said the first approach of its type that I'd ever experienced. It was specific. It was narrow in the sense that it was put to me that four or five organisations were being asked to fund a particular thing, being the annual cost of running the constituency office and I didn't think at that time I didn't know what the name of it was. St. Luke's was what I had in mind. And you know when we were making the decision to pay that we decided that it should be confidential. We thought it would be wise if we did it in a discreet way.'

Whether that got us then on the radar of the fundraisers in that Cumann, maybe it did.

Subsequently approximately or just under a year later we were approached to participate in the annual fundraising dinner for that constituency. This obviously I would certainly see as a much more, as a different type of approach. It was a very public event, it was, I don't know how many contributors would have been to that dinner, perhaps hundreds. So the distinction that I see looking back is the distinction between this which might have been more normal course of business in terms of fundraising, and the other than was, as I said, in the, first of all that it was or our first experience of it, and secondly that it was, it was, it seemed to target it, if I can put it like that, rather than a general fundraising exercise that might go on to this day for all I know.'

4.66 While Messrs O'Connor, McHugh and O'Brien, in their contact with the Tribunal prior to giving sworn testimony, each had a recollection of a request being made by Mr Richardson, none of the three, either in the course of correspondence with the Tribunal, or in their private interviews, was able to assist the Tribunal as to how precisely the payment by NCB of IR£5,000 (which payment all three agreed had been made by NCB) had been effected.

4.67 Prior to November 2006, discovery by NCB to the Tribunal had failed to yield any document or record of any payment made by NCB and/or Mr O'Connor to Mr Ahern and/or his constituency organisation.

4.68 On 14 November 2006, in the course of being privately interviewed by the Tribunal, Mr O'Brien was asked to identify any payment in NCB's records, within the relevant period, of IR£5,000 or IR£6,050 (being IR£5,000 plus VAT). Mr O'Brien was in a position to identify one such payment, but declined to provide the Tribunal with the identity of the payee until he had first obtained legal advice. The Tribunal then made a further order for discovery against NCB, and in consequence the detail relating to the said IR£6,050 was disclosed to the Tribunal.

4.69 Documents furnished to the Tribunal by NCB on 24 November 2006 on foot of the discovery order revealed that on 14 December 1993, Euro Workforce Ltd invoiced NCB for a sum of IR£5,000 plus VAT (a total of IR£6,050), allegedly in payment for a health and safety survey carried out by Euro Workforce on NCB's premises.

4.70 Subsequently, in the course of their sworn evidence to the Tribunal, Mr O'Connor, Mr McHugh and Mr O'Brien all acknowledged that the Euro Workforce Ltd invoice was the vehicle by which NCB had given effect to the request for a contribution to Mr Ahern's constituency office which had been made by Mr Richardson. All three acknowledged that no health and safety survey had been carried out by Euro Workforce Ltd on the NCB premises and all acknowledged that the invoice had been furnished on a false basis.

4.71 Mr Richardson claimed to know nothing about the 14 December 1993 invoice from Euro Workforce Ltd to NCB. He said he was unable to recall precisely what arrangements had been put in place in relation to the IR£5,000 contribution to Mr Ahern from Mr O'Connor/NCB in order to satisfy Mr O'Connor's requirement for confidentiality and discretion.

4.72 On 15 December 1993, on foot of a cheque requisition form prepared by Mr O'Brien of NCB, a cheque for IR£6,050 payable to Euro Workforce Ltd was signed by Mr McHugh and Mr O'Brien. The NCB cheque was drawn on an AIB account at Grafton Street in Dublin.

4.73 For reasons unknown, the NCB cheque for IR£6,050 dated 15 December 1993 was not presented to a bank for some three months. By the time it was eventually presented for payment through Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance⁹ in March 1994, it was rejected because of its poor physical condition. The Tribunal established that by 3 March 1994 this cheque had been returned by AIB to Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance marked 'mutilated.'

4.74 NCB's records indicated that on 16 March 1994, a second cheque requisition form was prepared which authorised payment of IR£6,050 to Euro Workforce Ltd, and on that date, a cheque for IR£6,050, again payable to Euro Workforce Ltd, was drawn.

4.75 On 21 March 1994 this second NCB cheque to Euro Workforce Ltd was duly lodged to the Euro Workforce's factoring account in Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance, and NCB's AIB account was duly debited with the sum of IR£6,050 on 23 March 1994, nearly three months after the lodgement of IR£22,500 had been made to Mr Ahern's bank account.

⁹ Euro Workforce Ltd held an account with Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance in 1993 and had an invoice discounting or factoring arrangement with it at that time. The details of this arrangement are set out below.

WORKFORCE LTD, EURO WORKFORCE LTD, ROEVIN LTD,
ROEVIN IRELAND LTD

4.76 In the early 1980s Mr Richardson, Mr Tim Collins and Mr Des Maguire were involved in a recruitment/employment business which was operated through an entity Workforce Ltd (Workforce). This company was incorporated in Ireland in March 1989 and both Mr Richardson and Mr Collins were registered as its directors. Promotional material, relating to 'Workforce' made available on discovery to the Tribunal indicated that by January 1992 Mr Richardson was its managing director, Mr Collins was its sales director and Mr Maguire was its recruitment director. Mr Richardson told the Tribunal that in 1988/1989, Workforce was acquired by an entity Roevin Ltd, (Roevin) and was subsequently acquired by Doctus Plc In February 1989 Doctus changed its name to Roevin Ireland Ltd (Roevin Ireland) with Mr Richardson (and two other named individuals) as its registered directors. Mr Richardson told the Tribunal that Doctus Plc went into receivership/liquidation in 1991/2 and, as a consequence, Roevin Ltd had decided to 'wash its hands' of the Irish side of its recruitment and employment agency business. At that time Roevin Ireland Ltd changed its name to Workforce Ltd. In August 1992 Mr Maguire and his wife incorporated the entity Euro Workforce Ltd (Euro Workforce) and were its registered shareholders and directors. This company operated a recruitment/employment business, and undertook health and safety surveys, including audits for customers. Mr Maguire told the Tribunal that Euro Workforce carried on the business, which had previously been carried on by Workforce, he having acquired that business from Mr Richardson in August 1992. Mr Maguire stated that although he operated the company as his own, in effect a one man business he continued to give Mr Richardson 30% of its gross profit as provided for in their buyout agreement.

4.77 Mr Maguire told the Tribunal that he did not know Mr O'Connor, and professed his unawareness of Euro Workforce Ltd having carried out a health and safety survey on NCB's premises at any time. Mr Maguire also claimed to have no knowledge of the Euro Workforce Ltd invoice dated 14 December 1993, which found its way to NCB.

4.78 Mr Maguire also explained that, while acknowledging the authenticity of the invoice document from Euro Workforce Ltd to NCB, he had been struck by the fact that the invoice stationery in question was, by December 1993, of old unused stock. He noted that the VAT number on the invoice was rubber stamped, and not part of the original print on the document. These original invoices were the subject of only one print run when the business was started in August 1992, when the company had not been allocated a VAT number. In due course the original invoices were replaced with computer-generated invoices which included the VAT number. Unused stock of the older type of invoice had remained stored in Euro Workforce Ltd's offices.

THE FACTORING ARRANGEMENT BETWEEN EURO WORKFORCE LTD AND BANK OF IRELAND COMMERCIAL FINANCE

4.79 In December 1993 Euro Workforce had an arrangement with Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance (agreed on 10 August 1992) whereby, subject to certain conditions, Euro Workforce, upon the generation of invoices in the course of its day-to-day business, would receive from Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance 75 per cent of the value of such invoices.

4.80 As acknowledged by Mr Maguire in evidence, this arrangement provided that once invoices were generated, Euro Workforce could realise an immediate financial benefit (75 per cent of the invoice value). To avail of bank funding on foot of this arrangement, Euro Workforce would provide to the bank its computerised sales ledger wherein details of the Euro Workforce's invoices to its customers were set out.

4.81 The agreement provided that when the invoice was eventually paid, the balance outstanding on the invoice (after discounting and charges) was paid by Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance Ltd to Euro Workforce Ltd.

4.82 The Euro Workforce Ltd invoice to NCB (invoice no 2789 for IR£6,050) dated 14 December 1993 was one of a number of such invoices submitted to Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance Ltd on that date, on foot of the factoring agreement. Documentation obtained by the Tribunal established that three invoices (including no 2789), to a total of IR£8,734.35, were provided to the bank. Based on the 14 December 1993 submission of invoices, Euro Workforce Ltd was entitled to receive a credit from the bank of 75 per cent of their combined face value. On 15 December 1993, Euro Workforce Ltd was paid IR£6,000 by Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance Ltd. Mr Maguire told the Tribunal that it was their normal practice to draw down bank payments in round figure sums. This sum of IR£6,000 was then lodged to Euro Workforce Ltd's bank account on 15 December 1993.

4.83 Mr Maguire maintained, while accepting that the Euro Workforce Ltd invoice to NCB had by 15 December 1993 yielded a financial benefit for Euro Workforce Ltd pursuant to its factoring arrangement with Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance, that he, Mr Maguire, had no recollection of any of the arrangements which had been put in place to effect this benefit for Euro Workforce.

4.84 On 15 December 1993 (the same day as Euro Workforce’s bank account was credited with IR£6,000 by Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance), a cheque for IR£3,000 drawn on the account of Euro Workforce Ltd payable to Willdover Ltd was credited to Willdover’s account. This cheque was debited from Euro Workforce Ltd’s current account on 17 December 1993. It was on this Willdover account (the beneficiary by 15 December 1993 of the Euro Workforce cheque for IR£3,000, and by 22 December 1993 of the IR£18,744 cheque from Fianna Fáil) that Mr Richardson wrote, on 22 December 1993, the Willdover cheque to ‘cash’ in the sum of IR£2,500, which was ultimately lodged to Mr Ahern’s Special Savings Account.

4.85 Mr Maguire, in evidence, was unable to recollect why IR£3,000 was paid to Willdover/Mr Richardson by Euro Workforce on 15 December 1993. He was uncertain as to whether there was a connection between the NCB invoice and the IR£3,000, but acknowledged that ‘there may well be.’ He agreed that the Euro Workforce cheque to Willdover appeared to have been funded by the IR£6,000 funds made available on foot of the factoring arrangement.

4.86 By 21 October 2005, the Tribunal had sight of the IR£5,000 bank draft payable to Mr Richardson and endorsed by him (and which formed a part of the IR£22,500 lodgement to Mr Ahern’s SSA). Explanation for the source of the draft had first been provided by Mr Ahern’s solicitors in June 2006, when Mr O’Connor and Mr Richardson respectively were first identified as the sources of the IR£5,000 draft and the IR£2,500 cheque to ‘cash.’

4.87 Mr Richardson’s statement provided to the Tribunal on 14 July 2006, contained, inter alia, the following explanation in response to the Tribunal’s query as to why the draft had been made payable to Mr Richardson, and not to Mr Ahern: ‘I understand it was the decision of NCB that the monies would not be paid directly to Mr Ahern from a confidentiality point of view. At this point NCB are checking their records to see if they can produce any details regarding the payment.’

4.88 In December 2006, in the course of a private interview with the Tribunal, Mr Richardson agreed that it was a possibility that a Willdover cheque to ‘D Richardson’ for IR£5,000, signed on 22 December 1993 (and lodged to Mr Richardson’s personal bank account on that date), was the source of the draft which was lodged to Mr Ahern’s account. In October 2007, Mr Richardson, through his solicitors, positively attributed this Willdover IR£5,000 cheque as the source of the draft. On Day 790, Mr Richardson accepted that the ‘D Richardson’ cheque for IR£5,000 which had been drawn on the Willdover account was not the source of the IR£5,000 draft.¹⁰

4.89 In the course of his evidence on Day 790 also, Mr Richardson, while accepting he had purchased the draft, claimed to have no personal recollection of its purchase or of the funds with which it had been purchased.

‘ROEVIN’

4.90 Subsequent to Mr Richardson’s evidence on Day 790, the Tribunal received from Bank of Ireland the requisition form which had been used to purchase the IR£5,000 draft. This form indicated that on 22 December 1993 an application to purchase the draft had been made by ‘Roevin.’

4.91 In the course of his evidence on Day 791, Mr Richardson acknowledged to the Tribunal for the first time that he had accessed funds held in an account in the name of Roevin Ireland Ltd at Bank of Ireland, Montrose, Co. Dublin, in order to purchase the draft that was subsequently provided to Mr Ahern.

4.92 Mr Richardson claimed ownership of the funds held in the Roevin Ireland Ltd account.

4.93 Documentation discovered to the Tribunal established that Roevin Ireland Ltd opened a bank account at Bank of Ireland Montrose on 9 October 1992 with a lodgement of IR£39,000. This lodgement was made some months subsequent (on Mr Richardson’s account of events), to Roevin Ireland Ltd having ceased its business activities in Ireland. Between 9 October 1992 and 14 September 1995 when the then balance of IR£36,337.99 was withdrawn from the account, the account showed only two transactions (other than interest accruals), namely a debit of IR£2,000 on 16 November 1992 (a month following the opening of the account) and a debit of IR£5,000 on 22 December 1993 (which was used to purchase the bank draft payable to Mr Richardson which was subsequently provided to Mr Ahern). There was no evidence of any lodgement of funds into the bank account of Roevin Ltd from Mr O’Connor/NCB, or, indeed, from any other source.

¹⁰ An examination of Mr Richardson’s personal account at Bank of Ireland Montrose established that there was no movement on that account which facilitated the purchase of the draft that ended up in Mr Ahern’s account.

4.94 Although claiming to have been entitled to access the funds in Roevin Ireland Ltd's bank account, Mr Richardson was unable to provide any explanation to the Tribunal as to the source of the initial lodgement into that account of IR£39,000 or the subsequent destination of the closing balance in that account amounting to IR£36,337.99 which was withdrawn in its entirety on 14 September 1995. Mr Richardson's only explanation was that he was entitled to the proceeds of the account because he, Mr Richardson, was owed money by Roevin Ireland Ltd.

MR AHERN'S DEALINGS WITH AIB IN DECEMBER 1993

4.95 Some days prior to lodging the IR£22,500 on 30 December 1993, Mr Ahern took a loan from AIB of a sum close to IR£20,000, largely for the purposes of discharging legal costs owed by him, as part of the settlement of their matrimonial proceedings.

4.96 Bank records, in particular AIB's computerised suspense account and its 'All Items Report' for 23 December 1993,¹¹ suggest that a loan of IR£19,115.97 was drawn down by Mr Ahern on that date, by way of provision by the bank of two bank drafts for IR£12,813.61 and IR£5,000 respectively, and by the bank putting in place a credit transfer of IR£1,302.36 into a joint account in the names of Mr Ahern and his wife, thus closing that account. The Tribunal was satisfied on the basis of the available evidence that these three sums, as advanced to Mr Ahern, were utilised by him to satisfy legal fees and other commitments arising from his matrimonial proceedings.

4.97 Mr Ahern's loan account within AIB, at 37/38 Upper O'Connell Street, Dublin, appeared to have been opened on 24 December 1993. The withdrawal docket, duly signed by Mr Ahern and bearing the date 24 December 1993, appeared to be the only document extant in December 1993 within AIB which showed the sum of IR£19,115.97 being advanced to Mr Ahern.

4.98 When questioned by Tribunal Counsel as to the circumstances in which Mr Ahern was advanced this sum in December 1993, Mr Philip Murphy, Assistant Manager in AIB, O'Connell Street, in a private interview with the Tribunal stated that he believed that Mr Ahern had completed a loan application form in December 1993. In his written statement to the Tribunal on 15 November 2007, Mr Murphy said he was unable to recall a formal application form having been completed. (He believed that he made 'some kind of a note.')

Mr Murphy subsequently stated in evidence that it was his belief that no loan application form had been required of or completed by Mr Ahern at that time, although it was his belief that he would have made some ‘notes’ in December 1993 pertaining to the loan. Later in his evidence (on Day 788) Mr Murphy stated that he was nearly sure that no application form had been completed.

4.99 No documentary evidence was furnished to the Tribunal of any loan application having been completed by Mr Ahern at this time. Neither was there any trace of the ‘notes’ Mr Murphy believed he had made.

4.100 Although Mr Ahern acknowledged that the purpose and motivation of the provision of IR£22,500 to him from close personal friends was to assist him in discharging legal costs and expenses arising from his matrimonial proceedings, Mr Ahern did not use the IR£22,500 for this purpose. Nor did he discharge his loan liability with the bank from these funds by way of lump sum repayment, and in so doing save on bank interest.

4.101 Mr Ahern said that he arranged by telephone to meet with Mr Murphy on 23 December 1993 in order to request the bank loan duly obtained by him. His meeting with Mr Murphy for this purpose was in effect the commencement of Mr Ahern’s personal re-engagement with the banking process after some seven years.

4.102 Both Mr Ahern and Mr Murphy told the Tribunal of Mr Ahern’s arrival at the bank branch, and of Mr Ahern having been introduced to the then branch manager, Mr Michael Burns. Thereafter, Mr Ahern and Mr Murphy had concentrated on the purpose of Mr Ahern’s visit, namely the arrangement of the loan and its drawdown.

4.103 Both Mr Ahern and Mr Murphy agreed that the loan was processed on 23 December 1993, although the actual loan account and the three disbursements were dated 23 and 24 December 1993.

4.104 Mr Ahern and Mr Murphy rejected any suggestion that the provision of the loan of IR£19,115.97 was in any way conditional upon the subsequent lodgement some six days later of IR£22,500 into Mr Ahern’s Special Savings Account.

4.105 A consequence of the AIB loan drawdown on 24 December 1993, having regard to Mr Ahern’s insistence that he had accepted the IR£22,500 offered to him as a loan to be repaid in the future, was that Mr Ahern (on his account of events) had in December 1993, over a period of days, assumed a liability for in excess of IR£41,000 (being the approximate total of the goodwill loan and the bank borrowing), for the purpose of discharging debts amounting to less than half this amount.

4.106 No repayments were made on the AIB loan by Mr Ahern until June 1995. The bank records furnished to the Tribunal indicated that Mr Ahern completed an application form in respect of the AIB December 1993 loan on 22 May 1995. On that day the balance standing due on foot of the loan was IR£21,896.30 (including interest of IR£2,780.03). In May 1995 arrangements were put in place for the repayment of the loan (with interest) to AIB by instalments spread over a number of months.

THE LODGING OF THE IR£22,500 TO MR AHERN'S SPECIAL SAVINGS ACCOUNT

4.107 The AIB O'Connell Street branch's 'All Items Report' (an internal bank report detailing every transaction on a particular day), and the lodgement docket indicated that the IR£22,500 lodgement was processed in the bank on 30 December 1993, and these documents recorded the lodgement as comprising IR£15,000 cash and a non-cash element of IR£7,500.

4.108 Mr Ahern and Mr Murphy both claimed in their evidence to the Tribunal that the Special Savings Account had been opened on 30 December 1993, and that on that date Mr Ahern had personally delivered the IR£22,500 to AIB. Mr Murphy told the Tribunal that he had been telephoned by Mr Ahern in advance of Mr Ahern's arrival at the branch. Mr Murphy said that Mr Ahern had advised him that he wished 'to lodge a couple of bob.'

4.109 All the initially provided AIB documentation relating to the lodgement of IR£22,500 to the Special Savings Account indicated that the opening date of the account was 30 December 1993.

4.110 However, the Tribunal noted, from the statutory Revenue declaration form subsequently produced to the Tribunal by AIB, that this Revenue form (a necessary pre-requisite to the opening of a Special Savings Account) was signed by Mr Ahern on a date stated to be 23 December 1993. It also appeared to the Tribunal that the portion of the date reading '23rd' over-wrote another date. A forensic examination of the item indicated that the earlier date was the '14th', suggesting that the document was initially dated 14 December 1993. When presented with the Revenue form, both Mr Ahern and Mr Murphy, in the absence of any specific recollection of having done so, agreed in evidence that the likely date on which the document was signed by Mr Ahern was 23 December 1993. Neither believed that the document had been signed on 14 December 1993 or on any date prior to 23 December 1993.

4.111 Mr Ahern denied to the Tribunal that the IR£22,500 recorded in the bank documentation as having been lodged to his Special Savings Account on 30 December 1993 had been brought by him to the branch on 23 December 1993, or that such sum had been brought to the branch on 14 December 1993.

4.112 Mr Ahern stated that he must have signed the Revenue declaration form on 23 December 1993 in contemplation of lodging some of his claimed accumulated savings of approximately IR£54,000¹². Mr Ahern maintained that he was unaware, prior to 27 December 1993, that he was to be presented with, IR£22,500 (being the sum lodged to his account on 30 December 1993) or indeed any other sum, and thus denied any suggestion that he signed the Revenue declaration form on 23 December 1993 in anticipation of receiving or lodging the IR£22,500.

4.113 Mr Ahern maintained that ultimately, on 25 April 1994, he lodged IR£30,000¹³ from his claimed accumulated savings to two accounts in his name, and on 8 August 1994 he lodged IR£20,000¹⁴ from these accumulated savings into the names of his two then minor daughters. It was his evidence that, on receiving the IR£22,500 from his friends, via Mr Brennan, on 27 December 1993, he elected to lodge that sum, rather than any of his accumulated savings, to his newly opened Special Savings Account.

4.114 Mr Ahern acknowledged that Mr Brennan was aware in December 1993 of Mr Ahern's obligation to discharge debts amounting to IR£19,115.97 following the conclusion of his matrimonial proceedings, and was probably aware as of 23 or 24 December 1993 of Mr Ahern's intention to borrow money from AIB to fund this expenditure, and of the fact that he had subsequently raised a loan from AIB for this purpose.

MR AHERN'S CLAIMED REPAYMENT OF THE FIRST 'GOODWILL LOAN'

4.115 On the 29 September 2006 Mr Ahern wrote to the claimed providers of the first goodwill loan, including the representatives of the late Mr Gunne and the late Mr Reilly. Enclosed with each individual letter was Mr Ahern's personal cheque. Mr Ahern furnished cheques for €5,914.00 each (based on individual capital sums of IR£2,500 with interest) to Mr Richardson, Mr Chawke, Mr Nugent, Mr Collins, Mr McKenna and to the relatives of the late Mr Gunne and the late Mr Reilly. His cheque to Mr O'Connor was for €11,829.00 (based on a capital sum of IR£5,000, with interest.)

¹² See Section II.

¹³ See Section II.

¹⁴ See Section II.

Mr Ahern's letters were all similar in nature. The letter to Mr Chawke was in the following terms:

Dear Charlie,

I enclose a cheque in the amount of €5,914.00 euro in full and final settlement of the outstanding loan you very kindly extended me all those years ago.

I would like to thank you for your very kind support and I apologise for the delay in settling this long outstanding matter.

*Yours sincerely,
Bertie.*

4.116 By October 2006 the cheques sent to Messrs Richardson, Chawke, Nugent and McKenna had been forwarded to CARI¹⁵ (a charitable organisation associated with Mrs Miriam Ahern).

4.117 While Mrs Maureen Gunne retained her cheque from Mr Ahern uncashed (stating in the course of her evidence that she did so for sentimental reasons) she sent a cheque for an equivalent sum to a charity associated with the Mater Hospital, with which her late husband had close connections.

4.118 Mr Michael Collins retained his cheque uncashed.

4.119 The cheque furnished to Mrs Reilly, widow of the late Mr Paddy Reilly, was cashed on 2 November 2006.

4.120 Mr Padraic O'Connor, on receipt of the cheque from Mr Ahern, wrote to him on 13 October 2006 as follows:

'Dear Taoiseach,

Thank you for your letter of 29th September 2006 enclosing a cheque for €11,829. The payment to which I think this refers was made on the proposal of Mr. Des Richardson and I believe was paid to or through him. I am writing to him separately about it.

Best personal regards.

Yours sincerely,

Padraic O'Connor.'

¹⁵ According to some witnesses this was at the suggestion of Mr Desmond Carew. See Section III.

4.121 In his letter of the same date to Mr Richardson, Mr O'Connor stated as follows:

Dear Des,

I have received a letter from the Taoiseach dated 29th September, attaching a cheque payable to me for €11,829. As the Taoiseach says in his letter, this all took place a very long time ago. As I said to you when we spoke some time ago, the payment to which I believe the Taoiseach's letter and cheque relate was made by NCB rather than by me personally.

I am writing to you because NCB's payment resulted from a discussion between us and my understanding is that it was paid through yourself. I do not want to presume as to how you dealt with it. I am therefore writing a short note to the Taoiseach acknowledging his letter and cheque and saying that I am writing to you about it. Unless you or the Taoiseach asks me to deal with the cheque differently, I will simply hold it uncashed.

Best regards

Yours sincerely,

Padraic O'Connor.

4.122 As of 28 November 2007 the cheque furnished by Mr Ahern to Mr O'Connor remained uncashed, and in the custody of Mr O'Connor's solicitors.

4.123 A pre-typed acknowledgement (forwarded by and/or on behalf of Mr Ahern) dated 14 December 2006 was duly signed and returned to Mr Ahern/St. Luke's by Messrs Richardson, Chawke, Nugent, and McKenna, with Mr Gunne Junior signing on behalf of the Gunne family. Mrs Maureen Gunne forwarded her personal acknowledgement in October 2006, and Mrs Margaret Gaffney sent a handwritten acknowledgement on the 29 September 2006.

MR NOEL CORCORAN'S EVIDENCE

4.124 Mr Noel Corcoran, a tax consultant retained by Mr Ahern, gave evidence to the Tribunal relating to advice he provided to Mr Ahern arising from Mr Ahern's claimed receipt of two goodwill loans (including the claimed loan of IR£22,500). This evidence is considered in Section III.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO A GIFT OR LOAN TO MR AHERN OF IR£22,500 AND ITS LODGEMENT.

4.125 The Tribunal did not accept that in December 1993, there was a collection, in the manner described, organised by Mr Richardson and/or Mr Brennan from friends of Mr Ahern or that IR£22,500 was provided to Mr Ahern, in the manner described, on 27 December 1993. Equally, the Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Ahern did not receive or accept any such sum, either as a gift, or as a loan, on that date.

4.126 The Tribunal rejected the evidence of Mr Ahern and Mr Richardson in relation to this matter.

4.127 The Tribunal did not accept as true the evidence of Messrs Chawke, Collins, McKenna and Nugent, that they had been requested by Mr Richardson and/or Mr Brennan to contribute to a collection for Mr Ahern or that they contributed money to Mr Ahern as claimed by them.

4.128 It therefore follows from the above that the Tribunal rejected the evidence of Messrs Richardson, Chawke, Collins, Nugent and McKenna that between 1993 and 2006 Mr Ahern had acknowledged an intention or desire on his part to repay money to them. Likewise, it rejected Mr Ahern's evidence that he had, on occasion, acknowledged or indicated his intention or desire to repay any such monies within this period.

4.129 The evidence of Mrs Gunne, the widow of Mr Fintan Gunne (who Mr Richardson and Mr Ahern claimed was a contributor to the IR£22,500 fund), did not assist in establishing if, in fact, her late husband had indeed been requested to contribute a sum of money to Mr Ahern in 1993. Mrs Gunne told the Tribunal that following the death of her late husband in 1997, she had met with Mr Ahern when he attended his funeral. There was no reference ever made by Mr Ahern to Mrs Gunne about any payment by her late husband to Mr Ahern or to an obligation or intention on his part to repay IR£2,500 to Mr Gunne's family, prior to 2006.

4.130 The evidence of Mrs Gaffney, daughter of the late Mr Paddy Reilly, was similarly of little probative value to the Tribunal. Mrs Gaffney claimed that she had been apprised by her mother, following Mr Ahern's television appearance in September 2006, that her late father had provided IR£2,500 to Mr Ahern in relation to a personal matter in 1993 or 1994. Mrs Gaffney told the Tribunal that Mr Ahern repaid the said IR£2,500 together with interest. The Tribunal was not satisfied, however to accept this as proof that the late Mr Reilly had indeed made any such contribution to Mr Ahern in 1993.

4.131 The Tribunal believed that it was not credible that Mr Ahern would not have regularised his affairs by repaying or attempting to repay, in the period between December 1993 and September 2006, the claimed contributors to the first goodwill loan, having regard to the number of years that had elapsed since his claimed receipt of the money, and the fact that having regard to his income in this period, he could have done so with relative ease.

4.132 The Tribunal also found it to be incredible that, had Mr Ahern, as claimed by him, accepted the individual gifts supposedly proffered by the late Mr Gunne and the late Mr Reilly in 1993, on the basis that he would in due course repay them, that he did not repay the money (or attempt to do so) to the estates or families of these individuals prior to 2006.

4.133 Despite the claimed assertions of Mr Ahern, and those of Messrs Richardson, Chawke, Nugent, Collins and McKenna, that the issue of repayment was raised on occasions by Mr Ahern, it appeared equally incredible to the Tribunal that notwithstanding the claimed reluctance on the part of the aforementioned donors to accept repayment, that Mr Ahern would not have sought to regularise his affairs by furnishing cheques to these individuals prior to 2006, even if he anticipated their rejection by them of his actions in this regard.

4.134 Insofar as Mr Ahern (some 12 years after the advancement of IR£22,500) signed cheques payable to the individuals totalling €53,227 (or in the case of the two deceased persons, their immediate family members) who were said to have contributed funds to him in December 1993, the Tribunal was satisfied that such payments were not made on foot of any legal or moral requirement on Mr Ahern to make such payments.

4.135 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Ahern was prompted to make or tender such payments in 2006, and in consequence of, publicity relating to the receipt of money by him from third parties. This publicity arose following the unauthorised disclosure of the content of a letter sent by the Tribunal to Mr David McKenna in the course of the Tribunal's private inquiry into the source of the lodgement of IR£22,500 to Mr Ahern's Special Savings Account on 30 December 1993.

4.136 Even if the Tribunal were minded (which it was not) to accept what Mr Ahern and Mr Richardson said in this regard, it defied credibility that Mr Brennan who, on Mr Richardson's account of events, was engaged in a collection of funds for Mr Ahern, would not have alerted Mr Ahern at the earliest opportunity to the fact that a collection had taken place or was underway, particularly in circumstances in which Mr Brennan (on Mr Ahern's account of events) had alerted him to the fact that he had certain financial commitments, including legal bills, to be met arising from the conclusion of his matrimonial proceedings.

4.137 The Tribunal found it completely implausible, on Mr Ahern's account of events, that Mr Brennan would not have advised Mr Ahern to desist from entering into a loan arrangement with AIB for the purpose of raising funds sufficient to meet the aforesaid financial commitments in circumstances where he knew that a collection of money had been completed or was underway, for that same purpose.

4.138 The Tribunal was satisfied that by mid-December 1993, the probable sequence of events, vis-à-vis Mr Ahern's requirement for funds, was as follows:

4.139 In December 1993 Mr Ahern was aware of the need to make provision for the discharge of legal bills and other obligations which arose on foot of his then concluded matrimonial proceedings and on that basis contacted, probably, Mr Murphy of AIB. While Mr Ahern and Mr Murphy's recollection did not extend to any pre-23 December 1993 contact, the probable recording of a date 14 December 1993 on the SSA Revenue declaration form indicated that Mr Ahern may have had contact with AIB on 14 December 1993 in connection with the opening of the SSA account.

4.140 The Tribunal was also satisfied that prior to either 14 or 23 December 1993, Mr Ahern had indicated his desire to obtain a loan to assist him in the discharge of the legal bills and other obligations. The Tribunal was further satisfied that Mr Ahern's desire in this regard was acceded to by AIB prior to or, by the latest, on 23 December 1993.

4.141 By 23 December 1993 AIB had provided two bank drafts to Mr Ahern in respect of his obligations and had put in place a credit transfer of funds to an account in the name of Mrs Ahern. By 23 December 1993 also (if not by 14 December) AIB had Mr Ahern's signed declaration, a necessary pre-requisite for any customer to have completed, prior to the opening of an SSA.

4.142 The Tribunal was satisfied, as a matter of strong probability, that by 23 December 1993 (if not by 14 December 1993) Mr Ahern had within his contemplation the lodgement of funds into an SSA account. These funds did not (for reasons the Tribunal has set out in Section II hereof) constitute cash savings accumulated by Mr Ahern over a period of years.

4.143 The Tribunal rejected Mr Ahern's assertion that when he signed the Revenue declaration form (which he himself accepted he signed at the latest on 23 December) he had within his contemplation the lodgement of cash savings. The Tribunal has found (as set out in Section II of this Part) that Mr Ahern did not accumulate savings of approximately IR£54,000.

4.144 From the evidence given by Mr Ahern (and Mr Richardson) as to the timing of the provision of the IR£22,500 to Mr Ahern, Mr Ahern could not have been contemplating receiving such funds from Mr Brennan. Indeed, Mr Ahern had (on his account of events) previously rejected the suggestion of a fundraising event to assist him in the discharge of his legal bills. Thus, the Tribunal concluded that it was most probably the case that Mr Ahern had in his possession or expected to have in his possession by 23 December 1993 funds for his SSA from a source unconnected to the events of 27 December 1993, as described by Mr Ahern.

THE ISSUE OF MR PADRAIC O'CONNOR'S INVOLVEMENT

4.145 The Tribunal accepted Mr O'Connor's contention that he and Mr Ahern were not close personal friends, and that such friendship as did exist between them in 1993 was based on an occasional, albeit close, working or professional relationship in the course of which Mr Ahern in his capacity as Minister for Finance accepted an offer of professional advice from Mr O'Connor on economic and currency issues.

4.146 The Tribunal had no doubt but that the kind of personal friendship which existed between Mr Ahern and Messrs Chawke, Richardson, McKenna, Reilly, Collins, Gunne and Nugent did not, and never did, exist between Mr Ahern and Mr O'Connor. Furthermore the Tribunal believed it most likely that this fact was well known to Mr Richardson in 1993 at the time he approached Mr O'Connor.

4.147 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Ahern was not, in 1993, under an illusion that Mr O'Connor was sufficiently personally friendly with him as to have made it likely that Mr O'Connor knowingly contributed a substantial sum of money (a sum which was in fact twice the size of the other alleged individual payments) to him for purely personal (in contrast to political) purposes.

4.148 The Tribunal was satisfied from Mr O'Connor's evidence that Mr Ahern never acknowledged to Mr O'Connor, either formally or informally, receipt of the contribution of IR£5,000 which he claimed had been made to him by Mr O'Connor, nor did he at any time, prior to 2006, suggest or offer repayment of the money to Mr O'Connor.

4.149 The fact that the IR£5,000 contribution supposedly made by Mr O'Connor was never acknowledged by Mr Ahern, formally or informally, suggested strongly, in the Tribunal's view, that either Mr Ahern was unaware of any purported association between the IR£22,500 (or any portion of it) and Mr O'Connor, or, if he believed that such a link existed, or might have existed, Mr

Ahern was conscious that any such contribution made by Mr O'Connor/NCB in December 1993 was not intended to benefit him personally.

4.150 The Tribunal rejected Mr Richardson's evidence that, at the time of his approach to Mr O'Connor seeking a payment from him, he genuinely believed or understood that Mr O'Connor and Mr Ahern were personal friends. The Tribunal further accepted Mr O'Connor's evidence that he was never asked by Mr Richardson to make a personal contribution to Mr Ahern in order to assist him in discharging legal bills or other personal costs. On the contrary, the Tribunal was entirely satisfied that the cheque for IR£6,050 provided by NCB to Mr Richardson in December 1993 was NCB's response to the request that Mr Richardson had made to its managing director Mr O'Connor for a contribution to Mr Ahern's constituency fund.

4.151 As to what transpired at the meeting between Mr Richardson and Mr O'Connor during which a contribution was requested by Mr Richardson, the Tribunal was satisfied that, as a matter of probability, Mr O'Connor's version of events was truthful. The Tribunal therefore accepted Mr O'Connor's recollection that Mr Richardson sought what was in effect a political contribution towards the costs associated with Mr Ahern's constituency office in Drumcondra, and it rejected as untrue Mr Richardson's contention that he sought a personal contribution from Mr O'Connor for Mr Ahern.

4.152 The Tribunal was satisfied that in December 1993, Mr Richardson approached Mr O'Connor in his capacity as managing director of NCB Stockbrokers with a request that a donation of IR£5,000 be made by NCB to Mr Ahern's constituency fund.

4.153 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr O'Connor, as managing director of NCB, agreed to this request, probably on the basis of the belief (whether it emanated from Mr Richardson or was merely something suspected or understood by Mr O'Connor) that competitors of NCB were to be similarly approached on Mr Ahern's behalf.

4.154 The Tribunal was satisfied that, in compliance with Mr O'Connor's request for confidentiality and discretion, Mr Richardson identified and provided to Mr O'Connor/NCB a process whereby a payment of IR£5,000 could be made confidentially and discreetly. The Tribunal was satisfied that at some point in time, prior to the date of issue of the Euro Workforce invoice, Mr Richardson identified Euro Workforce to Mr O'Connor/NCB in this regard. That process involved the payment of the said sum (together with VAT) to Euro Workforce Ltd on foot of an invoice from Euro Workforce Ltd raised against NCB. The Tribunal rejected Mr Richardson's claim that he had no knowledge of the Euro Workforce invoice. On the contrary, the Tribunal believed it most likely that Mr Richardson was directly involved in the procurement, preparation and delivery of the Euro Workforce invoice to NCB.

MR RICHARDSON'S USE OF EURO WORKFORCE LTD

4.155 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Maguire facilitated Mr Richardson by the provision to him of an invoice which falsely recorded work carried out by Euro Workforce Ltd for NCB. The Tribunal rejected Mr Maguire's assertions that he was a stranger to the events surrounding the provision of the Euro Workforce invoice to NCB, or the ultimate receipt of NCB cheques by Euro Workforce.

4.156 From the documentation which the Tribunal had sight of, it appeared that the details set out in the Euro Workforce/NCB invoice (together with two other unrelated invoices) were processed as part of Euro Workforce's factoring arrangement with Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance, which immediately yielded for Euro Workforce approximately 75 per cent of the face value of the invoices. The Tribunal rejected any suggestion that Mr Maguire would have been unaware of the invoice. Furthermore, the Tribunal considered it not to have been coincidental that on the day (15 December 1993) when Euro Workforce's current account was credited with the IR£6,000 on foot of the factoring arrangement, the company wrote a cheque to Willdover for IR£3,000.

4.157 The Tribunal was satisfied that the NCB cheque was provided directly to Mr Richardson by NCB and remained with him for a period of time, and for whatever reason, was not passed on by Mr Richardson to Mr Maguire/Euro Workforce Ltd for lodgement. By the time that Mr Richardson decided to pass it on to Mr Maguire/Euro Workforce Ltd, the physical state of the cheque had deteriorated to such an extent that NCB's bank, AIB, refused to honour it.

4.158 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Richardson returned to NCB in March 1994 and requested a new cheque, and that on being presented with it, he duly passed on that cheque dated 16 March 1994 to Mr Maguire/Euro Workforce Ltd, who in turn duly provided it to Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance on foot of the factoring arrangement then in place.

4.159 The Tribunal was satisfied that there was in fact no link between the IR£5,000 bank draft provided to Mr Ahern on 27 December 1993 and the IR£6,050 (IR£5,000 plus VAT) sum first paid by cheque dated 15 December 1993 by NCB and rewritten on 16 March 1994 and ultimately lodged to Euro Workforce's bank account on 21 March 1994.

4.160 Although no part of the NCB payment made to Euro Workforce found its way into the lodgement made by Mr Ahern on 30 December 1993, the Tribunal established a tenuous connection between NCB and the said lodgement. That connection arose in the context of the Willdover cheque payable to ‘cash’ (Mr Richardson’s claimed personal contribution to Mr. Ahern). On 14 December 1993 NCB were invoiced by Euro Workforce Ltd. For IR£6,050. This process led to Euro Workforce furnishing that invoice (together with others) to Bank of Ireland Commercial Finance, thus yielding a payment from the bank of £6,000, on foot of the factoring arrangement. This event in turn led to the lodgement of IR£3,000 to Willdover’s bank account on 15 December 1993. To that point in time Willdover’s bank account had been overdrawn. The provision of this £3,000 cheque, credited to Willdover’s account on 15 December 1993, (coupled with the lodgement on 22 December 1993 of the Fianna Fail Payment of £18,744 to Mr Richardson) moved the Willdover bank account into credit, and facilitated the cheque in the sum of IR£2,500, made payable to cash, dated 22 December 1993, which was provided to Mr. Ahern by Mr Richardson.

4.161 It was noteworthy that the available contemporaneous documentary evidence relating to the Willdover cheque for IR£2,500 indicated, on its face, that it had been intended for the O’Donovan Rossa fundraising event.

4.162 The Tribunal noted that the Roevin Ireland Ltd bank account, from which Mr Richardson purchased the IR£5,000 draft payable to himself, and which ultimately ended up with Mr Ahern, was opened on 9 October 1992, a time when, on Mr Richardson’s account of events, Roevin Ireland Ltd had ceased operating business in Ireland. Mr Richardson claimed not to have any knowledge of IR£2,000 one month later (16 November 1992). The Tribunal rejected Mr Richardson’s evidence in this regard.

4.163 The Tribunal found it incredible that Mr Richardson, who, without difficulty appeared able to access the account of Roevin Ireland Ltd on 22 December 1993 and to use its funds to obtain a draft payable to himself, was unable to account to the Tribunal for the destination of the IR£36,337.99 which ultimately left the account, on its closure, in September 1995. Mr Richardson chose, for whatever reason, not to disclose this information to the Tribunal.

4.164 The Tribunal was satisfied that prior to it obtaining the requisition form for the draft from Bank of Ireland, Mr Richardson did not disclose to the Tribunal the true source of the funds which purchased the IR£5,000 draft.

4.165 Contrary to what was promoted by both Mr Ahern and Mr Richardson in the course of their evidence to the Tribunal, the Tribunal was satisfied that the IR£5,000 draft funded by Roevin and which ended up with Mr Ahern had no connection with Mr O'Connor. The Tribunal was also satisfied that there was no evidence that this draft was connected to money NCB paid via the Euro Workforce Ltd invoice on foot of Mr Richardson's request for funding for Mr Ahern's constituency expenses.

THE ACTUAL SOURCE OF THE IR£22,500 LODGED TO MR AHERN'S SPECIAL SAVINGS ACCOUNT

4.166 Because the Tribunal did not receive a true account as to the source of the IR£15,000 cash component of the IR£22,500 lodged to Mr Ahern's Special Savings Account on 30 December 1993, the actual source of these funds remains a mystery.

4.167 The utilisation by Mr Richardson of an account in the name of Roevin Ireland Ltd for the purposes of providing Mr Ahern with IR£5,000 equally remains a mystery.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 10 - SECTION II : THE LODGEMENTS TOTTALLING IR£30,000 MADE ON 25 APRIL 1994 AND THE LODGEMENT OF IR£20,000 MADE ON 8 AUGUST 1994.

5.01 Mr Ahern's banking records revealed lodgements to two bank accounts on 25 April 1994 totalling IR£30,000 in cash. IR£27,164.44 was lodged to Mr Ahern's Special Savings Account (SSA) bringing the balance in that account to IR£50,000,¹ which was the maximum permitted in this type of account. Additionally, a sum of IR£2,835.56 (being the balance of the IR£30,000), was lodged into Mr Ahern's current account.

5.02 Mr Ahern's banking records also revealed that on 8 August 1994, a total of IR£20,000 cash was lodged into a newly opened joint deposit account in the names of Mr Ahern's then minor daughters, Georgina Ahern and Cecelia Ahern in AIB, 37/38 O'Connell Street, Dublin.

5.03 Mr Ahern was asked by the Tribunal to explain the source of all three cash lodgements, a total of IR£50,000, lodged over approximately a four-month period. Mr Ahern attributed the source of these lodgements to savings accumulated by him over a number of years in cash.

MR AHERN'S ACCOUNT AS TO HOW, AND THE MANNER IN WHICH, HE ACCUMULATED CASH SAVINGS OF APPROXIMATELY IR£54,000.

5.04 In paragraphs 16 and 17 of Mr Peelo's report (as provided to the Tribunal in April 2006), it was stated that 'cash balances of in excess of IR£50,000 were accumulated' by Mr Ahern over a seven-year period, between 1987 and 1993.

5.05 In paragraphs 9 and 10 of the report, the following explanation was provided about the manner in which Mr Ahern had accumulated his savings over the seven-year period:

During these seven years, Mr Ahern did not maintain any personal (current or deposit) bank or building society accounts. His salary and expense cheques were cashed, either by himself or by an assistant, and the monies necessary for the maintenance of Mrs Ahern and their two children were either given directly to Mrs Ahern or lodged in cash to the joint account of Mr and Mrs Ahern in AIB, Finglas, Dublin 11.... Mortgage repayments (IPBS²) on the family home were made from this account.

¹ Mr Ahern had lodged IR£22,500 into that account on 30 December 1993. By 5 April 1993 interest of £335.56 had accrued in the account.

² Irish Permanent Building Society, later Permanent TSB.

Mr Ahern's personal expenditures during the circa seven years (i.e. '87-'93) were low, and cash balances, net of his maintenance payments, were gradually accumulated over this period...These cash balances were kept in a safe in Mr Ahern's constituency office in Drumcondra and in his Department office. (The foregoing can be confirmed by a number of colleagues and/or assistants of Mr Ahern).

5.06 In his evidence to the Tribunal Mr Ahern confirmed the content of Mr Peelo's report as accurate and based on information provided by him. Mr Ahern confirmed to the Tribunal that during the seven-year period, in which he was at all times a Government minister, his salary and expenses cheques (relating to his positions as a TD and a Government minister) were generally cashed for him by members of his staff. Mr Ahern said that no particular financial institution was used for this purpose, although on those occasions when he himself cashed cheques, he used banks in the vicinity of Drumcondra or Dorset Street.

5.07 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that by December 1993 he had accumulated cash savings of approximately IR£54,000, of which approximately IR£30,000 was kept in St Luke's in Drumcondra³ and approximately IR£20,000 in his ministerial office. Mr Ahern explained that the money kept in St Luke's was kept by him on a shelf in a safe in his office, while in his ministerial office, the money was kept in a banker's pouch or wallet in a safe.⁴ Mr Ahern said that he did not maintain any record of the gradual accumulation of the cash over the seven-year period.

5.08 Mr Ahern said that it was his usual practice over this period of time to pay his outgoings, including his maintenance payments for his wife and children, from his income, and to accumulate the surplus sums in his safes. He said that he 'gave no thought' to the fact that for the duration of this period he had foregone substantial deposit interest by not utilising a bank account.

5.09 In a letter to the Tribunal from Mr Ahern's solicitors dated 6 June 2006 (in response to a request from the Tribunal for information), the following was stated:

During the period March 1987 to November 1991, the cash balances [a reference to accumulated savings] were stored in a safe in Mr Ahern's constituency office in Drumcondra, Dublin 9 . . . From November 1991

³ Between 1982 and 1990 Mr Ahern operated his constituency office from rooms over Fagan's public house in 146 Drumcondra Road. From 1990 Mr Ahern's constituency office relocated to St Luke's in Drumcondra.

⁴ Mr Ahern also suggested in the course of correspondence from his Solicitors prior to his private interview with the Tribunal, that he occasionally kept some cash in a locked drawer in his ministerial office.

onwards, some of the monies were stored in a combination of a safe and a locked drawer in Mr Ahern's office as Minister for Finance.

5.10 In his private interview with the Tribunal on 5 April 2007, Mr Ahern confirmed that the portion of his fund kept in his ministerial office was kept in a safe, and no reference was made to any of it being kept in a drawer in his desk.

5.11 In his sworn evidence on Day 804, Mr Ahern referred to the proceeds of his cashed salary cheques (having been cashed by a member of his staff) being left for him in his absence on his desk 'or just stuck in the drawer.' This reference to a drawer was clearly a reference to a drawer in a desk in his constituency office in Drumcondra, and not to a drawer in his ministerial office or elsewhere.

5.12 Also on Day 804, Mr Ahern explained the practice he usually followed after having cashed his salary cheques, thus: 'I'd just take out the money for that [meaning his domestic/personal bills] and then just put the rest into my safe or into the drawer, that's what I did throughout the period.'

5.13 Again on Day 804, Mr Ahern appeared to confirm that his accumulated savings of up to IR£54,000 were kept in two safes, one in his constituency office, and the other in his ministerial office. Mr Ahern also confirmed in evidence that he alone had access to the safe in his constituency office,⁵ while he and members of his staff had access to the safe in his ministerial office.

THE EVIDENCE OF MR AHERN'S STAFF

5.14 Three members of Mr Ahern's staff who worked for Mr Ahern at various periods between 1987 and 1993 gave evidence to the Tribunal: Ms Sandra Cullagh, Ms Gráinne Carruth and Mr Brendan Ward.

5.15 Between 1983 and 1987, Ms Cullagh worked in Mr Ahern's constituency office in Drumcondra, and between 1987 and 1994 in his ministerial offices. She returned to work in St Luke's in 1994.

5.16 Ms Cullagh told the Tribunal that on occasion she cashed cheques for Mr Ahern at his request. She said she had access to the safe in Mr Ahern's constituency office in St Luke's but not to his ministerial safe. Ms Cullagh told the Tribunal that she recalled seeing cash sitting on the shelf in the safe in St Luke's, but took no notice of it and was not in a position to speculate whether it was a small or large amount of cash. Ms Cullagh explained that her access to the safe in St Luke's was only occasional and only for the purposes of placing a file in it for safe-keeping or to remove a file. It was on these occasions that she saw 'money on a shelf.'

5.17 Ms Carruth worked for Mr Ahern between 1987 and 1999. She was based in Mr Ahern's constituency office at St Luke's until 1995, and in Kildare House and then Government Buildings between 1995 and 1999. She was one of the persons to whom Mr Ahern had entrusted the encashment of his salary cheques. She told the Tribunal that salary cheques were cashed by her, and that some of the proceeds were lodged to the Irish Permanent Building Society account in the names of Georgina Ahern and Cecelia Ahern, (Mr Ahern's then minor daughters), the balance of the encashed cheques being returned to Mr Ahern personally, or being left in a drawer in his desk at St Luke's, Drumcondra.

5.18 Ms Carruth said she did not have access to the safe in St Luke's. Accordingly, she said she had no knowledge of the large sums of cash that were, as claimed by Mr Ahern, kept in the safe. She stated that in the eight years she worked in St Luke's, she 'never saw into the safe.' Nor had Ms Carruth been apprised by Mr Ahern that he was accumulating large cash sums in the safe.

5.19 Ms Carruth had no awareness of the Department of Finance safe or its contents.

5.20 Mr Brendan Ward worked as Mr Ahern's private secretary in the Department of Finance between 1991 and 1994 (and again as his private secretary after Mr Ahern was elected Taoiseach in 1997). Mr Ward told the Tribunal that he was aware that Mr Ahern kept an amount of cash in his department office safe, to which he, Mr Ward, had access in the course of his work, for the purposes of keeping files for safe-keeping and removing files when required. The safe's main purpose was to hold important Government papers, usually overnight.

5.21 Mr Ward told the Tribunal that he was aware of Mr Ahern's practice of cashing salary cheques, and had observed Mr Ahern's secretary, Ms Cullagh, collecting salary cheques from the department in order to cash them. He had learned from other officials in the Department of Finance that Mr Ahern did not operate a personal bank account, something which had surprised him. However in light of this knowledge he was not surprised to learn that Mr Ahern kept cash in his ministerial safe.

5.22 Questioned by the Tribunal as to his knowledge of the contents of the safe, Mr Ward recollected that in the period 1991 to 1994 it contained a camera belonging to Mr Ahern and a grey plastic banker's pouch, also the property of Mr Ahern. He recalled this pouch as always being in the safe. Mr Ward said he took care to ensure that when a lot of files were in the safe, the pouch was left to one side so as to ensure that it was not removed in error when files were being removed. Mr Ward told the Tribunal that he never looked into the pouch and never had reason to access it, but was aware that it contained money. Mr Ward said that notes were visible from the open portion of the pouch.

5.23 Mr Ward was questioned as to the appearance of the pouch. He described the pouch as not bulky, and that the notes measured approximately one to one and a half inches in thickness. He was unaware as to the currency or denominations of the notes, and he had always assumed that the pouch contained Mr Ahern's monthly salary.

5.24 In the course of a private interview with the Tribunal before giving his sworn evidence, Mr Ward described the money pouch in the following terms:

'I never saw anything that would've been a large amount of money. Now this is a guess, you know, but it could be maybe €400-€500, [sic] something like that. That is a guess on my part, but it would be something in that area like. I never saw huge wads of notes or anything like that, you know. As I say, I always felt that it was consistent with the salary, you know.'

5.25 In his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Ward opined that the pouch could have contained more than 'four or five hundred Euros or punts', although it remained his position that he never noticed large wads or stacks of notes.

5.26 Mr Ward told the Tribunal (both in private interview and in evidence) that in the period 1998 to 2002, he again worked as Mr Ahern's private secretary in the Taoiseach's office. During this period, he again noticed that Mr Ahern kept cash in the department safe, but this time in a money box in the safe. Mr Ward intimated that in this latter period, he had had a better view of the cash than in the earlier 1994 period because in this later period it was kept in a box, although he believed that the amount of cash in both periods was approximately the same. He stated:

'At all times I always presumed that what we were talking about was his salary money. I also thought that's what it was in the Department of Finance as well. I never had an occasion in Finance to actually see the money. I could only guess what was in it. And it wasn't something I gave an awful lot of thought to. In the Department of the Taoiseach I would actually have seen the denominations.'

5.27 When asked if it was his understanding that the money seen by him was definitely salary money, Mr Ward responded: 'It was small amounts of money, yeah, definitely, and I just presumed that this was a continuation of the practice that he had in Finance.'

5.28 In the course of his private interview, Mr Ward was asked the incomplete question 'Was the quantity of cash any greater than . . .' to which he responded: 'No, it would be about the same.'

5.29 Mr Ward went on to express his belief that the amount seen by him was less than €1,000, and possibly 'a few hundred euros.'

5.30 In the course of his sworn evidence (on Day 803) Mr Ward was asked to clarify his understanding as to what was being asked of him. Mr Ward was asked by the Chairman of the Tribunal: 'And did you understand there⁶ that you were being asked was the quantity of cash⁷ any greater than in the earlier period?'⁸ to which Mr Ward responded 'yes.'

5.31 Mr Ward was then asked: 'Did you believe then you were talking about the same amount of cash approximately as in the earlier 1994 period?' He replied: 'I did yes. At all times I always presumed that what we were talking about was his salary money. I also thought that's what it was in the Department of Finance as well.'

5.32 In the course of his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Ward was also questioned as to his knowledge of a locked drawer in Mr Ahern's desk in his ministerial office, following upon the reference to a locked drawer in Mr Ahern's solicitor's letter of 6 June 2006.

5.33 He told the Tribunal that while he was aware of drawers in Mr Ahern's desk, he did not know if they were locked but did not think they were. On the small number of occasions (he believed possibly on two occasions) when he accessed a drawer in the desk seeking an item on Mr Ahern's instructions, he found such drawer(s) unlocked. He did not notice cash in the drawer(s) accessed by him on those occasions.

⁶ A reference to the incomplete question at the private interview.

⁷ A reference to the cash seen by him post 1997.

⁸ A reference to the cash seen by him up to 1994.

5.34 Mr Ward apologised to the Tribunal for his having earlier given a somewhat different impression in relation to the drawers in Mr Ahern's desk. In the course of a private interview with the Tribunal on 7 July 2006, Mr Ward had stated that he had access to the drawers and there was no locked drawer. In the course of that interview Mr Ward was asked: 'And as regards the pedestal desk itself do you have any recollection of any section of that being locked off to you?' To this question, Mr Ward responded: 'No, no, I don't think he ever locked it. I don't think Albert Reynolds did either to be honest. There were a number of drawers but I don't think they were ever locked.' Mr Ward confirmed that the drawers were capable of being locked.

THE EFFECTING OF THE CASH LODGEMENT OF 25 APRIL 1994

5.35 Mr Philip Murphy, assistant manager in AIB's Upper O'Connell Street branch, told the Tribunal that in April 1994 he was telephoned and requested to attend St Luke's in Drumcondra to meet Mr Ahern to discuss Mr Ahern's plan to open an account in AIB for his then minor daughters Georgina and Cecelia Ahern. Mr Murphy duly attended at St Luke's and was 'nearly sure' that he had brought with him the necessary documentation to enable an account to be opened in the names of Mr Ahern's daughters. Mr Murphy said that in the course of his discussions with Mr Ahern, Mr Ahern informed him that he had money in his St Luke's office safe. Mr Murphy had a 'vague recollection' of Mr Ahern stating that the IR£30,000 cash were savings, and of stating that he had other money in his safe at another location. Mr Murphy said that he advised Mr Ahern to move the money into the bank and suggested to him that his SSA in AIB might be topped up to the maximum permitted balance of IR£50,000 (On 30 December 1993 Mr Ahern had lodged IR£22,500 to his then recently opened SSA).⁹ It had been agreed in April 1994 that Mr Ahern follow this advice, and that any excess would be lodged to his AIB current account.

5.36 Mr Murphy testified that in the course of their meeting in April 1994 Mr Ahern handed him an envelope containing IR£30,000 in cash which he said Mr Ahern took from his safe directly behind his seat and that he, Mr Murphy, then counted the money in the presence of Mr Ahern. On his return to the bank he lodged IR£27,164.44 to Mr Ahern's SSA and thereby increased its balance to the maximum permitted IR£50,000, and lodged IR£2,835.56 (being the balance of the IR£30,000 cash sum) to Mr Ahern's current account at AIB.

5.37 Although Mr Murphy stated that the purpose of his visit to Mr Ahern on this occasion was about opening an account in the names of Mr Ahern's daughters, no such account was opened at that time.

⁹ See Section I.

5.38 Mr Murphy said that he had no recollection of Mr Ahern informing him when the two men met some four months earlier, in December 1993 that he had accumulated cash savings in the region of IR£50,000. At that time, Mr Ahern had borrowed approximately IR£19,000 from AIB, and had then opened his SSA into which he had lodged IR£22,500 (of which IR£15,000 was in cash).

THE LODGEMENT OF IR£20,000 ON 8 AUGUST 1994

5.39 On 8 August 1994, an account was opened at AIB, 37/38 Upper O'Connell Street, Dublin, in the names of Mr Ahern's then minor daughters Georgina and Cecelia Ahern, and the sum of IR£20,000 in cash was lodged to that account.

5.40 Mr Murphy told the Tribunal that having been again requested to attend St Luke's, Drumcondra on, he assumed, 8 August 1994,¹⁰ he met Mr Ahern and was given IR£20,000 in cash with instructions that it be lodged to an account in the names of his then minor daughters. It was Mr Murphy's belief that Mr Ahern provided him with bank documentation which had been signed by his daughters and which Mr Murphy had previously given to Mr Ahern. Mr Murphy could not recollect whether the IR£20,000 in cash was taken from the safe, or whether it was in a drawer or on the desk. As he had done previously, he had counted the cash at the time.

5.41 Mr Ahern's daughters' deposit was subsequently transferred into a 7 day notice deposit account with a better interest rate, on 13 October 1994. Mr Murphy had no recollection of this transfer but assumed it was done on his advice.

5.42 Mr Murphy had no recollection of Mr Ahern stating that the IR£20,000 provided on this occasion for his daughters was from accumulated savings.

5.43 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that the IR£20,000 was the balance of his accumulated savings of approximately IR£54,000 (from which he claimed to have lodged IR£30,000 in April 1994). Mr Ahern said that the purpose in opening the IR£20,000 account in the names of his then minor daughters was to create an education fund for their future benefit.

¹⁰ In evidence, Mr Murphy initially said that he visited Mr Ahern on 8 August 1994. When it was pointed out to him that Mr Ahern's diary indicated he was in a Co. Kerry hotel between 1 and 11 August 1994 inclusive (but not necessarily on 8 August), Mr Murphy clarified that he was 'nearly sure' the meeting took place in St Luke's on 8 August 1994. Mr Ahern said believed that he was in Dublin on that date, and lodged the money.

5.44 The provision to Mr Murphy by Mr Ahern of the IR£20,000 cash on 8 August 1994 meant that within the space of approximately eight months he had handed Mr Murphy three, (largely cash) amounts totalling £72,500 (These included the cash sums of IR£30,000 and IR£20,000 provided in April and August 1994 respectively, in addition to the IR£22,500 in December 1993, of which IR£15,000 was cash).

5.45 Mr Murphy told the Tribunal that he was not surprised to have received such significant amounts of cash from Mr Ahern in August 1994 or on the earlier occasions.

DID MR AHERN ACCUMULATE SAVINGS OF CIRCA IR£54,000?

5.46 The Tribunal accepted that Mr Ahern's usual practice, in the period 1987 to 1993, was that he cashed his salary and expenses cheques, and generally paid his bills, living expenses and other disbursements using cash, rather than a bank account. These cheques were usually cashed by either Ms Cullagh, Ms Carruth or by himself and the proceeds then securely maintained in either his constituency office or in his ministerial office.

5.47 While it may well have been the case that Mr Ahern had on occasion placed cash in a drawer in his ministerial office desk, the Tribunal was satisfied, particularly having regard to Mr Ward's evidence, that it was Mr Ahern's usual practice to keep cash in his safes in either his constituency office or in his ministerial office, and that the use of a drawer in his ministerial office as a location to keep cash was probably occasional, and only in respect of small sums.

5.48 Contrary to what had been asserted by Mr Ahern in correspondence with the Tribunal, the evidence of Ms Carruth, Ms Cullagh and Mr Ward did not confirm the accumulation by Mr Ahern of in excess of IR£30,000 savings in a safe in St. Luke's over the period 1987 to 1993, nor the accumulation by him of IR£20,000 in the safe in the Department of Finance over the same period.

5.49 Ms Carruth's evidence failed to cast any light in relation to the issue of whether or not Mr Ahern was accumulating substantial cash sums in his safe in St. Luke's between 1987 and 1993.

5.50 Although Ms Cullagh saw cash in the constituency office safe, she was not prepared to speculate that what she saw amounted to a large or a small amount of money. Ms Cullagh said: 'There was a shelf that had some money on top of it...'

5.51 Pressed as to whether or not she had an impression as to the amount of money visible to her on the occasions she observed the internal part of the safe, Ms Cullagh commented: 'I didn't take note of what size the money was or anything like that.' and 'I didn't look at monies, I never touched monies, counted monies. I didn't take note of monies. I saw that there was money there but I couldn't . . . estimate, you know, how much.' and 'I very rarely went to the safe. And when I did I was just anxious to get the file in or take the file out. I didn't like to look at the money because I felt that's very private.'

5.52 In relation to the ministerial safe, the Tribunal was left with the strong impression that cash seen by Mr Ward in that safe at any one time was no more than might have represented Mr Ahern's salary for a month or two, and certainly nothing in the region of thousands of pounds. Furthermore, Mr Ward confirmed in his evidence that the amount of cash seen by him in Mr Ahern's safe in the Taoiseach's office post-1997 (of which he had a clearer recollection than that which he had of cash held in the safe in 1993/1994) was approximately similar to that seen by him in 1993/1994 in Mr Ahern's then ministerial safe. It was noteworthy that it appeared to Mr Ward that the cash maintained in Mr Ahern's office safe in the period post-1997 was, in approximate terms, much the same as that witnessed by him in Mr Ahern's ministerial safe in the period 1993-4.

5.53 While accepting that Mr Ahern kept amounts of cash in two safes (his constituency office safe and his Government office safe) from the late 1980s, and throughout the 1990s, the Tribunal's distinct impression from the evidence of two staff members, including a senior civil servant, was that the amounts involved were no greater than IR£1,000 or IR£2,000, and nothing close to sums in the region of IR£20,000 or IR£30,000.

5.54 The Tribunal was satisfied that, had the cash accumulated in the safes been in the region of many thousands of pounds, that fact would have been etched in the memories of Ms Cullagh and Mr Ward, and would in turn have been emphasised in their evidence, given the extent to which each was subjected to close questioning on the issue.

5.55 Mr Ahern, in evidence, claimed to have apprised Mr Murphy and Mr Michael Burns (the AIB branch manager) when he first met with them in December 1993 that he had approximately IR£50,000 in savings.

5.56 On Day 787, Mr Murphy told the Tribunal that he was 'nearly positive' that Mr Ahern, when applying for his loan, did not inform him that he had IR£50,000 in a safe or elsewhere, or that he had any savings. As Mr Ahern was seeking a loan facility from AIB, he believed it likely that he would have questioned Mr Ahern in relation to his then assets and liabilities.

5.57 On Day 788, Mr Murphy said that he did not recall Mr Ahern advising him of approximately IR£50,000 savings at that time (December 1993), and did not think he did so. Later on Day 788, Mr Murphy said, 'maybe he did. I can't remember that.' Later again, in that day's evidence, Mr Murphy said he had a 'vague recollection' of Mr Ahern referring to savings when they met on 25 April 1994, and believed that this was the first occasion that Mr Ahern mentioned his savings to him.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS RELATING TO THE LODGEMENTS OF IR£30,000 AND IR£20,000

5.58 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Ahern did not apprise Mr Murphy in December 1993 that he had cash savings.

5.59 The Tribunal rejected Mr Ahern's contention that substantial sums of cash were saved and accumulated over a period of six or seven years up to 1993/1994 and maintained in the safes in his constituency and ministerial offices. The Tribunal believed it far more likely that had substantial cash sums amounting to IR£20,000 and IR£30,000 been accumulated in the safes, those staff members who, from time to time, had the opportunity to see into the safes would have been, or would have become, conscious of the presence of a substantial wad of bank notes, and would have been unlikely to have forgotten about it.

5.60 Over and above sworn testimony of Ms Cullagh, Mr Ward and Mr Murphy, on foot of which the Tribunal concluded that they had no knowledge of large accumulations of cash by Mr Ahern, either through observation (on the part of Ms Cullagh and Mr Ward) or receipt of information (on the part of Mr Murphy), the Tribunal was further persuaded in its view that Mr Ahern had not, as claimed by him, accumulated approximately IR£50,000–IR£54,000 in savings over the period 1987 to 1994, or any other substantial sum, having regard to the following considerations:

- Had Mr Ahern available to him a cash sum in the region of IR£50,000–IR£54,000 in December 1993, it was entirely improbable that he would have borrowed approximately IR£19,000 from AIB at the relatively high interest rates prevailing at the time for the purposes of discharging legal fees and other financial commitments.

- On 30 December 1993 Mr Ahern had caused to be lodged to the SSA opened by him that month some IR£22,500. Irrespective of the origins of this money,¹¹ what was significant was that on 30 December 1993 Mr Ahern was lodging money to an account which was designed to earn substantial interest for deposit holders and which benefited from a reduced Deposit Interest Retention Tax (DIRT). It was inconceivable, in the view of the Tribunal, that Mr Ahern, who had been advised by Mr Murphy of the benefits of maintaining a SSA,¹² and who was in the process of returning to using banking facilities, would not have, at the very least, utilised some of his claimed circa IR£54,000 in cash savings to top up the lodgement of IR£22,500 to the permitted Special Savings Account maximum of IR£50,000, and thereby avail at the earliest opportunity of the maximum benefit available from such an account.
- Had Mr Ahern available to him cash savings of approximately IR£50,000–IR£54,000 in April 1994, it was unlikely that he would have delayed opening an account in his daughters' names and lodging IR£20,000 into that account, as he did some four months later, in August 1994, having regard to Mr Ahern's evidence that it had been his intention and desire to set aside money for his daughters since December 1993.

5.61 The Tribunal was therefore satisfied that Mr Ahern did not accumulate cash savings of IR£54,000 (or a sum close to this amount) between 1987 and December 1993 as contended by him.

5.62 The Tribunal was satisfied that a significant portion (if not the entire) of the IR£30,000 cash which was lodged on 25 April 1994 came into the possession of Mr Ahern between 23 December 1993 and 25 April 1994.

5.63 Similarly, the Tribunal was satisfied that a significant portion, (if not the entire) of the IR£20,000 cash which was lodged on 8 August 1994 came into the possession of Mr Ahern between 25 April and 8 August 1994.

5.64 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Ahern did not disclose to it the true source of the said lodgements in April and August 1994. The source of the IR£50,000 used by Mr Ahern to fund these lodgements therefore remains a mystery.

¹¹ See Section I hereof.

¹² Presumably, Mr Ahern as Minister for Finance, was himself generally aware of such benefits.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 10 - SECTION III : THE LODGEMENT OF IR£24,838.49 TO A BANK ACCOUNT OF MR AHERN ON 11 OCTOBER 1994¹

THE EXPLANATION OF THE LODGEMENT PROVIDED TO THE TRIBUNAL IN 2006

6.01 On 11 October 1994 IR£24,838.49 was lodged to an account in the name of Mr Ahern (hereinafter referred to as the Ahern 011 account) which was opened on that date at AIB's Upper O'Connell Street branch. This lodgement was one of the five lodgements in respect of which Mr Ahern was requested to prioritise when providing his response to the Tribunal's letter of the 3 March 2006.²

6.02 The report compiled by Mr Ahern's accountant, Mr Peelo in April 2006 contained a paragraph headed with the query posed by the Tribunal in its letter of 3 March 2006 with regard to this lodgement:

Transfer in the sum of IR£24,838.49 to your client's 7-day³ fixed interest account at Allied Irish Banks numbered 04519/011 on the 11th October 1994.

6.03 Mr Peelo provided the following information regarding the said lodgement:
(a) Mr Ahern attended and spoke at a private dinner in Manchester, circa this time. The dinner was organised by 'Manchester-Irish' businessmen and Mr Ahern had attended similar dinners on previous occasions. The dinner was not organised as a fundraiser. At the end of the dinner, unsolicited by Mr Ahern, he was presented with cash of circa sterling £8,000 made up by individual contributions from the attendance. There is no list of contributors in this regard. (John Kennedy, one of the Manchester businessmen involved and Senator Tony Kett, who attended the dinner, can confirm the foregoing.)

(b) The exact amount of the sterling cash is not known. At the then (11 Oct '94) sterling/punt exchange rate of 0.9883, the sterling equivalent of Irish £7,938.49⁴ was circa sterling £7,845.61. (Note: Irish £7,938.49 +

¹ The Tribunal's consideration of technical banking evidence concerning the processes and accounting procedures relating to foreign currency in AIB is to be found in this Section, and in Section IV. For a full understanding of same, both Sections should be read. Section IV also includes background information relating to AIB witnesses who gave evidence to the Tribunal.

² See 'The conduct of the inquiry'

³ The account was, in fact a 28-day fixed account.

⁴ The figure of IR£7,938.49 stated in Mr Peelo's report to have been the Irish equivalent of the sterling which, according to Mr Ahern, had been lodged together with IR£16,500 was an error and was subsequently amended by him to read £8,338.49—the figure which when added to £16,500 would yield £24,838.49).

£6,500 = £24,438.49). The balance of Irish £16,500 in the lodgement was made up as follows: Paddy Reilly⁵ [...] –£3,500, Barry English–£5,000, Joe Burke–£3,500, Dermot Carew–£4,500.

All of the above persons are personal friends of Mr Ahern. The amounts were entirely unsolicited and represented a goodwill loan from friends towards building up Mr Ahern's personal finances re possible purchase of a house.

(c) The lodgement of £24,838.49 was made personally by Mr Ahern. The AIB bank official who received the lodgement was either Philip Murphy or Jim McNamara.

6.04 In essence, the position conveyed to the Tribunal by Mr Peelo's report was that, while the exact amount of the sterling element in the lodgement was uncertain (circa stg. £8,000), the lodgement included an exact amount of Irish currency (IR£16,500). (The Report stated 'Loans totalling 16,500 and Manchester 8338.49 -> Lodgement 24,838.49...')

MR AHERN'S PRIVATE INTERVIEW BY THE TRIBUNAL

6.05 On 5 April 2007, Mr Ahern was interviewed in private by members of the Tribunal's legal team in relation to a number of financial transactions, including the IR£24,838.49 lodgement to his bank account on 11 October 1994.

6.06 This interview took place almost twelve months after the Tribunal received Mr Peelo's report relating to this and other financial transactions involving Mr Ahern.

6.07 In the course of his interview, Mr Ahern confirmed that the IR£24,838.49 lodgement was comprised of IR£16,500 (given to him by Dublin-based friends), and a sterling sum representing the proceeds of a presentation to him following a dinner in Manchester, probably in late September or early October 1994.

6.08 Mr Ahern also stated that it was his recollection that the sterling element of the lodgement was £8,000 in large notes. He did not suggest that the sterling amount was anything other than £8,000. He also appeared certain that the Irish pound element of the lodgement was IR£16,500, being the proceeds of a 'goodwill' loan from four identified individuals. Mr Ahern confirmed that the lodgement of IR£24,838.49 was comprised of those two elements.

MR AHERN'S SWORN EVIDENCE TO THE TRIBUNAL

6.09 On 13 September 2007, Day 756, approximately five months after his private interview by members of the Tribunal's legal team on 5 April 2007, Mr Ahern gave sworn evidence to the Tribunal in relation to, inter alia, his explanation of the source of the IR£24,838.49 lodgement on 11 October 1994.

6.10 Mr Ahern commenced his sworn evidence by reading a lengthy statement from the witness box. In the course of his sworn statement, Mr Ahern said that the IR£24,838.49 lodgement did not represent Stg£25,000 (which had been suggested by the Tribunal as a possible source of the lodgement), but that it included 'about £8,000' sterling, and a 'substantial sum of Irish pounds.' Mr Ahern maintained that he had never asserted that the sterling component was exactly Stg£8,000 and he stated that the IR£16,500 given to him by his friends was likely to have been added to, to some extent, while stored in his safe in St Luke's in Drumcondra prior to lodgement on 11 October 1994, thus resulting in a 'non-rounded Irish punt sum being lodged.' This was the first occasion on which Mr Ahern had suggested to the Tribunal that the Irish pound element of the total sum lodged to his bank account on 11 October 1994 was anything other than exactly IR£16,500.

6.11 In response to questions from Counsel for the Tribunal on Day 757, Mr Ahern reiterated what he had stated on the previous day for the first time, vis-à-vis the IR£16,500, namely that he was uncertain if he might have added to or taken from the bundle of cash which comprised the 'second goodwill loan' prior to its lodgement. This was the first occasion when he suggested that some money have been taken from the IR£16,500.

6.12 Moreover, Mr Ahern further maintained, again for the first time, that he could not be certain that he had not either added to or taken from the cash sum of circa Stg£8,000 which he had received in Manchester, prior to its lodgement on 11 October 1994.

6.13 The uncertainty which Mr Ahern introduced on Days 756 and 757 vis-à-vis the sum of IR£16,500 had not manifested itself in either of Mr Peelo's two reports which had been submitted to the Tribunal in April 2006 and April 2007, nor in the course of Mr Ahern's private interview with the Tribunal's legal team in April 2007. This uncertainty on Mr Ahern's part only became evident to the Tribunal, subsequent to it having been provided with information and evidence from AIB witnesses (including documentation) which indicated that the sum lodged by Mr Ahern could not have been comprised of an exact sum of IR£16,500, and a balance of sterling notes.

THE BANKING EVIDENCE AS TO THE COMPOSITION OF THE LODGEMENT OF IR£24,838.49

6.14 The Tribunal proceeded to consider evidence (including bank documentation) relevant to the lodgement of IR£24,838.49 on 11 October 1994 in order to determine the likely source and composition of the cash which funded that lodgement.

THE AVAILABLE BANKING RECORDS

6.15 Documentation discovered to the Tribunal by AIB in relation to the lodgement of IR£24,838.49 indicated that on 11 October 1994, this sum had been, in the first instance, credited to an AIB 'DC' account, a transit account for monies before going into an individual customer's fixed term deposit account⁶. The AIB stamp on the RDC credit docket, although somewhat blurred, indicated that this transaction was likely to have been effected through AIB's foreign exchange desk, something later confirmed in evidence by Mr Murphy of AIB.

6.16 The documentation furnished by AIB to the Tribunal relating to Mr Ahern's lodgement did not include the Forde Money Changer⁷ tally roll for 11 October 1994, because the tally roll had not been retained by the branch. Had the tally roll been available, it would have shown the exact sterling amount tendered by Mr Ahern on the date in question.

6.17 From documentation furnished by the branch, the Tribunal established that there were three rates of exchange applicable to sterling cash tendered by retail customers for exchange on 11 October 1994 (hereinafter referred to as the 'customer buy rates').

6.18 The three customer buy rates on 11 October 1994 were:

- 1.0212 for sterling up to a value of IR£500
- 1.0063 for sterling up to a value of IR£2,500
- 0.9988 for sterling up to a value of IR£10,000.

There was also a discretionary 1 per cent commission on transactions, with a minimum charge of IR£1 and a maximum charge of IR£5.

⁶ Often referred to as AIB RDC (Retail Deposit Centre) accounts. These were special, centrally managed, deposit accounts, often requiring a minimum balance and benefiting from a higher rate of interest.

6.19 On the basis of the customer buy rates applicable on the day, the Tribunal established by mathematical calculation that had Mr Ahern tendered exactly Stg£8,000 for exchange at a rate of 0.9988 (the applicable rate for that amount), this sum would have yielded £8,009.61 in Irish pounds. Such a sum, if added to the IR£16,500 Mr Ahern claimed was lodged with the exchanged sterling sum, would yield a total of IR£24,509.61, a sum which did not equate with the amount actually lodged to Mr Ahern's account (either with or without the addition of a discretionary AIB IR£5 commission fee). The Tribunal further established that applying either of the other two rates of the day (i.e. applicable to sums to the value of up to IR£500 or up to IR£2,500) likewise did not yield (irrespective of whether or not a discretionary commission of IR£5 was charged) a figure of IR£8,338.49—the figure which, when added to IR£16,500, would produce IR£24,838.49.

6.20 Having established, therefore, that a round-figure Stg£8,000 sum could not have been the amount which was lodged together with a sum of IR£16,500 on 11 October 1994, based on Mr Ahern's certainty of the IR£16,500 amount, and on the premise that IR£8,338.49 was the equivalent of the sterling sum Mr Ahern lodged with his Irish money, the Tribunal sought to establish the exchanged sterling sum that, when added to IR£16,500, would result in a figure of IR£24,838.49 (being the amount lodged to Mr Ahern's account).

6.21 The Tribunal's mathematical calculations established, as a matter of fact, that the figure of IR£8,338.49 at the applicable customer buy rate of exchange of 0.9988 (i.e. the rate applicable to sterling with a value of up to IR£10,000) or at either of the other two sterling customer buy rates of the day, with or without the discretionary commission of £5, did not yield an even sterling amount, in the absence of a sterling coin element.

6.22 The evidence in relation to the possibility of the inclusion of Stg£1 notes⁸ and coins in such a lodgement established the following:

- Sterling coins were not normally accepted in AIB branches.
- Stg£1 notes or coins were not in the usual course of business within AIB remitted to the bank's Currency Services department,⁹ unless as 'odds'.¹⁰
- Within a branch 'odds' were usually accumulated and then remitted to Currency Services in round sum totals, quarterly or half yearly.

⁸ By the early 1980s, the Bank of England, had ceased printing £1 notes (having replaced them with £1 coins). Stg £1 notes continued to be printed by banks in Northern Ireland, Scotland and the Channel Islands, and occasionally were tendered for exchange to AIB and to other banks in the Irish Republic.

⁹ The AIB department dealing with foreign exchange.

¹⁰ The term described circumstances when small amounts of currency could be remitted either quarterly or half yearly. Odds might include single pound notes, but never coin.

- There was no evidence that the foreign currency remittance to Currency Services from the branch for 11 October 1994 included any such ‘odds’
- Very few sterling £1 notes were in circulation in 1994.

6.23 Mr Ahern accepted that the involvement of coin in the cash tendered by him for exchange could be ruled out. While in his sworn evidence to the Tribunal, he suggested that it was possible that the sterling element of the lodgement may have included small denominations of sterling, Mr Ahern had, in the course of his private interview with the Tribunal, suggested that the sterling notes in question were of large denomination.

6.24 The Tribunal was satisfied, that the sterling tendered to AIB for exchange on 11 October 1994 by Mr Ahern did not include either sterling coins or sterling £1 notes.

6.25 In the course of his evidence on Day 750, Mr Murphy of AIB agreed that, in the event that IR£8,338.49 represented the sterling element of the lodgement of IR£24,838.49, as contended by Mr Ahern, then such a contention did not ‘add up’,¹¹ as no sterling sum (without a coin element), at any of the published customer buy rates applicable on 11 October 1994, could have yielded IR£8,338.49. Mr Murphy further agreed that this latter figure was not consistent with the sterling sum being presented for exchange being comprised of large notes.

6.26 The Tribunal concluded therefore that IR£8,338.49 could not have represented an Irish pound equivalent of a sterling sum without a sterling coin element at the rates of exchange applicable on 11 October 1994.

THE STG£25,000 QUESTION

6.27 Based on information provided to the Tribunal by AIB (and confirmed in evidence by its witnesses) the Tribunal conducted a mathematical exercise which established that if on 11 October 1994 a sum of Stg£25,000 had been exchanged at a buy rate for sums up to the value of IR£2,500—one of the sterling customer buy rates of the day—and if a commission of IR£5 had been charged by the branch for the transaction, such a sterling exchange would have yielded, in Irish pounds, a sum of IR£24,838.49—a figure precisely equal to the amount lodged to Mr Ahern’s account in October 1994.

¹¹ Mr Murphy agreed that this was the case, when it was suggested to him by Counsel for the Tribunal.

6.28 The Tribunal considered the relevant bank procedures which applied in October 1994 when a customer tendered a sterling cash sum for exchange into Irish pounds, and where the Irish pound value of the sterling sum exceeded IR£10,000, in circumstances where, as was established in evidence, the Forde Money Changer was commissioned at the start of each day's business to identify only customer buy rates applicable to sterling amounts with an equivalent IR£ value of up to IR£500, IR£2,500 and IR£10,000. The Forde Money Changer was therefore not usually programmed to calculate the Irish pound equivalent of a sterling amount exceeding IR£10,000 at any better rate (for the customer) and was programmed to prompt the teller to contact Currency Services for a special one off 'spot rate', when a sterling sum exceeding IR£10,000 in value was identified to it.

6.29 AIB witnesses told the Tribunal that within its branches, it was normal practice for a teller who had been offered sterling in excess of IR£10,000 in value to contact Currency Services and request a 'spot' rate at which to purchase that sterling. Currency Services, having regard to market conditions at the time of the contact, then nominated the rate to the branch. Currency Services had within its discretion the entitlement to nominate a rate better for the customer than the best published customer buy rate (i.e. for amounts of sterling up to a value of IR£10,000), or a lower rate, including one of the published customer buy rates applicable to sterling up to the values of IR£500 and IR£2,500.

6.30 The Tribunal was satisfied, therefore, that Currency Services had within its discretion the entitlement to direct the application of a rate equivalent to the published customer buy rate for sterling sums up to the value of IR£2,500, notwithstanding the fact that the sterling tendered for exchange amounted to approximately IR£25,000 in value.

6.31 It followed, therefore, that the Tribunal was satisfied that it was possible that a sum of Stg£25,000 tendered for exchange on 11 October 1994 at AIB's branch at 38/39 O'Connell Street in Dublin could have been exchanged at the customer buy rate applicable to sterling to the value of up to IR£2,500, thus yielding IR£24,838.49 (after deduction of the £5 charge), a sum exactly equal to the sum lodged to Mr Ahern's account.

6.32 Mr Ahern disagreed with the suggestion that the branch might have applied a customer buy rate for sterling up to the value of IR£2,500 to a Stg£25,000 transaction on the direction of Currency Services. Mr Ahern maintained that the application of such a rate would have meant that the customer had been 'entirely screwed' by the bank. Mr Ahern suggested also that the application of the customer buy rate for sterling to a value of up to IR£2,500 to Stg£25,000 could only occur if a bank teller breached bank procedure, and failed to contact Currency Services for a better rate.

6.33 The Tribunal took cognisance of the fact that when Mr Ahern undisputedly tendered the sum of Stg£20,000 to the same AIB branch for exchange into Irish pounds on 1 December 1995,¹² the customer buy rate ultimately applied to that sterling sum was in fact the published customer buy rate for sterling amounts up to a value of IR£10,000, and not a better rate.

6.34 In addition to the application of the published customer buy rates for sterling on 11 October 1994 to the information provided by Mr Ahern in order to determine the amount of foreign currency Mr Ahern tendered for lodgement on 11 October 1994, the Tribunal examined the documentation which had been furnished by AIB in the context of the overall sterling exchange transactions conducted by the branch on 11 October 1994.

6.35 In accordance with bank procedure, the total amounts of sterling, and of foreign currency other than sterling, purchased by the branch from customers on 11 October 1994 was recorded in manuscript on debit docketts at the close of branch business on that day. These docketts were completed based on information gleaned from the Forde Money Changer tally roll. These totals were also entered into the computerised Foreign Currency Held Ledger. The debit docketts and the ledger were made available to the Tribunal. As already indicated, the Forde tally rolls were not retained by AIB and were not available to the Tribunal.

6.36 Both the handwritten debit docketts and the computerised Foreign Currency Held Ledger recorded the value of sterling purchased within the branch on 11 October 1994 as IR£27,491.95, and the value of foreign currency other than sterling as being IR£1,211.66.

6.37 The purchase by the branch of sterling to the value of IR£27,491.95 allowed for the possibility that the lodgement of IR£24,838.49 to Mr Ahern's account was the Irish pound value of Stg£25,000 at one of the published customer buy rates for sterling on 11 October 1994.

6.38 Notwithstanding the non-availability of the Forde Money Changer tally roll for the relevant date, the Tribunal was satisfied that the figure of IR£27,491.95 as entered on the withdrawal/debit docket, and as entered in the computerised foreign currency held ledger pertaining to the 'Foreign Currency Held' account, was a figure which was copied from the Ford Money Changer tally roll for 11 October 1994, and accurately and correctly identified the foreign currency as sterling.

6.39 In evidence on Day 747, Mr John Garrett, of AIB, made it clear that he did not take issue with the assumption that the tally roll data had been correctly transcribed and recorded within the branch.

6.40 An analysis of an AIB 'All Items Report' (a record of the daily banking transactions) which was produced following the close of business on 11 October 1994, indicated that the branch's sterling purchases to the extent of IR£27,491.95 were conducted by teller no 12 – the same teller as processed Mr Ahern's lodgement. The Tribunal was satisfied that the teller who processed Mr Ahern's lodgement on 11 October 1994 was the same foreign exchange teller who purchased sterling from customers to the value of IR£27,491.95 on that day.

6.41 The aforementioned 'All Items Report' concerning transactions conducted by teller no 12 shows that he or she attributed a transaction of IR£24,838.49 to 'B. Ahern.' For the most part, the balance of the transactions processed by teller no 12, as listed on the 'All Items Report', related to foreign drafts, sterling drafts, fees for foreign and sterling drafts and US cheques—all items that would normally be transacted or processed by a foreign exchange bank teller.

6.42 The *'Foreign Notes in Transit'*¹³ account of 37/38 Upper O'Connell Street dated 13 October 1994 recorded a sterling remittance to Currency Services to the value of IR£31,224.82 by way of the abbreviation 'STG REM.' On the basis of the evidence of Mr McNamara and Mr Garrett,¹⁴ the Tribunal was satisfied that the sterling remit made on 13 October 1994 included the IR£27,491.95 value of sterling purchased by the branch on 11 October 1994.

6.43 Both Mr Garrett and Mr McNamara, in their evidence to the Tribunal, acknowledged that the purchase by the branch of IR£27,491.95 worth of sterling was an 'exceptional amount' of sterling to be purchased in a branch on a single day. For example, in the week preceding 11 October 1994 the daily Irish Pound value of the purchase of sterling recorded by the branch was as follows: 5 October 1994—IR£1,510.15; 6 October 1994—IR£601.88; 7 October 1994—IR£3,313.03; and 10 October 1994—IR£678.66. Mr Garrett confirmed to the ¹³ An internal bank report containing details of foreign currency transmitted between the branch and the Currency Services department.

¹⁴ In evidence Mr Garrett stated that the date of the remit was 15 October 1994. However, the Tribunal was satisfied that this was stated in error for 13 October 1994.

Tribunal that the daily average of sterling purchased by the branch between January and June 1995 was between Stg£2,000 and Stg£2,250.

6.44 Unlike the situation in the branch on 15 June 1995 when Ms Larkin presented Stg£10,000 cash and IR£2,000 for lodgement¹⁵, where the documentation relating to Ms Larkin's lodgement, as processed by Mr Murphy on that date, referred to two specific amounts of IR£9,743.74 and IR£2,000, differentiating between the two different currencies being presented, no such differentiation was made by foreign exchange teller No. 12 when he or she processed the cash which comprised Mr Ahern's 11 October 1994 lodgement. While Mr Murphy believed that 'an organised teller' would identify separate currencies on the lodgement docket, he said this did not necessarily always occur.

6.45 Both Mr Ahern, who believed he personally made the lodgement to the branch on 11 October, and Mr Murphy, who normally dealt with Mr Ahern at that time and who believed 'it must have been' he who took the lodgement on 11 October 1994, claimed not to have any recollection of the transaction. The Tribunal finds this lack of recollection, especially on the part of Mr Ahern, to be remarkable, having regard to the size and composition of the lodgement and the fact of its having been entirely in cash.

6.46 Although he may have met with Mr Ahern on the day in question, Mr Murphy acknowledged that he himself may not have dealt with the actual processing of Mr Ahern's transaction. Having regard to the inclusion of 'B. Ahern' on the 'All Items Report' attributed to teller No. 12 for the day in question, the Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Murphy did not physically process the 11 October 1994 lodgement. Mr Murphy pointed out that while he could have accepted the lodgement, a bank colleague may have then processed it.

MR AHERN'S RESPONSE TO THE SUGGESTION THAT THE LODGEMENT OF 11 OCTOBER WAS STG£25,000

6.47 In his prepared statement read from the witness box on Day 756 Mr Ahern, inter alia, took issue with matters which Counsel for the Tribunal had raised with Mr Murphy and Mr Garrett of AIB, in the course of their evidence. One such matter was the suggestion put to the AIB witnesses by Counsel for the Tribunal that the amount of the lodgement to Mr Ahern's account on 11 October 1994, namely IR£24,838.49, allowed for the possibility that Stg£25,000 had been tendered by Mr Ahern, and had been exchanged by AIB at the customer buy rate of exchange applicable on that day to sterling amounts up to a value of IR£2,500, and from which a discretionary commission of IR£5 was deducted.

6.48 In the course of his oral statement, and in his sworn evidence, Mr Ahern categorically denied that the sum lodged on 11 October 1994 was the Irish pound equivalent of Stg£25,000. While at all times denying that he had lodged such a sum, Mr Ahern claimed that the Irish pound equivalent of Stg£25,000 could only have been achieved if it was accepted by the Tribunal that the branch teller on 11 October 1994, when presented with Stg£25,000, breached normal bank procedures by manually overriding the Forde Money Changer, and applied a customer buy rate appropriate to sterling amounts up to a value of only IR£2,500. Mr Ahern further asserted that for the branch to have done that to him, as Minister for Finance, was 'unbelievable.'

6.49 While denying any suggestion that he tendered Stg£25,000 for exchange and lodgement on 11 October 1994, and while asserting 'to the best of [his] recollection' that what he had tendered for lodgement on the date in question was circa Stg£8,000 and circa IR£16,500, Mr Ahern in evidence on Day 756 and 757 acknowledged that Stg£25,000, if tendered for exchange on 11 October 1994, would have yielded IR£24,838.49, if a rate of 1.0063 (the published customer buy rate of exchange of the day for sterling amounts up to the value of IR£2,500) had been applied, and if a commission of IR£5 had been charged.

THE OPINION OF MR PADDY STRONGE¹⁶

6.50 Mr Ahern's solicitor submitted a report from Mr Paddy Stronge with their letter to the Tribunal dated 18 September 2007. A subsequent and more detailed report from Mr Stronge was furnished to the Tribunal on 19 October 2007.

6.51 In his reports, Mr Stronge considered the evidence provided to the Tribunal relating to the lodgement of IR£24,838.49 to Mr Ahern's bank account on 11 October 1994, and the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 to the account of Ms Larkin on 5 December 1994 (see Section iv).

6.52 In the section of his report wherein he considered the evidence as to the composition of the IR£24,838.49 lodged on 11 October 1994, Mr Stronge stated his conclusions in the following terms:

¹⁶ Mr Stronge submitted his reports on behalf of Mr Ahern in his capacity as a banking expert. Mr Stronge worked in various positions in Bank of Ireland between 1963 and 2004 (and subsequently on a part time basis between July 2005 and March 2007. At the time of his retirement from Bank of Ireland in 2004, Mr Stronge held the position of Chief Operating Officer Corporate Banking. At the time he prepared his reports, Mr Stronge was Chairman of Philos Training & Consultancy Ltd.

The evidence does not substantiate the proposition that the sterling pounds lodged in AIB on that day had to comprise a single large lodgement.

The coincidence of around a sum of Stg£25,000 depends on the application of an in appropriate rate which is a breach of branch procedures.

There is no evidence which would indicate a breach of branch procedures having occurred leading to an inappropriate exchange rate being used. There is evidence that there were adequate cheques and controls to ensure that the correct rate was applied.

The evidence, including the documentation, is consistent with the composition of the lodgement being circa Stg£8,000, and the remainder of the lodgement being in Irish pounds.

6.53 The Tribunal dismissed Mr Stronge's conclusions on the basis that the evidence provided to it by bank witnesses did not establish that an exchange rate for transactions with a value of up to IR£2,500 being applied to a Stg£25,000 transaction was 'inappropriate' or constituted 'a breach of branch procedures.'

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE COMPOSITION OF THE LODGEMENT OF IR£24,838.49 ON 11 OCTOBER 1994

6.54 The Tribunal's analysis and consideration of the contemporaneous bank documentation and the banking evidence given to the Tribunal relevant to the lodgement of 11 October 1994, established as a matter of probability the following:

- 1) On 11 October 1994, a sum of IR£24,838.49 was lodged to Account No. 1/A/04519/011 in the name of Mr Bertie Ahern.
- 2) The AIB branch stamp on the credit docket documenting the transfer of the funds presented by or on behalf of Mr Ahern to the bank's RDC (transit) account, although somewhat blurred, indicated that the transaction was processed by teller No. 12, who was the foreign exchange teller at the branch on 11 October 1994.
- 3) The fact of the Irish pound cash lodgement containing an Irish coin element, was suggestive of a conversion from a foreign currency having occurred.

- 4) An 'All Items Report' produced at the close of business on 11 October 1994, relating to teller No. 12, documented that he or she had processed a transaction of IR£24,838.49 attributed to 'B. Ahern.'
- 5) The 'Ahern' lodgement of 11 October 1994 was processed and recorded by teller No. 12 as a single transaction. While this fact did not disprove Mr Ahern's contention that the source of the IR£24,838.49 was comprised of a sum in Irish pounds together with a sterling sum exchanged into Irish pounds, it was, at least, an indication that the composition was comprised of a single currency.
- 6) Both the manually written debit docketts or narratives and the branch's Foreign Currency Held Ledger documented that the branch purchased sterling from customers to the value of IR£27,491.95 on 11 October 1994.
- 7) In comparison to the purchases of sterling which had taken place on 5, 6, 7 and 10 October 1994, the purchase by the branch of IR£27,491.95 worth of sterling on 11 October 1994 was 'exceptional.'
- 8) The purchase of sterling to the value of IR£27,491.95 allowed for the possibility that the sum of IR£24,838.49 lodged to Mr Ahern's account was originally entirely sterling.
- 9) The IR£31,224.82 remitted by the branch on 13 October 1994 to Currency Services by way of sterling remission included the IR£27,491.95 worth of sterling which had been purchased by teller No. 12 on 11 October 1994.
- 10) The information provided by and on behalf of Mr Ahern to the Tribunal prior to Day 756, namely that the lodgement made to his account comprised an exact sum of IR£16,500 cash from a 'second good will loan' and the Irish equivalent of a sum of circa Stg£8,000 did not by the application to the figure of IR£8,338.49 of any of the published customer buy rates of exchange for sterling on 11 October 1994 yield a sterling sum (in the absence of a sterling coin element less than £1).
- 11) A figure of IR£8,338.49 therefore could not have represented an Irish pound equivalent of a sterling sum without a coin element at any of the published customer buy rates of exchange applicable to sterling on 11 October 1994.
- 12) No sum of circa Stg£8,000, if exchanged for Irish pounds pursuant to any of the applicable published rates of exchange on that day, when added to IR£16,500 would yield IR£24,838.49.
- 13) The lodgement of IR£24,838.49 therefore did not comprise a sum of IR£16,500 and the Irish pound equivalent of circa Stg£8,000.
- 14) A sum of Stg£25,000 exchanged at a customer buy rate of 1.0063—being one of the published customer buy rates for sterling for 11 October 1994 (applicable to sterling up to IR£2,500 in value)—would have yielded, if a commission charge of £5 was deducted, IR£24,838.49, a sum exactly equal to the lodgement made to Mr Ahern's account on 11 October 1994.

- 15) It was within the discretion of Currency Services to authorise a customer buy rate applicable for sterling amounts up to a value of IR£2,500 for a purchase of a sum of Stg£25,000 from a customer.

6.55 In this regard, the Tribunal was satisfied, based on evidence from AIB witnesses, of the following:

- (i) The application of a customer buy rate of 1.0063 to the Stg£25,000 cash sum tendered for exchange into Irish pounds (that being the rate applicable to sterling with a value of up to IR£2,500) did not, as contended by Mr Ahern in his evidence, involve the bank teller having to 'manually override' the Forde Money Changer.

And

- (ii) Furthermore, the application of the IR£2,500 rate to a Stg£25,000 cash sum tendered for exchange into Irish pounds did not indicate, of itself, that normal bank practice or procedure had been ignored or in any way bypassed.

6.56 Having regard to the foregoing, the Tribunal was satisfied that, as a matter of the strongest probability, the cash tendered for exchange and lodgement into Mr Ahern's bank account on 11 October 1994 was Stg£25,000. The Tribunal therefore rejected Mr Ahern's evidence that he tendered for lodgement a mixture of Irish pounds and sterling notes comprising approximately IR£16,500 and approximately Stg£8,000 respectively. Furthermore, the Tribunal rejected Mr Ahern's evidence that he tendered for lodgement any Irish pound cash sum on 11 October 1994.

THE ACCOUNT GIVEN TO THE TRIBUNAL OF THE CIRCUMSTANCES IN WHICH MR AHERN CLAIMED TO HAVE COME INTO POSSESSION OF IR£16,500—THE 'SECOND GOODWILL LOAN'

6.57 Mr Ahern described to the Tribunal the circumstances in which he claimed to have received IR£16,500 in September or October 1994 in the following terms: One midweek evening, while visiting the Beaumont House public house, a licensed premises owned by Mr Dermot Carew, Mr Carew presented him with a folder which, Mr Ahern was advised, contained IR£16,500. Mr Carew told Mr Ahern that he, together with three others, Mr Paddy Reilly (often referred to as 'Paddy the Plasterer'), Mr Joe Burke and Mr Barry English, had put together a fund with the objective of assisting Mr Ahern in the purchase of a house. Mr Carew apprised him of the respective individual contributions made by the four men. Mr Ahern's evidence was that while his initial reaction was to decline the cash, he ultimately agreed to accept it on the basis that its purpose was to assist him in buying a house, and on the understanding that he would repay it in due course. Thus, while the intention of the four men had been to gift Mr Ahern IR£16,500 he, Mr Ahern, only accepted it as a loan, something he believed that he made clear to each of the other three contributors when he met them subsequently. (Mr Ahern's contention, if true, meant that within a matter of months, twelve friends sought to gift him a total of IR£39,000, funds which he accepted on the basis that he would repay, with interest).

6.58 Messrs. Carew, Reilly, Burke and English all gave evidence of having, in late September 1994, made the decision to assist Mr Ahern financially. It had, it was suggested, probably been Mr Carew who had broached the idea with the others, an idea which had been met with unanimous approval. According to the men, the fact that Mr Ahern did not have a permanent place of residence was the motivating factor, in their decision to contribute. They were concerned that Mr Ahern's then living arrangements might affect him politically.¹⁷

6.59 Mr Carew testified that it was he who had raised the issue with Messrs Reilly, Burke and English. He described having initiated the discussion in the following terms:

'I think I mentioned to Joe 'where is Bert staying tonight.' Something to that effect and it progressed from there and I said its about time that he got a house. Because I had mentioned to Bert beforehand on a few occasions when we'd be having a pint and you know, I said, 'would you not go out and get a fecking house instead of living in Luke's or with Joe.' He did say that he was in the process of doing that, that he had some savings.'

6.60 Mr Burke initially told the Tribunal that, following receipt by him of a letter from the Tribunal in which he was requested to provide information to the Tribunal in relation to a contribution to Mr Ahern, he had probably raised the matter in conversation with Mr Carew for the purpose of assisting himself to recollect the date of the payment. Subsequently, in his later evidence, he denied that he had in fact raised the issue with Mr Carew.

Mr Burke gave conflicting evidence when asked to recount the circumstances in which he was requested to recall the events of 1994, as indicated in the following exchange between Tribunal Counsel and Mr Burke:

¹⁷ Mr English was less certain than his three colleagues that the purpose of his contribution was to assist Mr Ahern buy a house, rather than merely the provision of financial assistance because of his marriage separation.

'Q.762 All right. When was the first time you were asked to recall all of this, Mr. Burke?

A. I'm almost sure when I got a letter from the Tribunal.

Q.763 All right. Not, that letter was, did we say June 2006?

A. uh-huh.

Q.764 Did you, were you asked to recall it before then?

A. No, other than I think prior to the letter was the Brian Dobson interview.

Q.765 No, it was after the letter?

A. Was it? Whatever it was anyway.

Q.766 All right. And when you got this letter did you get in touch with either Mr. Ahern or any of the other three gentlemen to discuss it with them and to try and help your recollection?

A. I asked one of them I think Mr. Carew was when did this, can he remember when it happened. I had a vague memory of when it happened. And I think, yea, I think I would have mentioned.

Q.767 Well wait now. You mentioned it to Mr. Carew?

A. I may have, yeah.

Q.67 You may have?

A. Yeah.

Q.769 You're not sure.

A. I mean listen, this is going back to '94.

Q.770 Well it's not actually it's going back to 2006, Mr. Burke.

A. Well sorry which. Which are we talking about the loan or the money.

Q.771 When you got the letter from the Tribunal asking you for a detailed narrative statement which you supplied shortly afterwards, Mr. Burke, dealing with this matter in 1994. I'm asking you did you speak to Mr. Carew?

A. No.

Q.772 About the events?

A. no.

Q.773 Not at all?

A. I am sure I would have told him that I got a letter from the Tribunal.

Q.775 But did you discuss what was required and what I mean is that what happened?

A. No.

Q.776 The loan?

A. No, no, no, no, no.

Q.777 And the circumstances?

A. I remember correctly that was there not something on a confidential not to be discussed with anybody other than my legal team.'

6.61 Mr Reilly acknowledged that prior to making his written statement to the Tribunal in relation to his contributions to Mr Ahern he discussed the issue with both Mr Ahern and Mr Carew. Mr Reilly maintained that the only information provided to him by Mr Ahern and Mr Carew was the month in which the monies were given to him.

6.62 All four men claimed that there was no suggested target figure for individual subscriptions to the collection for Mr Ahern, it being left to each individual to determine how much to contribute. Mr Carew stated 'we decided to throw in a few quid in each and there was no big deal.' He said that, on the night 'there was no basic decision whatsoever taken whether it be a loan or a gift' that would be given to Mr Ahern. It was decided that Mr Ahern would be given the money in cash in order to avoid a cheque remaining uncashed by him.¹⁸

6.63 Messrs. Burke, Reilly and English, in evidence, described how, within a short time after the discussion in Beaumont House, each of them paid over their individual contributions to Mr Carew for transmission to Mr Ahern.

6.64 Mr Carew maintained that when handing over their contributions his fellow contributors had advised him of the amounts they were giving. Thus, he had not counted them, rather he had 'put the whole lot' in an envelope together with his own contribution of IR£4,500.

6.65 Mr Carew described the actual handover of the total collected fund to Mr Ahern in the following terms:

'We were sitting down having a pint and I left my pint there and went up to the safe, brought down the money and I said 'Bert the boys and myself want you to have that.' And he first of all he said 'What is it?' And I said 'It's a few pounds we collected towards a deposit for a house.' And I told him who gave what and he said 'no, no' – I won't use the words, but he didn't want to take it.'

6.66 Mr Carew stated that after a few minutes discussion, Mr Ahern made the decision 'to take it as a loan.' Mr Ahern, Mr Carew stated, was 'absolutely amazed' when he learned the amount that each of the four had contributed. To the best of his recollection, Mr Ahern then placed the envelope on a seat 'with his coat over it.'

6.67 Mr Carew told the Tribunal that, prior to broaching with the other three contributors the subject of a financial contribution to assist Mr Ahern in the purchase of a house he had been aware, from conversations with Mr Ahern, that the latter had ‘savings’ and was in fact saving for a house. Notwithstanding this knowledge, Mr Carew felt that Mr Ahern needed a ‘dig out.’ Mr Reilly likewise advised the Tribunal that in September 1994 he too was aware, from conversations with Mr Ahern, that the latter had ‘savings.’

MR AHERN’S LIVING AND FINANCIAL CIRCUMSTANCES IN SEPTEMBER 1994

6.68 By September 1994, Mr Ahern had been separated from his wife for over seven years. Mr Ahern’s legal separation proceedings had concluded in November/December 1993. In December 1993, Mr Ahern had borrowed IR£19,115.97 from AIB for the purposes of discharging legal bills and other commitments arising from his concluded matrimonial separation, and had discharged them.

6.69 In September 1994, Mr Ahern was residing in St Luke’s, Drumcondra, on foot of a tenancy agreement which he had entered into in January 1992. By that time, St Luke’s had been refurbished and included living quarters.

6.70 By September 1994 Mr Ahern had been Minister for Finance since 1991, and had held ministerial office continuously since 1987. In September 1994 Mr Ahern was in receipt of both a minister’s and a TD’s salary, as he had been for some years previously.

6.71 An analysis of Mr Ahern’s banking records showed that by September 1994 he had on deposit in excess of IR£20,000¹⁹ in the Irish Permanent Building Society. Mr Ahern subsequently told the Tribunal that he had saved this sum for a deposit on a house. In addition, Mr Ahern had in excess of IR£50,000 in two accounts in AIB. Furthermore, Mr Ahern’s financial circumstances were such that by August 1994 he had honoured a commitment, given by him in 1993, to provide additional financial support for his then minor daughters by depositing IR£20,000 to a joint account in AIB in their names.

6.72 In the course of his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Ahern acknowledged that he did not have a need for financial assistance in 1994. Mr Ahern also told the Tribunal that by September 1994 his housing requirement had been resolved, as he had entered into an agreement to rent a house from his friend Mr Michael ¹⁹ IR£18,225.22 in a deposit account and IR£2,500 in a current account.

Wall²⁰ who it was claimed was by then seeking accommodation in Dublin in connection with a proposal to extend his UK based business interests to Dublin.

6.73 No record of the IR£16,500 received from Messrs Carew, Burke, Reilly and English was kept by Mr Ahern. No written reference, acknowledgement or receipt of the IR£16,500 was ever made by Mr Ahern or by any of the contributors.

6.74 Having regard to Mr Ahern's testimony that he only reluctantly accepted the money from the four individuals concerned, and having regard to his evidence that in 1994 he had resolved to repay these loans, the Tribunal found the absence of any documented record on his part of these loans remarkable.

6.75 None of the four individuals had any contemporaneous documentary record of the money they claimed to have given Mr Ahern. There was no banking or other record available as to the source of the cash utilised for the contributions. All four claimed that their respective contributions came from cash funds they had then available. Thus, neither on the part of the givers nor of the receiver does there exist a single record of this claimed 'goodwill loan.'

6.76 Mr Carew told the Tribunal that he had cash available to him from his own resources.

6.77 Mr Reilly said he had 'cash available through an active plastering business' in which he was engaged in at the time.

6.78 Mr Burke accounted for his having access to IR£3,500 on the basis that at the time he was in the business of buying a lot of salvage for his public house refurbishment business, and he 'had the cash.' Mr Burke also informed the Tribunal that his original intention had been to contribute IR£5,000 to Mr Ahern but that he had removed IR£1,500 from the envelope (intended for Mr Ahern), to purchase a gift for his wife's birthday.

6.79 Mr English claimed that he sourced his IR£5,000 contribution from accumulated cash savings from his work abroad and which he had brought back to Ireland. While he would, he said, have deposited his money in a bank account on his return, this was money he had 'just kept in cash.' Asked to account as to why he made such a large contribution to Mr Ahern, (his being the largest of the four), Mr English stated: '...I kind of went with a flow of the conversation that night', and had '..come away with my own view of what was an appropriate amount.'

6.80 In their evidence, none of the four individuals who claimed to have contributed sums of between IR£3,500 and IR£5,000 to Mr Ahern in September 1994 could point to any specific indicator in September 1994 such as might have prompted a decision on their part to aid Mr Ahern financially. Messrs Carew, Burke and Reilly, who were, in September 1994, longstanding close personal friends of Mr Ahern's, knew that Mr Ahern had separated from his wife in 1987 and that he had been in a new personal relationship with Ms Celia Larkin for a number of years. Almost certainly all three men knew that Mr Ahern's immediate housing needs had been taken care of, from at least 1992, on foot of the tenancy arrangement he had entered into in relation to St Luke's. Neither Mr Carew, Mr Burke nor Mr Reilly, all of whom were aware of Mr Ahern's de facto separated state since 1987 and of the fact that he had been out of his family home since that time, were able to give a logical or plausible explanation as to why they had decided in September 1994 to assist Mr Ahern financially.

6.81 Mr English barely knew Mr Ahern in September 1994, having met him on between four and six occasions. It was unlikely and implausible that Mr English, who had only been introduced into Mr Ahern's circle in June 1994 through Mr Burke, whom he first met in or after February 1994, would have been informed of or have acquired knowledge of Mr Ahern's personal affairs, whatever they might be, by September 1994. Mr English, in evidence, acknowledged that he was not a close friend of Mr Ahern's in 1994. He had, following a period working abroad, only returned to Dublin in early 1994. It struck the Tribunal as implausible that Mr English, a 25-year-old man without a house or car of his own, would in September 1994 have gifted IR£5,000 in cash to Mr Ahern.

6.82 Neither Mr Carew nor Mr Reilly had any awareness in 1993/1994 of the first 'goodwill loan' which, it was claimed, was provided to Mr Ahern in December 1993. Mr Burke's evidence was that although unsure, he thought that he had been made aware by Mr Ahern in December 1993 that '...somebody was doing something about (Mr Ahern's) legal bills from the separation.' Mr Burke however professed to have had no knowledge of the fact that Mr Ahern had taken an AIB bank loan in December 1993 to assist in the discharge of his legal bills. Mr Burke also stated that while he knew most of the contributors to the claimed first 'goodwill loan', he himself had not been approached in December 1993 in relation to that collection.

6.83 The thrust of the evidence given by Messrs Carew, Reilly and Burke was that at the time of its occurrence they were strangers to the fact that in December 1993, individuals had been approached, at the instigation of Mr Brennan and Mr Richardson, to contribute to a fund then being collected to assist Mr Ahern to discharge legal bills.

6.84 In conflict with this stated position on the part of Messrs Carew, Reilly and Burke, in his RTE interview in December 2006, Mr Ahern suggested that those who, he claimed, contributed to the second 'goodwill loan' had been '...keen to be involved at Christmas but weren't involved.' Indeed, Mr English was unknown to Mr Ahern in December, 1993.

6.85 Each of the contributors to the claimed second 'goodwill loan' gave evidence of Mr Ahern subsequently having acknowledged their individual contributions, and of Mr Ahern's statement to them that he would repay the money.

6.86 Mr Carew stated that Mr Ahern had raised the issue on 'numerous occasions', the first of which Mr Carew, although unsure, believed '...could have been three or four years after...' His description of the manner in which the issue had been raised by Mr Ahern was as follows: 'You'd be out having a drink or at a race meeting or socialising, Dermot, I must fix up that few quid with you.' Mr Carew had understood that Mr Ahern wanted to repay the money but '...everytime he offered to pay it back I just didn't take it, I just put it off.' Mr Ahern had not, Mr Carew acknowledged, ever produced the repayment money (prior to 2006).

6.87 Mr Reilly told the Tribunal that subsequent to receiving the money, Mr Ahern had thanked him, 'probably' 'in Fagan's', and said that he would repay it. Mr Ahern had told him that he had not wanted to accept the money, but that Mr Carew had insisted that he did. Mr Reilly said that on three or four occasions over the years Mr Ahern raised the issue of repayment, but had never produced the funds, prior to 2006.

6.88 Mr Burke also stated that Mr Ahern had thanked him, and had said that he was accepting Mr Burke's and the other contributions as a loan. Mr Burke testified that while Mr Ahern had not, at any time between 1994 and 2006, repaid him, the issue of repayment had been raised 'On two occasions, one was at the races when I think he won a few bob.' He recalled that Mr Ahern had uttered words to him to the effect '...if I have a few more good days like this I'll be able to pay you guys back.' Mr Burke maintained that the issue was raised by Mr Ahern on a later occasion (by which time he was Taoiseach), Mr Burke told him to 'Forget about it and we'll have a hooley when you step down.'

6.89 Mr English, who in his statement to the Tribunal described the IR£5,000 given by him to Mr Ahern as a 'soft loan', told the Tribunal that while he had provided the money as a loan, he appreciated that he was not going to see its return. On Day 799, the following exchange took place between Tribunal Counsel and Mr English:

Q. So you gave it intending it to be a loan, but you appreciated that you weren't going to see it back again, is that right?

A. Yeah.

Q. Was that a fair assumption of the relationship that you had with Mr. Ahern here, that he would take money as a loan and you would never get it back, is that what you're saying?

A. Is that what I'm saying? Like, on the night we said we'd give him the money until he got himself sorted out. Now, what happens after that you don't know.

Q. And what did happen as far as you're concerned, Mr. English, after that? You had parted with your money...

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- and what next happened, did you meet with Mr. Ahern in the Beaumont House some weeks later, days later, whatever it might be?

A. Well it wouldn't have been. Sorry. It wouldn't have been daytime, it would have been evening time.

Q. Yeah.

A. Yeah, he would have said 'look thanks for that' or something along those lines and 'I'll sort you out for it' or yes.

Q. He said he'd sort you out?

A. Some kind of an intimation that—

Q. Was that reassuring from your point of view? Did you know now that you were going to see your money back?

A. It was just his intimation at the time.

Q. But you say in your statement that you've known and socialised with him for 12 years.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Since then.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And what has taken place in that period which would indicate that he had the intention of paying you back this money?

A. Because he said things and I'll sort you out for it.

Q. Yes. But he didn't.

A. No.

Q. For 12 years.

A. Whenever – 2006, yeah.'

THE PAYMENT OF €37,640 TO MESSRS CAREW, REILLY, BURKE
AND ENGLISH IN 2006

6.90 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that in September 2006 he repaid the four contributors to the claimed second goodwill loan by providing a cheque to each individual which incorporated repayment of the capital sum and interest. Mr Ahern furnished cheques for €7,984 each (based on capital advances of IR£3,500) to Mr Reilly and Mr Burke, a cheque for €11,406 to Mr English (based on a capital advance of IR£5,000) and a cheque for €10,266 to Mr Carew (based on a capital advance of IR£4,500).

6.91 Letters from Mr Ahern accompanied the payments to each of the four individuals. Mr Ahern's letter to Mr Reilly read as follows:

29th September 2006.

Dear Paddy

I enclose a cheque in the amount of €7,984.00 in full and final settlement of the outstanding loan you very kindly extended to me all those years ago.

I would like to thank you for your very kind support and I apologise for the delay in settling this long outstanding matter.

Yours sincerely,

Bertie Ahern.

6.92 By October 2006 all four cheques had been endorsed in favour of CARI (a charitable organisation associated with Mrs Miriam Ahern) by Messrs Carew, Reilly, Burke and English and lodged to CARI's bank account on 13 October 2006 as part of a single lodgement. Mr Carew told the Tribunal that he initiated the idea that CARI would be the beneficiary of the payments.

6.93 However, Mr English told the Tribunal that he was informed of the idea of endorsing the cheques in favour of CARI by Ms Sandra Cullagh, Mr Ahern's secretary in St Luke's. Ms Cullagh had indicated to him (referring to Mr Ahern's payments to a number of contributors) that 'some are taking it back. Some are giving it to a charity and some are giving it to Miriam's charity, CARI.'

6.94 Mr Burke said that he heard of the idea of endorsing his cheque in favour of CARI from 'somebody.'

6.95 Mr Reilly told the Tribunal that he had made up his own mind to give his cheque to CARI, and that he might have heard it said 'in the office' that others were doing likewise.

6.96 Messrs Carew, Reilly and Burke indicated that the cheques provided to them by Mr Ahern did not leave St Luke's until endorsed by them in favour of CARI. Mr English told the Tribunal that he endorsed his cheque in St Luke's following a telephone call from Ms Cullagh inviting him to come to St Luke's.

6.97 All four individuals²¹ provided a pre-typed acknowledgement dated 14 December 2006 which had been furnished to them by and/or on behalf of Mr Ahern.

6.98 Mr Noel Corcoran, a tax consultant, told the Tribunal of an eight- or nine-minute telephone call he had with Mr Ahern on an unknown date, possibly in 2000, in the course of which Mr Ahern sought his advice as to the tax implications, if any, arising from Mr Ahern's receipt of loans of money from twelve individuals in amounts varying between IR£2,500 and IR£5,000 some five or six years previously, and of a further sum of Stg£8,000 following a function held in Manchester, attended by 20–25 people. Mr Ahern was unable to advise Mr Corcoran how many of the attendees contributed to the Stg£8,000 or the amount of any individual contribution. Mr Corcoran did not make any notes in the course of his telephone conversation, or subsequently, nor was any letter written to Mr Ahern in relation to the matter. Mr Corcoran told the Tribunal that, based on the information furnished to him by Mr Ahern, he advised Mr Ahern that neither the loans nor the gift of Stg£8,000 attracted any liability to tax.

6.99 Mr Corcoran said that he did not regard Mr Ahern as a client. It was his view that Mr Ahern's approach to him was informal and based on the fact that they had known each other for twenty years. Mr Corcoran said that no one had discussed the content of that telephone call with him prior to his evidence to the Tribunal, other than a brief reference to it by Mr Ahern at a meeting.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO 'THE SECOND GOODWILL LOAN'

- (i) The Tribunal rejected the evidence given by Messrs Burke, Reilly, Carew and English that they gifted or lent a total of IR£16,500 to Mr Ahern. The Tribunal was satisfied that no such collection took place.
- (ii) The reasons given by Messrs Carew, Reilly, Burke and English, which, they alleged, prompted them to contribute substantial sums of money to Mr Ahern in September 1994, namely a perceived need for financial assistance on Mr Ahern's part, appeared to the Tribunal to be without credence and indeed extraordinary, having regard in particular to the following indisputable facts:

- Mr Ahern was in 1994 the Minister for Finance and had been a Government Minister and a T.D. for approximately 7 years and was therefore in receipt of a substantial salary from the State.
 - In 1994, Mr Ahern's political prospects, both at constituency level and at national level, appeared to have been very good. There cannot have been any real concern on the part of any of the donors that Mr Ahern's prospects as a high profile national politician were anything but excellent.
 - Mr Ahern's lifestyle was apparently relatively modest.
- (iii) Particularly in relation to Mr English, it was highly improbable that in September 1994 (irrespective of Mr English's then financial circumstances) Mr English would have been sufficiently personally friendly with Mr Ahern to have made a financial contribution to him of IR£5,000 (this contribution being by far the largest single donation from the four individuals) or to have been requested to make such a contribution.
- (iv) Messrs Carew, Reilly and Burke were aware in September 1994 that Mr Ahern was residing in an apartment within St. Luke's on foot of a tenancy agreement. Mr English was possibly aware of this fact also. Furthermore by his own account, Mr Ahern's future immediate accommodation requirements were to be met by an arrangement he was to embark on with Mr Wall.
- (v) The Tribunal found Mr Ahern's assertion of having accepted a loan of IR£16,500 in September 1994 not credible in circumstances where he had as of September 1994 IR£50,000²² on deposit in his SSA (together with approximately IR£20,755.92²³ in his IPBS account), and when he had by then also honoured his commitment to commit IR£20,000 to an account for his daughters' education.
- (vi) Moreover, the Tribunal did not consider it credible that Mr Ahern would have burdened himself with a second 'goodwill loan' in circumstances where he claimed to the Tribunal (a claim rejected by the Tribunal – see Section I hereof) that he reluctantly accepted a previous 'goodwill loan' of IR£22,500 in December 1993.

²² IR£22,500 had been lodged into the SSA account on the 30 December 1993 and this lodgement was topped up to its limit of IR£50,000 on 25 April 1994 – See Section II.

²³ IR£18,225.92 in one share account, and IR£2,500 in another share account.

- (vii) Had Mr Ahern accepted sums totalling IR£16,500 from four friends in September 1994 as repayable loans, as claimed by him, it was likely that such loans would have been fully or substantially repaid by Mr Ahern long before September 2006, particularly when post June 1997 Mr Ahern's political and financial circumstances were very favourable.
- (viii) Insofar as Mr Ahern purportedly paid or actually did pay Messrs Carew, Reilly, Burke and English in September 2006 sums of money which equalled their individual alleged contributions to Mr Ahern in 1993, plus interest, the Tribunal was satisfied that such payments were not made on foot of any legal or moral requirement on Mr Ahern's part to make such payments.
- (ix) The Tribunal believed that Mr Ahern was prompted to make or tender such payments in 2006 following, and in consequence of, publicity relating to the receipt of money by him from third parties. This publicity arose following the unauthorised disclosure of the content of a letter sent by the Tribunal to Mr David McKenna in the course of the Tribunal's private inquiry into the source of the lodgement of IR£22,500 to Mr Ahern's Special Savings Account (SSA) on the 30 December 1993.
- (x) In relation to the evidence from Mr Corcoran and Mr Ahern that they discussed the tax implications in relation to Mr Ahern's acceptance of a total of IR£39,000²⁴ in loans from friends and Stg£8,000 following a dinner in Manchester, it was likely, the Tribunal believed, that Mr Corcoran was mistaken in his belief that such a discussion took place in 'possibly 2000.' The Tribunal believed it more probable, particularly having regard to Mr Corcoran's detailed recollection as to the circumstances in which Mr Ahern advised him he received the funds and the amounts involved, in the absence of any notes or record of their eight- or nine-minute telephone discussion, that their discussion took place considerably more recently than in 2000.

6.100 With reference to Mr Ahern's testimony that the money which he lodged to his 011 account on the 11 October 1994 included IR£16,500, the Tribunal's finding, as a matter of fact, that the immediate source of the IR£24,838.49 lodged to Mr Ahern's account on the 11 October 1994 was Stg£25,000 itself established that Mr Ahern's contention that portion of the composition of the lodgement comprised a sum of IR£16,500 could not have been the case, and thus the Tribunal was satisfied that insofar as Mr Ahern gave evidence to the contrary, such was untrue.

²⁴This sum included IR£22,500 – the claimed first 'goodwill loan' Mr Ahern claimed to have received in December, 1993, as well as the IR£16,500 which it was claimed constituted the second 'goodwill loan.'

THE MANCHESTER STG£8,000 PAYMENT

MR AHERN'S ACCOUNT OF EVENTS

6.101 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that on a Friday night in either May or September 1994, either at the beginning or end of the UK Premier Division football season, following a dinner he attended in the Four Seasons Hotel in Manchester he received from the late Mr Tim Kilroe, the then proprietor of the hotel, an envelope which he was advised contained a financial contribution.

6.102 According to Mr Ahern, the circumstances in which the envelope came to be handed over to him were as follows. On the eve of a Manchester United match, Mr Ahern had met with (what he described as) a 'hot' group of about twenty Irish business people, who had settled in Manchester, for an informal meal. In the course of this informal meal (which it was stated took place in the general hotel restaurant and not in a private room) Mr Ahern addressed the assembled individuals on the subject of the Irish economy, by way of a question and answer session.

6.103 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that following the conclusion of the dinner, when the group had retired to the hotel bar, Mr Kilroe, with one or two others, approached Mr Ahern to convey their appreciation for his presence at the dinner. Mr Ahern stated that Mr Kilroe told him that they wished to make a financial contribution to him. When asked by Mr Ahern if what was being presented to him was a political contribution for Fianna Fáil (Mr Ahern intimated to the Tribunal that if that had been the case he 'would have to have given the funds to the party') Mr Kilroe had replied that it was a 'personal contribution' for Mr Ahern's use and had nothing to do with the (Fianna Fáil) Party.

6.104 When asked in the course of his evidence about his understanding of the reason for the payment, Mr Ahern stated:

'Given because I have attended a number of their functions but I think that night because I had asked, I had stayed with them, I always wouldn't stay, I'd go back into town in Manchester, out with my friends. A number of places we'd go over the years, I stayed with them, I answered a lot of questions, a lot of detailed questions. These are fairly serious business people, they invest and they know business and I had stayed with them answering questions and talking to them.'

6.105 Mr Ahern stated that when handing over the envelope Mr Kilroe did not apprise him of the amount of money in the envelope, nor had there been any intimation as to who among the group had contributed.

6.106 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that he did not examine the contents of the envelope until he arrived home in Ireland the following day, and only then did he discover that the financial contribution given to him was in fact 'about 8,000' in Stg£50 notes.

6.107 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that he had attended similar events in Manchester over the years but that this event (in either May or September 1994) was the first time he had been given a cash gift. Previous presentations made to him consisted of gifts of glassware or books. Mr Ahern described the group he addressed in May/September 1994 as comprising very wealthy and successful Manchester-based Irish businessmen. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that during the course of the dinner and during the course of his question and answer session he had not observed any collection being taken up from the assembled individuals. Mr Ahern said he subsequently thanked Mr Kilroe by telephone for the financial contribution.

6.108 Mr Peelo's report of 20 April 2006 made reference to two individuals who, Mr Ahern claimed, were in a position to corroborate Mr Ahern's account of how he came to receive circa Stg£8,000 in 1994. The individuals identified by Mr Ahern were Senator Tony Kett and Mr John Kennedy.

SENATOR TONY KETT²⁵

6.109 Senator Kett (since deceased) provided the Tribunal with a written statement on 18 August 2006 and gave sworn evidence on Day 800.

6.110 In his written statement, Senator Kett made reference to having accompanied Mr Ahern to a Manchester United football match and recalled that Mr Ahern had performed an 'official function' for the Irish community in Manchester, and had invited Senator Kett to it. According to Senator Kett, Mr Ahern had used the occasion to promote Ireland and had spoken for between 20 minutes and half an hour and had thereafter engaged in a question and answer session, all of which had taken approximately two hours.

²⁵ Senator Kett described himself as a close personal friend of Mr Ahern from the 1970's when both worked in the Mater Hospital. Senator Kett was elected to the Seanad in 1997, having previously been a Dublin City Councillor.

6.111 In response to specific questions which had been put to him by the Tribunal relating to the Manchester event, Senator Kett stated in a letter dated 29 June 2006 as follows:

With regard to your specific questions I make the following comments:

1. I have no knowledge of any of the names of the individuals present on that night, as I believe it was my first and last time to encounter them.

2. To my knowledge Mr Ahern received an amount in the region of £8,000 stg. I recall him expressing surprise at receiving a donation as he apparently had never received one in the past despite I believe having performed similar functions.

3. I recall the time being the spring of 1994 as it was close to the end of the football season. I have no knowledge of the individuals present, as to my mind I have never met them before or since. My primary reason for being in Manchester was to attend a football match.

4. I made no contribution whatsoever on the occasion.

5. I have no knowledge of who made contributions or of the amounts of these contributions.

6.112 In the course of his evidence on Day 800 Senator Kett clarified his use of the words ‘official function’ and explained that what he had intended to convey to the Tribunal was that in the context of the weekend in Manchester, Mr Ahern had deviated from the objective of the weekend, which was football, to be ‘serious for a couple of hours.’

6.113 Senator Kett told the Tribunal that he did not observe any collection for Mr Ahern taking place on the night in question, nor had he been privy to any discussion in that regard with any individual on the night. Senator Kett stated that he had not seen anything being handed to Mr Ahern. Some days after the event, in Ireland, Mr Ahern had mentioned to him that he had received a contribution from the ‘guys’ in Manchester. When imparting that information to Senator Kett, Mr Ahern had not apprised him of how much he had received, nor had Senator Kett made any inquiry in this regard of Mr Ahern. Senator Kett felt, however, that at a later date Mr Ahern had told him that he had received Stg£8,000. He told the Tribunal that while he had made no reaction to this news, probably ‘deep down’ he had been amazed at Mr Ahern’s good fortune.

MR JOHN KENNEDY²⁶

6.114 On 18 July 2006 Mr Kennedy replied to the Tribunal's inquiry as to his knowledge of the Manchester event. In the course of his reply Mr Kennedy set out his recollection of Mr Ahern engaging with the Irish community in Manchester at various events during the 1980s and 1990s. Mr Kennedy made reference to one such event which he claimed took place at the Four Seasons and which he had organised with Mr Tim Kilroe. Mr Kennedy stated that he had personally donated Stg£1,000 to Mr Ahern at the event in support of his efforts 'in changing the face of Irish politics.' In his letter to the Tribunal, Mr Kennedy also stated that his belief was that something short of Stg£10,000 had been raised for Mr Ahern. Mr Kennedy also stated that Mr Ahern had addressed the group about the Irish economy and had answered questions over the course of several hours.

6.115 In advance of Mr Kennedy giving evidence to the Tribunal on Day 802 (18 December 2007), Mr Kennedy's solicitor, Mr Hugh Millar, furnished the Tribunal with a letter of the same date wherein Mr Kennedy 'clarified' certain matters which he had adverted to in his previous correspondence with the Tribunal.

6.116 Specifically, the letter of 18 December 2007 stated that:

- 1) Mr Kennedy had not, contrary to what he had previously stated, been involved in organising the dinner in Manchester. Mr Kennedy had attended at the invitation of Mr Tim Kilroe.
- 2) Mr Kennedy had not, contrary to what he had previously contended, personally given a donation of Stg£1,000 to Mr Ahern, rather he had handed money to Mr Kilroe which he believed was subsequently given to Mr Ahern.
- 3) The money given to Mr Ahern on the occasion in question had not, contrary to what he had previously contended, been to support Mr Ahern's 'efforts in changing the face of Irish politics', rather, Mr Kennedy had been advised by Mr Kilroe that Mr Ahern had certain financial difficulties as a result of his marital breakdown, and it had been in this context that Mr Kennedy had been asked by Mr Kilroe to give a donation to Mr Ahern.
- 4) Mr Kennedy did not know how much money had been collected at the dinner in Manchester, and the figure of £10,000 quoted in his earlier letter had been 'speculation' on his part.

²⁶ Mr Kennedy was a Manchester based businessman.

Mr Millar went on to state that this information had not been recorded in Mr Kennedy's earlier letter to the Tribunal to avoid embarrassment to Mr Ahern and unnecessary intrusion into his private life. It was, however, noteworthy that over the twelve months prior to Mr Kennedy's first communication with the Tribunal, and at a time according to Mr Kennedy, when he wished to avoid a reference to Mr Ahern's marital circumstances and his consequential financial difficulties (as he understood them to have been), Mr Ahern had himself publicly referred to them in the course of an interview conducted by Mr Bryan Dobson of RTÉ in September 2006.

6.117 On Day 802 Mr Kennedy testified that some three or four days prior to the event in Manchester, he had been telephoned by Mr Kilroe about the event and Mr Kilroe had advised him to bring 'a few bob' with him, as someone special, namely Mr Ahern, Minister for Finance, would be attending. Mr Kennedy told the Tribunal that he duly arrived at the hotel with Stg£1,000 cash on him. Mr Kilroe had mentioned to him Mr Ahern's recent separation from his wife and the fact that as Minister for Finance Mr Ahern 'didn't have a bob in his pocket.'

6.118 Mr Kennedy told the Tribunal that he had no specific connection to Mr Ahern and claimed that he had contributed the Stg£1,000 cash because he had been requested to do so by Mr Kilroe.

6.119 Mr Kennedy believed the group in attendance on the night comprised between 20 and 25 individuals. Of the attendees, other than Mr Kilroe and Mr Ahern, Mr Kennedy claimed he could recall the names of only three. All three individuals named by Mr Kennedy on Day 802 were, as of that date, deceased, as was Mr Kilroe.

6.120 Notwithstanding the claim made in Mr Millar's letter of 18 December 2007 that Mr Kennedy's earlier statement to the Tribunal to the effect that something short of Stg£10,000 had been collected for Mr Ahern was 'speculation' on his part, Mr Kennedy, in evidence, claimed to recall Mr Kilroe telling him that something between Stg£8,000 and Stg£10,000 had been collected for Mr Ahern. However, Mr Kennedy stated to the Tribunal that he did not know exactly how much had been collected. He claimed that Mr Kilroe had not asked him to bring along any specific amount of money.

6.121 It was his (Mr Kennedy's) decision to bring and pay a sum of Stg£1,000 as a contribution to Mr Ahern. Mr Kennedy was not privy to what amount Mr Kilroe had given nor to what anyone else had given, although his understanding was that the vast majority of the attendees on the night would have contributed to the fund.

6.122 Mr Kennedy told the Tribunal that at no stage had Mr Ahern contacted him to ascertain if he had contributed to the money Mr Ahern claimed to have received.

6.123 The Tribunal considered it remarkable that Mr Kennedy, whose name had been proffered by Mr Ahern to the Tribunal as someone who was in attendance at the dinner (and therefore a potential donor) had never been contacted by Mr Ahern to ascertain if he had been one of the contributors to the circa Stg£8,000.

THE MANCHESTER DINNER DONATION: THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS

6.124 In relation to Mr Ahern's account as to his attendance at a dinner in Manchester in 1994, and there receiving a personal donation of approximately Stg£8,000, the Tribunal was satisfied that this account was untrue for the following reasons:

- (i) Mr Ahern could not identify the approximately twenty attendees at the dinner²⁷, despite his advice to the Tribunal that:
 - The group largely consisted of Manchester-based Irish businessmen, described by Mr Ahern as a 'hot' group of Irish people.
 - He had met 'most' of them 'many times before and since.' He said he thought he would know half (i.e. approximately ten) of them 'very well.' In his private interview with the Tribunal, Mr Ahern referred to the attendees at the dinner as 'a group of mainly West of Ireland businessmen, who are very successful businessmen', and said that 'a number of these people have boxes in United, I would know them well', and 'I have been lucky enough to be [in] their boxes then and on a number of occasions then and since.' In his sworn evidence, Mr Ahern described the attendees as 'a considerably important group of people' and stated that 'every one of these people were worth 50 million plus at the time.' Mr Ahern also stated that the attendees had '... on other occasions ...given me gifts' (other than cash). Mr Ahern also told the Tribunal that 'some of these people ... are people I know and respect' and that he would 'consider these people, if not good friends, friends...'
 - He was unable to identify, in particular, the one or two men who accompanied Mr Kilroe when Mr Kilroe presented him with an envelope containing approximately Stg£8,000 cash, in denominations of Stg£50 notes.

²⁷ Other than Mr Kilroe, Mr Kennedy and Senator Kett. Mr Ahern's inability to identify attendees was indicated in a letter dated 17 October 2006 written by Mr Ahern's accountant, Mr Peelo, to the Revenue Commissioners.

- (ii) Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that he did not count the sterling in the envelope that night (being a Friday) or the following day (being a Saturday), and it was his belief that he first counted the money on the following Monday (or possibly on the Sunday night) following his return to Dublin.
- (iii) The Tribunal believed that if Mr Ahern had been unexpectedly (according to himself) handed an envelope containing a large amount of cash at or close to the end of a dinner on a Friday night, in circumstances where he was in Manchester for social reasons for an entire weekend, it was unlikely that he would have waited to check its contents until the Sunday evening or Monday morning, following his return to Dublin.
- (iv) Moreover, had Mr Ahern received a gift of thousands of pounds in sterling cash in 1994, as described by him (and stated by him to have been an unexpected and unsolicited personal gift) it would reasonably have been expected, particularly given his then position as Minister for Finance, that he would have been anxious to ascertain the identity of the contributors.
- (v) It was more likely, had Mr Ahern been unexpectedly presented with a substantial sum of cash at the dinner on the Friday evening, as he claimed, that he would have made himself aware of the size of the contribution overnight, and would have taken steps to personally thank Mr Kilroe (and possibly others who contributed) on the Saturday, or at the very least acknowledged his gratitude in writing to Mr Kilroe on his return to Dublin.
- (vi) The Tribunal considered the evidence tendered by Senator Kett to have been of little assistance to it in its quest to determine if in fact Mr Ahern received a gift of Stg£8,000 at a function in Manchester, and of the amounts paid, and the identities of the donors. All that could be gleaned from his evidence was that on an occasion in 1994 (he believed it to be the Spring of 1994), Senator Kett accompanied Mr Ahern to Manchester. While he claimed to have attended a dinner with Mr Ahern in the Four Seasons, with regard to the issue of Mr Ahern being given money on that occasion Senator Kett's evidence was that he saw nothing, heard nothing and was told nothing at the time. Senator Kett's evidence was that he was subsequently apprised by Mr Ahern of the latter's receipt of the donation. Senator Kett's recollection was that on a later date again he was apprised by Mr Ahern of the amount of the donation.

- (vii) The Tribunal considered that Mr Kennedy's evidence that he contributed a sum of Stg£1,000 to Mr Ahern at a particular dinner in Manchester was completely unconvincing. The Tribunal considered as not credible Mr Kennedy's inability to name more than three individuals (all since deceased) who were present at the claimed function.

6.125 Consequent on the Tribunal's finding that the IR£24,838.49 lodgement to Mr Ahern's 011 account on 11 October 1994 was in fact funded by Stg£25,000, Mr Ahern's contention that a sterling sum of only approximately £8,000 contributed to the lodgement cannot have been the case. Thus, Mr Ahern did not account to the Tribunal as to the true composition of the lodgement he made to his SSA on 11 October 1994.

6.126 Because Mr Ahern failed to account correctly to the Tribunal as to the composition of the IR£24,838.49 lodgement to his bank account on 11 October 1994, the Tribunal was unable to determine the circumstances by which he came to be in possession of Stg£25,000 on 11 October 1994.

THE EVIDENCE OF MR CORCORAN

6.127 In relation to the evidence from Mr Corcoran and Mr Ahern that they discussed the tax implications in relation to Mr Ahern's acceptance of a total of IR£39,000 from friends and Stg£8,000 following a dinner in Manchester, it was likely, the Tribunal believed, that Mr Corcoran was mistaken in his belief that such a discussion took place in 'possibly 2000.' The Tribunal believed it more probable, particularly having regard to Mr Corcoran's detailed recollection as to the circumstances in which Mr Ahern advised him he received the funds, and the amounts involved, in the absence of any notes or record of their eight- or nine-minute telephone discussion, that their discussion took place considerably more recently than in 2000.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 10 - SECTION IV : THE LODGEMENT OF IR£28,772.90 ON 5 DECEMBER 1994¹

THE BACKGROUND

7.01 On 7 February 2005, Mr Ahern’s solicitors, under cover of a letter which accompanied an affidavit of discovery sworn by Mr Ahern on foot of an order for discovery of 24 November 2004, advised the Tribunal that Mr Ahern had transferred funds from two of his AIB bank accounts to the account of his then partner, Ms Celia Larkin. It was duly established that this reference to a transfer of Mr Ahern’s funds to Ms Larkin’s account concerned funds totalling IR£50,000 which were transferred from two of Mr Ahern’s accounts into a 28 day fixed deposit account which was opened in the name of Ms Larkin (hereinafter called the Larkin 015 account)² in AIB Upper O’Connell Street on 5 December 1994. This information prompted the Tribunal to inquire into a number of banking transactions involving accounts in Ms Larkin’s name.

7.02 On 14 June 2006, immediately prior to Ms Larkin being interviewed in private by Counsel for the Tribunal, her solicitor forwarded to the Tribunal a memorandum prepared by her for that interview, in which she set out her involvement with Mr Ahern’s financial affairs. In that memorandum, Ms Larkin identified three accounts which had been opened by her in her name, and which had been operated by her from 5 December 1994 to 8 November 1995, all of which had an association with Mr Ahern. One such account was a 35 day fixed account into which a lodgement of IR£28,772.90 was made on 5 December 1994. In the extract referred to below, that account is referred to as ‘the Third Deposit Account.’ However, for ease of reference the account is hereafter referred to as the Larkin 011 account.

7.03 Under the heading ‘the Third Deposit Account’, Ms Larkin stated the following:

The property at 44 Beresford³ was purchased by Mr Michael Wall, [a] friend of Mr Ahern’s who lived in Manchester. To the best of my knowledge an agreement was reached between Mr Wall and Mr Ahern whereby Mr Wall, who wished to acquire property in Dublin for use from time to time, agreed to purchase 44 Beresford and to rent the property to Mr Ahern while at the same time giving Mr Ahern an option to purchase the property. To the best of my knowledge this was a verbal agreement.

¹ The Tribunal’s consideration of technical banking evidence relating to the handling and processing of foreign exchange within AIB is to be found in Section III in addition to this Section. For a full understanding of same both Sections III and IV should be read.

³ No. 44 Beresford Avenue, Drumcondra, Dublin 9, (Beresford) Mr Ahern’s home from 1995.

The property was a second-hand property and required renovations. This included the building of a conservatory. For the purpose of carrying out the renovations, building the conservatory and paying the stamp duty on the purchase of 44 Beresford, and as he lived in the UK, Mr Wall requested that I open an account for him into which he deposited a figure of IR£28,772.90. This was an unusual IR£ figure as the lodgement was originally a sterling amount. He asked me to assist by arranging payment to the builders and generally completing the house and to use the money in the Third Deposit Account for this purpose. I therefore opened the Third Deposit Account at Allied Irish Banks of O'Connell Street for the purpose of receiving the IR£28,772.90 from Mr Wall. That sum was lodged by Mr Wall to the Third Deposit Account on 5th December 1994.

Apart from interest on the Third Deposit Account there were no further lodgements to that account.

Out of Third Deposit Account I paid £8,442 on 15th May 1995 to the solicitor who handled the purchase principally to cover stamp duty on the acquisition of the house as I recall. I withdrew all the money remaining in the account totalling £20,050.91 on 19 June 1995 out of which I paid the sum of £11,000 approximately to the builder and on Mr Wall's instructions I lodged the balance in the sum of £9,684.71 to the Second Deposit Account.

A copy of the statement for the Third Deposit Account is in Schedule 4.

7.04 This was the first occasion on which the existence of the Larkin 011 account was made known to the Tribunal.

THE LETTER TO THE TRIBUNAL FROM MR AHERN'S SOLICITORS DATED 27 FEBRUARY 2007

7.05 On 9 February 2007, the Tribunal wrote to Mr Ahern's solicitors seeking information in relation to, inter alia, the Larkin 011 account.

7.06 Mr Ahern responded through his solicitors in a letter of 27 February 2007. In that letter, the following information, inter alia, was provided to the Tribunal:

- 1) After our client's marital separation in November 1993, and following a number of years of not having a settled residence, our client sought a property to purchase or rent. Some time was spent in 1994 seeking a suitable property.*
- 2) In summer 1994, Mr Michael Wall, a friend of our client from Manchester, decided to purchase a house in Dublin for his own accommodation on his increased visits to the city.*

- 3) Mr Wall located and purchased 44 Beresford Ave (Mr Ahern's present residence). Shortly afterwards, in discussion with Mr Ahern, he agreed to rent the premises to him and also agreed an option for Mr Ahern to purchase the house at market value at a point in the future when his financial circumstances became more secure.
- 4) It was agreed between Mr Ahern and Mr Wall that they would jointly renovate the premises, loosely on the basis of Mr Wall doing the structural work and Mr Ahern doing the interior.
- 5) It was agreed that Ms Celia Larkin would organise the detail of the work being Mr Ahern's partner and a close friend of Mr Wall.
- 6) In December 2004 Mr Ahern transferred to Ms Larkin a sum of £50,000. Around the time Mr Wall also transferred a sum of £28,772.90 to Ms Larkin. These monies were lodged in two accounts opened by Ms Larkin in AIB, 37/38 Upper O'Connell Street, Dublin 1 as follows:
 - 1/L/11621/011: £28,772.90 from Mr Wall;*
 - 1/L/11620/015: £50,000 from Mr Ahern.*

7.07 It was not stated in this letter to the Tribunal that the source of the IR£28,772.90 was, or included, sterling.

7.08 The Tribunal was informed by Mr Ahern that the sum had been transferred from Mr Michael Wall (rather than a lodgement). Furthermore, the letter did not disclose the fact that, as Mr Ahern subsequently claimed, the money had initially been provided to him in cash, and had been passed by him to Ms Larkin for lodgement in AIB.

THE TRIBUNAL'S INQUIRY INTO THE COMPOSITION OF THE FUNDS WHICH SOURCED THE LODGEMENT OF IR£28,772.90

7.09 At the Tribunal's request, members of its legal team privately interviewed Ms Larkin, Mr Wall and Mr Ahern, and in the presence of their lawyers, on, respectively, 14 June 2006, 26 February and 5 April 2007. All, subsequent to the dates of their private interviews, gave sworn evidence to the Tribunal.

MS LARKIN'S PRIVATE INTERVIEW

7.10 In the course of her private interview on 14 June 2006, Ms Larkin advised the Tribunal of the following in relation to the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 to her account on 5 December 1994:

- Ms Larkin, having received the money from Mr Wall in Mr Brennan's office, opened 'the Michael Wall account' with a lodgement of 'IR£28,000 and something' for use in relation to structural work, including the construction of a conservatory, and the payment of stamp duty 'and things like that for the house' (44 Beresford Ave, Mr Ahern's residence in Drumcondra).
- A second bank account was opened into which IR£50,000 was lodged for decoration and furnishings. Ms Larkin called this 'the Bertie Account.'
- Ms Larkin thought that the money provided by Mr Wall was, sterling cash, 'rather than Irish cash', and said that she recollected it as being sterling.
- Ms Larkin thought that she lodged the IR£28,772.90 having taken the money from 'Michael in Gerry's [i.e. Mr Ahern's solicitor, Gerry Brennan's] office.'

MR WALL'S PRIVATE INTERVIEW

7.11 In the course of Mr Wall's private interview on 26 February 2007, the Tribunal was advised by him as follows:

- 'It was notes. To the best of my knowledge, it was sterling. I tried to recollect on that. There may have been a percentage of punts. I don't know, but to the best of my knowledge it was all sterling.'
- 'To me at the time the figure I had in my mind was around 30,000 pounds sterling.'
- 'The figure was around Stg£30,000' and was 'an even sum.'
- Mr Wall said that he had counted Stg£30,000 from his safe in Manchester for the purpose of taking it to Ireland, and he was satisfied that he himself had counted Stg£30,000.
- Mr Wall said that on arrival at St Luke's in Drumcondra on 3 December 1994, he had with him Stg£30,000 in Stg£20 notes.

MR BERTIE AHERN'S PRIVATE INTERVIEW

7.12 In the course of Mr Ahern's private interview on 5 April 2007, the Tribunal was advised as follows:

- 'He [Mr Wall] gave over the £30,000.'
- Mr Ahern said that Mr Wall had agreed to 'give £30,000 towards what we would do if we got the house'
- 'He was putting in the £30,000.'

7.13 In the course of the interview, the following exchange took place between Counsel for the Tribunal and Mr Ahern:

Q. 'I think the method it was paid was in cash?'

A. '£30,000 sterling.'

Q. 'He was putting in £30,000 sterling?'

A. 'Yes.'

7.14 Mr Ahern said that Mr Wall had advised him he was giving him £30,000 in sterling, and that the £30,000 given to him by Mr Wall was cash and in sterling, and was then given in its entirety to Ms Larkin for lodgement.

7.15 In the course of the interview, Mr Ahern was advised by Counsel for the Tribunal that information provided to the Tribunal by AIB did not support the claim that IR£28,772.90 was the proceeds of a Stg£30,000 exchange into Irish pounds, and that the application of a published customer buy rate for US dollars on 5 December 1994 to IR£28,772.90 produced an exact match for US$45,000 (if a commission of IR£5 was charged). The suggestion that the source of the lodgement might have been US dollars was firmly rejected by Mr Ahern.

THE PUBLIC STATEMENT MADE BY MR AHERN ON 13 MAY 2007

7.16 Following extensive media reports relating to the Tribunal's inquiries into Mr Ahern's personal finances, Mr Ahern issued a public statement on 13 May 2007, in which he stated that the source of the IR£28,772.90 lodgement to Ms Larkin's account on 5 December 1994 was a sum of money 'mostly in sterling, though there may have been some Irish pounds as well.' This was the first occasion on which Mr Ahern maintained that the cash given to him by Mr Wall, which funded the IR£28,772.90 lodgement to Ms Larkin's account on 5 December 1994, had been composed of anything other than exactly Stg£30,000.

7.17 On 13 September 2007, Mr Ahern, in the course of his first day of evidence to the Tribunal again referred to the lodgement having been comprised of a mixture of currencies (see below).

THE SWORN EVIDENCE OF MS LARKIN, MR WALL AND MR AHERN AS TO THE COMPOSITION OF THE FUNDS COMPRISING THE LODGEMENT OF IR£28,772.90

MS LARKIN'S SWORN EVIDENCE

7.18 Ms Larkin claimed not to know of the exact composition of the funds which sourced her lodgement of IR£28,772.90 on 5 December 1994. Ms Larkin said she recollected observing a few bundles of sterling notes on a table in Mr Ahern's office on Saturday 3 December 1994, the date on which Mr Wall claimed he handed over a substantial sum of money to Mr Ahern. Ms Larkin said that over that weekend Mr Ahern asked her to lodge cash in AIB, at the branch at 37/38 O'Connell Street, Dublin, on the Monday, and he identified Mr Philip Murphy of AIB as the person with whom she should make contact in the bank. Ms Larkin could not recall the amount of money (although she said she was 'sure' that Mr Ahern 'must have' told her), which was duly left for her in a briefcase in St. Luke's to be taken to the bank, but it was her assumption that it was Stg£30,000. Ms Larkin said that she did not see the contents of the briefcase at any time.

7.19 Ms Larkin's recollection was that Mr Murphy of AIB met her when she called to AIB on, on 5 December 1994, and believed that Mr Ahern had spoken to him prior to her arrival at the bank. The briefcase containing the cash was handed to Mr Murphy. Mr Murphy had the lodgement processed, then requested her to sign completed bank documentation and returned the briefcase (which she assumed was empty), to her.

MR WALL'S SWORN EVIDENCE

7.20 Mr Wall told the Tribunal that he and his wife travelled from Manchester to Dublin on Friday 2 December 1994 to attend the O'Donovan Rossa annual dinner⁴ at the Royal Hospital in Kilmainham, an event held to raise funds for the upkeep of Mr Ahern's constituency office at St Luke's.

7.21 Shortly prior to that date, Mr Wall had successfully tendered for the purchase⁵ of no 44 Beresford Ave, Drumcondra, Dublin 9 for a price of IR£138,000, and had paid over a cheque for Stg£3,000 to his solicitor, Mr Gerry Brennan, as a first deposit for the purchase. Mr Brennan was also Mr Ahern's solicitor and a personal friend of Mr Ahern.

7.22 Mr Wall told the Tribunal that he brought the cash from Manchester (mostly in sterling, but possibly including a small amount in Irish pounds)⁶ for the purposes of handing it over to Mr Ahern as a contribution towards the refurbishment costs of the house, which he said Mr Ahern had agreed to rent.

7.23 Mr Wall claimed that he had taken this cash from his business safe, and that the cash was sourced back to his Manchester based business, Wall's

⁴ Mr Wall told the Tribunal that, apart from his support for the Kilmainham dinner, the only payment of money by him for a purpose associated with Mr Ahern was a donation to Mr Tim Collins for the benefit of the Fianna Fáil Party, which may have been lodged to the 'BT' Account (see Section VIII).

⁵ See Section VIII

⁶ In his earlier private interview with the Tribunal, Mr Wall stated that the sum was Stg£30,000, and that he had counted out this sum prior to leaving the UK.

Coaches. He described having 'near enough' emptied his safe in Manchester to provide these funds. He acknowledged, however, that the records of his business did not make any specific reference to a withdrawal of a sum of approximately Stg£30,000.⁷

7.24 Mr Wall said that he and his wife stayed overnight in the Ashling Hotel in Dublin on the evening of the fundraising dinner. Mr Wall stated that while attending this function, he left the circa £30,000 cash sum in a briefcase in his hotel bedroom wardrobe. He did not inform his wife about the substantial cash sum he had brought to Dublin, nor of the fact that it was kept overnight in their hotel wardrobe, including the period of their absence from the hotel.

7.25 Mr Wall's recollection was that when going out to the dinner he had 'shoved about two grand' in his pocket from the Manchester cash. Mr Wall said that he took the balance of the cash in a briefcase to Mr Ahern's constituency office in St Luke's on 3 December 1994, the day following the fundraising event, and there handed it to Mr Ahern. Mr Wall said that the 'vast majority' of the cash was sterling.

7.26 Mr Wall described this money as 'working cash', for the purpose of providing funds to refurbish no 44 Beresford Avenue, Drumcondra.

7.27 Mr Wall described taking the money out of the briefcase and putting it on the table between himself and Mr Ahern. In the course of his evidence he elaborated as follows:

'...and at that time we didn't count it, he didn't count it, I didn't count it. I just said it's roughly there and he suggested that he'd put it in the bank and either he called in Ms. Larkin or she came in, but she became involved and we had discussed with her as well that she would take charge of looking after the money and looking after the work that's to be done. And it was suggested that it would be, that they would put it in the bank.'

7.28 Mr Wall was questioned in the course of his sworn evidence to the Tribunal as to how much money he had in fact handed over to Mr Ahern on 3 December 1994. He told the Tribunal he believed he handed to Mr Ahern approximately £28,000, 'the vast majority' of which was sterling, and that it would have included 'a couple of thousand punts.' In the course of his earlier private interview with the Tribunal, Mr Wall had stated that the sum was 'around Stg£30,000', and that he had counted Stg£30,000 taken from his safe in

⁷ Mr Walls' accountancy records referred to other expenditure by him in connection with Beresford, but not the Stg£30,000.

Manchester for the purpose of taking it to Ireland on that weekend. In the course of his evidence, Mr Wall finally suggested that the amount given to Mr Ahern ‘could be something like £26,000 sterling and £2,000 punts’ and he added ‘I am not positive. Never have been.’

7.29 Mr Wall said he had never handled a substantial sum in US dollars and did not give Mr Ahern US dollars.

MR AHERN'S SWORN EVIDENCE

7.30 Mr Ahern began his sworn evidence to the Tribunal on 13 September 2007 by reading out a lengthy personal statement in which he provided information, inter alia, relating to the source of the IR£28,772.90 lodged into Ms Larkin’s account on 5 December 1994. In the course of his statement he said:

‘Whatever monies [were] presented by Mick Wall, whether sterling or a combination of sterling and Irish and whatever amounts were the sums, lodged in the account on the 5th December 1994 and they were the monies I left for Celia Larkin to lodge to her account on the 5th December 1994. And that is what she lodged. It is a fact [that] the combination of sterling and punt gives the figure actually lodged...’

7.31 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that Mr Wall handed him a substantial sum of money in St Luke’s on Saturday 3 December 1994. Mr Ahern initially described the sum handed over as Stg£30,000, but later as a sum close to Stg£30,000.⁸ He testified that he was aware that Mr Wall intended to contribute towards the refurbishment of the house at Beresford in Drumcondra, but he could not recall if he was aware, prior to the money being handed over, that Mr Wall was to give him money on the occasion of his visit to St Luke’s on 3 December 1994. Mr Ahern said that it had been agreed between himself and Mr Wall that Mr Ahern would discharge the costs of decorative/internal work on Beresford in Drumcondra, while Mr Wall’s contribution would pay for external and structural work and other expenditure relating to the house, including the construction of a conservatory. Mr Ahern said it had also been agreed between himself and Mr Wall that Ms Larkin would oversee the expenditure on Beresford, hence the decision to lodge the proceeds of Mr Wall’s contribution to an account of Ms Larkin on 5 December 1994.

7.32 It was Mr Ahern’s evidence that although the substantial cash sum was handed over to him by Mr Wall, and was then lodged to an account of Ms Larkin on 5 December 1994, he regarded the funds as Mr Wall’s property.

⁸ Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that subsequently in 1995 he purchased Stg£30,000 so as to reimburse Mr Wall for the cash provided on 3 December 1994. See Section V.

7.33 In the course of his evidence in relation to his claim that he purchased Stg£30,000⁹ within a period of some six months between 19 January and 15 June 1995, Mr Ahern stated that the reason for the purchase was in order to return to Mr Wall the contribution he had made in relation to Beresford on 3 December 1994. When giving sworn evidence on that matter, Mr Ahern did not maintain that any sum less than Stg£30,000 had been given to him by Mr Wall on 3 December 1994.

REVIEW AND ANALYSIS OF THE BANKING EVIDENCE

7.34 Following the disclosure of the existence of the account, it was established from bank documentation that on 5 December 1994, AIB Account No. 1/L/11621/011 had been opened in the name of Ms Celia Larkin, and a sum of IR£28,772.90 had been deposited to it on that day.

7.35 AIB branches bought and sold foreign currency on a daily basis. The branches regularly (although not necessarily on a daily basis) remitted foreign currency in excess of their expected requirements, to Currency Services (in AIB's head office, and sometimes referred to as 'the note room'). Branches prepared and maintained handwritten and computer-generated records of the Irish pound values of foreign currency bought and sold each day.

7.36 These records divided the foreign currency into two separate categories, namely the Irish pound value of sterling, and the Irish pound value of foreign currency other than sterling. Both the branch records and the records maintained by Currency Services identified the Irish pound values of foreign currency remitted by branches to Currency Services.

7.37 The Tribunal sought to establish the composition of the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 to Ms Larkin's account on 5 December 1994. As part of that process the Tribunal conducted a detailed examination of all available documentation and information provided to it by AIB, and heard sworn evidence from a number of AIB personnel.

7.38 This process involved a close examination of all available documentation and an explanation from AIB personnel as to practices and procedures in the bank's branches and Currency Services applicable to the purchase of foreign currency and in particular relating to the 37/38 O'Connell Street branch on 5 December 1994 and including the remit (transfer) of foreign currency from that branch to Currency Services generally, and particularly on 5 December 1994.

⁹ See Section V.

INTERNALLY GENERATED BRANCH DOCUMENTATION

7.39 Branch documentation furnished by AIB to the Tribunal in relation to the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 to Ms Larkin's account on 5 December 1994 established that, in the first instance, the funds were transferred to an RDC account (a holding account) within AIB on that date. The stamp on the credit docket effecting the transfer indicated that the deposit was processed through the foreign exchange counter of the branch.

7.40 The Tribunal was advised that details of individual foreign currency transactions in the branch were recorded throughout the day's business on the tally roll of the Forde Money Changer.¹⁰

THE DEBIT DOCKETS AND THE FOREIGN CURRENCY HELD LEDGER

7.41 The Tribunal was advised that the procedure within a branch was that at the close of business on each day a bank official manually recorded onto debit dockets the foreign currency totals based on the information contained in the Forde Money Changer's tally roll. The foreign currency totals were also entered into the branch's computerised Foreign Currency Held Ledger. These debit dockets and the computerised Foreign Currency Held Ledger were retained by AIB, and were made available to the Tribunal.

7.42 On 5 December 1994 two debit dockets were, in accordance with normal practice, completed within the branch at the close of business. One of the debit dockets had written into it a total figure for sterling purchased within the branch from customers on that day, while the other debit docket recorded the total of foreign currency other than sterling¹¹ purchased from customers on that day within the branch. The debit dockets completed within the branch on 5 December 1994 recorded the totals as being IR£1,921.53 and IR£28,969.34 respectively. On the face of it, therefore, this documentation established that on 5 December 1994 the 37/38 O'Connell Street branch of AIB purchased sterling from customers to the value of IR£1,921.53, and purchased foreign exchange other than sterling to the value of IR£28,969.34.

¹⁰ Bank staff transacting foreign exchange used a calculator type machine to assist them to conduct such transactions. The Forde Money Changer produced a tally roll in which the details of every foreign exchange transaction were recorded. The tally roll in turn provided the information which at the close of each day's business within the branch was manually recorded on to debit dockets, and entered into the computerised foreign currency held ledger. Used tally rolls were not maintained beyond two or three years thereafter, and were not therefore available to the Tribunal. The debit dockets and the computerised Foreign Currency Held Ledger were available to the Tribunal.

¹¹ The retained branch records did not specify the currencies in question.

7.43 The computerised Foreign Currency Held Ledger for 5 December 1994 also recorded the totals purchased from customers that day as IR£1,921.53 for sterling and IR£28,969.34 for foreign currency other than sterling. This ledger also recorded totals of sterling and foreign currency other than sterling sold to customers within the branch on that date.

7.44 These totals of sterling and Foreign Currency other than sterling, if correctly transcribed from the tally rolls on to the debit docketts, and if correctly entered into the computerised Foreign Currency Held Ledger, established that sterling to the value of only IR£1,921.53 was purchased from customers within the branch on 5 December 1994. This clearly excluded any possibility that a sum of Stg£30,000, or any sterling sum remotely close to that figure, was purchased from any customer (or any number of customers) by that branch on that date, and equally excluded the possibility that the IR£28,772.90 lodged to Ms Larkin's account could in any way be linked to an exchange of Stg£30,000 or any sterling sum remotely close to that figure.

7.45 Furthermore, if the totals of sterling and foreign currency other than sterling were correctly transcribed from the tally rolls, then these figures established that foreign currency other than sterling to a value of IR£28,969.34 had been purchased from customers within the branch on 5 December 1994. That 'foreign currency other than sterling' could only have been US dollars having regard to the information in the Currency Services remits book (see Para 7.53) and therefore clearly allowed for the possibility that a sum of US$45,000 had in fact been tendered by Ms Larkin for exchange into Irish pounds, for lodgement to her bank account.

AIB STAFF EVIDENCE ON DOCUMENTATION

7.46 Mr John Garrett and Ms Rosemary Murtagh were nominated by AIB as staff who possessed expertise in foreign exchange banking practices and procedures to assist the Tribunal in relation to banking issues. Mr Garrett and Ms Murtagh were interviewed by members of the Tribunal's legal team and gave sworn evidence to the Tribunal in 2007. Mr Garrett was at that time working in the commercial and strategic alliance area of AIB. He had worked in the foreign exchange section of a large AIB Dublin city centre branch (Capel Street) for a period of four to five years in the early to mid-1990s, a period of particular relevance to the foreign exchange transactions which were the subject of inquiry by the Tribunal. Mr Garrett was asked if it was possible that the debit docketts recording the transaction totals for sterling and foreign currency other than sterling might have been erroneously completed so that the total for sterling in fact represented foreign currency other than sterling, and the total for foreign currency other than sterling in fact represented sterling (with consequential erroneous totals being entered into the computerised Foreign Currency Held Ledger). Mr Garrett responded in the affirmative but did not suggest that such an error had indeed occurred. There was no proof or indication or suggestion that any such errors had in fact occurred on this or any other occasion, or that the erroneous completion of this type of bank documentation was commonplace within the bank.

7.47 Furthermore, in its consideration of numerous items of bank documentation which involved bank staff manually recording information relating to the bank's foreign currency dealings, lodgement dockets and other handwritten records, the Tribunal did not identify errors or any evidence that the completion of such records was, in general, undertaken by bank staff other than with great care as to its accuracy.

7.48 The Tribunal noted that banking work concerned with the buying and selling of foreign currency and its remission to Currency Services was complex, and required close attention to detail on the part of bank staff, including particularly the accurate application of multipliers for the purposes of identifying and recording foreign currency purchases and sales. Errors in the manual recording of details, while possible, were therefore unlikely to have occurred.

7.49 The opening balance of foreign currency within the branch on 5 December 1994 (which included the sterling held over from the previous day's trading) was also recorded within the branch. This was stated to be IR£19,196.25 in value. In addition, the branch recorded the following information in relation to foreign currency for 5 December 1994:

- The value of sterling sold to customers: IR£1,189.29
- The value of foreign currency other than sterling sold to customers: IR£737.10
- The value of closing foreign currency retained in the branch for future use: IR£18,905.74

7.50 The Tribunal observed that, even if the opening figure for foreign currency retained in the branch on 5 December 1994, namely, IR£19,196.25 (assuming it was entirely sterling) were added to the total for sterling purchased on 5 December 1994, i.e. IR£1,921.53 (as recorded on bank documentation), this total would still fall far short of the sterling amount that was claimed as having been lodged to Ms Larkin's account (whether it be Stg£30,000 exactly or approximately).

CURRENCY SERVICES

7.51 Currency Services was an internal AIB department concerned with the management of the stocks of foreign currencies in the branch network and Cash Services department.¹² It purchased foreign currency for use by its branches, and took in foreign currency remitted to it by its branches surplus to their requirements.

7.52 It was established in evidence that the 37/38 O'Connell Street branch of AIB remitted to Currency Services foreign currency with an Irish pound value of IR£29,254.97, being foreign exchange in its possession and in excess of its requirements at the close of business on 5 December 1993. This Irish pound value was noted in the branch's computerised Foreign Currency Held Ledger as having been remitted to Currency Services. That document also confirmed the Irish pound value credited by Currency Services to the branch. The figure was also recorded in the Currency Services remits book as applicable to 37/38 O'Connell Street, Dublin.

THE REMITS BOOK

7.53 The Remits book, a document maintained by Currency Services, listed the Irish pound values of foreign currency amounts remitted to it by the bank's Cash Services department and a number of AIB branches. The Remits book dated 7 December 1994 included the entry of IR£29,254.97, representing the Irish pound value of foreign exchange remitted to Currency Services by the 37/38 O'Connell Street branch of AIB at its close of business on 5 December 1994.

7.54 The Remits book identified the foreign currencies as 'stg opened' to which was added in manuscript 'and US.' Therefore, the amounts listed under this heading, including the IR£29,254.97 figure for the 37/38 O'Connell Street branch of AIB, represented either sterling or US dollars, and no other currency.

7.55 On Day 753 (27 July 2007), Mr Colm Ó hOisín SC, Counsel for Mr Ahern cross-examined Ms Murtagh of AIB in relation to certain calculations that had been undertaken on behalf of Mr Ahern by his representatives. Ms Murtagh was at that time the operations manager in AIB's Currency Services department. In 1994/5 Ms Murtagh was the assistant manager of facilities management with AIB in the IFSC, Dublin. She had never worked in foreign exchange at branch level. Ms Murtagh told the Tribunal that she had spoken to bank colleagues who worked in foreign exchange in order to help familiarise herself with the practices of the time (early/mid 1990s). Mr Ahern's Counsel sought to establish, if possible, the type of foreign currency (sterling or US dollars) remitted on 5 December 1994 from the AIB branch at 37/38 O'Connell Street to Currency Services, with the assistance of the Remits book for 7 December 1994. Neither Ms Murtagh nor the Tribunal was provided at the time with a copy of the calculations carried out for Mr Ahern, or any related material prepared for this purpose.

7.56 The Tribunal subsequently conducted its own calculations, using the same Remits book information, and on a basis similar to that which it understood had been used by Mr Ahern's representatives. Ultimately, both the mathematical exercises carried out on behalf of Mr Ahern and on behalf of the Tribunal proved unhelpful as an aid to establishing whether the remittance of IR£29,254.97 on 5 December 1994 from AIB 37/38 O'Connell Street was sourced from sterling or US dollars.

THE EXCHANGE RATES

CUSTOMER BUY RATES

7.57 At the beginning of each day's business, Currency Services advised AIB branches of the exchange rates to be applied to purchases of foreign currency cash from customers, the 'customer buy rates.' This information was programmed into the Forde Money Changer thereby facilitating the accurate calculation of the Irish pound value of currencies (including sterling and US dollars) by the foreign exchange teller.

7.58 Currency Services determined customer buy rates for foreign currency amounts tendered by customers to the branch for exchange into Irish pounds each day. On 5 December 1994, Currency Services determined three categories of customer buy rates for application to sterling tendered for exchange into Irish pounds. These were known as the published customer buy rates, and were:

- 1.0169 for sterling up to a value of IR£500
- 1.0021 for sterling up to a value of IR£2,500
- 0.9947 for sterling up to a value of IR£10,000

7.59 AIB had two published customer buy rates on 5 December 1994 for the exchange of US dollars into Irish pounds. These rates were:

- 1.5791, for US dollars up to a value of IR£500
- 1.5637, for US dollars up to a value of IR£2,500.

7.60 These tiered rates of exchange were set on the basis that the greater the amount of foreign currency tendered for exchange (within the thresholds identified above), the better the exchange rate for the customer. For example, a customer tendering Stg£7,000 would receive a better rate of exchange than a customer tendering Stg£1,000.

THE BUY REMIT RATE

7.61 The buy remit rate was the rate at which Currency Services purchased foreign currency from branches. There was usually a small margin between this rate and the best (for the customer) buy rate set for each day for different currencies. This represented the profit earned by the branch arising upon its remittance to Currency Services. The buy remit rate was set by Currency Services and programmed into the Forde Money Changer in each branch at the beginning of each day's business. The rate could be varied by Currency Services at its discretion, within certain limits.

COMMISSION

7.62 There was provision for customers to be charged a commission on foreign currency transactions. The commission was charged at 1% of the value of the transaction, but with a minimum charge of £1 and a maximum charge of £5. The bank teller conducting the transaction had discretion as to whether or not a particular customer was charged a commission.

RATES GIVEN FOR SUBSTANTIAL SUMS OF FOREIGN CURRENCY

7.63 In the course of Mr Garrett's cross-examination, he was questioned in some detail as to what might be expected to occur when a customer tendered for exchange a substantial sum of foreign currency above the threshold values programmed in the Forde Money Changer.

7.64 For example, on Day 747 (17 July 2007), it was put to Mr Garrett that:
'The rate one might get if one rang Currency Services, saying I have a larger amount than is the norm, give me a rate on this, you would expect to get a more favourable rate, isn't that so?' Mr Garrett responded: 'You would, if market conditions permitted, yes. So I would expect to get a rate somewhere in the range from 1.5637 to 1.5386¹³ but I may get 1.5637 if nothing is happening in the market.'

¹³ In this example, Mr Garrett was talking about US dollars. The 1.5637 rate was the customer buy rate on 5 December 1994 for US dollars with a value of up to IR£2,500 and the 1.5386 rate was the standard remit rate for US dollars remitted to Currency Services on that day.

7.65 On Day 748 (19 July 2007), the following exchange took place between Mr Garrett and Mr Ó hOisín (Mr Ahern's Counsel):

Q. ... Now, so the first piece of documentation we looked at, that document that we have looked at provides us with a question in relation to this hypothesis, which is that what would appear on its face to be an incorrect rate, was applied to that 45,000, if there was 45,000, isn't that correct?

A. It may not be an incorrect rate, it may be the rate that the note room¹⁴ had given, it may say that depending on what's going on in the market, 1.5637 is an appropriate rate to apply to that transaction.

Q. It would be a little surprising though, to see a rate for $45,000 as being the same on the same day as the rate for up to 2,500,¹⁵ isn't that correct?

A. I have seen it happen, yes, that the rate is exactly the same, but I have also seen it happen where the rate is somewhere between 1.5637 and 1.5386.

7.66 Also on Day 747, in the course of Mr Garrett's cross-examination by Mr Ó hOisín, and on this occasion referring to sterling¹⁶, the following exchange occurred:

Q. It does indicate certainly at some point in that process a rate of exchange, two rates of exchange, which were the Forde Money Changer rates of exchange appropriate to transactions of up to 2,500 and 10,000 were applied to a transaction having an actual value of 19,000, isn't that so?

A. That's correct yes.

Q. Do you say that that is consistent with the procedure of the bank being implemented?

A. Yes I would. Because the procedure would be that you would ring the note room and may well get, what I refer to as the spot rate of the day, which in that case is probably the £10,000 rate of the day, and that rate is actually applied to the transaction.

7.67 The Tribunal sought to adduce evidence as to the circumstances in which the daily pre-determined foreign exchange rates might come to be altered. It was struck by the extent to which the bank witnesses appeared at times to be less than clear, or indeed confused, as to how unusually large cash amounts of foreign currency were dealt with by branches and by Currency Services when tendered for exchange to branches and then remitted to Currency Services. This was possibly because such instances were uncommon or infrequent.

¹⁴ Currency Services.

¹⁵ The customer buy rate of the day applicable to US dollar purchases up to a value of IR£2,500. This was the better of the two published customer buy rates for US dollars.

¹⁶ A reference to the IR£19,142.92 lodgement on 1st December 1995 (See Section V)

7.68 In particular, the Tribunal was anxious to ascertain (a) what might have been expected to occur, assuming usual bank practices and procedures were followed, when an unusually large amount of foreign currency cash was tendered for exchange into Irish pounds in a branch, and was then remitted by the branch to Currency Services and, more importantly, (b) what, as a matter of probability, did occur in relation to the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 into Ms Larkin's account on 5 December 1994.

7.69 The Tribunal was advised that when a customer tendered a sum of foreign currency for exchange into Irish pounds which was in excess of the maximum thresholds programmed into the Forde Money Changer (to the value of IR£10,000 for sterling and IR£2,500 for US dollars respectively), bank procedure required the foreign exchange teller to contact Currency Services to seek a spot rate to apply to the transaction in question.

THE 'SPOT' RATE

7.70 Where a sterling amount in excess of a value of IR£10,000 was tendered by a customer for exchange into Irish pounds, bank procedure provided that the bank teller telephone Currency Services to seek a 'spot' rate of exchange for application to the sterling purchase.¹⁷ This spot rate might conceivably be a better rate for the customer than the best published customer buy rate (that is, the rate for sterling to a value of IR£10,000), or it might be a rate equivalent to that rate or one of the lower (less favourable to the customer) published rates, depending on financial market conditions at the time of the teller's contact with Currency Services.¹⁸

7.71 Where the US dollar sum tendered for exchange by a customer exceeded IR£2,500 in value, the branch had a similar procedure in place as applied when a customer tendered a sterling sum exceeding IR£10,000 in value for exchange, namely, the teller contacted Currency Services for a spot rate. The spot rate given by Currency Services might be one of the published customer buy rates (1.5791 or 1.5637 for US dollars on 5 December 1994) or it might be a better rate than the best published buy rate (1.5637).

7.72 In the course of his private interview with members of the Tribunal's legal team on 15 May 2007, Mr Garrett described the process whereby the teller, on being presented by a customer with Stg£20,000 for exchange into Irish pounds, should telephone Currency Services for a spot rate. The relevant procedure was ¹⁷Indeed, the Forde Money Changer prompted the teller to request a spot rate in such circumstances.

¹⁸Records of spot rates given to the bank branch were not maintained.

illustrated in the following exchange between Counsel for the Tribunal and Mr Garrett:

Q. ...where the money is more than £10,000 and the phone call. Is there any discretion in that? Is that something, is that a must situation. The cashier is getting £20,000, the machine says please give me a rate, he must make a phone call?

A. Procedure says that he should.

Q. But it doesn't always happen?

A. It doesn't always happen.

Q. Is that right?

A. That's correct.

And:

Q. ... the machine says it wants a rate and that cashier should phone, as a matter of practice, it didn't always happen of your experience of it, did it ever happen?

A. Yes it would have. I would have rang a number of times.

Q. There would be times when you would and there would be times when you wouldn't?

A. 99.9 per cent of the time I would ring.

7.73 In the course of a further private interview on 24 May 2007, Mr Garrett (in providing an explanation as to what should have occurred in circumstances where the branch was presented with US$45,000 for exchange into Irish pounds) stated: 'The branch would have had to ring the foreign currency note room at that stage to get a rate ...and the rate could be the $2,500 rate, it could be the remit rate or it could be a rate somewhere in between.'

7.74 In the course of his sworn evidence, when explaining the bank procedure that he assumed might have taken place on the occasion of a teller having been presented with a sum of Stg£30,000 for exchange into Irish pounds, Mr Garrett stated:

'Again, if they rang the note room and got another rate something above the £10,000 rate and between the remit rate, you know, again if the rates were moving in the customer's favour, that would be passed on, so there would be a possibility of a fourth rate there, something between the £10,000 rate and the remit rate of the day.'

7.75 On Day 747 (17 July 2007), Mr Garrett expressed his opinion to the effect that when substantial cash foreign currency sums were tendered for exchange into Irish pounds, bank procedure provided that the teller contact Currency Services to seek a customer buy rate (spot rate), but only on the basis that the remit rate (the rate applicable to remittances to Currency Services) would remain as determined at the beginning of the day's business. Consequently, according to Mr Garrett, if Currency Services gave an improved rate (for the customer) for a particular exchange, as was usual but did not necessarily always happen, the remit rate would remain unchanged, so that the margin between the two rates (the customer buy rate and the remit rate) would be narrowed, and in turn the profit earned by the branch on the remittance of the foreign exchange to Currency Services would be reduced. Mr Garrett stated that he had only ever witnessed the published, predetermined remit rate being applied or used by Currency Services.

7.76 On Day 748 (19 July 2007), Mr Garrett was again questioned on this issue, and it was pointed out to him that his stated position (as summarised above) appeared to be in conflict with that of his colleague (Ms Murtagh – see below). Mr Garrett sought to explain his understanding of the procedures in question to Counsel for the Tribunal in the course of the following exchange:

Q. The issue that's identified there is the question as to whether or not it was within the power of the branch to contact Currency Services with the view to improving on the rate which was fixed for the day as the buy remit rate, is that right?

A. That's correct, yes.

Q. And I think your answer was that it wasn't possible to do so the only variation [you could get] was if you telephoned Currency Services with a view to improving the rate with which you would deal with the customer, is that so?

A. That's correct, yes.

Q. Right. What is your evidence now on that?

A. Yes, I have just clarified . . . with some of my colleagues in Currency Services. Technically what I am saying is correct. The rate that the currency would be remitted at on the day is 1.5386 [for US dollars] where a customer came in and a special rate was given. They have informed me that in a small number of circumstances where there was a very large amount of currency involved for particular customers they would give the same rate to buy currency over the counter and the same rate to remit the currency to Currency Services so the rate would be the same.

Q. That, I think probably doesn't resolve the issue which is identified in the questioning and your responses on the last occasion upon which you gave evidence. Really the questioning was directed towards establishing whether or not it is the case that the buy remit rate for the day can be improved on by a branch contacting Currency Services, do you understand the question?

A. I do yes.

Q. Is the answer to that question, yes it can be?

A. The answer is yes, it can be.

7.77 As of that juncture in Mr Garrett's evidence, therefore, the Tribunal appeared to have been advised that:

- 1) Where a customer tendered for exchange a foreign currency amount with an Irish pound value in excess of the Forde Money Changer thresholds (i.e. IR£2,500 for US dollars and IR£10,000 for sterling), the bank teller was expected to contact Currency Services to obtain a spot rate. This rate, depending on market conditions, could be (marginally) more favourable to the customer than any of the pre-determined daily rates, but the published or pre-determined buy remit rates would remain operable in respect of that foreign exchange being remitted to Currency Services.
- 2) However, it was possible that Currency Services would marginally improve (in favour of the branch) its published buy remit rate in respect of large foreign currency remittances from a branch.
- 3) Furthermore, it was possible that in a 'small number of circumstances where there was a very large amount of currency involved for particular customers', Currency Services could authorise that the customer be given the same rate as the buy remit rate to be applied to the currency being remitted to Currency Services in which case there was no profit to the branch on the transaction.
- 4) However, Mr Garrett's experience was confined to circumstances where, having contacted Currency Services for a better customer buy rate for an unusually large amount of foreign currency being purchased by the branch from a customer, he then remitted that foreign currency 'at the [remit] rate of the day.'

7.78 Again in his sworn evidence on Day 748 (19 July 2007), Mr Garrett maintained that he had been advised by bank personnel, since giving evidence the previous day, that an increased or varied buy remit rate would only be authorised in circumstances where the branch applied the same rate in its purchase of the foreign exchange from the customer. However, Mr Garrett appeared to have been surprised to have been so informed, when he stated in the course of his evidence: 'Now, in all my years working in the particular branch I worked in, we would buy at a special rate when we get a special rate and we would remit at the rate of the day, and that is the basis that I gave my evidence on.'

7.79 In this evidence, Mr Garrett was reiterating his own experience in the foreign currency section of a large Dublin city centre branch in the early 1990s, which was that, while on occasion Currency Services gave a better customer buy rate than the published or pre-determined customer buy rate of the day, the published or pre-determined buy remit rate nevertheless was applied to the remittance of that currency to Currency Services. The Tribunal understood that, in consequence, the profit earned by the branch in respect of that transaction was less than it would have been had the published customer buy rates been applied without variation.

MS MURTAGH'S EVIDENCE ON BANK PROCEDURES

7.80 Ms Murtagh was questioned closely and at length as to her understanding of the bank procedures which ought to have applied in circumstances where a customer sought to exchange an amount of foreign currency which exceeded IR£10,000 in value (for sterling) or IR£2,500 in value (for US dollars), and also as to her understanding as to what probably occurred in relation to the foreign exchange amount which funded the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 to Ms Larkin's account on 5 December 1994.

7.81 In the course of her private interview with members of the Tribunal's legal team on 20 June 2007, the following exchange between Counsel for the Tribunal and Ms Murtagh was recorded (this exchange being predicated on the possibility that a customer had presented at the branch with US$45,000):

Q. ...The first is a transaction where the customer comes in with $45,000 and wants Irish currency. And that transaction is completed without reference to the fact that the bank may or may not enter into an arrangement with the Currency Services to remit that money upward, isn't that right? They could elect to keep that money, for example, in the branch?

A. They could.

Q. Now, they close off their transaction with the customer. Because the customer has been given £28,772.90 in return for what the customer gave the bank?

A. Yeah.

Q. The branch now has in its possession $45,000 in notes. It picks up the phone and it rings the currency room, the note room, and says we have $45,000. What rate will you give us. And the money room says we will give you a rate of 1.5382. And that translates then into 29,254.97 there or thereabouts?

A. uh-huh

Q. And they operate on that rate. Now, in adopting that rate the bank is not adopting, the branch rather, is not adopting the rate that is on the Forde machine, which is 1.5386?

A. No.

Q It is getting a different rate. But that, there is nothing unusual in that because it can get a different rate by picking up the phone and dealing with the money room and getting the authorisation to do it?

A. It's rare but they can do that.

7.82 Earlier, in the course of her private interview with the Tribunal, Ms Murtagh stated that it was possible that a branch might telephone Currency Services for either a rate to remit (to Currency Services) or a rate to purchase from the customer. Ms Murtagh stated: 'And sometimes when you're phoning for a rate for the client you would be told to remit at that rate.'

7.83 Such an authorisation would result, Ms Murtagh acknowledged, in the branch earning no profit from the transaction. Asked in what circumstances such a transaction might occur she responded: 'if the branch considered that their client is important and they want to retain the business ...And if the client demands it.'

7.84 In her sworn evidence to the Tribunal, Ms Murtagh confirmed that the buy remit rate fixed for the day could be varied 'in very minor circumstances.'

7.85 Ms Murtagh confirmed that the remit rate applied to the remittance of IR£29,254.97 from 37/38 O'Connell Street, Dublin, for 5 December 1994, whether it was sterling or US dollars, was not the published buy remit rate for 5 December 1994, and that it must have been a special buy remit rate.

7.86 Ms Murtagh also confirmed that where a special buy remit rate was given by Currency Services, it was usually an improved rate (i.e. a better rate for the branch than the published buy remit rate). Ms Murtagh's evidence was that the degree of improvement in the buy remit rate would always have been marginal, and in any event a variation of less than 10 points.¹⁹

7.87 Ms Murtagh advised the Tribunal that on occasion, because of the large amount of foreign currency involved and/or the importance of a customer, a special buy remit rate might be given by Currency Services. It was her understanding that this might occur when Currency Services was anxious to have a foreign currency amount remitted to it by a branch in order to meet a looming

¹⁹On a scale calculated to the fourth decimal point: 1 point equals 0.0001, and 10 points equal 0.001.

deadline to provide a specific amount of foreign currency to a wholesale currency dealer. Ms Murtagh stated that where a special buy remit rate was given for such a reason, the customer could also receive that rate, with the result that the value of the amount remitted to Currency Services would match exactly the value credited to the customer.²⁰

WHICH FOREIGN CURRENCY WAS REPRESENTED BY IR£29,254.97?

7.88 The published buy remit rate for sterling on 5 December 1994 was 0.9877. If that rate was applied to a remittance with a value of IR£29,254.97, it would yield a figure of £28,895.13. This mathematical calculation established therefore that the application of the published buy remit rate to a foreign exchange value of IR£29,254.97 did not yield a sum of Stg£30,000 or any round-figure sum close to Stg£30,000 (i.e. which excluded an amount in pence). It followed therefore, that if sterling was remitted, Currency Services did not apply the published buy remit rate to it.

7.89 The Tribunal then considered the results of a similar exercise conducted on the assumption that the IR£29,254.97 worth of foreign currency remitted on 5 December 1994 to Currency Services represented a US dollar amount being the only possible alternative to sterling as evidenced by the Remits book.

7.90 The published buy remit rate for US dollars on 5 December 1994 was 1.5386. The application of that rate to IR£29,254.97 produced a figure of

²⁰ In the course of her private interview with the Tribunal, Ms Murtagh advised the Tribunal that the bank teller, if presented with US$45,000, might have phoned Currency Services 'for a rate to remit' to Currency Services, as opposed to a rate to purchase from the client, and that sometimes in such a case the teller would be instructed to remit at the same rate as that given to the customer, resulting in the branch making no profit on the remittance, and that that could happen in circumstances where the branch considered that the customer was important, and it wished to retain his or her business, and if the customer demanded it. In the course of her sworn evidence to the Tribunal on Day 753, in response to Mr Colm Ó hOisín SC, (Mr Ahern's Counsel) who indicated his understanding of the evidence to be that 'if you get a special remit rate it is only on terms that the customer gets the benefit of that rate' Ms Murtagh stated: 'maybe if I just say this, if the customer asked you to get a special rate because it was a large amount or they were dealing quite frequently in currency and they knew they could get a better rate ...or a very good customer, you phone up and get a special rate for the client. And you could be told well remit at the normal remit rate at that time.' Ms Murtagh was then asked 'is that a different rate to the special rate going to the customer?', to which she responded: 'It is yes. You know, you could give the good rate, but the branch are losing out on their profitability at that point.' Mr Ó hOisín then put the following to Ms Murtagh: '...just to clarify that the position as I see it ...You have talked there about two situations, one getting a special remit rate for the client, but remitting it at the normal rate and, or an alternative situation where you get a special remit rate to Currency Services and the customer gets the benefit of that special remit rate also, isn't that correct?' Ms Murtagh responded: 'Yes, you would get a special rate for the client ok? And you could be advised well yes you can remit at the normal remit rate, if you are remitting today. Ok? Or, if there was if you actually needed the currency in Currency Services and there was a large sum of money and you wanted to make the deadline you could get a special rate for the customer and you would tell the branch remit at that rate.' Ms Murtagh then agreed with a suggestion put to her by Mr Ó hOisín that 'if there is any deviation from the remit rate that applies for a particular day between a branch and Currency Services, any deviation, so a special rate of remit, that is only in circumstances where the customer gets the benefit of that remit rate...'

$45,011.70. As this sum involved a coin element, it was clear that if the equivalent of IR£29,254.97 had been remitted in US dollars, it had not been remitted at the published buy remit rate.

FOREIGN CURRENCY COINS AND STG£1 NOTES

7.91 AIB bank witnesses told the Tribunal that foreign coins were not usually accepted within its branches, other than Stg£1 coins which were occasionally accepted, but not remitted to Currency Services. The Tribunal was therefore satisfied that the smallest acceptable denomination (to remit to Currency Services, albeit as part of an occasional ‘odds’ remit) in the case of sterling was a Stg£1 note, and in the case of US dollars was a $1 note.

7.92 The printing of Stg£1 notes ceased in approximately the early/mid-1980s. However, Stg£1 notes remained legal tender in 1994/5, and although in limited circulation by 1994, they were occasionally purchased in AIB branches at that time.²¹

7.93 Normal bank practice within AIB was to remit sterling pounds and US dollars in bundles of 100 notes of the same denomination. Ms Murtagh stated that a remittance from a branch could nonetheless include one bundle of less than 100 notes (e.g. a remittance of Stg£10,060 in Stg£20 notes might have comprised five bundles of 100 Stg£20 notes and one bundle of three Stg£20 notes on transmission to Currency Services).

7.94 Stg£1 notes were usually remitted to Currency Services by branches as part of an ‘odds’ clear-up. Mr Garrett believed this occurred once a quarter, or once every half year. There was no evidence that a remittance of odds of foreign currency had been made by the AIB branch at 37/38 O’Connell Street, Dublin on 5 December 1994.

THE MATHEMATICAL EXERCISE CONDUCTED BY THE TRIBUNAL

7.95 The Tribunal was satisfied that it was both reasonable and possible to conduct a simple and straightforward mathematical exercise to ascertain the actual rate used in cases (such as this) where it was known that the published buy remit rate had not been used in relation to a particular remittance. This mathematical exercise involved the application of notional buy remit rates to the foreign currency amount, on a point by point basis (calculating to the fourth decimal point) in order to identify the special rate likely to have been used in relation to a particular remittance.

7.96 It was necessary, in the Tribunal's view, to conduct this exercise because, while records of published buy remit rates for each day were maintained by AIB, records of special buy remit rates, when used, were not retained.

7.97 The results of this mathematical exercise in relation to sterling as set out in the Tribunal prepared spreadsheet entitled 'Tribunal Table of Calculations applying Remit Rates in the range 1.0500 - 0.9500 to IR£29,254.97', established the following:

- On the assumption that the IR£29,254.97 represented sterling, rather than US Dollars, the closest notional buy remit rate to the published buy remit rate of 0.9877 which produced a sterling sum (Stg£28,882²²) without pence was 0.9852. This rate was 25 points more favourable to the remitting branch. The next closest notional buy remit rate to the published buy remit rate of 0.9877 and which produced a sterling sum (Stg. £29,018²³) without pence was 0.9919. This rate was 42 points less favourable to the remitting branch. Both assumptions required an 'odds' remittance on the day.

7.98 Having regard to Ms Murtagh's evidence that any variation in the published buy remit rate would not have exceeded 10 points, it followed that a variation in the special buy remit rate of either 25 points (more favourable for the branch) or 42 points (worse for the branch) would, as a matter of probability, not have been applied by Currency Services to sterling being remitted by AIB's Upper O'Connell Street branch on the 5 December, 1994.

7.99 The nature of the mathematical analysis carried out by the Tribunal in relation to the foregoing issue was the subject of the following exchange between Tribunal Counsel and Ms Murtagh on Day 753:

'Q. And we are applying the rate of 0.977 the remit rate of the day to the amount of 29,254.97 Irish, isn't that right?

A. Yes the remit rate of 0.9877.

Q. Yes that's the remit rate on the 5th December 1994, isn't that right? And we have seen earlier on the chart, as you move across now from the rate itself, you see what is produced by the rate and that's 28,895.13 pounds, isn't that right?

A. That's correct.

²² This sum would have had to include at least two Stg. £1 notes.

²³ This sum would have had to include three single Stg. £1 notes.

Q. And you have confirmed with me earlier that that figure produced at that rate of exchange, that figure produced at that rate of exchange 29,254.97, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, for each of the other entries on this page both above and below this figure there is a variation of one point. So that if we look to the figure which is entry No. 623 we will see that there is a rate of exchange there of 0.9878, you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. Right. That's one point in difference, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. And that's one point worse from the point of view of the branch, isn't that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Yes. Now on this page, going to the top of the page there are 42 points on the scale, in other words the rate is changing by one point at each line there, you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. So that's showing a variation of the remit rate of the day by up to 42 points worse than the actual rate of the day, do you understand that?

A. I do.

Q. Yes. As we look at those figures you will see that not one of those figures equates to the rate which we know was, sorry, equates to the amount which was actually attributed to the value of the currency on the day, isn't that right?

A. Sorry can you just repeat that please?

Q. I can yes. I will just try and lay the basis for this again with you, Ms. Murtagh, because what we are talking about here is a mathematical table which is not involving any conjecture, it is merely a matter of division and recording of the division under the headings here. And it starts from the point where at entry 624, we see the established remit rate for the day being applied to the known amount of Irish value given to the currency, isn't that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And as against that we see that in order for that to happen the amount which would be tendered in sterling would be 28,895.13 pounds, isn't that right?

A. That's right, yes.

Q. And we know that that is not the same figure as 29,254.97, isn't that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And that allows us to conclude as a matter of mathematical certainty that that rate was not applied, isn't that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, this exercise is one where one is looking at every other rate that might have been applied, starting with the rate which is one point worse from the point of view of the remitting bank, do you understand that?

A. I do. Yes.

Q. As we go up through each one of the lines to the top of the page there are 42 points and the calculation carried out using the rate of exchange for each one of those values, do you understand?

A. I do.

Q. Yes. Now each, the figure then under the reference 'sterling' represents the amount which is the result of that exercise using that rate of exchange, do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. So that if any one of these rates of exchange had been the rate used on the day, the figure which one should see under the heading 'ST' is the figure 29,254.97, do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. Now I am putting to you firstly, do you understand that process as a purely mathematical exercise.

A. Yes.

Q. And everything that is in the line is a mathematical certainty, although the figures have been postulated for the purpose of the exercise, do you understand that?

A. Okay.

Q. Yes. Now I am putting to you that using any one of those calculations to the extent of going to 42 points worse than the published rate of the day, one does not get the figure involved, understand?

A. Yes.

Q. And I am putting to you that the logical and only conclusion one can draw from that is that a rate of exchange worse than the published rate of exchange was not applied to any sterling sum so as to produce what we know to be 29,254.97 pounds worth of foreign currency?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you understand that?

A. Yes.

Q. So I am putting this forward as an empirical statement of fact that there was no exchange at any one of those rates that went to 42 points worse than the published rate, do you agree with that?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, a similar exercise can be carried out by moving down the page, in other words if we look at the entry at 625 which is immediately beneath the remit rate figure, we see that the rate of exchange there is 0.9876 one point more favourable to the branch, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. And running down through the next 40 of those rates of exchange in every instance improving from the point of view of the branch, that is a more beneficial rate, there is no connection, there is no figure which equates to 28 - 29,254.97, isn't that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that tell you that the range that you would have expected of any variation that might have been given by Currency Services would have, would not have produced, would not have allowed for a sterling sum to be converted to that amount in Irish by reference to the fact that the variation would have to be greater than 40 points for that to happen.

A. That's correct.

Q. Yes. Now this page 22749, is one page of a series of entries that runs to cover the entire thousand points between the conversion rate 1.0500 and 0.9500, do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. It in effect I suggest, exhausts all the possibilities that might have been considered by anybody wishing to vary the rate of exchange, because it goes totally off the Richter scale on both ends, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, equally even applying that, I am suggesting to you that there is no figure which would allow for the figure of 29,254.97 pounds to be realised applying any one of those scales to a sterling sum, would you agree with that?

A. I agree, yes.

Q. In that knowledge, Ms. Murtagh, can you confirm to me that if the bank's procedure was followed and the bundles were bundled as they should have been, in bundles of 100, that there was no sterling exchange on the 5th December, 1994 involving such a transaction?

A. Yes, if the procedures were followed and each bundle was 100 notes. Yes, that's right.

Q. Now we'll move to the next issue then, which I want to deal with you, that is the acceptance by Currency Services of amounts other than those which were being remitted in accordance with procedure, do you understand that?

A. Yes.

Q. Yes and I think that we have heard that on occasion there would be what's called the clear out of the branch where Currency Services would circulate branches and say that they were taking in their damaged pound notes, their odd amounts, their currencies which wouldn't normally be dealt with, isn't that right?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. And in that instance the bundles would not end with the double zero that we see on page 22755, isn't that so?

A. That's correct?

Q. Right. We know that the figures are, here are representative of either sterling or of US dollars, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. And does it follow therefore that given that the lowest sterling note is 5 pounds, that even on days when one is allowing for the remission, the clear out of currencies in bundles of less than 100 even, it still must end with a five for the purpose of a sterling transaction?

A. Unless that you had one denominations from either Jersey, Scotland or Northern Ireland.

Q. Right. Would you bundle those in with the English fivers?

A. They would be separated and included on the one remittance sheet.

Q. Right. How would they appear, would they be treated as sterling or would they be treated otherwise?

A. They are treated as sterling.

Q. Right. And have you any evidence to indicate that on this day, the 5th December 1994, that this was a day upon which currencies other than in bundles of 100 were being returned?

A. No. I have no evidence.

Q. No. In the normal course, if one was talking about fragmented divisions of currency would they include amounts from Jersey or perhaps Scotland or would they be just generally sterling amounts ending in fivers?

A. They could be either, particularly if the lodgement was a full lodgement of Bank of England, main land currency, or if it was a full lodgement of any of the other bank denominations.

Q. Could I have the other bank denominations?

A. Like Bank of Scotland.

Q. Yes.

A. Ulster Bank, Bank of Ireland, Northern Ireland or Jersey Island.

Q. I see. For that to happen I take it there would have to be the resultant transaction then could be a figure which would be a one pound figure as the smallest unit, is that right?

A. As far as I am aware at that time, yes. The one pound was remitted from those non main land bank currencies.

Q. Right. And if we look to any one of the rates of exchange which we see by reference to the rate of exchange on the day, that is page 22749 we see that there is one figure there 29,018 pounds converted at a rate of 0.9919 would produce 29,254.97, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. For that rate to apply there would have had to have been a 42 point benefit applied, is that right – sorry it would have been a rate 42 points worse than the published rate on the day, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. What is the likelihood of that happening?

A. I think its relatively very low.

Q. Now, if we look to the positive side then I see an even figure, entry 650 which is six points better and that is 28,822 pounds, at entry 649 would produce that figure, is that right?

A. That's right, yes.

Q. But that as I say would involve the use of one pound sterling amount which was remitted in a currency which was not the mainstream sterling currency, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. It could be Jersey money, is that it?

A. It could be, or it could be an old English pound that was still in circulation and that was legal tender.

Q. Right. How likely is it that in 1994 one would be dealing with old English pounds. I think it was 1984 that they had lost the pound as a unit of currency in paper form in the UK, is that right, I may be wrong?

A. I'm not sure, I wasn't there at the time.

Q. Now, other than that imposition of a, I suppose a provincial note as I call it, its not possible for sterling to have been changed and to be reflected as 29,254.97 in the money room on that day, isn't that right?

A. Sorry can you repeat that?

Q. Sorry. I was saying other than the importing into the equation of what I call a provincial note, a current provincial note greater than a unit of five, because the English main note being the fiver, its not possible for a sterling amount to translate into 29,254.97 on that day, isn't that so?

A. If there was a sterling pound note, a main land UK note remitted we would accept it, from a branch because it is still legal tender.

Q. Right. And again as I say, we are not certain as to when exactly the one pound note went out of circulation in the UK but I am suggesting to you that its probably ten years before this particular transaction?

A. Mm-hmm.

Q. It would be, I suggest, unusual but possible?

A. Unusual, yes, but possible.'

7.100 In conducting this mathematical exercise, the Tribunal established that no sterling sum between Stg£28,500 and Stg£29,500, increasing in increments of one hundred, could have been converted to IR£29,254.97 at the published buy remit rate of the day for sterling.

7.101 The Tribunal then conducted a similar exercise in relation to US dollars²⁴ and sought to identify a notional special buy remit rate which, if applied to IR£29,254.97, would produce a round-figure dollar sum. Such a match was found, using a notional special buy remit rate of 1.5382, a rate 4 points better for the branch than the published buy remit rate for US dollars for 5 December 1994.

7.102 This buy remit rate of 1.5382 was well within the range of improvement which might conceivably have been given by Currency Services.²⁵ Such a special buy remit rate when applied to a sum of US$45,000 resulted in a figure of IR£29,254.97, which was the value of the foreign currency remitted to Currency Services by AIB 37/38 O'Connell Street for 5 December 1994.

7.103 The application of a buy remit rate of 1.5382 was the subject of the following exchange between Tribunal Counsel and Ms Murtagh on Day 753:

'Q. ...Now in relation then to these figures, when we look to the US dollar figure which we see on, sorry page 22755, that figure of 45,000 dollars equates exactly to a sum of 29,254.97, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. And that figure could represent an exchange of 45,000 dollars within the bank's standard procedure and without there being any exception to any rule or any clear up or special treatment, isn't that right for that equation to work, I am just putting to you, it works within the bank's standard procedure?

A. It does.

Q. Of notes being bundled in hundreds and being, the rate being applied to it being a rate which is an improvement upon the standard rate of the day by a margin which would reflect that improvement, isn't that right?

A. That's right, yeah.

Q. Now, in relation to the source of the remit on that particular day, Ms. Murtagh, we know and I think you examined the documents at interview with the Tribunal, that it can be related back to information contained within the Foreign Currency Held account of AIB O'Connell Street on the 5th December, 1994, which we see at page 20674, isn't that right?

²⁴ The results of this mathematical exercise were set out in a mathematical table entitled 'Tribunal application of possible Remit Rates to AIB FX Remit of IR£29,254.97 in either ST£ or US$ on 5th December, 1994.'

²⁵ Based on the banking evidence that any improvement of the published rate would not 'even go as far as 10 points.'

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. And when we look to this document, I think you will confirm for me that it reflects the purchases and sales of foreign currency on the 5th December, of 1994, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. And it shows in the sales that is under the credits, the sum of 29,254.92 - 97 perhaps?

A. 256.97.

Q. .97. That's exactly the sum that was remitted upwards, isn't that right?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. So what this document is telling us, independently of what happened in the money room, is that this figure is the figure that was remitted from the branch to the money room, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Yes. And then on the column under 'debits' we see the purchases of foreign currency that day, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, if accurate the reference here is, if we deal firstly with FX, it shows that foreign currency of 28,969.34 pounds was purchased in the branch that day, isn't that so?

A. That's right.

Q. And in the purchases of foreign notes it is distinguished as between sterling and all others, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. And this is the all others figure, in other words not sterling, isn't that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And there is a separate entry for sterling beneath it for 1,921.53 pounds, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. If this document is accurate, could I suggest to you that it indicates firstly that only 1,921.53 pounds sterling was transacted by way of purchase on the 5th December in the bank that day?

A. That's right.

Q. That is a purchase by the bank I should say?

A. Yes.

Q. On the other hand it also shows that they bought 28,969.34 pounds worth of other foreign currencies, isn't that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And could I suggest to you that it also would indicate, as a probability, that the funds which were purchased that day were the funds that were remitted that day?

A. Yes, that's most likely.

Q. Yes. And therefore what was most likely remitted was foreign currency other than sterling?

A. Yes, if the docketed narratives are accurate, yes.

Q. Yes. And the foreign currency other than sterling was contained within the 28,969.34 pounds either in total or at a minimum in part, isn't that right?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. And that it was that sum that was reflected in the 29,254.97 which was opened in the branch, by the branch I mean in Currency Services department and recorded on the 7th, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Wouldn't that confirm to you, as a matter of probability, if not certainty, that the amount of cash that was actually in Currency Services on the 7th December was 45,000 dollars?

A. Most probable, yes.

Q. How probable on the scale can you say and what would you say are the only qualifications that allow for that to take place, assuming this documentation to be accurate?

A. Well if the documentation is accurate, yes that is most likely its 45, if the narratives are not accurate then its possibly not 45,000 dollars.

Q. How likely is it that it could be 28,000 or anything close to 28,900 sterling? Firstly if this document is accurate it can't be, isn't that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And if it was to be sterling it would be, involve two other considerations which are off the normal, one is that there was a clear up of currency taking place on the day and that the bank procedure normal procedure wasn't being followed, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. And a further qualification that a one pound note from either the Channel Island or Northern Ireland perhaps, I'm not sure if Northern Ireland notes are considered sterling?

A. They are, yes.

Q. Northern Ireland or Scotland was thrown into the pot as well, is that right?

A. That's right. '

THE OPINION OF MR PADDY STRONGE²⁶

7.104 Mr Ahern's solicitor submitted a report from Mr Paddy Stronge with their letter to the Tribunal dated 18 September 2007. A subsequent, and more detailed, report from Mr Stronge was furnished to the Tribunal on 19 October 2007.

7.105 In his reports, Mr Stronge considered, in particular, the evidence provided to the Tribunal relating to the lodgement dated 11 October 1994 in the sum of IR£24,838.49 to Mr Ahern's account (see section III) and the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 dated 5 December 1994 to Ms Larkin's account.

7.106 Mr Stronge's conclusions in relation to the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 were as follows:

In the absence of tally rolls, the assumption that the lodgement was US$45,000 is speculation.

The AIB witnesses have highlighted the unreliability of narratives to impersonal accounts in evidence and have cautioned against reliance thereon in support of a dollar hypothesis.

The AIB witnesses have also highlighted that in this case where the values are being posted to the same account, the narratives are 'almost irrelevant.'

The Tribunal has ruled out a Sterling pound remittance on the basis that a single exchange rate has been applied to the remittance. AIB have pointed out that remittances can be made up of more than one rate. Therefore, that analysis is inconclusive.

The rate of 1.5382, which results in a US$45,000 remittance could not have been applied to the remittance as this rate would also have had to have been applied to the lodgement. AIB's Currencies Services expert, therefore, have ruled out the hypothesis that the remittance was US$45,000.

²⁶ Mr Stronge submitted his reports behalf of Mr Ahern in his capacity as a banking expert. Mr Stronge worked in various positions in Bank of Ireland between 1963 and 2004 (and subsequently on a part time basis between July 2005 and March 2007). At the time of his retirement from Bank of Ireland in 2004, Mr Stronge held the position of Chief Operating Officer Corporate Banking. At the time he prepared his reports, Mr Stronge was Chairman of Philos Training & Consultancy Ltd.

If the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 was as a result of a $45,000 US Dollar exchange at the official rate, then the remittance should also contain $45,000 at the standard remittance rate. The Tribunal's own workings have ruled this out. Therefore the Tribunal hypothesis, of a lodgement of $45,000 US Dollars, is dependant on a breach in branch procedure, regarding exchange rates, and no evidence has been provided to support that claim.

The customer lodgement of IR£28,772.90 is consistent with the explanation put forward by Mr. Ahern that the lodgement was made up of both Sterling and Irish pounds.

For these reasons, the evidence put forward does not substantiate the Tribunal hypothesis.

7.107 Contrary to what Mr Stronge suggested in his report, the AIB bank witnesses who gave evidence to the Tribunal did not establish that the 'narratives' used in the bank to identify the total amounts of Sterling currency and currency other than Sterling transacted in any one day within a branch were unreliable.

7.108 Again, contrary to what was suggested by Mr Stronge, the evidence to the Tribunal by AIB bank witnesses did not establish that a rate of 1.5382 could only have been applied to the remittance of the foreign currency to Currency Services if that rate was also applied to the lodgement of IR£28,772.90. For such to have occurred would not have, as suggested by Mr Stronge, depended on a 'breach in branch procedure.'

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE BANKING EVIDENCE

7.109 The Tribunal was satisfied that a substantial foreign currency cash sum tendered to AIB in 1994 for exchange into Irish pounds could have had applied to it one of the published customer buy rates programmed into the Forde Money Changer rather than an improved rate, and that such an occurrence did not amount to evidence of a breach of the bank's practices and procedures. Nor did it involve manually overriding or bypassing the Forde Money Changer machine. (See Section III also in relation to this issue)

7.110 The Tribunal was satisfied from the evidence of AIB witnesses that Currency Services had the discretion to nominate any spot rate, including one lower (less favourable to the customer) than the best of the published customer buy rates. While a teller telephoning Currency Services for a spot rate for a sterling sum with a value in excess of IR£10,000 would normally expect that the rate quoted would be a better rate than the best published customer buy rate (i.e. 0.9947 on 5 December 1994), it was not always the case that a better rate would in fact be given. Mr Garrett, who had worked in the foreign exchange section of a busy city centre branch in Dublin,²⁷ recalled instances when the rate quoted was one which was not better for the customer than the best published customer buy rate.²⁸

7.111 The Tribunal was further satisfied that in 1994 AIB Currency Services could give a special buy remit rate, a rate better (for the branch) than the published buy remit rate, up to 10 points better for the branch than the published rate, without also affording the customer that rate.

7.112 The Tribunal was satisfied that it was Mr Garrett's understanding, based on his foreign exchange experience, that this could have occurred. Furthermore, Ms Murtagh had in effect confirmed in the course of her private interview that Currency Services could give a special remit rate and/or special rate to purchase from the customer.

7.113 It was a fact, established to the Tribunal's satisfaction as a matter of the strongest probability, that the foreign currency remitted to Currency Services from 37/38 O'Connell Street in Dublin on 5 December 1994 was remitted at a special buy remit rate, which was not the published buy remit rate, and that Ms Larkin had not received a similar exchange rate for her tendered foreign currency. The Tribunal believed that fact to be indisputable, whether the foreign currency in question was sterling or US dollars.

7.114 With regard to the lodgement made to the Larkin 011 account on 5 December 1994 the Tribunal thus concluded as follows:

- 1) On 5 December 1994 Ms Larkin lodged a sum of IR£28,772.90 to a bank account in her name in the AIB branch of 37/38 O'Connell Street, Dublin having first exchanged a foreign currency amount. The contemporaneous bank documentation relating to the lodgement did not identify the type of foreign currency she exchanged.
- 2) The branch's debit docket and the computerised Foreign Currency Held Ledger recorded that on 5 December 1994 the branch purchased from customers sterling to the value of IR£1,921.53, and foreign currency other than sterling to the value of IR£28,969.34. On its face, this documentation established that the foreign currency tendered for ²⁷Capel Street.

²⁸In the same bank a lodgement of Stg£20,000 was converted at the rate for amounts up to the value of IR£10,000 and the narrative on the docket suggested that the rate for amounts up to the value of IR£2,000 was first considered.

exchange by Ms Larkin on 5 December 1994 could not have been sterling, and must have been a foreign currency other than sterling.

- 3) AIB witnesses acknowledged that it was possible that a bank official might, in error, manually interchange or reverse the totals for sterling and foreign exchange other than sterling when transcribing the relevant information from the Forde Money Changer tally roll onto debit docket, and also acknowledged that had such a human error indeed occurred, the subsequent accurately recorded data within the bank would not necessarily have triggered an awareness of such an error, or indeed a necessity to correct such an error. However, none of the bank witnesses suggested to the Tribunal that any such error had (or probably had) occurred on 5 December 1994, or that such errors had ever occurred in the past, much less that they were commonplace. The Tribunal had no reason to believe, or suspect, that such an error occurred on that occasion.
- 4) Furthermore, in the course of the evidence heard by the Tribunal in relation to a number of AIB banking transactions, and in particular in relation to a variety of hand-written bank records, it was not established that human error in such records was a feature of bank practice, or was in any sense commonplace within AIB.
- 5) The Tribunal was satisfied that the foreign exchange transactions conducted in the branch at 37/38 O'Connell Street, Dublin on 5 December 1994 had not been incorrectly or inaccurately recorded in the debit docket or the computerised Foreign Currency Held Ledger. More specifically, the Tribunal was satisfied that the totals for sterling and for foreign exchange other than sterling were not mistakenly interchanged or reversed.
- 6) Applying the customer buy rate applicable to US dollar amounts tendered for exchange not exceeding IR£2,500 in value (the more favourable of two published customer buy rates for the day) to US$45,000 produced a figure of exactly IR£28,772.90 (assuming the discretionary IR£5 commission was charged).
- 7) Foreign currency to the value of IR£29,254.97 was remitted by the branch on 5 December 1994 to Currency Services.

- 8) This remittance represented either sterling or dollars. The currency was remitted to Currency Services at a buy remit rate other than the published buy remit rate for either sterling or dollars.
- 9) Applying the published buy remit rate of the day for sterling to the remitted value of IR£29,254.97 produced a sum of Stg£28,895.13, a remittance that could not have taken place as it would have involved a sterling coin element.
- 10) The closest notional buy remit rate for sterling to the published buy remit rate of the day which, when applied to the figure of IR£29,254.97 yielded a round-figure sterling sum (including Stg£1 notes), was 25 points better (for the branch) than the published buy remit rate, or 42 points worse (for the branch) than the published buy remit rate. Such remit rates were extremely, if not absolutely, unlikely to have been applied in relation to a remittance of sterling by the AIB branch at 37/38 O'Connell Street, Dublin to Currency Services on 5 December 1994.
- 11) The application of a notional buy remit rate 4 points better than the published buy remit rate for US dollars, if applied to IR£29,254.97, would produce US$45,000.²⁹ This rate fell well within the 10 point margin of discretion which Currency Services would be expected to give to a remitting branch in circumstances where the remitting branch was being authorised to remit at a rate other than the published buy remit of the day.

The Tribunal considered whether the remitted value of IR£29,254.97 represented a transfer of sterling at a single buy remit rate, or alternatively represented two (or more) sterling amounts remitted at two or more buy remit rates. This issue was briefly canvassed with Ms Murtagh in the course of her cross-examination by Counsel for Mr Ahern. This suggestion raised the possibility that only a portion (albeit the larger portion, having regard to Mr. Ahern's evidence that the sum provided to Ms Larkin consisted of an amount of sterling close to Stg£30,000) of the foreign currency represented by IR£29,254.97 came from Ms Larkin, and that the balance represented sterling tendered by one or more customers other than Ms Larkin. However, the Tribunal was satisfied that this possibility was extremely unlikely, and indeed, improbable, for three reasons. Firstly, bank documentation indicated that sterling to the value of less than IR£2,000 was exchanged in the branch on the day. On its face, therefore, such documentation excluded as a matter of certainty that Ms Larkin (or any other customer or number of customers) had exchanged, in total, sterling in excess of that amount. The Tribunal accepted that, as a matter of the strongest probability, the said bank documentation had been written up correctly, thus establishing that sterling less than (in value) IR£2,000 had been exchanged in the branch on the day. Secondly, the fact that the application of the customer buy rate for exchanging US Dollar amounts exceeding, in value, IR£2,500, when applied to US$45,000 produced a figure of IR£28,772.90 (the exact amount of Ms Larkin's lodgement), indicated to the Tribunal that, as a matter of the strongest probability, the larger (by far) amount of foreign currency remitted from the branch to Currency Services for the day in question (the only possible currency being either Sterling or US dollars) was US Dollars, and was, again as a matter of the strongest possibility, comprised entirely of Ms Larkin's lodgement. Thirdly, given the fact that when notional buy remit rates within ten points of the published buy remit rate of the day were applied to the remitted sum (both in respect of it being sterling or US dollars), the only match identified was US$45,000 the Tribunal was satisfied that as a matter of the strongest probability, the remitted foreign currency was US$45,000, and not any amount of sterling.

The Tribunal was satisfied that the foregoing combination of established facts rendered it almost inconceivable that the remitted sum was sterling, be that sterling sourced to one customer, or a multiple of customers.

In summary, the evidence in relation to the remittance of IR£29,254.97 therefore established that:

- a) The remitted foreign currency to the value of IR£29,254.97 could not have been sterling remitted at the published buy remit rate applicable on 5 December 1994.
- b) The foreign currency to the value of IR£29,254.97 could not have been US dollars remitted at the published buy remit rate applicable on 5 December 1994.
- c) The foreign currency amount to the value of IR£29,254.97 remitted to Currency Services must have been remitted at a special buy remit rate (within a margin of up to 10 points) on the published buy remit rate applicable to 5 December 1994, whether the foreign exchange was sterling or US dollars.
- d) While the published buy remit rate for 5 December 1994 was and is known, records of special buy remit rates given occasionally by Currency Services were not maintained.

- e) In the case of sterling, the application of notional buy remit rates marginally better (but less than 10 points better) than the published buy remit rate applicable on 5 December 1994 to the remitted value of IR£29,254.97 failed to produce any sterling sum without a coin element. The closest sterling sum (excluding coins) which could have been represented by a value of IR£29,254.97 was Stg£28,822, a notional special or varied buy remit rate 25 points better (for the branch) than the published buy remit rate of 0.9877, and would have involved a minimum of two Stg£1 notes.
- f) In the case of sterling, the application to the remittance value of IR£29,254.97 of a notional special buy remit rate 42 points worse than the published buy remit rate produced a round-figure sum of Stg£29,108. A rate 42 points worse than the published rate could be excluded as a possibility and furthermore, such a sterling sum would have to have included, as a minimum, three Stg£1 notes.
- g) Therefore, the IR£29,254.97 value of foreign exchange remitted to Currency Services for 5 December 1994 could not have and did not represent a sum of Stg£30,000 or any round-figure sterling sum.
- h) In the case of US dollars, the application to the remittance value of IR£29,254.97 of a notional remit rate 4 points better than the published buy remit rate produced a round figure of US$45,000. A special remit rate 4 points better than the published buy remit rate of 1.5386 was well within the up-to-10 point variation range stated by Ms Murtagh as having been within the discretion of Currency Services.
- i) Almost certainly, therefore, the foreign currency to the value of IR£29,254.97 remitted to Currency Services on 5 December 1994 was US$45,000.
- 12) The finding of fact by the Tribunal in 5) above, by itself, established as a fact that on 5 December 1994 the AIB branch of 37/38 O'Connell Street, Dublin purchased sterling from customers to a value of only IR£1,921.53, and therefore could not have received from Ms Larkin a sterling sum with an Irish pound value in excess of that figure.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSION AS TO THE FOREIGN CURRENCY TENDERED FOR EXCHANGE BY MS LARKIN

7.115 The overwhelming weight of the evidence established as a matter of the strongest probability that:

- 1) Ms Larkin did not tender for exchange a sum of Stg£30,000 or any sterling sum on the 5 December 1994.
- 2) Ms Larkin did in fact tender for exchange a sum of US$45,000.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS ON THE CLAIMED HANDOVER BY MR
WALL OF STG£30,000 TO MR AHERN

7.116 The Tribunal established as a matter of the strongest probability that the IR£28,772.90 lodged to the Larkin 011 account on 5 December 1994 had its origins in US$45,000 and not in any sterling sum. It therefore followed that the cash provided by Mr Ahern to Ms Larkin for lodgement to the account on 5 December 1994 was not approximately Stg£30,000, but was in fact $45,000.

7.117 The Tribunal therefore rejected in its entirety Mr Ahern's evidence that the money he left for collection for Ms Larkin for her to lodge in the bank on 5 December 1994 was Stg£30,000, or any sterling sum approaching that amount.

7.118 Mr Ahern did not account to the Tribunal as to what, in fact, the lodgement made at his behest to the Larkin 011 account on 5 December 1994 comprised. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Ahern knew that the content of the briefcase which he left for collection by Ms Larkin was US Dollars.

7.119 The Tribunal was satisfied that at all relevant times the funds lodged into the Larkin 011 account on 5 December 1994 were those of Mr Ahern.

7.120 Mr Ahern's failure to provide a true account to the Tribunal as to the composition of the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 to the Larkin 011 account on 5 December 1994 has rendered the Tribunal unable to determine the probable source of this substantial amount of money.

7.121 Separately to its finding, as a fact, that the currency used to fund the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 was entirely US dollars and not sterling, the Tribunal, for a number of reasons, did not accept the evidence given to it by Mr Ahern and Mr Wall of the circumstances of the handing over of a substantial cash sum by Mr Wall to Mr Ahern in St Luke's on 3 December 1994.

7.122 The Tribunal rejected Mr Wall's evidence that he brought with him a sum of money in the region of Stg£30,000 from Manchester to Dublin on the weekend of 2 December 1994. Important aspects of Mr Wall's evidence to the Tribunal on this issue were simply unbelievable and incredible, including, in particular, the following:

- Although Mr Wall told the Tribunal that he had left large sums of money in hotels or in his car 'several times', the Tribunal believed it unlikely that an experienced businessman such as Mr Wall would have left a sum of approximately Stg£30,000 in a hotel wardrobe, and then leave the hotel for a number of hours to attend a function at another location.

- Had Mr Wall handed a sum of Stg£30,000, or a sum close to that figure, to Mr Ahern on 3 December 1994, the Tribunal believed it likely that both Mr Ahern and Mr Wall would have been certain as to the amount in question, and that Mr Ahern would have satisfied himself at the time as to the amount actually handed to him.
- The Tribunal also rejected as implausible Mr Wall's contention that he would have tendered Stg£30,000 or any approximate sum to Mr Ahern in early December 1994 when, to that point in time the furthest Mr Wall's acquisition of Beresford had progressed was that a booking deposit had merely been paid. A binding sale contract had not been executed.
- Mr Wall failed to provide any documentary proof as evidence that he had had approximately Stg£30,000 in his possession on the 3 December 1993 for provision to Mr Ahern.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 10 - SECTION V : THE LODGEMENTS OF IR£11,743.74 ON 15 JUNE 1995 AND OF IR£19,142.92 ON 1 DECEMBER 1995

THE LODGEMENT OF IR£11,743.74 ON 15 JUNE 1995 TO ACCOUNT NO. 1/L/11620/015 (MS LARKIN'S 015 ACCOUNT)

8.01 An analysis of Ms Larkin's bank statements revealed that on 15 June 1995, IR£11,743.74 was lodged to the Larkin 015 account (a 28 days fixed account). This account had been opened by Ms Larkin on 5 December 1994 with a deposit of IR£50,000 transferred from two of Mr Ahern's bank accounts. Some six weeks later (19 January 1995) these funds were withdrawn in cash by Ms Larkin.¹

8.02 The IR£11,743.74 lodged to this account on 15 June 1995 was withdrawn on 22 June 1995 and lodged to a separate account (the Larkin 031 account), a call/demand account opened by Ms Larkin on that date. The 031 account provided her with easier access to the funds. Ms Larkin told the Tribunal that the transfer was effected for this purpose.

8.03 In the memorandum prepared in advance of her private interview on 14 June 2006, Ms Larkin acknowledged lodging IR£11,743.74, given to her by Mr Ahern 'to pay for part of the fit out on 44 Beresford.'² Ms Larkin did not reveal any foreign exchange element in that lodgement. In the course of his private interview on 5 April 2007, Mr Ahern accepted³ that the lodgement to Ms Larkin's account on 15 June 1995 included sterling and Irish pounds.

8.04 AIB bank documentation discovered to the Tribunal revealed that the IR£11,743.74 lodged on 15 June 1995 was processed through the foreign exchange desk at the AIB branch at 37/38 Upper O'Connell Street, and that the lodgement consisted of two separate sums, namely IR£9,743.74 and IR£2,000. The handwriting on the lodgement docket showed that the AIB officials, Mr Philip Murphy and Mr Jim McNamara had processed the lodgement. While he did not have any recollection of the transaction, Mr Murphy acknowledged that the lodgement docket indicated that the IR£9,743.74 was likely to be a foreign exchange transaction.

³ Mr Ahern initially told the Tribunal that he was 'not sure' that the lodgement was sterling, but subsequently accepted that such was the case.

8.05 In the course of his sworn evidence, Mr Ahern accepted the composition of the lodgement and agreed, as suggested by Ms Larkin, that it was for the payment of bills relating to the refurbishment of No. 44 Beresford Avenue. In the course of her evidence to the Tribunal, Ms Larkin acknowledged (based on the bank documentation) that the lodgement on 15 June 1995 consisted of the Irish pound equivalent of Stg£10,000 and IR£2,000, but she had no recollection of the sterling component or why Mr Ahern had given her sterling on that occasion. Mr Ahern did not recall actually handing over the sterling or Irish pound sums to Ms Larkin which enabled her to make the lodgement in question, but agreed that he ‘would have’ counted out the sterling to her.

8.06 The Tribunal learned that by application of one of the published customer buy rate for sterling on 15 June 1995 at AIB, 37/38 Upper O’Connell Street (i.e. 1.0263), a person tendering Stg£10,000 would have received IR£9,743.74 (assuming the IR£5 discretionary commission was not charged). This was the exact amount of the larger of the constituent sums of the lodgement on 15 June 1995. The branch’s ‘foreign notes held’ account on 15 June 1995 indicated that it had purchased sterling notes to the value of IR£12,798.65 on that day. This allowed for an exchange of Stg£10,000 to have taken place.

THE LODGEMENT OF IR£19,142.92 ON 1 DECEMBER 1995 TO MR AHERN’S 011 ACCOUNT

8.07 A sum of IR£19,142.92 was lodged into Mr Ahern’s AIB 28 day fixed deposit account (the Ahern 011 account) at 37/38 Upper O’Connell Street on 1 December 1995.

8.08 This account was originally opened on 11 October 1994 to receive IR£24,838.49. This was the deposit claimed by Mr Ahern as being the fruits of the ‘second goodwill loan’ of circa IR£16,500 and the Manchester gift of circa Stg£8,000.

8.09 AIB documentation discovered to the Tribunal indicated that the IR£19,142.92 lodgement was processed at the branch’s foreign exchange counter. An examination of the bank lodgement docket revealed two figures: IR£19,002.79 crossed out, and IR£19,142.92 inserted in its place. The branch’s foreign currency held account for 1 December 1995 recorded purchases of sterling to the value of IR£19,734.04 and that the teller who processed the purchases also processed the lodgement of IR£19,142.92.

8.10 The application of two of the branch’s published customer buy rates for sterling of 1 December 1995 revealed that Stg£20,000 sterling exchanged at a buy rate of 1.0522 (for sums up to the value of IR£2,500) and 1.0445 (for sums up to the value of IR£10,000) produced Irish pound amounts of IR£19,002.79 and IR£19,142.92 respectively, assuming in each case that the discretionary commission of IR£5 was charged. These sums represented the two amounts appearing on the lodgement docket for the lodgement of IR£19,142.92 on 1 December 1995, the former crossed out, and the latter written in its place. The transaction accounted for 97 per cent of the exceptionally large volume of sterling purchased by the branch on that day.

8.11 Mr Ahern acknowledged to the Tribunal that the IR£19,142.92 lodged to his account on 1 December 1995 represented an Irish pound equivalent of Stg£20,000. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that he had no recollection of how the Stg£20,000 sterling was paid into his account.

8.12 Although Mr Murphy of AIB had no recollection of processing the sterling exchange and the lodgement in question, a note in Mr Ahern's diary for 30 November 1995 indicated that Mr Ahern met with Mr Murphy in St Luke's late on the day prior to the day on which the lodgement was made. It was likely therefore that Mr Murphy either processed the lodgement himself, or arranged for a colleague to do so.

THE LODGEMENT AND WITHDRAWAL OF IR£50,000 BY MS LARKIN

8.13 On 5 December 1994, Ms Larkin opened the Larkin 015 account with a lodgement of IR£50,000, comprised of two sums, IR£28,000 and IR£22,000. The IR£28,000 came from Mr Ahern's Special Savings Account (SSA) the account which he had opened in AIB Upper O'Connell Street on 30 December 1993 with a lodgement of IR£22,500 (the claimed 'first goodwill loan'⁴) and topped up in April 1994⁵ to its maximum limit of IR£50,000. The balance of the funds (IR£22,000) lodged to the Larkin 015 account on 5 December came from the Ahern 011 account (according to Mr Ahern, the proceeds of the claimed 'second goodwill loan' IR£16,500 and the circa Stg£8,000 'Manchester dinner' donation, but which in fact had its origin in a sterling only lodgement of £25,000 made to the Ahern 011 account on 11 October 1994).⁶

8.14 In her June 2006 memorandum (prepared for her 14 June 2006 meeting with the Tribunal) Ms Larkin advised the Tribunal that the reason for the lodgement of IR£50,000 to an account in her name on 5 December 1994 was to facilitate the expenditure on the fit-out of No. 44 Beresford Avenue. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that he had decided to rent this house from Mr Michael Wall, and to contribute up to IR£50,000 to its refurbishment. It was noteworthy that at the time this decision was made, when, it is claimed, funds totalling almost IR£80,000 were made available to Ms Larkin for refurbishment purposes, Mr Wall was only in the process of purchasing the house. The purchase was not completed until March/April 1995, and Mr Ahern did not take up residence there until September 1995. The funds identified in evidence by Mr Ahern and Ms Larkin as having been provided for the refurbishment and fit-out of Beresford, a relatively new house, represented approximately 57 per cent of its market/purchase price.

⁴ See Section I.

⁵ See Section II.

⁶ See Section III.

8.15 On 19 January 1995 Ms Larkin withdrew in cash the IR£50,000 she had lodged to the Larkin 015 account on 5 December 1994. In the course of her private interview on 14 June 2006 with members of the Tribunal's legal team, Ms Larkin provided the following explanation for this withdrawal:

' . . . because we were going to do it in piecemeal, as in, you know, buy curtains and to do this, that and the other, we took the money out to hold it in cash. At that point I think the cash may have been kept in St Luke's, I think that is where it was.'

8.16 Ms Larkin told the Tribunal that the IR£50,000 was withdrawn in cash so as to provide ready access to it to facilitate the expenditure on Beresford on a 'piecemeal' basis. However, the withdrawal of this money from an AIB 28-day deposit account resulted in a loss of bank interest, and access to the funds by Ms Larkin was rendered more difficult in practical terms. Ms Larkin had easy access to the funds while they were in a deposit account in her own name, but had no immediate access to the cash while it was in Mr Ahern's office safe in St Luke's, Drumcondra, other than through Mr Ahern.

8.17 Ms Larkin stated she had withdrawn the funds from 'the Bertie account' (the Larkin 015 account) because 'Bertie dealt in cash' and she thought he 'felt more comfortable' with cash.

8.18 When initially questioned by the Tribunal as to the circumstances in which the IR£50,000 was withdrawn from her bank account on 19 January 1995, Ms Larkin said that she had no recollection of actually withdrawing the monies or of handing the monies to Mr Ahern. While she claimed that she did not herself have a clear recollection as to the circumstances in which the IR£50,000 was actually withdrawn, Ms Larkin believed that she had withdrawn the money and handed it over to Mr Ahern because Mr Ahern had told her that this was in fact what happened.

8.19 On 24 July 2007, prior to giving evidence, Ms Larkin, through her solicitor, stated the following:

When Ms Larkin withdrew IR£50,000 on 19 January 1995 from the First Deposit Account on the instructions of Mr Ahern she collected a bag or parcel from Mr Philip Murphy of AIB on O'Connell Street. Mr Murphy had a bag or parcel ready for collection. Ms Larkin delivered that bag or parcel to Mr Ahern. Ms Larkin does not recollect looking into the bag or parcel and she did not see the contents. Ms Larkin took the contents to be the IR£50,000 cash withdrawal from the First Deposit Account and had no reason to think otherwise.

8.20 On Day 755 (12 September 2007), when giving sworn evidence to the Tribunal, Ms Larkin explained her improved memory (in contrast to information she had furnished to the Tribunal over a year earlier in her memorandum) on the basis that, following her interview with the Tribunal on 14 June 2006, and discussions with Mr Ahern on the topic, her recollection had improved.

8.21 The Tribunal noted that although Ms Larkin credited Mr Ahern as having assisted her recollection of the events of 19 January 1995, he himself, on Day 762 (24 September 2007) professed to have no particular recollection of the day in question, save that he accepted that she had returned to him in cash the IR£50,000 which had been deposited on his instructions to the 015 account some six weeks earlier.

8.22 In the course of her evidence, Ms Larkin provided a graphic description of being driven to the AIB branch at 37/38 Upper O'Connell Street on 19 January 1995 by Mr Ahern, and of going into the bank while Mr Ahern waited for her in the car, and of returning from the bank with the IR£50,000 in cash, and of being driven by Mr Ahern to St Luke's in Drumcondra, and of her assumption and belief that Mr Ahern deposited the cash in his office safe.

8.23 Mr Murphy, in the course of his evidence to the Tribunal, did not recall the events as described by Ms Larkin, but did not deny that they had occurred as she suggested.

8.24 Ms Larkin told the Tribunal that she had no personal knowledge of a link between the IR£50,000 withdrawn by her on 19 January 1995 and handed to Mr Ahern and the subsequent sterling lodgements on 15 June and 1 December 1995. Ms Larkin said that she had no knowledge of where Mr Ahern obtained the Stg£10,000 or that he had held in his possession any sterling cash. Ms Larkin said that she had no recollection of Mr Ahern giving her Stg£10,000 in cash.

THE PURCHASE OF STG£30,000

8.25 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that the sums of Stg£10,000 and Stg£20,000 which had, respectively, part-funded the lodgement of IR£11,743.74 on 15 June 1995 and fully funded the lodgement of IR£19,142.92⁷ on 1 December 1995 were sourced from a fund of Stg£30,000, which he maintained he had purchased using some of the IR£50,000 in cash withdrawn by Ms Larkin from the Larkin 015 Account on 19 January 1995, following his request that she return to him the monies which had been lodged to that account on 5 December 1994.

8.26 In his sworn evidence to the Tribunal on Days 756 and 760, Mr Ahern stated that he himself purchased the Stg£30,000 at AIB 37/38 Upper O'Connell Street, although he had no actual recollection of the event.⁸ However, in evidence given by Mr Ahern later on Day 760, 20 September 2007 (by which time Mr Ahern was aware that AIB, following a request from the Tribunal, had confirmed that its records revealed that there had been no single purchase of Stg£30,000 within the relevant period) he introduced for the first time the possibility that someone other than himself might have purchased the sterling at his request, when he said 'whether [I did] that myself or whether I asked somebody to do it for me.'

8.27 On Day 762, Mr Ahern, in the course of his evidence, stated to the Tribunal:

'What I believe I must have done, and this is as I said in my statement a few weeks ago that I was checking, I must have given it to somebody to change for me because I think I would recall if I changed it myself. The only banks I think I would have changed it are Drumcondra or in O'Connell Street. If I didn't change it there, perhaps in Drumcondra I could have changed in smaller amounts, but I'm not sure about that, but I doubt it. I think it's more likely I would have given it to somebody to change for me.'

8.28 Mr Ahern himself doubted the possibility that he might have exchanged his cash for Stg£30,000 in tranches over a period of time.

⁷ (i) The first explanation to the Tribunal of the lodgement of IR£19,412.92 on 1 December 1995 was in the report prepared by Mr Peelo on Mr Ahern's behalf dated 20 April 2006. Mr Peelo did not refer to any sterling component in that lodgement.

(ii) The first disclosure to the Tribunal of the IR£11,743.74 was in Ms Larkin's statement to the Tribunal on 14 June 2006.

(iii) References by Ms Larkin in her statement to the Tribunal, and in the course of her private interview with the Tribunal on 14 June 2006, to the lodgement of IR£11,743.74 did not indicate that it included sterling.

⁸ In his private interview with the Tribunal Mr Ahern indicated that this transaction involved Mr Philip Murphy.

8.29 Also on Day 762, Mr Ahern advised the Tribunal that he had checked with the 'limited' number of people within and outside his office to whom he might have entrusted the task of purchasing Stg£30,000 in cash, and that none of them had confirmed to him that they had done so.

8.30 Prior to Mr Ahern's sworn evidence, the Tribunal sought to establish from AIB if any of its customers had purchased Stg£30,000 at its branch at 37/38 Upper O'Connell Street, Dublin, between 19 January and 15 June 1995. Documentation provided by AIB showed that its branch records for the period in question established a daily average of IR£2,000 in sterling purchases by customers, and that the largest single sterling purchase in this period was the equivalent of IR£9,451.50. The Tribunal was further informed by AIB that its Drumcondra branch records (where Mr Ahern said he occasionally conducted banking business) did not reveal a single sale of Stg£30,000 to a customer within these dates. Mr Ahern confirmed in the course of his evidence to the Tribunal that he had checked with both AIB bank branches and indicated that he agreed that neither branch had conducted a single Stg£30,000 exchange within the said period.

8.31 Mr Murphy of AIB, with whom Mr Ahern usually dealt, had no recollection of a purchase by Mr Ahern of Stg£30,000. Mr Murphy acknowledged that the bank documentation recorded no such transaction.

8.32 The Tribunal was therefore satisfied that neither the AIB branches at 37/38 Upper O'Connell Street nor at Drumcondra had processed a single sale of Stg£30,000 to any customer, including Mr Ahern, within the period in question.

8.33 Neither of Mr Ahern's secretaries in 1995, namely Ms Grainne Carruth or Ms Sandra Cullagh, who were both entrusted on occasions with aspects of Mr Ahern's financial dealings, purchased Stg£30,000 on his behalf. Furthermore, prior to his sworn evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Ahern had not, in fact, asked Ms Carruth whether she had purchased a substantial sterling sum on his behalf in 1995. Ms Cullagh told the Tribunal that Mr Ahern had posed such a query to her approximately six or seven months prior to her giving evidence to the Tribunal.⁹

8.34 Ms Larkin advised the Tribunal that she was unaware of Mr Ahern's claimed Stg£30,000 purchase in 1995.

8.35 Mr Peelo's written report to the Tribunal in April 2006, on Mr Ahern's behalf, advised the Tribunal that the IR£19,142.92 lodged on 1 December 1995 consisted of unspent funds left over following expenditure of 'some' IR£30,000 on Beresford which, the report claimed, had been made from the IR£50,000 cash withdrawn by Ms Larkin on 19 January 1995. Mr Peelo's report was silent on any sterling element of this lodgement.

⁹ Ms Cullagh gave this evidence to the Tribunal on 19 December 2007.

MR AHERN'S EXPLANATIONS AS TO HIS REQUIREMENT FOR STG£30,000 IN EARLY 1995

8.36 On 5 April 2007 Mr Ahern advised the Tribunal that he had instructed Ms Larkin to withdraw IR£50,000 in cash from the Larkin 015 account in January 1995 on the basis that he had decided to allow Ms Larkin and Mr Wall take charge entirely of the Beresford refurbishment, including the utilising of monies (the IR£50,000 which had been lodged into the Larkin 015 account on the 5 December 1994) which Mr Ahern claimed was his contribution to the refurbishment.

8.37 While Mr Ahern stated that this had been his intention, it appeared to the Tribunal, as a matter of logic, that this instruction had the consequence of removing the already de facto control and access Ms Larkin had at that time over Mr Ahern's funds by virtue of the fact that as from 5 December 1994 the said funds were in an account controlled by Ms Larkin, whereas from January 1995 they were apparently placed in a safe to which Ms Larkin did not have access.

8.38 To that point in time (5 April 2007) the Tribunal's understanding, as informed from Ms Larkin's memorandum and her interview with the Tribunal on 14 June 2006, was that Mr Ahern, having in the first instance instructed Ms Larkin to open an account (which she did on 5 December 1994) to receive his funds and operate that account as Mr Ahern's contribution to the fit out of Beresford, subsequently instructed Ms Larkin to withdraw the funds so that Mr Ahern himself, who, as stated by Ms Larkin on 14 June 2006 was someone who 'always dealt in cash', would then contribute to the refurbishment on a piecemeal cash basis, rather than Ms Larkin administering Mr Ahern's contribution via the Larkin 015 account.

8.39 When Mr Ahern was asked to explain why he would provide sterling cash to Mr Wall for the purposes of conducting refurbishment work in Dublin, Mr Ahern stated that Mr Wall 'operated in sterling.' Mr Ahern stated:

'I was going to give it all or partially back to Mick Wall. I was certainly going to give him some of it. I was going to give some of it over for what the house costs would be. We had estimated that it was going to take about 50,000 to do up the house. We couldn't do that until we got our hands on the house. And I intended giving him over something, I was going to give it over to him in sterling.'

8.40 On Day 756, 13 September 2007, in the course of reading a statement under oath to the Tribunal, Mr Ahern provided, for the first time, a different reason for his intention to purchase Stg£30,000 and return it to Mr Wall. In that sworn statement, Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that his reason for the purchase of the Stg£30,000 was to reimburse Mr Wall for his earlier provision of approximately that amount for use in relation to Beresford, because he, Mr Ahern, had decided not to proceed with the arrangement to rent Beresford, and intended instead to purchase another house.

8.41 In the course of that sworn statement to the Tribunal, Mr Ahern elaborated as follows:

In 1994, Mick Wall was intending to purchase a residence in Ireland for his own use, he was setting up a business in Ireland, 44 Beresford was identified as a convenient residence. I entered into an agreement with him whereby I would rent the property from him with an option to purchase and he would stay there as when he required. In fact [he] stayed there 10–20 times while I rented from him and indeed I purchased Beresford from him in 1997 . . . I was anxious to have a residence at the time I became Taoiseach as was then expected within a short period of time. Mick Wall paid a deposit on the property.

As works were to be carried out on the house he and I agreed that the distribution of those costs. He made this contribution by way of a cash sum, given to me in St Luke's on the 3rd of December 1994, the sum was then lodged on the 5th of December 1994. Having gone from a situation where I was being viewed as a Taoiseach elect and the leader of Fianna Fáil in Government, I went in a short space of time to being a leader of Fianna Fáil in opposition. My circumstances were changing radically and fundamentally over a very short period of time. Having suffered a disappointment of not being elected Taoiseach in strained and unexpected circumstances, the urgency of proceeding with the arrangement in respect of Beresford was removed, indeed I changed my mind about proceeding with the arrangement with Wall in relation to Beresford. During the period after I decided that I was not proceeding with the arrangement with Mick Wall, I looked at a number of other houses which I considered purchasing. I looked at a number of houses in the Beresford Estate, Griffith Avenue area at that time.

Because I'd changed my mind about proceeding with 44 Beresford, and was now actively looking at acquiring a different property, I decided that I should return Mick Wall's contribution to him. In that context part of the £50,000 that was withdrawn on the 19th of January for its then intended use in refurbishment of the house when purchased was actually used to purchase sterling with the intention of returning it to Mick Wall in light of my then change of mind. Eventually I decided I would not acquire any other house, I recall that after Mick Wall was injured in a car accident, Celia Larkin and I visited him in Manchester. During the visit we discussed the position in relation to Beresford and that we would proceed with the conservatory and refurbishment work. I had thus reverted to the original arrangement with Mick Wall hence the return of Mick Wall's contribution did not take place.

8.42 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that the reason he changed the information provided to the Tribunal as to the purchase of Stg£30,000 was that in the period following his RTÉ interview in September 2007, and other media coverage relating to his personal finances, 'people' had pointed out to him that he had actually looked at other houses with a view to purchasing, which was something that he had not personally recollected doing.

8.43 Mr Ahern said:

'The reason for that frankly is when all this was getting a lot of airtime last summer, people were pointing out to me that I did actually go look at houses, and that I did, that I was considering buying a house, people pointed that out to me which I didn't really recollect to be honestwhether it was A, to give him [Mr Wall] the money so that he could carry out the operation, either with Gerry Brennan or with Celia Larkin or whatever and that I changed it to give him that money, or whether I change it had because it had been subsequently pointed out to me by a number of people after [I did] the interview with you that I was still looking around for a house. And that recalled to me that there was a period that I was thinking of not going ahead with it. If it's the first reason or the second reason, it's still the same conclusion, that the reason that I changed the money, some of the 50,000, 30,000 approximately into sterling was either to give it to him to do the job, and finish the job, or to give it to him so that I would move on from the deal. It is either one. And I am not—I wouldn't have elaborated at all on the other one only that it was pointed out to me by a number of people and a number of auctioneers that I did actually look at a number of houses, and of course they brought that to my attention because it got a lot of prominence last year. I wouldn't have entered, raised the issue only for that and maybe I shouldn't have because I created confusion. I am sorry if I did that.'

8.44 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that he decided not to acquire any other house because Mr Wall was injured in a car accident, and that following a visit to Mr Wall by Mr Ahern and Ms Larkin he (Mr Ahern) and Ms Larkin made a decision to proceed with the arrangement previously entered into with Mr Wall.

8.45 In the course of examination by Counsel for the Tribunal on Day 760 (20 September 2007) Mr Ahern acknowledged that the 13 September 2007 (Day 756) was the first occasion on which he had advised the Tribunal that the reason for his purchase of sterling (to return to Mr Wall the Stg£30,000 claimed to have been brought to Dublin by Mr Wall on 3 December 1994¹⁰ as his contribution to the renovation and associated costs of Beresford) was because he, Mr Ahern, did not intend to proceed with the arrangement.

8.46 By 13 September 2007 (Day 756) therefore, Mr Ahern had moved from his April 2007 position when he had stated that he had purchased Stg£30,000 sterling to give to Mr Wall to administer his, Mr Ahern's, contribution to the Beresford 'fit out', to a position where his sworn testimony was that he had purchased Stg£30,000 in order to return to Mr Wall the money Mr Ahern was claiming Mr Wall had given him on 3 December 1994 as Mr Wall's contribution to the Beresford renovation.

8.47 Apparently, neither Ms Larkin nor Mr Wall was informed by Mr Ahern of his possible change of mind in January 1995. Ms Larkin said she was unaware that Mr Ahern had purchased Stg£30,000 to repay Mr Wall the funds advanced by him in connection with Beresford. Some eight days after the withdrawal of the IR£50,000 by Ms Larkin, Mr Wall paid a deposit of Stg£10,800 towards the purchase of Beresford, and was from that time contractually bound to complete the sale.

HOW MR AHERN UTILISED THE FUNDS OF STG£10,000 AND STG£20,000 LODGED TO THE LARKIN 015 ACCOUNT AND THE AHERN 011 ACCOUNT

8.48 The Stg£10,000 which was lodged together with IR£2,000 to the Larkin 015 account on 15 June 1995, and then transferred on 22 June 1995 to a new account - Account No. 1/L/11620/- 031 - (the Larkin 031 account) was intermingled with other funds in that account, and it was a matter of record that withdrawals were made from that account by Ms Larkin to fund expenditure on Beresford. Thus, Mr Ahern's 'fit out' of Beresford was funded in part at least by the Stg£10,000.

¹⁰ This money, it was claimed, was represented by the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 made to the Larkin 011 account on 5 December 1994 – a claim rejected by the Tribunal. See Section Four.

8.49 The Stg£20,000 which was lodged to the Ahern 011 account on 1 December 1995 remained on deposit until the monies were apparently (having passed through two other accounts of Mr Ahern's) utilised by Mr Ahern to fund or part fund disbursements by way of claimed loan repayments Mr Ahern made in 2006.¹¹

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE LODGEMENTS OF IR£11,743.74 AND IR£19,142.92

8.50 Even if the Tribunal had not concluded (as it has) that the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 made on 5 December 1994 to the Larkin 011 account was not the product of an exchange of approximately Stg£30,000, and that in fact the source of this lodgement was a sum of US$45,000, and even if the Tribunal had not concluded (which it has) that, as a matter of probability, Mr Wall did not give Mr Ahern Stg£30,000 on 3 December 1994, the Tribunal nevertheless did not countenance as either credible or logical Mr Ahern's sworn testimony relating to the purchase by him of Stg£30,000.

8.51 If Mr Ahern's claim that Mr Wall provided him with approximately Stg£30,000 on 3 December 1994 had been true, then it appeared to the Tribunal that the logical step for Mr Ahern to have taken, if he was minded to return those funds to Mr Wall, was to instruct Ms Larkin to convert the funds in the Larkin 011 account – the account Mr Ahern, in evidence, claimed was the repository of the money which was claimed to have been provided by Mr Wall on 3 December 1994 – into sterling. That account contained only the money which was said to have been provided by Mr Wall, plus accrued interest. No such instruction was ever given to Ms Larkin.

8.52 The Tribunal did not accept as credible Mr Ahern's claim that he decided to abandon his plan to move into Beresford, and to pay Stg£30,000 sterling to Mr Wall without discussing the issue either with Mr Wall or with Ms Larkin. Both told the Tribunal that they were unaware of Mr Ahern's decision.

8.53 The Tribunal was led to the inevitable conclusion that its inquiries surrounding the lodgement of IR£19,142.92 to Mr Ahern's 011 account on 1 December 1995 and its subsequent inquiries as to the nature and source of the 15 June 1995 lodgement to the Larkin 015 account led to Mr Ahern constructing a Byzantine series of explanations, in an attempt to account for the certain fact that he made or caused to be made lodgements to those accounts which comprised significant sterling sums.

¹¹ See Sections I and III.

8.54 The Tribunal was satisfied that none of the varying explanations tendered by Mr Ahern was true.

8.55 Furthermore, the Tribunal firmly believed that Mr Ahern, in order to provide an explanation as to the source of the sums of Stg£10,000 and Stg£20,000 that were lodged to accounts in the name of Ms Larkin and himself in June and December 1995 respectively, wrongly identified the January 1995 withdrawal of IR£50,000 as being, in part, the source of these two sterling amounts.

8.56 Accordingly, from its consideration of the evidence, the Tribunal was satisfied that:

- 1) Mr Ahern did not, as he claimed, purchase Stg£30,000, either directly or through others, in the period 19 January to 15 June 1995.
- 2) The lodgements of IR£11,743.74 on 15 June 1995 and IR£19,142.92 on 1 December 1995 were unrelated to the IR£50,000 cash withdrawn by Ms Larkin from the Larkin 015 account on 19 January 1995.
- 3) Mr Ahern failed to account to the Tribunal as to the true circumstances whereby he came into possession of the sums of Stg£10,000 and Stg£20,000 lodged on 15 June 1995 and 1 December 1995 respectively.
- 4) The origins of the Stg£10,000 lodged on 15 June 1995 and the Stg£20,000 lodged on 1 December 1995 remain unaccounted for.

MR AHERN'S FAILURE TO ACCOUNT FOR THE SOURCES OF IN EXCESS OF STG£70,000 IN THE PERIOD 1994-1995

8.57 The Tribunal noted that the December 1995 Stg£20,000 lodgement to the Ahern 011 account was the last of a series of sterling lodgements (totalling Stg£70,500¹²) evident in bank accounts associated with Mr Ahern in the period March 1994 to December 1995, the true sources of which have not been accounted for by Mr Ahern.

MR AHERN'S USE OF THE IR£50,000 WITHDRAWN BY MS LARKIN ON 19 JANUARY 1995

8.58 In relation to the IR£50,000 cash withdrawal from the Larkin 015 account on 19 January 1995, the Tribunal concluded that some IR£40,000 of these monies, which Mr Ahern claimed were returned to him on 19 January

¹² Including Stg£25,000 found by the Tribunal to have sourced the lodgement to Mr Ahern's AIB account on 11 October 1994, the stg£10,000 lodged to the Larkin 015 account on the 15 June 1995 and Stg£15,500 (in total) lodged between March and October 1994 to accounts in the Irish Permanent Building Society (IPBS) held respectively in the names of Mr Ahern and his daughters. The IPBS accounts are considered in Section VI. This figure of Stg£70,500 excludes the Stg£20,000 lodgement to the B/T account (Section VII).

1995, remain unaccounted for by him. Insofar as Mr Ahern can be said to have accounted for any portion of this cash sum, it was that he maintained that a lodgement made by Ms Larkin of IR£9,665 to the Larkin 031 account on 24 July 1995¹³ came from that balance. Whether or not this was the case, the Tribunal was satisfied that at the time when he instructed Ms Larkin to withdraw IR£50,000 in cash on 19 January 1995 Mr Ahern had a specific purpose for so doing, but which purpose has not been disclosed to the Tribunal.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 10 - SECTION VI : MR AHERN'S IRISH PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY¹ (IPBS) ACCOUNTS

THE BACKGROUND

9.01 Mr Ahern opened two accounts (a deposit account and a cash extra, hereinafter referred to as a 'cash save' account) in his own name with the Irish Permanent Building Society (IPBS) in Drumcondra, Dublin 9, on 31 January 1994. Deposit accounts had previously been opened in this branch of the IPBS in the names of Mr Ahern's then minor daughters Georgina Ahern and Cecelia Ahern.

9.02 Prior to giving sworn evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Ahern was asked by the Tribunal to provide an explanation as to the sources of funds lodged to his IPBS accounts between 31 January 1994 and 21 December 1995. The funds, as at 21 December 1995, amounted to a total of IR£39,720.11 funded by nine separate lodgements, exclusive of interest earned. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that the purpose of opening this account on 31 January 1994 and lodging monies to it from time to time was to build a fund for the purchase of a house. At the same time as Mr Ahern was being asked by the Tribunal to explain the sources of the various lodgements, the PTSB (Permanent TSB, previously the IPBS) informed the Tribunal that it was not in a position to provide any copies of cheques relating to the lodgements.

THE CHEQUE-ATTRIBUTED LODGEMENTS TO THE DEPOSIT ACCOUNT AS QUERIED BY THE TRIBUNAL AND MR AHERN'S EXPLANATIONS

9.03 The IPBS deposit and cash save accounts were each opened with lodgements of IR£2,500. These lodgements were derived from a cheque for IR£5,000, with IR£2,500 being withdrawn in cash and used to open the IPBS cash save account while the balance was lodged direct to the deposit account.

9.04 PTSB provided the Tribunal with the account opening documentation, including the two lodgement slips, but was unable to provide a copy of the IR£5,000 cheque. Mr Ahern said that he had no particular recollection as to the source of the cheque, although he believed that it had been given to him as a political donation. Mr Ahern was asked to explain why he would lodge a portion of a cheque given to him as a political donation into a personal account in the IPBS which he had said was established to enable him to build up a fund to assist in the purchase of a house. Mr Ahern's explanation was that the IR£5,000 cheque was a 'personal political donation'. He described such a donation in the following terms:

' . . . there are two distinct positions, when a company or an individual gives you money, which is for your constituency or gives you a donation for a constituency use. My practice is that I give it to my constituency and it's always been my practice. But at times, but not many times, an individual would give you money and say it is for your personal use but you tends[tend] to use that anyway in, as any politician will do, in expending money on issues in your constituency. So I mean, when I would be asked to buy, to participate in draws or raffles or give donations to humanitarian issues, I would give it out of my own money. I can't take it out of my constituency money.'

9.05 He further stated:

'Well it depends who would actually give it to you. If somebody would give you sometimes a donation, and they would say that is for you, take it. But you'd still end up using it. I mean, in most weekends, I mean, I could spend four or five hundred euros in any weekend around the country in draws for cars, for clubs, for organisations. I have to use my own personal money to do that, every politician does.'

9.06 The Tribunal was unable to establish the source of the IR£5,000 cheque from which the IR£2,500 lodgement was made to the deposit account on 31 January 1994.

9.07 On 23 March 1994, a cheque payment of IR£7,000 was lodged to Mr Ahern's IPBS deposit account. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that this represented monies given to him by his late mother. No supporting documentary evidence was provided to indicate the source of this cheque.

9.08 On 23 May 1994 and 12 April 1995, sums of IR£1,000 (representing a cheque for IR£1,434.15 less IR£434.15 taken in cash) and IR£10,060.71 respectively were lodged to Mr Ahern's IPBS deposit account. No documentary evidence was available to explain the source of these lodgements. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that he believed both represented salary cheques or portions of salary cheques paid to him.

9.09 On 21 December 1995 a cheque payment of IR£5,000 was lodged to Mr Ahern's IPBS deposit account. No documentary evidence was provided to indicate the source of this cheque. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that it was his best belief that the cheque represented monies given to him by his brother in connection with the estate of his late father.

THE CASH LODGEMENTS TO THE DEPOSIT ACCOUNT

9.10 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal in correspondence, and again in sworn evidence, that three separate lodgements to his deposit account made on 9 March, 9 May and 28 October 1994, amounting to a total of IR£11,608.77, were an accumulation of salary cheques or portions of salary cheques. Mr Ahern had maintained no records in relation to them.

9.11 On 5 March 2008, subsequent to Mr Ahern's sworn evidence to the Tribunal on Day 825 (21 February 2008) relating to his IPBS account, PTSB informed the Tribunal that it was now in a position to provide additional information in relation to a number of the lodgements.

9.12 Information provided to the Tribunal by PTSB indicated that in a seven-month period between 9 March and 28 October 1994, cash sums totalling IR£15,716.20 were lodged to Mr Ahern's and his daughters' deposit accounts. The new PTSB information provided on this occasion indicated a link between these lodgements and sums totalling Stg£15,500 exchanged at the building society's Drumcondra branch. At the same time it provided this information to the Tribunal, PTSB provided the same information to Mr Ahern.

9.13 On 6 March 2008, the Tribunal wrote to Mr Ahern and advised him that his earlier information as to the sources of the IPBS cash lodgements appeared to be inconsistent with the information which had now been furnished to the Tribunal by PTSB. Mr Ahern was asked to confirm whether the lodgements of 9 March, 9 May and 28 October 1994 to his deposit account and the lodgements of 9 March and 9 May 1994 to his daughters' accounts were the proceeds of sterling exchange transactions as indicated in the documents furnished by PTSB to the Tribunal and to Mr Ahern.

9.14 Mr Ahern's response (dated 18 April 2008, some six weeks later) to this letter from the Tribunal was provided on 21 April 2008. He stated:

I do not have a clear recollection of the individual transactions in question. However in the light of the information recently provided by Irish Life & Permanent Plc and my efforts to recall the circumstances of that time, in all likelihood the lodgements are the proceeds of sterling exchange(s).

Approximately £12,000–£13,000 pounds of the amounts lodged are likely to have been the result of the exchange by me of the proceeds of cash salary/expenses cheques from punts into sterling. The remaining funds constituted sterling amounts accumulated over a number of years in connection with trips to the UK, and also part of the balance of sums won from sporting bets.

In respect of the majority of the sterling amounts, the original Irish punt amounts (which originated only in salary/expenses cheques) were exchanged for sterling with Mr Tim Kilroe, Manchester, United Kingdom. Part of the funds lodged probably resulted from sums of sterling accumulated over time and retained by me. Sterling amounts originally were obtained by exchanging my own money through banks or foreign exchange businesses. At this remove it is not possible to elaborate in any more detail.

. . . . In or around the early 1990s, I contemplated an investment opportunity (being the purchase of an apartment to be constructed) in Salford Quay, Manchester. Ultimately in late 1993, I decided not to proceed with the investment. The investment in question required an initial stake of funds. Between circa 1990 and 1993, I began to set aside cash from my salary cheques in an effort to raise funds for the initial stake. In that regard and within that time period on approximately 6 occasions, I exchanged Irish punt amounts for sterling with Mr Tim Kilroe. Each transaction involved sums of between £2,000 and £3,000. I do not believe that any individual transaction exceeded £3,000 to the best of my memory. Eventually I concluded that I would not be in a position to participate in the investment through lack of funds. I retained the sterling amounts in my safe and I now assume I subsequently lodged the monies to my own and to my children's accounts in 1994. It had been my original belief that I had used this money as a float for my trips back and forth to the UK and for the purposes of sterling bets and had not lodged it to my accounts. However after studying the bank documentation, I can only conclude that I must have lodged these monies to my own and my children's accounts.

I have travelled and continued to travel to the UK, particularly Manchester on a regular basis. In that regard and for that purpose I used to retain sums of sterling and, in fact, still do so.

As is well known publicly, I am interested in horse racing and over the years I have placed bets on horse races. Over the period of time in question and subsequently I won various sums of money. Some of these would have been paid in sterling. As noted above, some of this money would have been retained in sterling and consequently it may well have formed part of the funds lodged.

9.15 Mr Ahern was recalled by the Tribunal to give sworn evidence on Days 868 and 869. He confirmed the information provided by him by the Tribunal, as set out in the above extract from his letter, and confirmed that the cash lodgements identified by PTSB as being linked to sterling were ‘in all likelihood’ sums exchanged for sterling.

9.16 The information furnished by PTSB on 5 March 2008 and subsequently given in sworn evidence by officials of that organisation confirmed the following:

- On 9 March 1994 a sum of IR£4,119.59 was lodged to Mr Ahern’s deposit account. Four minutes earlier, the teller who processed that lodgement exchanged Stg£4,000 for IR£4,119.59.
- On 9 March 1994, the same teller exchanged two amounts of Stg£1,000 cash into two sums each of IR£1,028.40, and the same amounts were immediately thereafter lodged into the accounts of Mr Ahern’s then minor daughters.
- On 9 May 1994, a sum of IR£3,518.99 was lodged to Mr Ahern’s deposit account. At the same time, two sums of IR£1,000 each were lodged to the accounts of Mr Ahern’s daughters. The teller who had processed these lodgements seconds before then processed an exchange of Stg£5,450 cash into IR£5,518.99. The total sum lodged to Mr Ahern’s account and to his daughters’ accounts, namely IR£5,518.99, was the exact equivalent of the £5,450 sterling exchanged at the same time.
- A sum of IR£3,970.19 was lodged to Mr Ahern’s IPBS account on 28 October 1994. In or about the same time, the same teller who processed the said lodgement exchanged Stg£4,000 for IR£3,970.19.

9.17 Mr Blair Hughes, manager of PTSB’s Drumcondra branch, confirmed in his evidence that the cash lodgements to Mr Ahern’s account on 9 March, 9 May and 28 October 1994, and to his daughters’ accounts on 9 March and 9 May 1994, together with a small lodgement of IR£50.63 to Mr Ahern’s account on 10 May 1994 were all linked to sterling exchanges amounting to Stg£15,500.

9.18 Lodgement dockets relating to most of the above lodgements were signed by Ms Gráinne Carruth, Mr Ahern’s secretary at his constituency office in St Luke’s in Drumcondra. In her evidence to the Tribunal, Ms Carruth said that she was unaware that Mr Ahern ever had an account in the IPBS/PTSB’s Drumcondra branch, although she was aware that his daughters had accounts there, and she recalled on occasion lodging cash to those accounts for Mr Ahern. She said that she had no recollection of ever lodging sterling sums to any account on behalf of Mr Ahern, although she acknowledged that the relevant lodgement dockets contained her signature.

9.19 Both prior to and in the course of his sworn evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Ahern maintained that he accumulated in excess of IR£50,000² in cash savings during the period 1987 to December 1993, and that he had accumulated these savings from his State earnings as Lord Mayor of Dublin, as a TD, and as a Government minister. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that these savings had been lodged into two AIB accounts in April and August 1994.³ Mr Ahern at that time made no reference to additional savings. Based on the dates of lodgements into the IPSB accounts (including his daughters' accounts), and if, as claimed by Mr Ahern, these amounts represented cashed salary cheques which were in turn converted into sterling, and allowing for the fact that throughout 1994 Mr Ahern was incurring normal levels of expenditure in his personal life, this suggested that his savings, by early 1994, were significantly greater than IR£50,000–IR£54,000.

9.20 This issue was canvassed with Mr Ahern on Day 868 in the following exchange between him and Mr Desmond O'Neill, Counsel for the Tribunal:

Q. 'Is it the case, and perhaps I'm wrong in this, Mr Ahern, that you had forgotten about the fact that you had been saving money in sterling or is it the case that you were at all times aware of that but you didn't consider that it was material to the Tribunal's inquiry?'

A. 'Well what the position was Mr O'Neill, that I had recalled that I had sterling and I think in previous occasions I have said that I had sterling. What I did not think that I ever lodged that sterling. I thought I had used that sterling over the years back and forward to Manchester, I had some holidays in England. I did not think I ever lodged that sterling. And the only time I accumulated, I did not recall that I had that amount of sterling, I did remember changing it but I thought I'd used it up over the years. And I think at all, when I have looked at my accounts originally I had earned over, in the period in question, my gross pay was about, my gross earnings were over £300,000.

And when both I and Mr Peelo later and then when we went back over it again in greater detail, it would have. And I think I said this to you on Day 1 in the private sessions and subsequently. That I would have had somewhere between £80,000 and £90,000 remaining. I only remember £54,000 or around £54,000, which I had in sterling, both I put into my daughters' accounts in Irish pounds and the money that I lodged subsequently into an SSA, which we've been through many times. I do not recall lodging what I had in sterling into the accounts. I thought I used that as a float over the years. I do recall, and I did recall, that I had changed some of my Irish pounds into sterling with Tim Kilroe. It was an idea I had for a while. It just was out of my range, it wasn't possible for me to do it. But that's—so I recall that but I did not recall lodging the money, I still don't recall lodging but I accept that I must have.'

² This figure was variously referred to by Mr Ahern (or those representing him) as being IR£50,000, in excess of IR£50,000, between IR£50,000 and IR£54,000 or IR£54,000.

9.21 The 'idea I had for a while' referred to by Mr Ahern in the preceding paragraph was a reference to an investment opportunity which he said he had considered in the early 1990s. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that in the early 1990s he had contemplated investing in the purchase of an apartment to be constructed in Salford Quay, Manchester, but that in late 1993 he changed his mind and did not proceed with the investment. Mr Ahern maintained that between approximately 1990 and 1993 he set aside cash from his salary cheques in an effort to raise funds for his initial stake in the Salford Quay investment, and that over this period on approximately six occasions he exchanged Irish pounds for sterling with his Manchester-based friend, Mr Tim Kilroe, and that each transaction involved sums of between £2,000 and £3,000. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that he retained the sterling sums in his safe, and that it was now his assumption that he subsequently lodged these monies to his own and to his children's accounts in 1994. It had been his original belief that he had used this money as a 'float' for trips back and forth to the UK, and for the purposes of placing sterling bets on horse races, and had not lodged it to his accounts. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that following a study of the relevant banking documentation in 2008, he could only conclude that he must have lodged these monies to his own and to his children's accounts.

9.22 In the period March to October 1994, all of Mr Ahern's cash lodgements to his IPBS deposit account were in sterling.

9.23 It was also noteworthy that the Stg£4,000 which funded the lodgement to Mr Ahern's IPBS deposit account on 28 October 1994 was banked approximately two weeks after Mr Ahern lodged Stg£25,000 to an AIB account, on 11 October 1994.⁴ Adding these sums together, Mr Ahern had available to himself Stg£29,000 within a two-week period⁵.

⁴ See Section III hereof

⁵ For a consideration of another sterling lodgement made on 26 October 1994 see Section VII – the 'B/T account'.

WINNINGS FROM BETS ON HORSE RACES AS A SOURCE OF MR AHERN'S FUNDS

9.24 In the statement furnished to the Tribunal dated 18 April 2008, Mr Ahern advised the Tribunal for the first time that some of the funds lodged to the IPBS accounts might have been winnings from betting on horse racing. Mr Ahern stated the following:

As is well known publicly, I am interested in horse racing and over the years I have placed bets on horse races. Over the period of time in question and subsequently, I won various sums of money. Some of these would have been paid in Sterling. As noted above, some of this money would have been retained in Sterling and consequently it may well have formed part of the funds lodged.

9.25 In the course of this statement, Mr Ahern also commented as follows (referring to the IPBS lodgements): 'The funds in question were not loans or donations. No person 'paid' this money to me with the exception of any monies I may have accumulated on sporting bets.'

9.26 Mr Ahern confirmed the accuracy of the information provided in his statements to the Tribunal in the course of his sworn evidence on Day 868. Mr Ahern also confirmed in his evidence that he did have a clear recollection of having 'a few good wins over the years including one or two successful bets in 1996'. He said he was certain that he lodged the 1996 winnings, the proceeds of which were in sterling, into his daughters' accounts.

9.27 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that lodgements made to his daughters' accounts in 1996 (which were not the focus of inquiry by the Tribunal) consisted of about £8,000 from his sterling winnings at horse races in 1996.

9.28 In the course of his sworn evidence to the Tribunal on the following day, Mr Ahern said that having had the opportunity to check the position overnight, he was now stating that the figure of Stg£8,000 he had previously referred to as having funded lodgements to his daughters' accounts in 1996, and which he had sourced to winnings at horse races, was an incorrect figure, and was in fact two sums totalling Stg£5,500, and that, rather than the entire of the sum having been sourced to winnings (as he had previously stated), it was now his position that the funds may not have all been sourced to betting winnings. He added: ' . . . the one I recalled, it may not be all bets but certainly I would have had two or three bets. Three bets in 1996 that I recall.'

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE IPBS LODGEMENTS

9.29 The Tribunal rejected Mr Ahern's contention that he had no recollection of lodging or causing to be lodged the Irish pound equivalent of Stg£15,500 over a period of approximately seven months in 1994 to his own account and to his daughters' accounts.

9.30 The Tribunal rejected as improbable Mr Ahern's evidence that having cashed (or caused to be cashed) his salary and expenses cheques, he intermittently conveyed that cash to the UK and there converted the cash into sterling, and then brought the sterling amounts to Dublin and there held them in his safe.

9.31 The Tribunal rejected Mr Ahern's evidence that he had saved money towards the purchase of an investment property in Manchester. It was particularly noteworthy that in his evidence prior to April 2008, Mr Ahern's only reference to property purchase was in relation to the purchase of a house in Dublin. Mr Ahern (prior to April 2008) made no reference to his intention, in the period 1990-1993, to purchase an investment property in Manchester or to his claim that he exchanged sums of Irish punts for sterling during this period for the purposes of saving sterling to fund that purchase.

9.32 Prior to April, 2008, when Mr Ahern was questioned by the Tribunal in relation to the Tribunal's then recently discovered information which suggested that lodgements to his, and his daughters IPBS accounts had been funded by sterling cash, Mr Ahern never made reference to any such accumulation of sterling.

9.33 In particular, it was noteworthy that when Mr Ahern gave evidence to the Tribunal in relation to the Manchester collection of approximately Stg£8,000 in a hotel owned by his friend the late Mr Kilroe he did not make any reference to the fact, as contended by him, that he regularly exchanged punts for sterling with Mr Kilroe on his visits to Manchester.

9.34 The Tribunal did not believe it to be credible that, if Mr Ahern's contention as to the source of the sterling was indeed correct, he would not have lodged the entire of the sterling cash into his IPBS deposit account or into another of his accounts by January/February 1994 at the latest. It was not credible that an accumulation of sterling savings would have been 'drip fed' into his IPBS account over a period of months in the circumstances suggested by him. It therefore followed as a matter of probability that the sterling sums identified as the source of the IPBS lodgements did not come into his possession in the period 1990–3, as he maintained.

9.35 The Tribunal was satisfied that no sterling cash fund, such as that described by Mr Ahern in evidence on Days 868 and 869, was accumulated by him in the years 1990 to 1993. In his earlier evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Ahern stated that all his accumulated savings (as of late 1993) which he stated amounted to IR£50,000 (or thereabouts) had been lodged to AIB accounts in April and August 1994⁶. Mr Ahern did not then maintain that he had also accumulated a significant sum in sterling or that he was saving money to invest in a Manchester property.

9.36 The Tribunal found it impossible to believe, if in fact such sums had been accumulated in the manner described by Mr Ahern, that he would have forgotten (as he claimed) that significant amounts of sterling accumulated for investment purposes were in fact lodged into bank accounts and not therefore used as a ‘float’ for occasional trips to the UK.

9.37 Because the circumstances whereby he came into possession of the sterling sums lodged to his and his daughter’s IPBS accounts remain unaccounted for by Mr Ahern, the Tribunal was unable to determine the source or sources of same.

⁶ The Tribunal has found that while Mr Ahern did make lodgements totalling IR£50,000 in April and August 1994 no such cash savings had been accumulated by end 1993 - See Section II hereof

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 10 - SECTION VII : THE B/T ACCOUNT

THE BACKGROUND

10.01 Mr Padraic O'Connor told the Tribunal in the course of his private interview with the Tribunal that it was his recollection that when Mr Richardson approached him in December 1993, seeking a financial contribution for Mr Ahern,¹ Mr Richardson was seeking similar contributions from other companies, and he had a vague recollection that Mr Richardson mentioned a competitor firm as one of these. Subsequently, in his sworn evidence to the Tribunal, Mr O'Connor doubted that Mr Richardson had mentioned an approach to any other stockbroking firms, and stated that it was now his belief that the issue of Mr Richardson approaching another stockbroking firm may have arisen in discussion between himself and his colleagues following Mr Richardson's approach to him. Mr Richardson denied making any such suggestion to Mr O'Connor.

10.02 Consequent upon what Mr O'Connor said in the course of his private interview, the Tribunal conducted a limited inquiry into this issue in relation to the years 1993 and 1994. While this limited inquiry did not reveal any other payments from stockbroking firms, the Tribunal learned, independently of that inquiry, that Davy Stockbrokers made a political contribution of IR£5,000 to Mr Ahern by cheque, dated 11 November 1992. Davy Stockbrokers' cheque journal recorded the cheque as a payment to 'BA.' There was no evidence linking Mr Richardson to this payment.

10.03 The details on a copy of the Davy Stockbrokers' cheque provided to the Tribunal established that the cheque had been lodged to account no 2352605737 held in the Drumcondra branch of the Irish Permanent Building Society (IPBS).²

10.04 Having discovered that the ultimate destination of the Davy IR£5,000 cheque to Mr Ahern was an IPBS account, the existence of which had not previously been disclosed to the Tribunal, the Tribunal sought to ascertain if Mr Ahern had any beneficial ownership or use of this account. The Tribunal wrote to Mr Ahern on 30 November 2007. In the course of his sworn evidence to the Tribunal on Day 805 (21 December 2007), prior to replying to this correspondence, Mr Ahern acknowledged receipt of the Davy IR£5,000 cheque in November 1992, and indicated that the cheque might have been lodged to ‘either the Building Trust or the house account.’ Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that the IR£5,000 payment was a political donation ‘in the context of the [1992] general election.’

10.05 The Tribunal proceeded to examine this account for the purposes of establishing if Mr Ahern had any beneficial ownership or use of the account.

10.06 The title of the account in the IPBS was ‘B.T.’³ On the documentation relating to the opening of the account (which was signed by Mr Tim Collins), under the heading ‘FIRST NAMES MR, MRS, MISS, MS’ was handwritten ‘B.T.’ The space for the surname details was left blank.

THE OPENING OF THE B/T ACCOUNT

10.07 The B/T account was opened as a share (deposit) account at the IPBS branch at Drumcondra in Dublin by Mr Tim Collins, a close friend and associate of Mr Ahern, on 6 June 1989, with two cash lodgements of IR£5,000 and IR£2,285.71, which were processed by the bank one minute apart.

10.08 When opening the account Mr Collins signed the following written declaration: ‘I hereby declare that this investment is my own property and that it is not made as nominee for any other individual or company.’

10.09 The effect of this declaration was to confirm the B/T account to be the personal account of Mr Collins.

10.10 The address on the account was stated to be ‘C/o IPBS, 130 Drumcondra, D.9.’ Mr Collins also directed IPBS to permit withdrawals from the account on his signature only.

10.11 The effect of the address on the account being the building society’s own address was that no correspondence or statements relating to the account would leave the branch.⁴

³ Documentation provided by PTSB indicated that, although the account’s formal title was ‘B.T.’ — based on the account opening documentation—in most instances, including all the bank’s computer records, it was referred to as ‘B/T.’ On occasions (for example in handwritten lodgement documentation) the account was referred to as ‘BxT’, or ‘BT.’ In one instance a lodgement identified the account as ‘T Collins.’ Unless otherwise stated the title of the account in this Section is referred to as the B/T account.

10.12 Mr Collins told the Tribunal that the B/T account was not his personal property, and that it had been established as a ‘sinking’ fund and/or a ‘rainy day’ fund for use in the upkeep and maintenance of the St Luke’s building in Drumcondra. The Tribunal was also advised that the account had been set up as a trustee account and that he was a ‘trustee’ of same, notwithstanding the fact that the documentation relating to the opening of the account indicated that the account was his personal account. The other trustees were named as Mr Joe Burke, the late Mr Gerry Brennan, the late Mr Paddy Reilly and the late Mr Jim Keane.

10.13 Mr Collins was unable to explain to the Tribunal why the account had been set up in this manner, and why the address on the account was the building society’s own address rather than the constituency office, St Luke’s, in respect of which it was claimed that the account was intended to benefit.

10.14 Mr Ahern, Mr Richardson and Mr Burke also told the Tribunal that the purpose of the B/T account was to accumulate funds for the upkeep and maintenance of St Luke’s, Drumcondra, and to ensure that the building ultimately passed to the Fianna Fáil Party without any liability arising on the part of the trustees of St Luke’s. It was their belief that the account was to be funded by lodgements from contributors, golf classic fundraising events, and unneeded funds diverted from other constituency accounts or funds surplus to election contribution requirements. The account was, they contended, a constituency account but with a particular purpose associated with the building itself.

10.15 Mr Burke confirmed to the Tribunal that he was one of the ‘trustees’ of the ‘Building Trust’ account. He told the Tribunal that the decision to open the account was taken by a number of persons and that it was left up to Mr Collins as secretary of ‘the organisation’ to open the account. Of particular concern to the members of the house committee of St Luke’s in 1989, was the fact that the St Luke’s building required extensive structural works to maintain it,⁵ and it was therefore necessary to put money aside for this expenditure.

10.16 No contemporaneous written note or document of any nature was created in relation to a ‘Building Trust’, or in relation to the opening of the account, save the building society documentation.

⁵ Mr Richardson referred to the need to undertake work to stabilise the building’s foundations, and of there being ‘ongoing work for a number of years.’

10.17 Dublin Central constituency officials Mr Dominic Dillane⁶ and Mr J. J. Murphy⁷ also understood that the account had been established and maintained for this purpose (namely, the maintenance of the St Luke's building). The two men were added as signatories to the account in January 2008, after the Tribunal's discovery of its existence, at which time the account was re-named the: 'Building Trust/House Committee Account.'

10.18 The only 'Trust' document provided to the Tribunal relating to St Luke's was the Declaration of Trust made on 18 May 1988, at the time of the acquisition of St Luke's, which named the Trustees as Mr Des Richardson, Mr James Keane, Mr Tim Collins, Mr Paddy Reilly and Mr Joe Burke. These were not the same trustees as the named 'trustees' of the 'building trust.'

10.19 Mr Collins told the Tribunal that he had never been a member of the Fianna Fáil Party or any party cumann. Mr Collins said that he 'was just helping out' in allowing himself to be the account holder for a Fianna Fáil account. Mr Collins said he did not know of the CDC⁸ or what those letters stood for. Of the officers of the Dublin Central CDC in the period 1988 to 1996, he knew only one, Mr Chris Wall.

10.20 No cogent explanation was received by the Tribunal from either Mr Ahern, Mr Burke or Mr Collins as to why, in circumstances where, as they maintained, the account was opened for the benefit of St Luke's, Mr Collins had chosen to open the B/T account in his name alone, and with himself as sole signatory, rather than in the names of the individuals cited in the St Luke's Declaration of Trust or indeed in the names of the claimed 'trustees' of the 'building trust', Messrs Collins, Burke, Brennan, Reilly and Keane. Nor was any cogent explanation provided for Mr Collins' failure to declare, when opening the account on 6 June 1989, that he was holding the B/T account as a 'trustee' of the St Luke's 'Building Trust', or in a representative capacity, rather than declaring the account to be his own as he did.

10.21 Equally puzzling was the fact that in late 1994, at a time when Mr Collins said he had ceased to be active in St Luke's, he directed the IPBS to forward the B/T account related mail to his home address, rather than to St Luke's.

⁶ Appointed treasurer of the CDC - Fianna Fáil Dublin Central Comhairle Dáil Cheantar - and a member of the house committee in 2001.

⁷ Appointed second treasurer of the CDC and a member of the house committee in 2005.

⁸ Comhairle Dáil Cheantar.

10.22 At the time of the opening of the B/T account, there was already in existence a bank account which had been used, and would continue to be used, to defray expenses (including capital expenses) associated with St Luke's. Approximately 18 months prior to the opening of the B/T account, the CODR deposit account had been opened, in advance of the purchase of St Luke's, with a lodgement of IR£22,955.13 transferred from the CODR current account. Monies held in the CODR accounts were used to fund the purchase of the building in 1988, and were used to fund structural works carried out on St Luke's in 1990. At that time sums of IR£30,000 (July 1991) and IR£5,000 (August 1991) were withdrawn from the CODR account to pay for such works. Moreover, the day-to-day running expenses of St Luke's were being met from the 'Bertie Ahern and Joseph Burke Constituency Office No. 1 A/c'⁹ (hereinafter referred to as the Constituency No. 1 account). It was noteworthy to the Tribunal that neither the CODR account nor the Constituency No. 1 account appeared to have been 'trust' type accounts.

10.23 Mr Burke, when queried (in light of the foregoing) as to the need for a 'building trust' account, sought to justify the opening of the IPBS account in June 1989 on the basis that the funds going into this account were to be used for any 'ongoing repairs that would be required to St Luke's.'

10.24 Mr Burke's evidence in this regard, and indeed the evidence of Mr Ahern and Mr Collins regarding the purpose of the B/T account, was, in the view of the Tribunal, inconsistent with events which occurred in 1999. In that year, a mortgage of IR£80,000 was taken out to pay for works apparently undertaken in 1991 and 1997. This loan was taken at a time when the B/T account had on deposit approximately IR£36,000, and at a time when it was claimed that the account was owed IR£30,000 as a result of a claimed loan made from the account in 1993 (see below). According to Mr Ahern, the ultimate cost of the repair works carried out was IR£89,000, but no recourse was made to the B/T account to fund any part of this expenditure. Indeed, monies which remained owing as a result of works carried out in 1991 were discharged from the mortgage taken out in 1999, again without any recourse to the B/T account. Furthermore, between 1989 and 2001 (according to the PWC report), significant expenditure on the upkeep of St. Luke's was discharged from the CODR account (IR£30,000 paid to builders in July 1991, IR£5,000 paid for roofing work in August 1991 and IR£5,000 paid for painting and decorating in October 1995).

⁹ CODR was an abbreviation of Cumann O'Donovan Rossa. However, the account had nothing to do with the operation of the Cumann.

THE OPERATION OF THE B/T ACCOUNT

10.25 The documentation obtained by the Tribunal from PTSB established that following the opening of the account on 6 June 1989, a number of transactions took place on the account between that date and July 1995. From October 1995 to 2007, the account was effectively dormant (save for interest accruals).

10.26 Mr Collins testified that he had no dealings with the B/T account from 1995 until January 2008, when he requested a mandate form from the IPBS for the purpose of adding two other signatories to the account (members of Dublin Central CDC) and for the purpose of renaming the account as the 'Building Trust/House Committee Account.'

10.27 The Tribunal was satisfied that this action was taken by Mr Collins, most probably after discussion with Mr Ahern, as a direct consequence of the Tribunal raising queries in November 2007 concerning the nature and purpose of the account.

10.28 Following the Tribunal's correspondence with Mr Ahern about the account, in late February 2008 the Tribunal was furnished with a document prepared by PriceWaterhouseCoopers (PWC) on the instructions of Mr Ahern in January 2008. Mr Denis O'Connor of PWC recorded Mr Ahern's instructions as follows: 'This account was set up in June 1989 to administer funds for the maintenance and upkeep of the property known as 'St Luke's.'' The PWC document was prepared on Mr Ahern's instructions as 'an Income and Expenditure Account for the Building Trust Account.' It sought to reconcile the lodgements and withdrawals made on the B/T account from 1989 to 1995.

10.29 In the course of his evidence, Mr O'Connor acknowledged that with the exception of the one contemporaneous third party document (a cheque drawn on the account on 30 March 1993) which had been produced to PWC, the sources of information which were used to back PWC's reconciliation of the various lodgements and withdrawals on the B/T account were handwritten notes and oral updates provided by Mr Ahern in the course of two meetings and one telephone conversation in January/February 2008. Save for the aforementioned cheque and the undated compliments slip accompanying the Davy Stockbrokers cheque for IR£5,000, dated 11 November 1992, which stated 'Bertie, best of luck in the election Robbie K.', no contemporaneous source documentation was ever provided to Mr O'Connor.

10.30 Mr Ahern, in evidence, acknowledged that he was unable to give Mr O'Connor contemporaneous source materials to back the lodgements and withdrawals from the B/T account for the relevant period.¹⁰ However, Mr Ahern claimed that through discussions with 'constituency officers' in St Luke's, he had assembled information with which to brief PWC as to the source of most or all of the lodgements made to the account in the period 1989 to 1995 and as to the purpose for which withdrawals were made in the same period.

THE LODGEMENTS¹¹ TO THE B/T ACCOUNT 1989 TO 1995

10.31 The Tribunal established that the opening lodgement of IR£7,285.71 to the B/T account comprised two cash sums, one of IR£5,000 and one of IR£2,285.71. The second cash sum of IR£2,285.71 may have been a foreign currency sum exchanged for Irish pounds at that time. Neither Mr Collins nor any other witness was in a position to assist the Tribunal in identifying the sources of these cash sums. Mr Ahern raised with PWC the possibility that the uneven sum was linked to sterling.

10.32 In all, in the period from 6 June to 31 July 1989, nine lodgements totalling IR£15,135.71 were made to the B/T account, five of which were attributed in the PWC analysis as cash lodgements, and four as cheque lodgements.

10.33 Mr Collins, as the sole signatory on the account, claimed that he had no knowledge of the source of these lodgements save to state that they may have been General Election contributions. Notwithstanding this, PWC, on the basis of information from Mr Ahern, attributed the lodgements to named individuals/companies (claimed by Mr Ahern and Mr Collins as possibly being political donations made in the course of the 1989 General Election campaign). No third party contemporaneous documentation was provided to the Tribunal to verify the source of these lodgements.

10.34 On 29 May 1989, as verified by documentation furnished to the Tribunal by Fianna Fáil, some eight days prior to the opening of the B/T account another account was opened in AIB Drumcondra with the title 'Fianna Fáil NC Election Account.'¹² The addressees on this account were Mr Ahern and Mr Burke and the address was 'C/o AIB, Drumcondra Road, Dublin 9.' This other account was apparently opened to receive election contributions. Also in existence by 6 June 1989 was the account of Dublin Central CDC.

¹⁰ With the exception of the Davy compliments slip.

¹¹ A lodgement of IR£20,000 on 26 October 1994 is considered separately below.

¹² A General Election was held on 15 June 1989

10.35 Three cheque lodgements of IR£5,000 each were made to the B/T account in 1990, 1991 and 1992. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that these payments, from a named individual, were political donations.

10.36 On 25 August 1992, IR£19,000 was lodged to the B/T account. Bank documentation confirmed that this lodgement consisted of an IR£20,000 cheque less IR£1,000 withdrawn in cash. The source of the IR£20,000 was said to be a golf classic fundraising event. No evidence or explanation was available to the Tribunal as to the breakdown of this figure of IR£20,000, or the reason for the IR£1,000 cash withdrawal. Mr Collins was unable to explain how a golf classic fundraising event, which necessarily involved the accumulation of funds from a number of individuals or companies providing contributions of between IR£250 and IR£1,000, produced a single round figure cheque of IR£20,000.

10.37 On 18 July 1995, a cash lodgement of IR£10,000 was made to the account. No explanation or documentation was provided to the Tribunal as to the composition of this figure. The Tribunal was told that it related to the proceeds of a golf fundraising event at St Ann's Golf Club in Clontarf.

10.38 Documentation was provided to the Tribunal wherein reference was made to an *'inaugural Dublin Central Constituency Golf Classic'*¹³ held in St Ann's Golf Club, Clontarf on 13 October 1997. Neither Mr Collins, nor any other witness, was in a position to explain why a golf classic fundraising event was described as being an 'inaugural' golf classic in 1997 if, in fact, lodgements totalling IR£29,000 were attributable to such events two and five years previously.

10.39 With regard to the August 1992 lodgement of IR£19,000 to the B/T account, in the absence of backing documentation, and having particular regard to the fact that this lodgement comprised a single cheque for IR£20,000, the Tribunal considered it unlikely that this cheque lodgement was indeed the result of a golf classic, and to this extent, the source of this sum of IR£20,000 remains a mystery.

10.40 Equally, in the absence of any comprehensive explanation or contemporaneous record, the Tribunal was unable to conclusively determine the source of the 1995 IR£10,000 cash lodgement to the B/T account.

¹³ This reference was contained in an undated letter addressed to 'Tony', from Mr Paul Kiely, Director Elections, Dublin Central Constituency (with its address at St. Luke's). The letter also referred to a commitment to eliminate the 'constituency debt', as soon as possible. At that time, there was in excess of IR£35,000 in the B/T account.

10.41 In 1993, IR£10,000 was lodged to the B/T account in two cheques, the cheque of 11 November 1992 for IR£5,000 from Davy Stockbrokers (already referred to) and a second cheque, identified by Mr Ahern as a political donation made to him by a third party, also in the course of the 1992 General Election. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that it was the 'house committee' which made the decision to lodge these monies to the B/T account. Mr Ahern said (referring to the 'house committee'): 'they didn't require it for election purposes so they put it into that account. And that was their call to do it.'

10.42 Mr Collins told the Tribunal that the five members of the 'house committee' made the decision to lodge cheques into the 'Building Trust' account as part of a process of accumulating a sinking fund for St Luke's.

10.43 Mr Collins claimed to have no recollection of discussing the Davy cheque or the other cheque with Mr Ahern, or of discussing into which account they might be lodged. On balance, the Tribunal did not accept that Mr Ahern was a stranger to the decision made to lodge the two cheques to the B/T account.

10.44 A General Election current account was opened in the name of 'Tim Collins/Fianna Fáil Election Account' in AIB on 13 November 1992. This account was opened with an initial lodgement of IR£700. It appeared to be the only General Election account opened in 1992 connected with Mr Ahern's election campaign. Contrary to the situation in 1989, Dublin Central CDC opened an election account in 1992, with its addressee stated to be the CDC Joint Honorary Treasurer.

10.45 An analysis of this 1992 'TC/Fianna Fáil' election account established that for the period November to December 1992 the largest single lodgement was IR£2,500. For the month of November, lodgements ranged from approximately IR£100 to IR£1,000, with only two lodgements of IR£2,000. By 10 December 1992, the balance in the account stood at IR£28,478.25. Mr Collins was unable to assist the Tribunal as to whether the size of the Davy cheque and indeed the other IR£5,000 cheque had been a factor in the decision to lodge these monies to the B/T account, rather than to the 'TC/Fianna Fáil' account.

THE WITHDRAWALS¹⁴ FROM THE B/T ACCOUNT BETWEEN 1989 AND 1995

10.46 There were seven withdrawals from the B/T account between 1989 and 1995.

¹⁴ A withdrawal of IR£20,000 is considered separately below.

10.47 On 31 July/1 August 1989 two cash sums, of IR£300 and IR£2,700, were withdrawn. The Tribunal was told that these cash withdrawals related to ‘election costs’ and a ‘post election function for Cumann members’ respectively.

10.48 There were cheque withdrawals of IR£1,000 on 30 March 1990 and IR£4,000 on 3 August 1990. These were attributed in the PWC document respectively to ‘printing’ and the ‘St Luke’s opening function for FF organization/Cumann members.’

10.49 Mr Collins, as the sole individual authorised to make withdrawals from the ‘building trust’ account, was unable to explain to the Tribunal why General Election and entertainment expenses were being funded from an account being maintained as a long-term contingency fund for St Luke’s, at a time, August 1990, when the 1989 ‘Fianna Fail NC Election Account’ account boasted a credit balance in excess of IR£24,000.¹⁵ The account addressees were stated to be Mr Ahern and Mr Burke.

10.50 On 21 July 1992 a sum of IR£29.99 was withdrawn and a cheque withdrawal of IR£3,000 was made on 31 July 1992 which was attributed to the ‘summer function FF Cumann – local organization.’

THE TWO IR£20,000 TRANSACTIONS IN 1994

10.51 On 26 August 1994, IR£20,000 in cash was, in effect, withdrawn from the B/T account.¹⁶ Some two months later, on 26 October 1994, IR£20,000 cash was lodged to the B/T account. The PWC document prepared in January 2008 described the reason for the withdrawal as ‘building renovation – works subsequently cancelled.’

10.52 On 5 March 2008, PTSB informed the Tribunal that the IR£20,000 which had been lodged to the B/T account on 26 October 1994, was immediately preceded by a purchase by the same teller of Stg£20,000. It appeared therefore that the immediate source of the IR£20,000 lodgement was Stg£20,000 cash, exchanged for Irish punts at parity.

10.53 In January 2008, PWC described this lodgement as ‘refund re cancellation of building renovations.’

¹⁵ At the time of the 3 August 1990 withdrawal of IR£4,000 for what was claimed to be St Luke’s ‘opening function’, the Constituency No.1 account—intended to meet the day to day expenditure requirements of St Luke’s—was overdrawn to the extent of IR£5,022.08. The CODR account - the account intended to meet the capital expenditure requirements of St Luke’s—had a balance of IR£27,617.74 .

¹⁶ By way of a cheque drawn by Mr Collins.

10.54 Mr Collins, Mr Burke and Mr Ahern all claimed that the August 1994 withdrawal was necessitated by the need to undertake structural repair works on St Luke's which, as stated by Mr Collins, was in danger of 'sinking' in 1994. The Tribunal was told that the person entrusted with organising the repair works on the building was Mr Burke, because of his experience as a builder. The money was withdrawn in cash and made available to Mr Burke, in advance of any work being carried out on the house, and before the precise nature and extent of the work required or any potential contractors had been identified, in order to put him in a position to have the work done quickly and to be in a position to pay the contractors.¹⁷ Mr Collins claimed that after withdrawing the IR£20,000 cash, he left the money in St Luke's for collection by Mr Burke. While Mr Collins claimed to have no recollection of the details of the handover of the money, he recollected that when leaving the money in the office of St Luke's he said to the person in the office, 'make sure Joe Burke gets that.' Mr Collins 'imagined' that Mr Burke had picked up the money. Mr Collins said that he had no recollection of being advised by Mr Burke what he did with the money.

10.55 Mr Burke told the Tribunal that following the withdrawal of IR£20,000 and the provision of that money to him in August 1994, it was realised that the work needing to be done on St Luke's was more complex than had earlier been contemplated, and that professional advice would be required in advance of the work being undertaken. In fact, no repair work was carried out to St Luke's in 1994. As already stated, no such repair works were carried out on St Luke's until 1999, some five years later.

10.56 According to Mr Burke, a decision was made to defer the structural work of St Luke's, and to return the IR£20,000 into the B/T account. A sum of IR£20,000 was lodged to the B/T account on 26 October 1994. Mr Burke told the Tribunal that this lodgement represented a payment into the account of a sum equal to the IR£20,000 withdrawn in cash approximately two months earlier. It was his belief that he left a sum of twenty thousand pounds in cash in St Luke's for collection by Mr Collins. Mr Collins, however, had no recollection of collecting the money or lodging it to the account.

10.57 The information provided by PTSB to the Tribunal indicated that the IR£20,000 lodged to the B/T account on 26 October 1994 represented an exchange from Stg£20,000. When asked to explain why the money had been returned by him in sterling, Mr Burke said that he was 'kind of stumbled as to say did I or didn't I' return the money in sterling. He said it was possible that he may have done so, and that the money was probably sterling held by him in connection with his public house refurbishment business, and his related purchase of memorabilia and salvage material in England. Mr Burke did not explain what he had done with the IR£20,000 that had been withdrawn two months earlier, other than to say that he had spent some of it.

10.58 No records were generated or maintained by Mr Collins, Mr Burke or anyone else in relation to the two IR£20,000 cash transactions.

10.59 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that he was unaware, until apprised in March 2008 by the Permanent TSB, that the IR£20,000 lodged to the B/T account on 28 October 1994 had been a sterling lodgement.

THE LOAN OF IR£30,000 IN 1993

10.60 On 30 March 1993, IR£30,000 was withdrawn from the B/T account to fund a bank draft payable to a solicitor, Mr Patrick O’Sullivan (now deceased), in relation to the purchase of a house in Dublin occupied by elderly relatives of Ms Celia Larkin.

10.61 Based on information provided to it, PWC described the IR£30,000 withdrawal from the B/T account as a ‘staff loan to family of employee.’ Mr O’Connor of PWC advised the Tribunal that he had given the withdrawal this description on the basis of information provided to him by Mr Ahern.

10.62 In 1993, Ms Larkin, who was Mr Ahern’s partner at that time, was employed as a civil servant in the Department of Finance, and was also a constituency worker in St Luke’s, Drumcondra.

10.63 Ms Larkin advised the Tribunal that in 1993 she decided to purchase a house which her elderly relatives were then renting as their family home, in order to provide them with security of tenure for their lifetimes. Ms Larkin said that she had spoken of her relatives’ predicament, and their anxiety about keeping their home, with the late Mr Brennan, solicitor and with Mr Burke and Mr Collins. She said that she had not sought financial assistance. Sometime later Mr Brennan telephoned her to advise her that the house committee of St Luke’s had decided to advance her a loan to facilitate the purchase of her relatives’ house. It was Ms Larkin’s understanding that the loan had been made available to her by the trustees of St Luke’s, from an account known as the Building Trust account which she understood to be in existence for the purpose of providing funds for the renovation of St Luke’s. Ms Larkin understood, from her discussions with Mr Brennan, that the loan of IR£30,000 was being made available to her ‘at no cost to the account'¹⁸ and was repayable on the death of the last of the three tenants in the property or when called upon by the trustees to repay the loan or in the event of the house being sold or there being a 'change of status' in relation to the house.

10.64 Mr Burke and Mr Collins emphasised that the loan to Ms Larkin was made on humanitarian grounds. They assumed and expected that Mr Brennan would generate the necessary legal documentation relating to the loan. Although Mr Ahern suggested that a minute or note referring to the advance to Ms Larkin had been prepared, no contemporaneous documentary reference to the advance to Ms Larkin was made available to the Tribunal. Mr Ahern said that he had not seen any such document, but that it would have been Mr Brennan's 'nature' to have prepared such a document. It appeared however that no contemporaneous documentation or record, formal or otherwise, was generated relating to the advance of IR£30,000 to Ms Larkin. No legal steps appeared to have been taken to protect the interests of the donor of the funds, an omission which the Tribunal found to be remarkable, particularly in circumstances where, having regard to the evidence of Mr Ahern and others, the provision of the loan to Ms Larkin was inconsistent with the stated nature and purpose of the account.

10.65 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that he only became aware of the loan being made available to Ms Larkin, and the purpose of the loan, after the offer of the loan had been made to her, and after she had decided to accept it. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that he had never been consulted by the 'trustees' or members of the 'house committee' in relation to the decision to offer the funds to Ms Larkin.

10.66 At the time the IR£30,000 was made available to Ms Larkin, the balance in the B/T account was IR£52,133.92. The IR£30,000 withdrawal resulted in a depletion of almost 58 per cent of the 'building trust' funds. The IR£30,000 loan to Ms Larkin accounted for approximately 75 per cent of the purchase price of the house in which her elderly relatives were then living.

10.67 The loan of IR£30,000 to Ms Larkin in 1994 remained outstanding until its repayment on 4 February 2008, approximately three months after the Tribunal's discovery of its existence. Inclusive of interest, Ms Larkin repaid €45,510 to the treasurer of the Dublin Central constituency. The payee details on the cheque were completed by Ms Cullagh and the cheque was lodged to an account in the name of Fianna Fail Dublin Central.

¹⁸ This was understood by the Tribunal as meaning full reimbursement to the account from which the funds were withdrawn, including lost interest.

10.68 Ms Larkin sought the assistance of Mr Ahern in ascertaining the interest due – hence Mr Ahern had provided her with the figure of €45,510, inclusive of interest. Furthermore Mr Ahern provided Ms Larkin with a short term loan of €40,000 to enable her to repay the money.¹⁹ Ms Larkin stated that she duly repaid this loan to Mr Ahern when she obtained mortgage facilities.

10.69 While Mr Ahern duly acknowledged, on Day 870, the active role played by him with regard to the repayment by Ms Larkin of the loan to Dublin Central Constituency, it was noteworthy that despite this active involvement, when initially queried by the Tribunal about the matter he appeared only able to give a somewhat vague account of the fact that the money had been repaid.

THE TITLE OF THE ACCOUNT

10.70 The Tribunal was interested in establishing what ‘B/T’ stood for. Did this abbreviation stand for ‘Building Trust’ as claimed by Mr Collins, Mr Burke, Mr Ahern and others, or for ‘Bertie/Tim’ (i.e. Mr Bertie Ahern and Mr Tim Collins?) All those associated with Mr Collins (who opened the account) and Mr Ahern denied that ‘B/T’ was, or was ever intended to be, a reference to Mr Ahern and Mr Collins.

MR DAVID BYRNE’S OPINION

10.71 On 6 May 1997, Mr David Byrne SC prepared a report on the acquisition, financing and ownership of St Luke’s, Drumcondra. Mr Byrne’s opinion had been requested by Mr Brennan, solicitor, for the purpose of advising as to the ownership status of St Luke’s, following media speculation (ongoing from as early as 1992) that Mr Ahern might have or have had a beneficial interest in the premises. The report was sought at a time when a General Election was imminent.

10.72 As evidence of the existence of the ‘building trust’, and as evidence of a written record documenting the loan of IR£30,000 to Ms Larkin, Mr Ahern relied on an undated document bearing the title ‘David/Gerry’ which was produced to the Tribunal on 21 April 2008. This undated document appeared to be linked or associated with Mr Byrne’s report.

10.73 Insofar as this document assisted the Tribunal, it was to the extent that in 1997, in unknown circumstances, but possibly in the course of written replies being furnished by Mr Brennan in response to queries from Mr Byrne, reference was made to the existence of a 'Building Trust Account', unidentified as to source, and to 'the IPBS account' having '£34,000 in it' and being 'owed £30,000 from the loan' given to Ms Larkin's relatives 'through Celia.'²⁰

10.74 The Tribunal heard evidence from a number of personnel from the PTSB Drumcondra branch who knew of the existence of the B/T account. None of them were aware of any connection between the account and Fianna Fáil. None of them had heard the account being referred to at any time as the 'Building Trust' account. Ms Elizabeth Smith, a part time employee at the IPBS branch from 1991 to 1993, and a full time employee from 1993 to 1996, and Mr Blair Hughes, the manager of the IPBS Drumcondra branch from 1993 to 1997, understood that B/T was an abbreviation for 'Bertie' (Mr Ahern) and 'Tim' (Mr Collins). Both knew Mr Collins as a customer in their branch.

10.75 Bank documentation furnished to the Tribunal revealed the existence of an account entitled 'D/T' also held in the Drumcondra branch of the IPBS. The account title was acknowledged as being an abbreviation for 'Des/Tim', meaning Mr Des Richardson and Mr Tim Collins (Mr Collins stated 'the D/T obviously means Des Richardson and Tim Collins'). This account was opened in July 1991 and was operated by Mr Richardson and Mr Collins for their own business purposes, and was not connected to the Dublin Central constituency organisation or to Fianna Fáil.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE B/T ACCOUNT

10.76 The Tribunal was satisfied that the B/T account was opened by Mr Tim Collins in 1989 for purposes other than the upkeep and maintenance of St Luke's, Drumcondra. The Tribunal rejected entirely the evidence of Mr Collins, Mr Burke and Mr Ahern as to the claimed purpose of this account.

10.77 The B/T account was opened and operated in a markedly different fashion to that of other bank accounts associated with the Dublin Central constituency. Its opening and operation was to a very great extent kept secret, and active steps were taken by Mr Collins in 1989 and again in 1995 to ensure that correspondence and statements relating to the account were maintained within the IPBS branch or sent to Mr Collins' private address respectively, and not sent to the constituency office at St Luke's.

²⁰ Mr Ahern accepted that, in fact, the loan was provided to Ms Larkin herself, and not her relatives.

10.78 The Tribunal was satisfied that the B/T account was not created or maintained as a 'building trust' account and that it was not established or operated as a fund for the upkeep and maintenance of St Luke's. Indeed the entire operation of the account from its inception in 1989 to January 2008 was the very antithesis of this claimed purpose.

10.79 The Tribunal has reached these conclusions notwithstanding the sworn testimony of Mr Liam Cooper, Mr Dominic Dillane and Mr J. J. Murphy, all of whom at some point since 1994 held the office of Joint Honorary Treasurer of Dublin Central CDC. The thrust of their respective testimonies on the B/T issue led the Tribunal to conclude that they had only a passing acquaintance with the B/T account. There was nothing in their testimonies to persuade the Tribunal that the B/T account was treated as a Dublin Central CDC account before approximately January 2008.

10.80 Equally, the Tribunal was satisfied that the B/T account was not an account used to fund political activity.

10.81 The Tribunal was satisfied that at the time of the opening of the account in 1989, the letters 'B' and 'T' in the account's title 'B/T' stood for 'Bertie' (Mr Ahern) and 'Tim' (Mr Collins), in precisely the same manner as the letters 'D' and 'T' in a separate account within the same IPBS branch stood for 'Des' (Mr Richardson) and 'Tim' (Mr Collins).

10.82 The Tribunal was satisfied, as a matter of probability, that the B/T account was operated (at least until 1997) for the personal benefit of Mr Ahern and Mr Collins.

10.83 The Tribunal rejected in its entirety the evidence of Mr Collins and Mr Burke, and the belief expressed by Mr Ahern, as to the reasons and purpose for the withdrawal of IR£20,000 in August 1994. The Tribunal, in particular, rejected the evidence which suggested that the said sum was withdrawn to enable construction work to be carried out on St Luke's. The Tribunal considered as frankly incredible the evidence which suggested that the IR£20,000 was withdrawn to facilitate significant repair work to St Luke's in circumstances where (as it appeared to the Tribunal) professional advice as to the required work had not even been obtained, and no contractor had been identified or engaged. There appeared to the Tribunal to have been no logical or practical reason for withdrawing a very substantial sum in cash prior to its being required, and in the circumstances described by Mr Burke.

10.84 Until 26 August 1994, insofar as repair and renovation work was carried out on St Luke's, such works were entirely funded by the CODR account. It has furthermore been established conclusively that the subsequent repair works which were carried out on the building in 2000 were financed entirely without recourse to the B/T account.

10.85 The Tribunal was satisfied that the purpose for which the IR£20,000 cash was withdrawn in August 1994 was not connected with any intended repair or refurbishment of St Luke's. As a matter of probability, the Tribunal was satisfied that no such plans to carry out works on the building were made at that time. The true purpose of this IR£20,000 cash withdrawal or its use remains unexplained.

10.86 The Tribunal was further satisfied that the explanations for the transaction of 26 August 1994 as proffered by Mr Collins and Mr Burke were untrue.

10.87 Having regard to the finding of the Tribunal that the B/T account was operated for the benefit of Mr Ahern and Mr Collins, the probable beneficiaries of the IR£20,000 cash withdrawn on 26 August 1994 were either Mr Ahern or Mr Collins or both. The Tribunal was further satisfied that Mr Ahern and Mr Collins were at all relevant times in a position to advise the Tribunal of the purpose of this withdrawal but chose not to do so.

10.88 The Tribunal was satisfied that the IR£20,000 lodgement in October 1994 to the B/T account represented in fact Stg£20,000. The Tribunal was satisfied that the IR£20,000 lodged to the B/T account on 28 October 1994 was not a refund of the monies withdrawn some two months earlier and had no connection to those monies. The actual source of that money remains a mystery.

10.89 The Tribunal did not accept as true Mr Burke's evidence that he sourced the sterling from his business and that he left the twenty thousand pounds in cash in St Luke's for collection by Mr Collins.

10.90 The Tribunal rejected Mr Ahern's contention that he was unaware of the provision of funds to Ms Larkin of IR£30,000 in 1993 prior to the decision to advance this sum to her. The Tribunal believed that Mr Ahern was well aware of this decision at the time it was made and that he was involved in the making of that decision.

10.91 The Tribunal believed that Mr Ahern and Mr Collins were in a position to account to the Tribunal for the origins of substantial lodgements of IR£19,000 (being the proceeds of IR£20,000 cheque) and the IR£10,000 cash made to the B/T account on 25 August 1992 and 18 July 1995 respectively. They did not do so.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 10 - SECTION VIII : THE RENTAL AND PURCHASE OF NO 44 BERESFORD AVENUE, DRUMCONDRA, DUBLIN (BERESFORD)

THE BASIS FOR THE TRIBUNAL’S INQUIRY INTO BERESFORD

11.01 In response to inquiries made by the Tribunal concerning the lodgement on 1 December 1995 of IR£19,142.92 to Mr Ahern’s 011 account, the April 2006 Peelo report, inter alia, informed the Tribunal that the lodgement comprised the balance remaining from funds amounting to IR£50,000 provided by Mr Ahern to Ms Larkin for the ‘fit out’ of Beresford on Mr Ahern’s behalf. These funds were lodged to a 28 day fixed account in her name on 5 December 1994 (the Larkin 015 Account).

11.02 The Tribunal communicated with Ms Larkin arising from the information in Mr Peelo’s report. Ms Larkin, in her June 2006 memorandum advised the Tribunal of the existence of the Larkin 015 account into which IR£50,000 of Mr Ahern’s money had been lodged on 5 December 1994 and of the Larkin 011 account, the account into which IR£28,772.90 had been lodged on the same date.¹ This account, it was claimed, had been opened to accommodate monies provided by Mr Michael Wall in connection with the ‘renovation’ of Beresford. Ms Larkin also advised the Tribunal of a further account—the 031 Account (a call deposit account), opened in June 1995, also in connection with Beresford.

THE PURCHASE OF BERESFORD BY MR MICHAEL WALL

11.03 Mr Wall and Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that in or after April 1994 they informally agreed that Mr Wall would purchase a house in the Drumcondra area, and later agreed that Mr Ahern would rent the house from Mr Wall, and that he would have an option to purchase the house if he wished to do so. The search for a suitable home was largely undertaken by Ms Larkin.

11.04 At that time, Mr Wall was operating a successful coach business in Manchester, Wall’s Coaches. Mr Wall said that he planned to set up a branch of that business in Dublin. Mr Wall’s evidence was that he wished to buy a house in Dublin to use on his visits to the city which he anticipated would increase in number because of those business plans. Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that at the same time he wished to rent or buy a residence. He said that friends had advised him that it was preferable, for political considerations, that he cease to reside in his constituency premises, St Luke’s.

¹ This lodgement is the subject of review in Section IV.

11.05 It was agreed that, on his visits to Dublin, Mr Wall would stay in the house purchased by him and rented by Mr Ahern.

11.06 Ms Larkin identified Beresford as a house suitable for purchase for Mr Wall and for renting by Mr Ahern. A decision was made by Mr Wall to purchase the house, although he did not view it prior to purchase.

11.07 By 30 March 1995, Beresford had been purchased by Mr Wall for IR£138,000. Mr Ahern's option to purchase was never legally formalised. Mr Ahern took up residence in Beresford in September 1995 and he stated that his occupation from then until 1997 was on foot of a tenancy arrangement, although that arrangement was not apparently the subject of a written tenancy agreement until 1997.²

11.08 Mr Wall did not subsequently open a branch of his coach business in Dublin.

THE COSTS INCURRED IN THE ACQUISITION OF BERESFORD

11.09 The legal aspects of the purchase by Mr Wall were dealt with by the late Mr Brennan, solicitor to both Mr Wall and Mr Ahern.

11.10 On 29 November 1994, Mr Brennan successfully tendered to purchase Beresford for IR£138,000 on behalf of Mr Wall, and on 1 December 1994 a booking deposit of IR£3,000 funded by a sterling cheque provided by Mr Wall was paid. The balance of the 10 per cent deposit, Stg£10,800, was paid on 3 February 1995, again with sterling funds provided by Mr Wall. The sale was closed in late March 1995, and the balance of the purchase price was paid to the vendor.

11.11 The sterling cheques were drawn on the UK bank account of Wall's Coaches. The purchase price balance was funded by an ICS mortgage for IR£96,600 in Mr Wall's name, and a transfer of IR£27,600 drawn on the UK account of Wall's Coaches.

11.12 In addition, two further sums, being a cheque for Stg£2,000 and cash of IR£6,000 were paid by Mr Wall to Mr Brennan in February/March 1995 in connection with the purchase of Beresford. The Stg£2,000 cheque was drawn on the UK account of Wall's Coaches.

² Mr Wall registered the tenancy agreement with Dublin Corporation.

11.13 The bank statements of Wall's Coaches Ltd to March 1995 reflect all but one (the cash payment of IR£6,000) of the monies (approximately IR£49,400) directly furnished by Mr Wall in connection with the purchase of Beresford.

11.14 The stamp duty payable on the purchase of Beresford, IR£8,442, was paid on 15 May 1995 with funds withdrawn from the Larkin 011 account into which IR£28,772.90³ had been lodged on 5 December 1994.

THE POST-PURCHASE EXPENDITURE ON BERESFORD AND MR AHERN'S AND MR WALL'S CLAIMED CONTRIBUTION TO IT

11.15 Over a period of approximately three months from mid-1995, following the acquisition of Beresford, significant sums were expended on its refurbishment and renovation. Certain shortcomings in terms of interior decoration and dining facilities had been identified, and a decision was made that these were to be rectified by refurbishing the interior and by the addition of a conservatory.

11.16 Mr Ahern, Mr Wall and Ms Larkin told the Tribunal that there was in place an informal arrangement whereby Mr Wall, as the owner of the house, would fund works of a structural nature, while Mr Ahern, as the tenant, would fund internal decorative and refurbishment work, and that Ms Larkin would, in general, manage the entire project. To this end it was Mr Ahern's and Mr Wall's evidence, and Ms Larkin's understanding, that Mr Wall contributed a cash sum of approximately Stg£30,000,⁴ and that Mr Ahern provided a sum of IR£50,000.⁵ While Mr Wall was aware that Mr Ahern was to fund the internal refurbishment work in the house, he was unaware of the provision of IR£50,000 to Ms Larkin by Mr Ahern for that purpose.

³ See Section IV. It was claimed by Mr Ahern that this lodgement represented approximately Stg£30,000 which had been provided by Mr Wall on 3 December 1994 for utilisation in connection with Beresford. The lodgement in fact comprised $45,000 which had been exchanged on 5 December 1994 and lodged into the Larkin 011 account which was opened on that date to receive these funds.

⁴ It was claimed that the circa Stg£30,000 cash sum was the source of the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 into a newly opened bank account in Ms Larkin's name on 5 December 1994. The Tribunal has found that the source of this lodgement was US$45,000 and was not a sterling sum provided by Mr Wall, as claimed by Mr Wall and Mr Ahern. See Section IV.

⁵ This sum was transferred from bank accounts in Mr Ahern's name into an account (the Larkin 015 account) opened in Ms Larkin's name on 5 December 1994 and was subsequently withdrawn in cash by Ms Larkin on 19 January 1995, some six weeks later. Mr Ahern maintained that IR£30,000 of this sum was subsequently used to purchase sterling which he claimed was ultimately reconverted into Irish pounds and lodged into bank accounts in June and December 1995. The Tribunal has found that Mr Ahern did not purchase Stg£30,000 sterling in the period January/February/March 1995 (as suggested by Mr Ahern) or prior to 15 June 1995, which was the date when Mr Ahern provided sterling to fund a lodgement of IR£11,743.74 to the Larkin 015 account. The Tribunal also found that a lodgement of IR£19,142.92 into Mr Ahern's 011 account on 1 December 1995 (the claimed 'unspent funds' in relation to Beresford) did not have its origins in the IR£50,000 withdrawn by Ms Larkin on 19 January 1995, as claimed by Mr Ahern. See Section V.

11.17 The proposed expenditure represented in excess of 50 per cent of the purchase price of Beresford (IR£138,000).

THE MONIES SPENT ON THE REFURBISHMENT OF BERESFORD AND THEIR SOURCE

11.18 The bank records pertaining to accounts held in the names of Mr Ahern and Ms Larkin indicated the following:

- 1) The Larkin 011 Account which held the IR£28,772.90 lodged on 5 December 1994 was debited by IR£8,442 on 15 May 1995 to pay the stamp duty on Beresford.
- 2) This account was closed on 19 June 1995 following two withdrawals made on that date of IR£850 and IR£20,050.91.
- 3) Part of the IR£20,050.91 was withdrawn by the purchase of three drafts of IR£3,000, IR£5,250 and IR£2,116.20 (total IR£10,366.20) used to pay bills connected with the conservatory and interior works then being carried out on the house.
- 4) The balance of this IR£20,050.91 (a sum of IR£9,684.71) may have been lodged initially into the Larkin 015 account but was subsequently transferred on 22 June 1995 to a new account opened in Ms Larkin's name—the Larkin 031 account.
- 5) On 15 June 1995 Ms Larkin lodged to her 015 account a cash sum comprised of IR£2,000 and Stg£10,000, funds provided to her by Mr Ahern to discharge bills in connection to Beresford. These funds were transferred one week later into the Larkin 031 account. As set out elsewhere in this Report, Mr Ahern sought to attribute the sterling component of this lodgement to a portion of a sum of Stg£30,000 which he claimed he purchased using circa IR£30,000 of the IR£50,000 cash which had been returned to him by Ms Larkin on 19 January 1995.

11.19 The Tribunal has already found⁶ that no such sterling purchase was made by Mr Ahern and that the Stg£10,000 Mr Ahern gave to Ms Larkin in June 1995 for lodgement, together with IR£2,000 cash, was not funded by the IR£50,000 cash returned to Mr Ahern in January 1995. The Tribunal has also found that the Stg£20,000 Mr Ahern lodged to the Ahern 011 Account on 1

⁶ See Section V.

December 1995 (the claimed 'unspent funds' on Beresford) did not have its origins in the IR£50,000 cash withdrawal made in January 1995⁷.

11.20 The monies (IR£9,684.71) used to open the Larkin 031 account on 22 June 1995 had their origin in the US$45,000 Ms Larkin exchanged and lodged into the Larkin 011 account on 5 December 1994 on behalf of Mr Ahern, and in the provision by Mr Ahern to Ms Larkin, prior to 19 June 1995 of IR£2,000 cash and Stg£10,000 cash.

11.21 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Ahern had sole control of the funds lodged to this 031 account.

11.22 The bank statements for the 031 account indicated that on 24 July 1995 Ms Larkin made a further cash lodgement of IR£9,655. Mr Ahern's evidence was that he provided this cash sum to Ms Larkin to enable her to defray expenses in relation to Beresford. Mr Ahern maintained that the money came from the balance of the IR£50,000 January 1995 cash withdrawal (i.e. after Mr Ahern's claimed purchase of Stg£30,000 sterling) which Mr Ahern claimed he had kept in his safe.

DISBURSEMENTS MADE FROM THE LARKIN 031 ACCOUNT

11.23 Between 26 June and 6 November 1995, three withdrawals, of IR£10,000, IR£3,000 and IR£16,000, were made and used to pay Kinsella Interiors and All Seasons Conservatories for work done on Beresford.

11.24 Ms Larkin gave evidence (as did Mr Ahern), that she also obtained a bank loan of IR£3,000 in connection with the Beresford refurbishment in order to settle an account payable to Kinsella Interiors, for which she was reimbursed by Mr Ahern.

11.25 Thus, an analysis of the movements on the aforesaid accounts held in Ms Larkin's name showed that in the period May to November 1995 Mr Ahern, ostensibly a tenant, spent over IR£50,000 on refurbishment and structural works on Beresford. As indicated elsewhere in this Report, the source of these funds remains unexplained by Mr Ahern.

11.26 This total expenditure was roughly equal to what Mr Ahern alleged to the Tribunal he provided (IR£50,000) on 5 December 1994⁸ as his financial contribution towards the 'fit out' of Beresford.

⁷ See Section V

11.27 While, therefore, Mr Ahern did indeed spend in excess of IR£50,000 on the structural and interior works carried out on the house, this expenditure, however, was not funded by the monies which were transferred into and withdrawn from the Larkin 015 account within a six-week period between 5 December 1994 and 19 January 1995.

11.28 Mr Ahern's contribution to the refurbishment of Beresford was funded by the utilisation of the US$45,000 which had been lodged, following its conversion, into the Larkin 011 account on 5 December 1994, by the provision of Stg£10,000 cash together with IR£2,000 cash deposited to the Larkin 015 account on 15 June 1995 and by the provision to her of IR£9,665 cash in July 1995 which may or may not have its origin in the IR£50,000 cash withdrawal from the Larkin 015 account on 19 January 1995.

THE RENTAL OF BERESFORD BY MR AHERN

11.29 Documentation provided to the Tribunal established that Mr Ahern paid Mr Wall a monthly rent of IR£450 between July 1995 and June 1997, and a monthly rent of IR£700 for the months of July, August and September 1997. The total rent paid by Mr Ahern was IR£13,250.

11.30 An annual registration document⁹ was lodged with Dublin Corporation in May 1996, indicating a monthly rent of IR£450, and again in May 1997, indicating a monthly rent of IR£600. A formal tenancy agreement did not appear to have been executed for 1995 and 1996.¹⁰ However, on 8 May 1997, a three-year tenancy agreement was executed by Mr Ahern and Mr Wall, despite the fact that Mr Ahern, only two weeks later, decided to purchase Beresford following the June 1997 General Election.

11.31 Mortgage repayments (plus the cost of associated life insurance cover) paid by Mr Wall between July 1995 and October 1997 amounted to approximately IR£30,000.

THE PURCHASE OF BERESFORD BY MR AHERN IN 1997

11.32 Mr Ahern acquired legal ownership of Beresford on 31 October 1997, having signed the contract to purchase from Mr Wall on 31 July 1997. The purchase price was IR£180,000, which Mr Ahern funded with a mortgage for IR£150,000 from the IPBS, and IR£30,000 of his own funds withdrawn from his IPBS deposit account. Mr Ahern also paid IR£16,200 in stamp duty.

⁸ This sum comprised £28,000 from Mr Ahern's SSA which had been opened on 30 December 1993 with a lodgement of IR£22,500 and which had been topped up in April 1994 to its maximum limit of £50,000, and by a transfer of £22,000 from Mr Ahern's 011 account. (which had been opened on 11 October 1994 with stg.£25,000)

⁹ Pursuant to the requirements of the Housing (Registration of Rented Houses) Regulations 1996

11.33 In April 1997, Gunnes Auctioneers provided a written market valuation of Beresford to Mr Ahern and Mr Wall. Curiously, Gunnes provided two valuations, one as of January 1997 of IR£185,000, and the other as of July 1995 of IR£140,000. Mr Ahern was unable to explain why Gunnes provided a valuation of the house as of July 1995.

11.34 It was noteworthy that there was, apparently, no allowance made for monies provided by Mr Ahern towards Beresford's refurbishment in 1995 (at a time when he was, supposedly, merely a tenant) against the purchase price which he was required to pay for the property approximately two years later.

THE APPLICATION BY MR WALL OF THE SALE PROCEEDS

11.35 Mr Wall lodged the net proceeds of the sale of Beresford to Mr Ahern, namely IR£89,865.87, to his account at Bank of Ireland, Galway, on 5 November 1997. Approximately one month later he withdrew IR£50,000 in cash from this account.

11.36 Mr Wall told the Tribunal that he withdrew this substantial sum of cash to purchase a stone-crushing machine at an upcoming plant auction in Co Meath which was then some 'weeks or months' away. He did not, in fact, attend the auction or purchase any such machine. He told the Tribunal that he took the IR£50,000 in cash back to Manchester, where he placed it in a safe and spent it over a period of time, changing it from Irish pounds to sterling as and when required.

THE WILL OF 6 JUNE 1996

11.37 On 6 June 1996, one year following the purchase of Beresford by Mr Wall and its rental three months later to Mr Ahern, Mr Wall executed a Will, drawn up by his and Mr Ahern's solicitor, Mr Brennan, in which he bequeathed Beresford to Mr Ahern and in the event of Mr Ahern pre-deceasing him, to Mr Ahern's then two minor daughters.

11.38 Mr Wall had previously executed a will drawn up by his UK solicitor in relation to his considerable assets in the UK and in Ireland (other than Beresford). The will of 6 June 1996 dealt solely with Beresford. This will duly provided that it was to operate independently of any other Will executed by Mr Wall.¹¹

11.39 Mr Wall was married and had adult children. He told the Tribunal that he did not inform his wife or his children of his 6 June 1996 Will and that he only vaguely knew Mr Ahern's daughters.

11.40 Mr Wall's explanation to the Tribunal for his decision to bequeath Beresford to Mr Ahern was his anxiety to ensure that Mr Ahern should have the house in the event that anything happened to Mr Wall. Mr Wall added that, alternatively to Mr Ahern taking the house under the Will (on Mr Wall's death) he, Mr Ahern, could, if he wished, pay Mr Wall's family for it. However his Will did not so direct.

11.41 Mr Wall said that he realised that Mr Ahern had put a 'quite a lot of effort' into the house and that the house suited him. He was anxious that Mr Ahern would have the house to live in should anything happen to him. Mr Wall stated that there was 'no particular reason whatsoever' why he had made a Will leaving the house to Mr Ahern, and that 'it was something [he] wanted to do'.

11.42 Mr Ahern told the Tribunal that he was unaware of Mr Wall's Will of 6 June 1996 or of Mr Wall's intention to benefit him with a gift of Beresford, or to benefit his daughters should he pre-decease Mr Wall, until so informed by Mr Wall in a telephone conversation in 2007. Mr Ahern said that although he knew Mr Wall to be a very generous man, he did not understand why Mr Wall had made a Will favouring him. Mr Ahern stated that had Mr Wall died, he would have insisted on paying the market value of Beresford to Mr Wall's family. Mr Ahern rejected the suggestion that Mr Wall executed the Will in order to protect and preserve Mr Ahern's beneficial interest in the property, in the event of Mr Wall's death.

11.43 In a press statement released by Mr Ahern on 13 May 2007 Mr Ahern dealt with the issue of Mr Wall's Will as follows:

Mr Wall made a supplementary Irish will, dealing only with this house, in addition to his main will, in which he left considerable property to his family. I did not know about this will last October. It was only brought to my attention earlier this year. There are a number of points about Mr Wall's will which are inconsistent with the suggestion that I actually owned the house at Beresford while renting it. They are as follows:

¹¹ In Mr Wall's will of 6 June 1996 it was specifically declared that Beresford was not to form part of the residue of Mr Wall's estate for the purpose of any earlier will or testamentary disposition previously made by him.

- a. Mr Wall bought the house in March 1995 and I rented it from him from May 1995. No will then existed.
- b. The will was not made until the 6th June 1996 more than a year later. If it is alleged that the will proves my concealed ownership then logic would dictate that it be signed when the house was bought.
- c. The fact is that I actually bought the house in 1997. I did not inherit it. I exercised the agreed option.
- d. A will would be a meaningless legal document—if it was to protect my supposed ownership—as it could be revoked at any time and with no legal right to insist on a further will or any right to inherit the house. However, most importantly of all I was unaware of the will, did not request it and did not seek that my solicitor put it in place. It was Mr Wall who—on his own initiative—decided that he should make the will, not I.

THE TRIBUNAL'S DISCOVERY OF THE EXISTENCE OF THE WILL

11.44 The Tribunal made an Order of Discovery against Mr Wall on 7 July 2006. In consequence of this order, Mr Ken Morris, Mr Wall's then solicitor, provided the Tribunal with the conveyancing file relating to Beresford. In its examination of this file, the Tribunal noted a memorandum referring to enquiries made of the Probate Office by personnel in the late Mr Brennan's office but the file did not include a copy of any Will. This memorandum suggested that Mr Wall might have executed a Will dealing only with Beresford.

11.45 On 19 July 2006, the Tribunal asked Mr Wall's solicitors to provide a copy of any such Will. Mr Wall's solicitors replied on 27 September 2006 to the effect that Mr Wall had provided all documentation in his possession or procurement to the Tribunal. The Will was not provided to the Tribunal and the Tribunal again wrote to Mr Wall's solicitors on 29 September 2006 seeking a copy of the document.

11.46 On 3 October 2006, Mr Wall swore an Affidavit of Discovery which contained no reference to a Will.

11.47 Following an exchange of correspondence between the Tribunal and Mr Wall's solicitors between October 2006 and February 2007, Mr Wall was informed on 7 February 2007 that the Tribunal intended to question him in public on 6 March 2007. On 22 February 2007, Mr Wall's solicitors wrote to the Tribunal referring to relevant documentation which they said had been withheld from the Tribunal in error. A supplemental Affidavit of Discovery was sworn by Mr Wall on 26 February 2007, wherein reference to a will of 6 June 1996 was made. It had taken the Tribunal well over six months to obtain a copy of the Will, from the date it was first requested, and only then following repeated requests for its production and the notification of the Tribunal's proposal to question Mr Wall in public.

11.48 Mr Wall advised the Tribunal (both before and during his sworn evidence) that until 21 February 2007 he had had no recollection of making the Will.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS RELATING TO THE DISCLOSURE OF MR WALL'S WILL OF 6 JUNE 1996 TO THE TRIBUNAL

11.49:

- 1) Mr Wall wrongfully concealed the said will from the Tribunal in the period July 2006 to February 2007 and failed to fully comply with the Tribunal's Order for Discovery on 7 July 2006.

- 2) The Tribunal rejected as untrue Mr Wall's evidence that when swearing his first Affidavit of Discovery he did not recollect the existence of the Will. The Tribunal was satisfied that at all relevant times, Mr Wall well recollected and knew that he had made a Will in favour of Mr Ahern in 1996. Even if the Tribunal were minded to believe Mr Wall (which it was not), by 3 October 2006, the date of his first Affidavit, Mr Wall could not have failed to recollect the Will, as he had been put on notice by the Tribunal on 19 July 2006 of the existence of such document. In any event, the Tribunal rejected Mr Wall's contention that he had forgotten that he made a Will in which he favoured Mr Ahern by the bequest of his house in Dublin.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS RELATING TO THE OWNERSHIP OF BERESFORD

11.50 The Tribunal was satisfied that Beresford was never beneficially owned by Mr Wall or intended to be beneficially owned by him. The property was in fact beneficially owned by Mr Ahern between 1995 and 1997, and was legally and beneficially owned by Mr Ahern from 1997 onwards. The Tribunal rejected as untrue the evidence of Mr Ahern and Mr Wall which suggested otherwise. The reasons for the Tribunal's aforesaid finding were based on the evidence heard by the Tribunal, and in particular the following:

- 1) The Tribunal has found¹² that the IR£28,772.90 lodged to the Larkin 011 account was not funded by a sum of Stg£30,000 (or a sterling sum close to that figure) said to have been provided to Mr Ahern by Mr Wall for the purposes of discharging costs associated with the purchase, refurbishment and renovation of Beresford. The IR£28,772.90 represented, in fact, US$45,000, the property of Mr Ahern, and was unconnected to Mr Wall.
- 2) The Tribunal was satisfied that the entire of the money spent on the refurbishment of Beresford was Mr Ahern's. The Tribunal found no evidence of any financial contribution by Mr Wall towards the building works or refurbishment of Beresford and it was satisfied that Mr Wall had no input, financial or otherwise, into the decisions which resulted in the structural and internal renovation works and refurbishment carried out on Beresford.
- 3) The Tribunal believed it incredible that Mr Ahern as a claimed tenant of Beresford would have expended almost IR£50,000 of his money over the course of approximately a four-month period in circumstances where not only did he not have any written tenancy agreement with Mr Wall, but he did not have any agreement as to how his expenditure would be accounted for in the event that his and Mr Wall's informal tenancy agreement failed to materialise or terminated, or in the event that Mr Ahern was to exercise his claimed 'option' to purchase. The Tribunal also found it to be remarkable that upon Mr Ahern's purchase of the legal title to the property in 1997, no allowance was made for the considerable expenditure undertaken by Mr Ahern on the property since 1995, if, as claimed, Mr Ahern had merely been a tenant therein.
- 4) The Tribunal was satisfied that the will executed by Mr Wall on 6 June 1996 was a mechanism designed to provide Mr Ahern with a degree of asset protection in respect of Beresford. The Tribunal was satisfied that the will was, in the circumstances, evidence of Mr Ahern's beneficial ownership of the property, and it believed that Mr Ahern was aware of its existence from its date of execution by Mr Wall.
- 5) Having regard to the £49,400 which was contributed by Mr Wall (of which all but £6,000 was paid by Walls Coaches, Mr Walls UK company) to the purchase costs of Beresford in the period December 1994 to March 1995, the Tribunal did not identify specific evidence that this money was reimbursed to Mr Wall (or his company), or how Mr Ahern and Mr Wall might have reconciled the mortgage repayments made by Mr Wall with the rent paid by Mr Ahern in the period 1995 to 1997. The Tribunal also noted the fact that the house, when transferred into the legal ownership of Mr Ahern had increased in value. It did not identify how this issue might have been addressed as between Mr Ahern and Mr Wall in 1997.

The absence of evidence as to how this matter was addressed (if at all) did not, in the view of the Tribunal, outweigh the preponderance of other factors which persuaded the Tribunal that the intended beneficial owner of Beresford from the time of its acquisition was Mr Ahern.

11.51 The Tribunal considered that Mr Walls' account of his reason for withdrawing IR£50,000 in cash from his Galway bank account and of his intended or actual expenditure of the cash was untrue and thus rejected his evidence on this issue. The Tribunal could not determine, on balance of probability, Mr Wall's purpose in withdrawing such a substantial sum in cash, or its likely ultimate destination or use.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 10 - SECTION IX : AN OVERVIEW OF THE UNEXPLAINED LODGEMENTS IN RELATION TO ACCOUNTS CONNECTED TO MR AHERN

THE LODGEMENTS

12.01 In the course of its inquiry into Mr Ahern's personal finances the Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Ahern did not truthfully account for the origins of specific cash lodgements made to accounts held in his name, the name of his then minor daughters and in the name of Ms Larkin.

12.02 The relevant lodgements were made to the various accounts between 30 December 1993 and 1 December, 1995 – a period of some 23 months.

12.03 They comprised the following:

- 30 December 1993: IR£15,000 cash lodgement (together with a cheque and draft for IR£2,500 and IR£5,000 respectively) made to an SSA in Mr Ahern's name.
- 25 April, 1994: IR£30,000 cash, the substantial portion of which (IR£27,164.44) was lodged the Ahern SSA, with the balance lodged to Mr Ahern's current account.
- 08 August, 1994 IR£20,000 lodged to an AIB account opened in the name of Mr Ahern's then minor daughters.
- 11 October, 1994 Stg. £25,000 lodged to the Ahern 011 account, opened on that date.
- March to October 1994 A total of Stg.£15,500 lodged in varying amounts to IPPS accounts held in the name of Mr Ahern and in the name of his then minor daughters.
- 5 December, 1994 US$45,000 lodged to the Larkin 011 account.
- 15 June, 1995 Stg. £10,000 (together with IR£2,000) lodged to the Larkin 015 account.
- 1 December, 1995 Stg. £20,000 lodged to the Ahern 011 account.

12.04 The Tribunal rejected the various explanations proffered by Mr Ahern as to how he came into possession of the funds which comprised the said lodgements. In particular, the Tribunal rejected the explanation of Mr Ahern (and others) regarding the origin of IR£15,000 cash which compromised part of the lodgement which opened the SSA on 30 December 1993. The Tribunal also rejected Mr Ahern's explanation as to how he came into possession of Irish punts sums of £30,000 and £20,000 and which comprised the lodgements made on 25 April 1994 and 8 August 1994 respectively.

12.05 Insofar as Mr Ahern, ultimately, acknowledged that the lodgements made to the IPBS between March and October 1994 and the lodgements made respectively to the Larkin 015 account and the Ahern 011 account on 15 June 1995 and 1 December 1995 had their origins in sterling, the Tribunal rejected Mr Ahern's explanation as to how he came into possession of such sterling amounts. Consequently, the origins of this sterling remain unexplained by Mr Ahern. Similarly, the Tribunal, having rejected the account proffered by Mr Ahern (and others) as to the make-up of the lodgement of IR£24,838.49 on 11 October 1994 and the Tribunal having found it to have been comprised solely of Stg£25,000, the origins of this sterling remains unexplained. The total unaccounted for sterling was Stg£70,500.

12.06 Equally, the Tribunal having rejected the evidence of Mr Ahern (and others) as to the make-up of the lodgement of IR£28,772.90 on the 5 December 1994, and the Tribunal having found that that lodgement had its origins in US$45,000, the circumstances whereby Mr Ahern came into possession of that amount of dollars remains unexplained.

12.07 The total Irish punt value of the aforementioned lodgements, for which Mr Ahern has failed to truthfully account, was IR£165,214.25.

THE B/T ACCOUNT

12.08 In the period 1992 to 1994, among the lodgements made to this account (an account, the Tribunal has found, which for a period of time was being operated for the benefit of Mr Ahern and Mr Collins, including the period 1992 to 1994) were IR£19,000 (from an IR£20,000 cheque) on 25 August, 1992, a lodgement of Stg£20,000 cash on the 26 October 1994 and a cash lodgement of IR£10,000 on the 18 July 1995.

12.09 The Tribunal was satisfied that neither Mr Ahern nor Mr Collins, the persons for whom, the Tribunal was satisfied, the account was being operated at the time of the lodgements, gave a truthful account as to the source of these monies.

12.10 The total Irish punt value of the aforesaid lodgements to the B/T account in the period 1992 to 1994 was IR£50,000.

CHAPTER TWO – THE QUARRYVALE MODULE

PART 10 – THE TRIBUNAL’S ADDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS

THE TRIBUNAL’S ADDITIONAL CONCLUSIONS ARISING FROM ITS INQUIRY CONCERNING MR AHERN’S PERSONAL FINANCES (THESE SHOULD BE READ AS AN ADJUNCT TO THE TRIBUNAL’S FINDINGS INDICATED IN THE FOREGOING EIGHT SECTIONS).

13.01 Those findings of fact which are adverse to Mr Ahern (and on occasion to others) clearly demonstrate that important aspects of Mr Ahern’s evidence (and the evidence of others) were rejected by the Tribunal. Much of the explanation provided by Mr Ahern as to the source of the substantial funds identified and inquired into the course of the Tribunal’s public hearings was deemed by the Tribunal to have been untrue.

13.02 The purpose of the Tribunal’s inquiries into Mr Ahern’s personal finances was to identify the sources of substantial lodgements and movements of funds into Mr Ahern’s bank accounts, and other accounts associated with him, within a specific time period, and by so doing, establish or exclude a connection between any of these funds and Mr O’Callaghan, either directly or indirectly. Regrettably, the Tribunal’s inquiries were rendered inconclusive for the reasons stated in the preceding paragraph. Because the Tribunal has been unable to identify the true sources of the funds in question it cannot therefore determine whether or not the payment to Mr Ahern of all or any of the funds in question were in fact made by or initiated or arranged, directly or indirectly, by Mr O’Callaghan, or, indeed by any other identifiable third party.

Report prepared by Des Peelo FCA

Peelo & PartnersTRIBUNAL OF INQUIRY INTO CERTAIN PLANNING MATTERS AND PAYMENTS:*REF: PTB 358. 20 APR '06

1. The purpose of this Report is to respond to the request, concerning five specific lodgements, at par 2 of the Tribunal's letter dated 3 Mar '06 to Frank Ward & Company, Solicitors for Mr Ahern. This response also encompasses the further details regarding these lodgements as requested in the Tribunal's letter dated 30 Mar '06 to Frank Ward & Co.
2. The circumstances and details of the foregoing Tribunal letters will already be known to readers of this Report and are not referred to herein except as necessary to do so.
3. This Report is based on the documents scheduled in Mr Ahern's Affidavits of Discovery 7 Feb '05 and 27 Mar '06, and on detailed discussions with Mr Ahern re the five lodgements as referred to in the foregoing Tribunal letters.
4. For the sake of completeness, we have confirmed that Mr Ahern did not have any sources of income, apart from his salaries as TD and Minister, during the period '89 to '02. These other possible sources of income are referred to in the Tribunal's letter dated 25 Oct '05 to Frank Ward and Company.
5. Prior to dealing with the queries on the particular five lodgements, it is helpful to explain some of the background involved, as set out below.
6. Mr Ahern separated from his wife, Mrs Miriam Ahern, in Jan '87. Whilst not a formal legal separation at that time, Mr Ahern left the family home and was accommodated through living with his mother and / or a small flat adjacent to Mr Ahern's constituency office in Drumcondra, Dublin 9. Mr Ahern continued to financially support his wife and their two children through maintenance in the normal way.

REF: PTB 358. 20 APR '06

7. [REDACTED]
8. [REDACTED]
9. During these seven years, Mr Ahern did not maintain any personal (current or deposit) bank or building society accounts. His salary and expense cheques were cashed, either by himself or by an assistant, and the monies necessary for the maintenance of Mrs Ahern and their two children were either given directly to Mrs Ahern or lodged in cash to the joint account of Mr and Mrs Ahern in AIB, Finglas, Dublin 11 (account No 55017-003). Mortgage repayments (IPBS) on the family home were made from this account.
10. Mr Ahern's personal expenditures during the circa seven years (ie, '87 to '93) were low and cash balances, net of his maintenance payments, were gradually accumulated over this period. (See also paragraph 16 (c) herein in this regard) These cash balances were kept in a safe in Mr Ahern's constituency office in Drumcondra and in his Department office. (The foregoing can be confirmed by a number of colleagues and / or assistants of Mr Ahern)

Peelo & PartnersTRIBUNAL OF INQUIRY INTO CERTAIN PLANNING MATTERS AND PAYMENTS:*REF: PTB 358. 20 APR '06

11. The Discovery made by Mr Ahern covers a number of bank and building society current and deposit accounts: most of which are of a routine nature and require no particular review or analysis. There are, however, four bank accounts that require some review / analysis with reference to the purpose of this Report, namely:

(All of these accounts were with AIB, 37 Upper O'Connell Street, Dublin 1, in the sole name of Mr Ahern)

No 00401.094	Loan	24 Dec '93 - 30 Jan '96
No 00401.177	Special Savings	30 Dec '93 - 12 Dec '94
No 1.A.04519.011	Deposit	11 Oct '94 - 5 Dec '94
No 00401.334	Deposit	9 Dec '94 - 1 Oct '98

12. A chart of transactions in these accounts is attached as an appendix to this Report. As explained later herein, four of the five lodgements on which queries have been raised by the Tribunal are referred to on this chart.
13. The loan of £19,115,97, taken out on 24 Dec '93, was to pay legal costs [REDACTED]. The availability of this loan had been negotiated some time previously by Mr Ahern in anticipation of these costs.
14. The foregoing is the background and this Report now deals with each of the five specific lodgements on which queries have been raised by the Tribunal.

TRIBUNAL OF INQUIRY INTO CERTAIN PLANNING MATTERS AND PAYMENTS:

REF: PTB 358. 20 APR '06

15. "£15,000 cash lodgement as part of a £22,500 composite lodgement to Allied Irish Banks, special savings account numbered 00401-177 on the 30th December 1993"

(a) This £15,000 comprised six individual cash contributions of £2,500 each from the following persons:

Dave McKenna
Jim Nugent
Fintan Gunne RIP
Michael Collins
Charlie Chawke
Paddy Reilly RIP

(b) All of the foregoing are personal friends of Mr Ahern, known to him mainly through political life. At the time ([REDACTED]), when Mr Ahern had no home the £15,000 (£22,500 in total) was intended as a goodwill loan to help fund his legal costs [REDACTED].

[REDACTED] The loan was unsolicited by Mr Ahern.

(c) As shown in the attached chart, £22,000 of this £22,500 was used to fund the repayments on the loan of £19,115.97 taken out re legal costs.

(d) There was no particular reason as to why the payments were made in cash. The lodgement was made by Mr Ahern. The identity of the AIB bank official who received the lodgement was most likely either Philip Murphy or Jim McNamara.

TRIBUNAL OF INQUIRY INTO CERTAIN PLANNING MATTERS AND PAYMENTS:
REF: PTB 358. 20 APR '06

16. "£30,000 cash lodgement into Allied Irish Banks, special savings account numbered 00401-177 (£27,164.44 cash) and an amount in the sum of £2,835.56 in your client's current account numbered 0041-250 lodged on the 25th April 1994"

- (a) The £30,000 cash was entirely made up from cash balances of in excess of £50,000 accumulated by Mr Ahern over the circa seven years '87 to '93 (see paragraphs 9 and 10 above). Further clarification can be provided in this regard.
- (b) As is apparent from the chart on page 10 of this Report, the £27,164.44 was the exact amount necessary to bring the Special Savings Account up to the maximum figure of £50,000 allowed in legislation for such an account. AIB made the necessary division of the £30,000 lodgement into the two components of £27,164.44 and £2,835.56.
- (c) [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]
[REDACTED] He was therefore anxious, as best he could, to privately build up a capital sum over time for his own housing requirements. Mr Ahern was able to do this because his personal outgoings were modest.
- (d) The lodgement of £30,000 was made by Mr Ahern. The identity of the AIB bank official who received the lodgement was Philip Murphy.

17. "£20,000 cash lodgement into Allied Irish Banks account number 00004-096 in the name of Georgina and Cecilla Ahern on the 8th August, 1994."

- (a) As explained at paragraphs 9, 10 and 16 (c) above, Mr Ahern had accumulated cash balances of in excess of £50,000 over the seven years of '87 to '93.
- (b) £30,000 of these cash balances was used as explained at paragraph 16 above. £20,000 was lodged to AIB account No 00004-096 in the name of Georgina and Cecilla Ahern on 8 Aug '94.
- (c) [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] The two children of the marriage, Georgina and Cecilla, were teenagers and Mr Ahern was anxious to provide for their education, hence the money was set aside for this purpose. [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]
- (d) The cash was lodged by Mr Ahern. The identity of the AIB bank official who received the cash was most likely either Phillip Murphy or Jim McNamara.

18. "Transfer in the sum of £24,838.49 to your clients 7-day fixed interest account at Allied Irish Banks numbered 04519/011 on the 11th October 1994".

- (a) Mr Ahern attended and spoke at a private dinner in Manchester, circa this time. The dinner was organised by 'Manchester - Irish' businessmen and Mr Ahern had attended similar dinners on previous occasions. The dinner was not organised as a fundraiser. At the end of the dinner, unsolicited by Mr Ahern, he was presented with cash of circa Sterling £8,000 made up by individual contributions from the attendance. There is no list of contributors in this regard. (John Kennedy, one of the Manchester businessmen involved and Senator Tony Kett, who attended the dinner, can confirm the foregoing)
- (b) The exact amount of the sterling cash is not known. At the then (11 Oct '94) sterling / punt exchange rate of 0.9883, the sterling equivalent of Irish £7,938.49 was circa Sterling £7,845.61. (Note: Irish £7,938.49 + £16,500.00 = £24,438.49). The balance of Irish £16,500 in the lodgement was made up as follows:

Paddy Reilly*	£3,500	Barry English	£5,000
Joe Burke	£3,500	Dermot Carew	£4,500

*A different Paddy Reilly than listed at 15 (a)

All of the above persons are personal friends of Mr Ahern. The amounts were entirely unsolicited and represented a goodwill loan from friends towards building up Mr Ahern's personal finances re possible purchase of a house.

- (c) The lodgement of £24,838.49 was made personally by Mr Ahern. The AIB bank official who received the lodgement was either Philip Murphy or Jim McNamara.

19. "Transfer in the sum of £19,142.92 to your client's 7-day fixed interest account at Allied Irish Banks numbered 04519/011 on the 1st December 1995".

(a) This was a return of monies from his then partner Celia Larkin which arose in the following circumstances.

(b) As shown on the attached chart, a total of £50,000 was given to Celia Larkin, for the purpose of organising on Mr Ahern's behalf the fit-out of the house below.

£22,000 5 Dec '94 Account No 1.A.004519.011

£28,000 6 Dec '94 Account No 00401.177

(c) Mr Ahern had rented a house at this time, with an option to purchase it (which he did circa Sep '97). Expenditures on household furnishings totalling some £30,000 (Invoices available) were made from the foregoing £50,000 during '95.

(d) The sum of £19,142.92 was the balance remaining from the £50,000, and was re-lodged 1 Dec '95 to Mr Ahern's already existing AIB deposit account No 1.A.004519.011.

1. Qualifications

1.1. I am a Master of Natural Science, Master of Science and a Member of the Royal Society of Chemistry. I am a Registered Forensic Practitioner with the Council for the Registration of Forensic Practitioners (CRFP) in the speciality of Questioned Documents. The CRFP is the regulatory body for forensic practitioners and I am aware of and adhere to the Code of Conduct of the CRFP.

1.2. I am a Forensic Document Examiner; this has been my sole occupation since 2003. During the course of my work I have examined hundreds of cases involving documents and handwriting of unknown or disputed origin.

1.3. This company is equipped with electrostatic detection apparatus (ESDA), infra red video equipment, and all the normal facilities of a forensic document laboratory.

2. Scope of Expertise

2.1. Specialists in Questioned Documents all have an understanding of issues relating to handwriting and signatures and other aspects of document examination that routinely arise in their field. These include methods of examining documents to show their authenticity or to determine alterations to them; the examination and comparison of handwritings and signatures; and general examinations such as for indented impressions. Beyond this knowledge, practitioners must be aware of their own limitations and have an awareness of the more specialised examination methods other practitioners may be able to offer.

2.2. Specialists in handwriting and signatures examine examples of writing, usually to determine authorship. In addition to the general capabilities all examiners in this specialism must have, their expertise includes the interpretation of observations, taking into account many influences such as taught styles, natural variation, age and disguise; and offering an opinion of authorship which takes into account any constraints in the evidence.

2.3. Specialists in the other non-handwriting aspects of document examination examine all the other issues that arise routinely in this field such as how documents are produced (for example copying, printing, typing); the materials from which they are produced (for example paper, ink, other writing media); and general aspects such as impressions and folds in the paper.

2.4. Some related aspects require expertise in highly specialised fields such as security printing or the detailed analysis of specialised inks or papers. Experts in such areas may not necessarily have a detailed knowledge of the other aspects of questioned documents, but will often work in partnership with other document examiners to ensure that all aspects of the task are correctly addressed.

3. Instructions and Items Received

I have examined the item below at the instruction of the Tribunal of Inquiry into Certain Planning Matters & Payments. The item was delivered to our company premises by Peter Kavanagh on 4th December 2007.

AIB Bank Special Savings Account form for account 00401177

4. Purpose of Examination

I have examined the date on the AIB Bank form to determine whether or not it has been altered.

5. Background

5.1. Pens such as ballpoint pens and fluid-ink pens (e.g. fibre-tipped pens and rollerball pens) are produced by many manufacturers using a wide range of ink formulations. Many of these inks can be differentiated from one another by non-destructive techniques, usually by microscopic examination or by using specialised equipment that utilises infrared, ultraviolet and other light sources. Many inks that appear similar in colour to one another in normal visible light can exhibit very different appearances when viewed using different light sources because of the different properties of the mixtures of dyes used to make them. Where inks are found to be indistinguishable it does not necessarily follow that the same individual pen was used since pens containing the same ink are manufactured in large numbers.

5.2. It is also possible to use digital enhancement to emphasise differences between inks by the use of a desktop scanner and commercial image-editing software.

6. Findings

6.1. The date on the AIB Bank form has been written using blue ballpoint pen ink and now reads 23/12/93. The figures 2 and 3 appear darker in visible light than the rest of the date. There are pen lines present that do not form parts of these two characters and in my

Tribunal Ref : QV II

Document Evidence Ltd

Your Ref:
Our Ref: 702/07/2

opinion there is conclusive evidence that the 'day' part of the date has been altered to read 23.

6.2. I have examined the date on the AIB Bank form using microscopy, specialised lighting techniques and digital enhancement. It has not been possible to reveal any differences between the ink lines within the date. However, as noted above, where inks are found to be indistinguishable it does not necessarily follow that the same individual pen was used since pens containing the same ink are manufactured in large numbers.

6.3. I have examined the alteration microscopically in an attempt to decipher the original figures. The layouts of the other pen strokes are consistent with the shapes of the figures 1 and 4 and in my opinion, there is strong evidence that the original date on the AIB Bank form read 14/12/93. I cannot completely exclude the possibility that the original figures were not 1 and 4, but I consider this to be unlikely.

6.4. I produce exhibits showing magnified images of the date as EMB/1 and EMB/2

7. Summary

In my opinion the date on the AIB Bank form has been altered and there is strong evidence that the original date was 14/12/93.

8. Scale of Opinions

Wherever possible, I use the following scale of opinions in expressing my conclusions:

CONCLUSIVE evidence (this may be positive or negative)

STRONG but not conclusive evidence (this may be positive or negative)

LIMITED evidence (this may be positive or negative)

INCONCLUSIVE

Dear Ms Gilvarry,

We refer to the Order for Discovery of 24th November 2004, made by the Tribunal and directed to our client. We also refer to the Tribunal's letter of 22nd November 2004 which indicated that in the first instance our client could limit production of documents to lodgements over £30,000. We now attach herewith an Affidavit of Discovery.

In addition, we attach herewith copies of documents itemised in the First Part of the First Schedule. If you wish to see any documents in their original form they will be made available to you for inspection.

The enclosed documentation relates to all of our client's accounts. I wish to confirm that since our client had no outstanding tax liabilities, he did not avail of any tax amnesty. Moreover as is clear from our client's accounts, there is no lodgement in the sum of £30,000 or £50,000. The book entry of £50,000 (which is inclusive of earned interest) in our client's AIB O'Connell Street Special Savings Account arises because the legislation governing the Special Savings Account Scheme limited the total amount in such accounts to £50,000.

As our client has already indicated to the Tribunal (and sworn in an affidavit arising from the previous allegations made by Mr. Denis "Starry" O'Brien) at no stage did he receive a donation or contribution from Owen O'Callaghan or any entity or person acting on his behalf.

In early 1987 our client separated from his wife Miriam Ahern. At this time there were a number of bank accounts in their joint names in the AIB Finglas branch and a building society mortgage account in the Irish Permanent Building Society in O'Connell Street. After the separation these accounts were solely operated by Mrs. Ahern although our client's name remained on the accounts. There was only one account in existence prior to 1993 in our client's own name but this was dormant.

Following the separation our client did not operate any bank account until the end of 1993. During this period, each of his salary cheques was cashed either by himself or by one of his staff. Our client paid a regular monthly sum in cash to his wife by way of maintenance. This was initially in the order of £1,300 per month in 1988 and increased subsequently with the passage of time. Most of this money was then lodged by her in the No. 1 joint current account (No. 55017-003) in AIB Finglas.

I am also instructed that in December 1994 our client transferred funds from his accounts at AIB Upper O'Connell Street (number 1A04519011 and 00409177) into the account of his then partner Ms Celia Larkin.

In accordance with previous correspondence and in particular your letter of 3rd November 2004, our client has not discovered documentation which relates to his position in Fianna Fáil. As the Tribunal is I presume aware the sum of £80,000 was donated to the Fianna Fáil Party by Mr Owen O'Callaghan and this donation is recorded in the accounts of the Party.

If the Tribunal has any queries in relation to any of the documents discovered please do not hesitate to contact us.

Yours sincerely,

Liam Guidera
Frank Ward & Co.

Dear TONY

I am writing to invite you to The Fianna Fáil Dublin Central Constituency Golf Classic on Monday 13th October 1997 in St. Anne's Golf Club, Dublin.

In the aftermath of a very successful General Election Campaign, I am committed to ensuring that the constituency debt is eliminated as soon as possible.

With this goal firmly in mind we have arranged the Inaugural Dublin Central Constituency Golf Classic. I have selected St. Anne's Golf Club, the renowned 18 hole links course on North Bull Island, as the venue.

I would like to enlist your valued support for this golf outing which will be a great celebratory, sporting and social occasion. The day's golf will conclude with the Prize given ceremony and Banquet in St. Anne's Clubhouse. Marian McGuinness T.D., Senator Tony Kett and Senator Dermott Fitzpatrick will be in attendance.

Prizes will be presented on the night by An Taoiseach Bertie Ahern, T.D.

Your support will be greatly appreciated.

Yours Sincerely

Paul Kiely
Director of Elections
Dublin Central Constituency

David/Gerry

As requested we checked the records on IV. The trust was set up and the C.O.D.R. account opened in November 1987. Tim was Secretary, Joe, Chairman, and the donors paid into the account (1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990). The loan was not required. The total figure was as per the list but there were some late payments. The 1989 election account was transferred into the C.O.D.R. account in January 1990 and the account is still current. There have been no lodgements since January 1995 as the Ethics in Public Office Act 1995 was brought into operation on 1st January last year. The House Committee decided that all donations and fundraising were to go into the main account.

The trustees' decision of 1989 still holds that the C.O.D.R. account plus the election accounts of that year is for the trust, the Building Trust Account, is also under the house committee, to maintain and make provisions for ongoing maintenance and upkeep of St. Luke's, especially with the foundations and dampness problems. If we extend the committee room that is a further large cost. Over £35,000 was paid out of the C.O.D.R. account in 1991 for renovations.

The IPBS Account has £34,000 in it but is owed £30,000 from the loan we gave to the Minogue/O'Keeffe ladies through Calia. This is available if we required it at short notice as per the conditions agreed. Future donations or fundraising will go through the main account as per instructions.

Under VII

While the trustees are not responsible for the day to day costs of St. Luke's, the House Committee has been made up of most of us and we are still organising the functions with the help of the office.

CHAPTER THREE – THE CHERRYWOOD MODULE

INTRODUCTION

1.01 In this module the Tribunal inquired into attempts during the 1990s to rezone approximately 236 acres of undeveloped lands located close to the Cherrywood interchange on the M50. These lands were known as the Cherrywood lands and comprised a substantial portion of the lands of the Carrickmines Valley. The lands were contained in Maps 20 and 21 of the 1983 Dublin County Development Plan. Approximately two-thirds of the lands were zoned A (residential) at a density of 1 house per acre with septic tank. The balance of the lands was zoned B (agriculture) and G (amenity).

1.02 Eighty-four witnesses gave evidence to the Tribunal over 34 days between 17 May and 25 July 2006, and on 18 December 2006, and Cllr Jim Fahey also gave evidence on 6 February 2008.

1.03 In September 1989 Perivale Ltd, a company within the Monarch Group, completed the purchase of the lands from Mr Seán Galvin for approximately IR£10m.

1.04 The Monarch Group consisted of a number of incorporated companies some of which shared directors and engaged in similar types of business activity. These companies included:

- Cherrywood Developments Ltd (see also Perivale Ltd)
- Cherrywood Properties Ltd
- L&C Properties Ltd
- Monarch Properties Ltd (MPL)
- Monarch Properties Services Ltd (MPSL)
- Perivale Ltd: renamed Cherrywood Developments Ltd for a period, reverting to the name Perivale on 15 January 1991

In the course of the Report, any particular company (or employee of any particular company) in this Group, will be denoted by 'Monarch' for the sake of convenience, unless otherwise stated.

1.05 In 1990 Guardian Royal Exchange (GRE), a UK company, became joint venture partner with Monarch and they entered into a complex arrangement to develop the Cherrywood lands and to optimise their profitability. GRE and Monarch Properties Ltd (MPL) had been partners in the development of The Square shopping centre in Tallaght. In December 1990, Cherrywood Developments (previously Perivale) granted a lease of the lands to Cherrywood Properties Ltd. Also in December 1990, the two beneficial owners of the lands, Mr Philip Monahan and Monarch Properties (MPL), issued 6 million new shares in Cherrywood Developments to GRE, subject to a lease in favour of Cherrywood Properties.¹ In effect, GRE had the controlling interest in Cherrywood Developments (the property owning company) while Monarch had the controlling interest in Cherrywood Properties.

1.06 Monarch and GRE² had in place an agreement whereby each would share equally the development costs associated with the development of the Cherrywood lands. This agreement provided that the development project manager was MPSL (Monarch Property Services Ltd) a Monarch company. The agreement operated in practice on the basis that Monarch, having discharged the necessary expenditure, would then proceed to recoup half of that expenditure from GRE.

1.07 In 1994, Monarch and its joint venture partners sold approximately 94 acres of the Cherrywood lands to William Neville & Sons for IR£7.6m. In September 1997 Monarch sold its Cherrywood lands to Dunloe Ewart Plc.

1.08 Between 1989, when Monarch acquired the lands, and 1997, when the bulk of the Cherrywood lands were sold, the lands' zoning was altered significantly. This rezoning was confirmed in 1998, the zoning having been changed from low-density residential, agricultural and amenity to higher density residential for one portion, the other portion being zoned partly for a district centre (including a generous retail element), and partly for a science and technology park.

MONARCH'S DEVELOPMENT OBJECTIVES

2.01 Monarch acquired the Cherrywood lands during the review period of the 1983 Dublin County Development Plan. As part of this review, between 1989 and 1990, Council officials (the Development Coordinating Committee) were engaged in preparing a report and maps which would comprise the Draft Development Plan for the Carrickmines Valley.

2.02 The Tribunal was satisfied that Monarch's main objective from the outset was that all of its lands would be rezoned for development, and more particularly, that the density levels on all its residentially zoned lands would be increased, in order to maximise the commercial value of the lands. Monarch's other objective, from 1989, was to progress the construction of the sewage system that had been proposed for the Carrickmines Valley.

¹ GRE later declared that it held 3 million of these shares in trust for another UK company, Aquis Estates Ltd (Aquis). On 22 December 1992, Perivale Ltd, then in liquidation, transferred its title to the lands to, inter alia, Aquis and GRE.

²The term 'Cherrywood project' is used in this module to describe the Monarch-driven project to rezone the Cherrywood lands for development in the course of the review of the development plans of 1983 and 1993 by Dublin and Dún Laoghaire Rathdown County Councils, insofar as those reviews related to the lands in the Carrickmines Valley.

2.03 In 1989, Monarch retained the services of Mr Fergal MacCabe, an established architect and town planner, in connection with the Monarch lands. Mr MacCabe made two submissions to the Council on behalf of Monarch in 1989, both supporting residential development on the site, one on 3 July and the other on 30 November. In his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr MacCabe stated that the potential increase in the lands' residential density zoning, and the potential rezoning for development of the lands zoned B (agriculture) and G (amenity) depended on two key factors: the proposed line of the South Eastern Motorway (the SEM line) and the drainage of the lands.

2.04 In 1989, Mr MacCabe understood that Dublin County Council envisaged that development in the Carrickmines Valley would be restricted to lands east/north of the proposed South Eastern Motorway line. A substantial portion of Monarch's newly acquired lands was located to the south-west of the proposed line and was bisected by it. It was therefore in Monarch's interests that the line be altered to leave most or all of Monarch's lands east/north of the line, without bisecting or traversing the lands.

2.05 Monarch's strategy, probably largely devised and co-ordinated by Mr Philip Monahan, was three-pronged, and entailed the following:

- 1) Approaches were to be made at the highest political level, particularly in relation to the location of the SEM line and the completion of the Carrickmines Valley sewage system.
- 2) Contact was to be made and maintained between Monarch personnel and Dublin County Council officials in order to ensure early input into the Dublin County Development Plan insofar as it related to the Carrickmines Valley.
- 3) An extensive lobbying campaign of elected councillors was to be undertaken, to gain their support for Monarch's zoning proposals, including maximum residential density levels.

THE MONARCH EXECUTIVES

2.06 The following executives of Monarch were involved, to a greater or lesser extent, in the Cherrywood project. All, with the exception of Mr Philip Monahan, gave sworn evidence to the Tribunal in the course of the module.

- Mr Philip Monahan was the founder and main shareholder of the Monarch Group. He died on 3 August 2003. Mr Monahan identified the Cherrywood lands for purchase by Monarch in 1989, and spearheaded the Cherrywood project, until the lands were sold on to a third party in 1997.
- Mr Richard Lynn was the Cherrywood project's coordinator from approximately May/June 1989 to 1997. He was specifically engaged by Mr Monahan in 1989 for the Cherrywood project at the time that Monarch purchased the Cherrywood lands. Prior to his employment by Monarch, Mr Lynn was the Town Clerk in Dundalk, and in that capacity he worked with Monarch in relation to its Dundalk Shopping Centre development.
- Mr Dominic Glennane is a chartered accountant. He was financial director of the Monarch Group between 1991 and 1997 and held a 20 per cent shareholding in the Group.
- Mr Eddie Sweeney is a quantity surveyor. He was an employee of the Monarch Group from May 1974 until 1996 when he left Monarch. He was technical director and team leader for the Cherrywood project, working directly under Mr Monahan and Mr Glennane.
- Mr Noel Murray was the marketing director of the Monarch Group.
- Mr Pat Lafferty was chief architect for the Group.
- Mr Philip Reilly was the Group's development director and shopping centre manager.
- Mr Paul Monahan is Mr Philip Monahan's son, and is senior executive of the Monarch Group. He was appointed managing director of Monarch Properties (MPL) in 2001, and gradually took over management of the Monarch Group between 2001 and 2003, becoming senior executive of the Group in 2003.

THE EARLY STAGES OF MONARCH'S CAMPAIGN TO REZONE CHERRYWOOD

APPROACHES MADE AT SENIOR POLITICAL LEVEL

3.01 Contemporaneous documentation provided to the Tribunal from the Department of the Environment and Local Government revealed that on 24 May 1989 (some 12 days following Monarch's agreement to buy the Cherrywood lands), a meeting took place between Mr Philip Monahan and Mr Pádraig Flynn, then Minister for the Environment. On 1 May 1989, the Department of the Environment had granted Dublin County Council preliminary approval for the Carrickmines Valley sewage system. Based on an internal County Council memorandum of a meeting on 6 June 1989, this decision appears to have caused some surprise to senior County Council engineers.

3.02 In his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Flynn said he had no recollection of discussing the Carrickmines sewage system with Mr Monahan. However, having regard to the evidence given to the Tribunal by Mr Monahan's then secretary, Ms Ann Gosling, who described Mr Monahan as a man who was prepared to raise at both national and local political level any issue that might affect his business interests, the Tribunal believed it likely that the Carrickmines sewage system was discussed by Mr Monahan and Mr Flynn.

3.03 It was also likely that, prior to his meeting with Mr Monahan on 24 May 1989 Mr Flynn was fully briefed by his department about Monarch's acquisition of the Cherrywood lands. Documentation discovered to the Tribunal by the Department of the Environment revealed that by 12 May 1989 a press cutting relating to the acquisition of the Cherrywood lands had been placed in the departmental file.

3.04 Mr Flynn's ministerial diaries indicated that meetings took place between him and Mr Monahan on 22 November 1989 and 12 February 1991. Although Mr Flynn claimed to have no recollection of what was discussed at these meetings, the Tribunal believed it likely that part, at least, of those discussions related to the Carrickmines sewage system and the proposed SEM line.

3.05 At an internal Monarch meeting on 24 January 1990, it was noted that Mr Eddie Sweeney was in a position to advise his Monarch colleagues that a political decision had been made to align the motorway on the western edge of the Monarch lands. The Tribunal believed it likely that the source of Mr Sweeney's knowledge was a briefing by Mr Monahan on the discussion he had had with Mr Flynn approximately two months earlier.

3.06 Another internal Monarch document noted that at a Monarch meeting on 3 May 1990, Mr MacCabe indicated that Mr Sweeney and the developer Mr Michael Cotter³ intended to meet the Minister to impress on him the need for the work on the Carrickmines Valley sewage system to begin as soon as possible. Mr Sweeney believed that the intended meeting did not take place; Mr Flynn could not recall whether or not it had taken place.

³ Mr Cotter was associated with another development company, Park Developments, which was also keen to see the commencement of the Carrickmines sewage scheme.

3.07 An internal Monarch memorandum of 5 July 1990 noted that Mr Lynn recommended that contact be made at ministerial level to ascertain the up-to-date position in relation to the proposed SEM line.

3.08 Both Mr Lynn and Mr Sweeney denied having any knowledge or recollection of meetings between Mr Monahan and Mr Flynn, or of the content of such meetings. The Tribunal found their evidence on this issue to be lacking in credibility.

3.09 Mr Flynn's ministerial diary for the year 1990 did not record any meeting between himself and Mr Monahan, and Mr Flynn was unable to produce his personal diary for that year. Mr Flynn told the Tribunal that he had no recollection of meeting representatives of Monarch in 1990. However, documentation provided by the Department of the Environment suggested that a meeting between Mr Monahan and Mr Flynn was certainly expected in December 1990.

3.10 In December 1990 the Water and Sanitary Services Section of the Department was in written communication with the Planning and Administrative Division about the Carrickmines Valley sewer. A footnote to this internal document (dated 6 December 1990) referred to the material required for 'meeting of P. Monaghan and Minister in relation to the rezoning of land.' The Tribunal was satisfied that the reference was to Mr Philip Monahan.

3.11 This footnote suggested that the rezoning of the land was a topic of discussion between Mr Monahan and Mr Flynn. It appeared to contradict Mr Flynn's assertion that he would not have had reason to discuss the rezoning of the land because as the Minister he could not have had any role in the review of the Development Plan.

3.12 The Tribunal was unable to determine that zoning per se was the only subject likely to have been discussed by Mr Monahan and Mr Flynn. However, the Tribunal was satisfied that the obstacles that stood between Mr Monahan and his zoning ambitions for the Cherrywood lands, namely that the proposed SEM line bisected his lands, and the slow progress, as he perceived it, of the development of the Carrickmines sewer, were matters in respect of which he, at the very least, sought ministerial intervention between 1989 and 1991.

CONTACT WITH OFFICIALS OF DUBLIN COUNTY COUNCIL

3.13 At the same time as Monarch was making contact at ministerial level, and within weeks of its agreement to acquire the Cherrywood lands, Monarch was also in contact with Council officials involved in the preparation of the Draft

Development Plan for the Carrickmines Valley. Mr MacCabe's 3 July 1989 submission to the Council on behalf of Monarch indicated Monarch's desire that in the then forthcoming review of the 1983 County Development Plan its lands be considered for development at a density not exceeding 10 houses per acre. Meetings took place between representatives of Monarch and officials of Dublin County Council on 29 August and 22 September 1989.

3.14 These meetings were dominated by the issue of the SEM line. Subsequent to these meetings, Mr MacCabe submitted to the County Council a draft structural plan depicting Monarch's preferred options for the line's location. On 27 November 1989 Mr MacCabe sent a report prepared by himself, Dr Brian Meehan (planning consultant), and Muir Associates (consulting engineers) to the Council. The report suggested how Monarch's lands might be developed, and requested that it be referred on to the various Council technical departments which were preparing the Draft Development Plan for the Carrickmines Valley.

3.15 The minutes of the meeting of the Development and Coordinating Committee of Dublin County Council held on 15 February 1990 referred to a number of outstanding issues relating to the Carrickmines Valley, including the location of the SEM line and the provision and limitation of foul drainage (the sewer).

3.16 On 2 March 1990, Mr MacCabe was in a position to inform his Monarch clients that he had good reason to believe that the line most likely to be selected for the SEM by the Council Planning and Road Section was the westernmost line – which was option B on the draft urban structure map Mr MacCabe had submitted to the County Council in the autumn of 1989.

3.17 The Tribunal believed it likely that Mr Monahan was the source of Mr MacCabe's knowledge on this topic. By October 1990 the Council's Development Coordinating Committee's plans for the Carrickmines Valley were in the final stage of preparation.

DUBLIN COUNTY COUNCIL MEETINGS IN 1990 AND 1991

THE SPECIAL MEETINGS OF 18 OCTOBER, 16 NOVEMBER AND 6 DECEMBER 1990

4.01 At a special meeting of the Council held on 18 October 1990, the County Manager presented the planners' zoning proposals for the Carrickmines Valley, which were contained on Map DP90/123.⁴ This plan proposed a new line for the ⁴ See Exhibit 1.

SEM, located below the southern boundary of the Monarch lands in Cherrywood. The 1983 Plan had proposed an SEM line which bisected the Monarch lands.

4.02 The Manager's plan envisaged the entire Carrickmines Valley being zoned either residential or industrial, with development on both sides of the newly proposed line of the SEM. Two district shopping centres were planned, one at Ballyogan and another at Cherrywood. The Manager's report, which stated that services would be available for such development, was based on the Council's commitment to the construction of the Carrickmines Valley sewer. The then Deputy Planning Officer with Dublin County Council, Mr Willie Murray, agreed with Counsel for the Tribunal that the plan provided for on Map DP90/123 was a fairly radical proposal.

4.03 Map DP90/123 provided for the rezoning of almost all of Monarch's lands. It provided for a portion to be zoned for a town centre, and a portion to be zoned for industrial use adjacent to the town centre. It provided for a distributor road feeding into the newly proposed SEM, and for the balance of its lands (save for a small area zoned amenity in the vicinity of Tully Church) to be zoned for normal density residential use. In effect, Map DP90/123 substantially adopted almost the entire of the Monarch submission made to the County Council in November 1989.

4.04 With the publication in October 1990 of Map DP90/123, Monarch was satisfied, from the point of view of the future development prospects of its Cherrywood lands, with the zoning and residential density levels envisaged and proposed by the Manager and his planners.

4.05 At the meeting on 18 October 1990, Map DP90/123 was the subject of discussion and questioning by the councillors in relation to a number of topics, including whether the proposed plan was premature, whether it conflicted with the objective proposed for the development of the western towns, whether an area of high amenity would be prejudiced by the plan, whether the zoning being proposed was necessary, and whether the scale of the proposal was justified. This discussion was continued at a further meeting of Dublin County Council on 16 November 1990, on this occasion with the aid of overhead slides showing the existing and proposed zonings for the Carrickmines Valley.

4.06 At a special meeting of the Council held on 6 December 1990, councillors voted on the proposals based on Map DP 90/123. A motion proposed by Cllr E. McDonald and seconded by Cllr Betty Coffey that development be limited to the eastern side of the SEM was passed by 21 votes to 8 with 6 abstentions.

4.07 The passing of this motion resulted in a direction to the planners to prepare new maps outlining the revised proposals for the Carrickmines area. These maps (Maps 26 and 27) were duly produced. Monarch's lands were on Map 27.

THE SPECIAL MEETING OF 18 JANUARY 1991

4.08 The revised proposals were effectively agreed at a Council special meeting on 18 January 1991. On the newly prepared Map 27, the proposed line of the SEM remained south-west of the boundary of Monarch's Cherrywood lands. Monarch's lands therefore remained within the landtake in the Carrickmines Valley earmarked by the Council planners for rezoning and development. All of the zonings which had been designated on Map DP90/123 in relation to Monarch's lands were continued on Map 27.

4.09 The development proposals for lands south-west of the proposed SEM line were removed and the proposal for industrial development around the Carrickmines interchange on the proposed SEM was reduced substantially. These changes did not affect the Monarch lands.

4.10 The Tribunal was satisfied that Monarch was happy with Map 27. Although Map DP90/123 had been modified in terms of the areas to be zoned within the Carrickmines Valley as a whole, it nonetheless included almost the whole of Monarch's landtake in Cherrywood in its rezoning and residential density level provisions. Most importantly, from Monarch's point of view, the proposed line of the SEM remained below the southern boundary of Monarch's lands.

4.11 Mr Lynn told the Tribunal that Monarch had expected that the first public display of the Dublin County Draft Development Plan would include this map. However, notwithstanding the councillors' general acceptance of the map the position changed in May 1991.

THE SPECIAL MEETING OF 24 MAY 1991

4.12 At a special meeting of the Council held on 24 May 1991 the Manager provided the councillors with three options for the proposed first display of the 1991 Draft Development Plan:

- 1) The 1983 map to remain unchanged except for updating to take account of developments to date and adjustments of objectives (Map DP90/129A) or,
- 2) The adoption of Map DP90/123 or,

3) Maps 26 and 27 to be adopted in line with the councillors' agreement on 18 January 1991.

4.13 Had a vote been taken and supported by the councillors in respect of either Option 2 or Option 3 on 24 May 1991, Monarch's ambitions for the lands at Cherrywood (as set out in the November 1989 submission) would have been largely on track. Monarch would have succeeded in having its proposals incorporated in the first display of the 1991 Draft Development Plan, with the imprimatur of the Manager and the councillors.

4.14 However, Option 1 was approved by the councillors and it was agreed that the 1991 Draft Development Plan would identify the Carrickmines/Cherrywood lands as: '[in] the 1983 Development Plan unchanged except for updating to take account of the developments to date and adjustments of objectives—Drawing number DP 90/129A refers.'

4.15 The Tribunal was satisfied that, as a result of that vote, Monarch was faced in May 1991 with the reality that the councillors, as opposed to the Manager and his planners, were advocating the retention of the 1983 zonings, i.e., agriculture, high amenity and residential (with housing density levels limited to 1 house per acre) as good planning for its lands at Cherrywood.

4.16 Mr Lynn described the outcome of the 24 May 1991 meeting as returning Monarch 'back to square one', insofar as its development ambitions were concerned. Mr Lynn told the Tribunal that he believed the result on 24 May 1991 represented the councillors' desire to retain the status quo (the 1983 zonings) in respect of the Carrickmines Valley lands until after the Local Elections which were scheduled for 27 June 1991.

4.17 The Tribunal was satisfied that within six days of the vote of 24 May 1991, Monarch began an intensive lobbying campaign of councillors to support its rezoning objectives. The Tribunal was satisfied that within Monarch there was a belief or perception that the support of certain councillors could be secured in exchange for financial payments, and that a decision was made by the board of Monarch Property Services Ltd (MPSL) in 1991 to make payments to councillors in advance of the Local Elections which were held in June. It began a series of payments to a number of identified candidates standing in the June 1991 Local Elections.⁵

PUBLIC DISPLAY OF 1991 DRAFT DEVELOPMENT PLAN

4.18 The Draft Development Plan, as shown on Map DP90/129A (Option 1), supported by the majority of the councillors on 24 May 1991, went on public display between 2 September and 3 December 1991. The proposals were transposed on to Maps 26 and 27. Map 27 included the Monarch lands.

4.19 Monarch had in fact gained in respect of its residentially zoned lands (residential density had increased from 1 to 4 houses per acre on piped sewage, the Manager having taken into consideration the advent of the sewer). However, the overall proposed zonings for Monarch's lands at Cherrywood in the 1991 Draft Plan were far removed from what it had envisaged in its 1989 submission, and indeed from what had been proposed in Map DP90/123 and on Map 27, as produced in January 1991.

4.20 On 2 December 1991, a written submission from Monarch was received by Dublin County Council. The submission proposed that the bulk of Monarch's lands be zoned residential at normal development density on an Area Action Plan, with provision for a district centre.⁶

4.21 There was considerable public opposition in the Cherrywood area to Monarch's plans. Following the written submission of December 1991, and an oral submission by Monarch to the Council on 5 March 1992, the Cherrywood Residents Association wrote to the Council objecting to the proposals, arguing that they were speculative, and against the common good.

MONARCH'S LOBBYING CAMPAIGN AND MR BILL O'HERLIHY

5.01 In late 1991, Monarch retained the services of public relations consultant Mr Bill O'Herlihy. Mr O'Herlihy's brief was to assist in altering the climate of opinion within the Carrickmines Valley region which largely opposed Monarch's ambition to rezone lands for development in the area, including increasing the residential density of lands already zoned residential.

5.02 Monarch's choice of Mr O'Herlihy was largely prompted by his known connections with the Fine Gael Party and in particular with Cllr Seán Barrett, then a Fine Gael TD and councillor in the Cherrywood area. Monarch understood Cllr Barrett to be a person of influence in the Cherrywood area and it was concerned with his known opposition to its plans for the Cherrywood lands.

⁶ Mr MacCabe again made an oral as well as a written submission seeking both residential and district centre zoning on these lands.

5.03 Mr O’Herlihy gave detailed evidence to the Tribunal as to his role in Monarch’s campaign. He described how he sought to garner support for the Monarch proposals both with the public and with councillors. His campaign included the preparation of a newsletter for distribution in the Cherrywood area, and the organisation of a number of ‘road shows’ of which 14 took place in the area of Monarch’s lands, as well as meetings at Monarch’s offices in Harcourt Street and in the Royal Dublin Hotel, O’Connell Street, which the public and elected councillors were invited to attend. Those who attended were given the opportunity to examine Monarch’s plans for the Cherrywood lands.

5.04 Mr O’Herlihy told the Tribunal that, while he did not perceive his role primarily as that of a canvasser or lobbyist of councillors, he did see it as his job to ensure councillors’ attendance at the road shows. He was aware, as were the executives of Monarch, that ultimately the fate of Monarch’s development ambitions for its lands in Cherrywood rested with the councillors.

MR O’HERLIHY’S DISCUSSION WITH MR LYNN

5.05 Mr O’Herlihy told the Tribunal about a discussion he had with Mr Lynn on 27 May 1992 in the Royal Dublin Hotel during which Mr Lynn indicated to him that it was necessary to make payments to councillors in order to achieve planning changes. The discussion took place during a break in the scheduled meeting of the County Council on that date, when Monarch’s rezoning proposals were to be the subject of a vote by councillors.

5.06 Mr O’Herlihy said that he had initiated the discussion when he expressed the hope to Mr Lynn that the councillors would recognise the merit of Monarch’s proposals. Mr Lynn had responded that quality and merit had nothing to do with the process and that if someone wanted to obtain a planning change or material contravention it had to be bought. Planning changes and material contraventions were, according to Mr Lynn, worth about IR£50,000 per year to councillors.

5.07 Mr O’Herlihy stated that he had been completely unaware of any practice whereby councillors were paid for their support, or indeed if any such payments had actually been made. Mr O’Herlihy said that it had never been suggested to him that he might be in any way involved in making or arranging such payments on behalf of Monarch, and he stated that he had never been involved in any such activity.

5.08 Mr O’Herlihy told the Tribunal that Mr Lynn advised him that it was the practice to establish a relationship with a ‘lead’ councillor to whom money would be paid, and who would then distribute money to other elected councillors in order to secure support for rezoning or material contravention proposals.

5.09 Mr O’Herlihy also stated that when he asked Mr Lynn whether Monarch had paid money to councillors relating to the Cherrywood project, Mr Lynn informed him that Monarch had paid IR£100,000. Mr O’Herlihy was unsure if Mr Lynn intended this to convey the impression that the IR£100,000 was entirely linked to the Cherrywood project alone. According to Mr O’Herlihy, Mr Lynn also stated that Monarch’s lead councillor was Cllr Don Lydon.

5.10 Mr Lynn denied having any such conversation with Mr O’Herlihy. He denied knowledge of a system which involved payments to councillors. He took issue with the timing and location of the alleged conversation as described by Mr O’Herlihy, and in particular, he denied that on 27 May 1992 he had been at the Royal Dublin Hotel, where Mr O’Herlihy claimed this conversation occurred.

5.11 The Tribunal was satisfied that a discussion did in fact take place between Mr O’Herlihy and Mr Lynn on 27 May 1992 in the Royal Dublin Hotel, and that Mr O’Herlihy’s account of that discussion, and in particular his recollection of the information provided to him by Mr Lynn, was accurate. In particular, the Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Lynn conveyed information to Mr O’Herlihy to the effect that Monarch had paid substantial sums to councillors in an effort to secure support for the rezoning of its Cherrywood lands, and that Mr Lynn informed Mr O’Herlihy that Cllr Don Lydon was the lead councillor involved in this activity as far as Monarch was concerned.

5.12 The Tribunal was conscious of Mr O’Herlihy’s personal discomfort in revealing the details of a private discussion between himself and Mr Lynn, and it accepted that Mr O’Herlihy imparted those details honestly and in good faith, albeit with reluctance, and with the benefit of a clear recollection of the event. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr O’Herlihy recounted accurately and honestly what had been stated to him by Mr Lynn. Moreover, the Tribunal was satisfied, based on the evidence of both Mr O’Herlihy and Mr Lynn, that the two men enjoyed a cordial and professional relationship during the course of Mr O’Herlihy’s tenure as a public relations consultant for Monarch. The Tribunal was also satisfied that Mr O’Herlihy’s retention by Monarch terminated on entirely cordial terms, and that at all relevant times Mr O’Herlihy carried out his functions for Monarch in an entirely proper and professional manner.

5.13 Mr O’Herlihy’s evidence as to his discussion with Mr Lynn on 27 May 1992 was not considered by the Tribunal as direct evidence that Monarch in fact engaged in the practice of making payments to councillors for the purpose of ensuring their support for the rezoning of its Cherrywood lands, but was simply evidence that a discussion on that particular topic had taken place.

5.14 However, following consideration of the evidence of a number of Monarch witnesses and of documentation discovered to the Tribunal by Monarch-related companies, the Tribunal was satisfied that by May 1992, Monarch had an established record of expenditures on politicians and councillors as part of its pursuit of its Cherrywood lands rezoning.

5.15 At the time of the discussions between Mr O’Herlihy and Mr Lynn on 27 May 1992, Monarch Property Services Limited had recorded in its YTD (year to date) general ledger report fiscal year 1992, under the heading ‘General Promotion’, expenditures of IR£23,450, which was transferred from the ‘Sponsorship’ and ‘Promotion’ accounts in the same ledger, and there identified by initials or by name as being paid to candidates in the June 1991 Local Election. Moreover, in communications with its business partner GRE (April 1992), under the heading ‘Cherrywood Properties Limited—Draft Development Plan Cashflow Projections’, Monarch had described some IR£22,150 of the IR£23,450 expended on the Local Election candidates as ‘strategy consultancy fees’. In the same communication of 28 April 1992, Monarch also apprised GRE that it was projecting further expenditure by way of ‘strategy consultancy fees’ of IR£10,000 for May 1992 and IR£50,000 for June 1992. In an earlier version of the April 1992 schedule furnished to GRE in March 1992, Monarch had put the figure for future ‘strategy consultancy fees’ at IR£75,000.

5.16 The Tribunal was satisfied that at the time of his discussion with Mr O’Herlihy, Mr Lynn was aware that substantial payments already had been made to identified councillors by Monarch, and he was also aware that Monarch was contemplating and planning further payments to councillors. This matter is dealt with in greater detail later in this chapter.

DUBLIN COUNTY COUNCIL MEETINGS IN 1992

THE SPECIAL MEETING ON 13 MAY 1992

6.01 Dublin County Councillors were advised that any proposals relating to Maps 26 and 27 should be submitted to the Council before 14 April 1992. Eleven motions relating to the Monarch lands were duly submitted. One of these motions was signed by Cllrs Don Lydon and Tom Hand. Mr Lynn told the Tribunal that he drafted this motion in conjunction with Cllr Lydon, and, to a lesser extent, Cllr Hand. That motion in effect sought to adopt Monarch’s December 1991 submission, with some modifications. The most significant modification was a proposal that there be a cap on residential density of 5 houses per acre, (or a total of 956 houses), and a scaled back town centre. This motion was lodged with Dublin County Council on 4 May 1992.⁷

6.02 None of the 11 listed motions was dealt with at the Council special meeting of 13 May 1992. The County Manager submitted a report at that meeting with particular reference to the Carrickmines Valley area. He produced a map, DP92/44, which proposed both motorway (SEM) and zoning changes to the 1991 Draft Development Plan. Mr Willie Murray agreed with the Tribunal that the main thrust of Map DP92/44 was directed towards Monarch's lands.

6.03 The Manager's new proposal was that the lands already zoned residential at a density of 4 houses per acre on piped sewage on the 1991 Draft Plan, should now be zoned A1P. This made provision for a new residential community in accordance with an approved Area Action Plan, at a density not exceeding 4 houses per acre with the provision that necessary community facilities be provided, such as a school, shops, appropriate road systems and open spaces. The Manager proposed that shopping facilities be confined to neighbourhood proportions, that the notional 1983 SEM line be moved further south-west, and that the lands that fell between the 'old' 1983 line and the proposed 'new' 1983 line, previously zoned agriculture, be zoned residential A1P.

6.04 These proposals, as set out in Map DP92/44, showed Monarch's area of residential zoning at A1P as increased and its area of land zoned B (agriculture) as reduced.

6.05 The benefit for Monarch of this proposal was that, once the 1993 Dublin County Development Plan was drawn up, there would be scope for immediate reconsideration of the residential density, allowing for it to be increased in the context of an Area Action Plan. Monarch's position had therefore improved considerably.

6.06 While Map DP92/44 had not taken on board in its entirety Monarch's submission of 2 December 1991, it was nevertheless the case that only Monarch's lands were benefiting from the A1P designation and they were further benefiting by the increase in the area that was to be zoned residential A1P.

6.07 The Tribunal was satisfied that by the time the Manager's proposals were made public in May 1992, Monarch had good reason to be satisfied with them.

⁷ The deadline for motions had been extended.

THE SPECIAL MEETING OF 27 MAY 1992

6.08 Monarch initially envisaged that its December 1991 submission for increased zoning and density would go to a vote in May 1992 via the Lydon/Hand motion. However, the Tribunal accepted Mr Lynn's evidence that, since Map DP92/44 was effectively giving Monarch all it wanted in terms of zoning and increased density levels, a decision was taken by him and Mr Sweeney, prior to the vote on 27 May 1992, to ask Cllr Lydon to propose a motion supporting the Manager's proposals as set out in Map DP92/44.

6.09 The Tribunal believed that Monarch viewed Map DP92/44 as a testing mechanism for what might be achieved within the Council in terms of rezoning and density levels. If it failed, as a watered down version of Monarch's own submission, it was likely that the Lydon/Hand motion, if moved, would also fail.

6.10 At the special meeting of 27 May 1992, the Manager concluded his report in relation to DP92/44. A motion was then proposed by Cllr Lydon, and seconded by Cllr Colm McGrath seeking to have Map DP92/44 adopted and approved by the Council. This proposal was defeated by two votes.

6.11 Following this defeat, the Lydon/Hand motion which had been lodged at Monarch's behest was duly withdrawn. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Lydon withdrew the motion after he consulted Mr Lynn.

6.12 There remained on the Council's agenda a number of other motions referable to the Monarch lands, the majority of which were effectively 'anti-Monarch'. These motions sought, by and large, to restrict residential zoning on Monarch's lands to 1 house per acre. At this stage, Monarch's position was that, at best, it might retain the 4 houses per acre zoning proposal contained in the 1991 Draft Plan. With the defeat of several of the 'anti-Monarch' motions, this outcome appeared likely.

6.13 There then followed a vote on a motion proposed by Cllrs Eamon Gilmore (DL) and Denis O'Callaghan (DL) which sought a C (district centre) zoning for lands in the Ballybrack/Loughlinstown area of the Carrickmines Valley, the bulk of which were owned by Monarch. Cllrs Gilmore and O'Callaghan gave evidence that the reason for their motion was the need to generate employment in the area. According to Cllr Gilmore, community leaders in the Loughlinstown/Ballybrack areas had sought such development. The two councillors decided its location having due regard to the provision of the Wyattville junction and the old Harcourt Street Railway line. According to Cllr Gilmore, the location did not arise as a consequence of any negotiations with Monarch representatives. The Tribunal was satisfied to accept Cllr Gilmore's evidence in this regard.

6.14 The Gilmore/O'Callaghan proposal for a district centre was passed by 34 votes to 22 with 8 abstentions. The result was that lands largely in Monarch's ownership were zoned district centre.

6.15 After a further Gilmore/O'Callaghan motion seeking to restrict the number of units that might be developed on zoned land was defeated, the final motion on the Council's agenda was then put to a vote.

THE BARRETT/DOCKRELL MOTION

6.16 This motion, signed by Cllr Seán Barrett, proposed by him and seconded by Cllr J. H. Dockrell, was the last 'anti-Monarch' motion; like the previous such motions it sought to restrict residential density levels on the lands at Cherrywood (lands stretching from Glenamuck Road to Cherrywood Road, Loughlinstown) to 1 house per acre. The motion was passed by 36 votes to 24 with no abstentions. These changes were referred to as Changes 3, 4 (A) and 4 (B) on Map 27 of the 1993 Amendments to the 1991 Draft Development Plan which duly went on public display between 1 July and 4 August 1993.

6.17 The success of the Barrett/Dockrell motion meant that lands (including Monarch lands) which had been zoned in the first public display map at a density of 4 houses per acre on piped sewage were now to go to a second public display zoned A (residential) at a density of 1 house per acre. This was a substantial setback for Monarch's rezoning ambitions.

6.18 By this stage Monarch's position was no better than it had been when the Development Plan review began. Its only gain was the happenstance that the district centre zoning achieved with the success of the Gilmore/O'Callaghan motion included Monarch-owned lands.

6.19 The Tribunal was satisfied that the defeat of the Manager's proposal DP92/44 and the subsequent success of the Barrett/Dockrell motion, came as a surprise to Monarch. Given that the Manager had taken on board Monarch's December 1991 submission and had incorporated it in DP92/44, Monarch had had every reason for confidence in the run up to the May 1992 vote. Moreover, the Tribunal was satisfied that Monarch had been hopeful of wide-ranging councillor support given that two senior councillors, one Fianna Fáil and one Fine Gael (Cllrs Lydon and Hand respectively) were signatories to its motion.

6.20 Mr Lynn satisfied the Tribunal that he had established a close relationship with Cllrs Lydon and Hand over the course of the years 1991 and 1992. Furthermore (according to press reports), when Cllr Lydon, as directed by Monarch, spoke in support of the Manager's proposal DP92/44 he made a passionate case for the rezoning of the Monarch lands. Cllr Lydon's close relationship with Mr Lynn/Monarch was further evidenced by his efforts, after the vote held on 27 May 1992, to cast doubt on the legality and procedural correctness of the vote that had been taken on the Barrett/Dockrell motion, a move that proved unsuccessful.

6.21 The Tribunal was satisfied that, following the vote on 27 May 1992, Monarch was left in an invidious position. It had vigorously campaigned at senior political, county councillor and council official level, and much of its campaigning had yielded results. (For example, the proposed SEM line was no longer destined to bisect its lands, thereby allowing potential for further rezonings; the Carrickmines sewer was to be constructed, thereby allowing for increased residential density levels). Yet, after May 1992, it could not advance its zoning ambitions without a reversal of the effects of the Barrett/Dockrell motion.

6.22 The Tribunal was satisfied that, in anticipation of such a future vote, Monarch intensified its lobbying campaign, which it had begun in 1991, to persuade councillors to vote in sufficient numbers to reverse the effects of the Barrett/Dockrell motion. The Tribunal believed that much of Monarch's post-May 1992 campaign was centred on ensuring that Monarch would be perceived by councillors as politically supportive of them and as being generous in its financial support of certain county councilors.

MONARCH'S REZONING CAMPAIGN FROM MID 1992 TO END 1993

7.01 The Tribunal was satisfied that, after May 1992, Monarch personnel closely connected with its rezoning efforts understood that there would be only one further opportunity, before the new Development Plan was finalised, for Monarch to increase the density levels on its residentially zoned lands. This opportunity would arise in 1993 at the end of the Draft Development Plan's second statutory public display period.

7.02 Immediately after the May 1992 vote, Monarch continued to be hopeful that it might be able to advance the case for the rezoning of its B (agriculture) zoned lands. Ultimately it desisted from making a submission in this regard to the Council, after being informed by the Council that legal advice had been received to the effect that such a submission could not be made at that stage of the review process.

7.03 Accordingly, the Tribunal was satisfied that, by and large, the focus of Monarch's efforts in late 1992 and in 1993 was on how to undo the changes made to the density levels on its residentially zoned lands as a result of the passing of the Barrett/Dockrell motion. Equally, Monarch wished to ensure that the part of its land zoned C (district centre) as a result of the success of the Gilmore/O'Callaghan motion would retain that zoning.

7.04 The General Election in November 1992 (and the linked Seanad Election in January 1993) presented Monarch with the opportunity to contribute generously towards the election expenses of 22 councillors (as well as four national politicians). Some IR£22,450 was paid to identified councillors over a two to three month period for that stated purpose.

7.05 In March 1993, in expectation of a further round of Council meetings in the course of the continued review of the Development Plan, and more particularly that part of the plan relating to the Cherrywood area, and the need to lobby councillors for support, Monarch retained Mr Frank Dunlop's services.

MR FRANK DUNLOP'S RETENTION

8.01 Mr Dunlop's services were recruited by Monarch in March 1993 at a meeting on 8 or 9 March between him and Mr Sweeney (probably at Monarch's Harcourt Street offices in Dublin).⁸ The decision to engage Mr Dunlop was made on the recommendation of Mr Liam Lawlor TD.

8.02 Mr Dunlop was engaged in particular to lobby elected members of Dublin County Council to support the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands. At the time of his retention, Mr Dunlop was well established as a lobbyist serving the rezoning aspirations of a number of developers/landowners in the course of the review of the Dublin County Development Plan.

8.03 At that time, Monarch was anxious to reverse the setback to the Cherrywood project in consequence of the success of the Barrett/Dockrell motion on 27 May 1992. Monarch was aware that there would be an opportunity to do so later in 1993, following the second public display of the 1993 Draft Development Plan. The Tribunal was satisfied that this was a critical period for Monarch in that it was its final opportunity to obtain improved zonings and increased residential density in the context of the review of the 1983 Plan. Moreover, success at the confirmation meeting was crucial in terms of Monarch's overall financial position.

⁸ Mr Sweeney believed this meeting took place in Mr Dunlop's offices.

8.04 Unlike many of Mr Dunlop's engagements by other developers/landowners, the Cherrywood rezoning project had already been underway for some time (approximately four years) at the time of his retention by Monarch.

8.05 Mr Dunlop maintained that at the time of his retention in early March 1993, Mr Sweeney knew that, if the rezoning project was to be successful, councillors would (as Mr Dunlop put it) have to be paid money. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that in the course of his first meeting with Mr Sweeney, Mr Sweeney referred to the 'unreliability of politicians', and said to him: 'you have to do what I know you have to do.'

8.06 Mr Dunlop interpreted this as knowledge on Mr Sweeney's part of Mr Dunlop's system of paying councillors for their votes.

8.07 In his October 2000 statement Mr Dunlop made no reference to actual words he attributed to Mr Sweeney. However, his 2003 narrative statement included the following reference to his and Mr Sweeney's initial meeting on 8 March 1993:

The only discussions with regard to payments to politicians was with Mr Sweeney who, at my original meeting with him, indicated that he knew that I would have to make payments to Councillors to achieve success. He said that he knew that this was the only way that things could get done.

8.08 Mr Sweeney rejected Mr Dunlop's assertion that he was aware in March 1993 that councillors would 'have to be' bribed to support the Cherrywood rezoning proposals, and/or that Mr Dunlop intended engaging in corrupt practices to this end. Mr Sweeney told the Tribunal that he had no recollection of uttering the alleged words, or any words or sentiments which might reasonably have indicated such knowledge on his part.

8.09 The Tribunal did not consider that the absence in Mr Dunlop's October 2000 statement of the words he later attributed to Mr Sweeney should be the sole determinant of Mr Dunlop's credibility on this matter. The Tribunal noted in particular that in that statement, Mr Dunlop had indicated by means of an asterisk in that section of this statement dealing with Cherrywood that Monarch knew of his corrupt activities.

8.10 At the time of Monarch's retention of Mr Dunlop on 9 March 1993, it had made payments, stated to be 'political contributions' to TDs and councillors amounting to approximately IR£59,100, and described in its books as the Cherrywood cost, according to the documentation provided to the Tribunal by Monarch.

DID MR SWEENEY UTTER THE WORDS ATTRIBUTED TO HIM BY MR DUNLOP?

8.11 The Tribunal was satisfied on the balance of probability that the words 'you have to do what I know you have to do' or similar were uttered by Mr Sweeney.

8.12 Although these words were capable of being given an entirely innocent interpretation, as Mr Dunlop acknowledged in reply to Counsel for Mr Sweeney, Mr Dunlop's evidence was that he did not apply any such innocent interpretation to these words when they were uttered by Mr Sweeney.

8.13 The Tribunal was satisfied on the balance of probability that Mr Sweeney conveyed, in words he spoke to Mr Dunlop, that he knew that Mr Dunlop would have to make payments to councillors, and that he approved of that action.

8.14 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop was retained by Monarch in the knowledge that as part of his lobbying function it was likely he would pay money to certain councillors in return for their support. Factors which led the Tribunal to this conclusion included:

- 1) The nature of the financial arrangements entered into between Monarch and Mr Dunlop, particularly the manner in which a payment of IR£15,000 was made to him on 2 November 1993⁹,
- 2) The culture and attitude towards rezoning which, the Tribunal was satisfied, existed within Monarch by 1993 and thereafter, as evidenced by the Tribunal's findings in relation to the Lynn/O'Herlihy issue, and, as evidenced by findings the Tribunal made regarding substantial cash expenditure by Monarch in the years 1992 to 1996, details of which are dealt with elsewhere in this chapter.

MR DUNLOP'S ONGOING DEALINGS WITH MONARCH PERSONNEL AFTER HIS INITIAL RECRUITMENT

8.15 Mr Dunlop was introduced to Mr Lynn and Mr Reilly as a Monarch lobbyist, on 9 March, the day after his meeting with Mr Sweeney. Mr Dunlop maintained that Mr Lynn resented his (Mr Dunlop's) appointment as a lobbyist.

⁹ This matter is dealt with later in this chapter.

8.16 Despite Mr Lynn's denials of any significant contact with Mr Dunlop prior to this meeting, the Tribunal was satisfied that they would have met at regular intervals at special meetings of Dublin County Council, and that, as described by Mr Dunlop, discussions in a general sense would have taken place as to the progress or otherwise of the rezoning project.

8.17 The Tribunal was further satisfied that at the 9 March meeting with Mr Lynn and Mr Reilly the following matters were discussed:

- 1) Monarch's objective to reverse the consequences of the successful Barrett/Dockrell motion of 27 May 1992 in terms of residential density.
- 2) Monarch's objective to retain the C (district centre) zoning that had been achieved on its lands by reason of the successful Gilmore/O'Callaghan motion of 27 May 1992.
- 3) The extent of the political contacts made to date by Mr Lynn and Mr Reilly in Dublin County Council.
- 4) The manner in which the lobbying of councillors would be divided between Mr Dunlop and the Monarch executives Mr Lynn, Mr Reilly, Mr Sweeney and Mr Murray.

8.18 There was a dispute between Monarch and Mr Dunlop as to the extent of the contact that he had with Monarch personnel after his appointment. However, the Tribunal was satisfied, on the basis of Mr Dunlop's diary entries and telephone records (maintained by his secretary) that substantial contact did occur within the relevant period.

8.19 Mr Lynn claimed in evidence that he felt uneasy during Mr Dunlop's tenure. He maintained that Mr Dunlop had done no work for Monarch, that he was difficult to contact, and that when he was contacted he simply picked Mr Lynn's brains in relation to what contact he had established with various members of the County Council. Mr Lynn told the Tribunal he communicated his disquiet about Mr Dunlop to Mr Sweeney, the project leader. The Tribunal did not, however, consider that any such disquiet existed on the part of Mr Lynn, or indeed on the part of any other Monarch personnel. The Tribunal was fortified in this conclusion by the fact that between March and December 1993 Monarch personnel authorised substantial sums of money for payment to Mr Dunlop.

8.20 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that comments made to him by Mr Lynn subsequent to his retention by Monarch led him to believe that Monarch itself was engaged in payments of money to elected councillors. Mr Dunlop recalled references by Mr Lynn to councillors costing too much, and getting greedy. He specifically recalled Mr Lynn stating to him on one occasion: 'You would think these idiots would get their act together, there is so much money being spent on them.'

8.21 Mr Lynn roundly rejected Mr Dunlop's evidence that he had expressed such sentiments.

8.22 The Tribunal believed it likely that Mr Lynn did indeed comment to Mr Dunlop that Monarch was making payments to elected councillors in connection with the review of the Development Plan. Having regard to the Tribunal's finding that Mr Lynn reported similar activity to Mr O'Herlihy in May 1992,¹⁰ it was understandable that such candour would likewise have been a feature of discussions between himself and Mr Dunlop.

DUBLIN COUNTY COUNCIL MEETINGS IN 1993

THE SECOND PUBLIC DISPLAY OF THE DRAFT DEVELOPMENT PLAN IN JULY/AUGUST 1993

9.01 The Draft Development Plan, which included the lands in Carrickmines Valley, went on public display for the second time between 1 July and 4 August 1993. The lands, including the Monarch lands, that had been zoned residential in the 1991 Plan at a density of 4 houses per acre (10 houses per hectare) on piped sewage, were now zoned at a density of 1 house per acre (2 houses per hectare). Lands, including Monarch's lands, previously zoned agriculture and residential on the 1991 Plan, were now zoned for a district centre. Monarch's objective was to alter the residential density levels from 1 to 4 houses per acre, and to retain the district centre zoning. During the display period, Mr MacCabe made recommendations on behalf of Monarch and its partner GRE in respect of Change 3 (residential density).

9.02 Following the display period, the Manager issued a report on the Cherrywood area, in which he proposed a return to residential density of 4 houses per acre (10 houses per hectare) in respect of all the lands affected by the Barrett/Dockrell motion.

¹⁰ See section on Mr O'Herlihy.

9.03 In advance of the next special meeting dealing with the Cherrywood lands, in November 1993, the Council received a number of motions, including one in the names of Cllrs D. Marren, L. Lohan, Betty Coffey, Liam T. Cosgrave and Ann Ormonde. This motion sought to increase the density of the residentially zoned lands to 4 houses per acre (10 houses per hectare), in respect only of the Monarch-owned lands. (The Manager's recommendations, on the other hand, proposed a similar outcome, but in respect of a greater area of land, which included the Monarch lands). The same councillors also sought to retain the district centre zoning which had been achieved on 27 May 1992, but on the basis that the retail element would be limited to neighbourhood size.

THE SPECIAL MEETINGS OF 3 AND 11 NOVEMBER 1993

9.04 The proposed changes on Map 27 were considered at special meetings of the Council held on 3 and 11 November 1993. Although Map 27 was on the agenda for the meeting on 3 November 1993, the motions concerning it were not finally considered by the councillors until 11 November 1993. The 3 November 1993 meeting, insofar as it related to the Carrickmines valley, was taken up with the Manager outlining his report to the members, and with a motion in the names of Cllrs F. Smith, F. Buckley and S. Misteil which sought to confirm Change 3 on Map 27, i.e. to retain the residential density on lands (including lands owned by Monarch) at 1 house per acre (2 houses per hectare).

9.05 The Smith/Buckley/Misteil motion was the first substantive motion put to a vote on 11 November 1993. This motion was defeated with 26 votes for and 44 against. Likewise, a motion in similar terms by Cllrs Gilmore and O'Callaghan seeking to confirm Change 3 and requesting an early Variation Plan for Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown¹¹ was defeated with 26 councillors voting for and 44 against. Subsequently, a motion proposed by Cllr D. Marren and seconded by Cllr Betty Coffey resolving to accept the Manager's recommendation in relation to Change 3 by deleting the 1993 amendments in respect of those lands outlined in red on an accompanying map (the Monarch lands only), with the balance of the lands to remain at 2 houses per hectare was passed by 44 votes to 27.

9.06 As a result of this vote, the residential density of 4 houses per acre (10 houses per hectare) was reinstated on Monarch's lands, while the balance of the lands (not owned by Monarch) which had been affected by Change 3 remained zoned residential at a density of 1 house per acre (2 houses per hectare).

¹¹On 1 January 1994 Dublin County Council was broken into three local authority areas, of which one was Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council (within whose functional area the Cherrywood lands lay).

9.07 A further motion by Cllrs Smith and Misteil to have a portion of the lands which had been zoned C (district centre) on 27 May 1992 revert to their agricultural zoning was unsuccessful.

9.08 The final motion relevant to Monarch taken on 11 November 1993 was proposed by Cllr Marren and seconded by Cllr Coffey. It sought to confirm the C (district centre) zoning on Monarch's lands while limiting the retail element to neighbourhood centre size (i.e. to confirm Changes 4 (A) and 4 (B), from B (agriculture) and A (residential) to C (town and district centre) having regard to the Manager's recommendation to limit the retail element to neighbourhood centre size only. This motion was passed by 46 votes to 4, with 12 abstentions.

9.09 At the conclusion of the special meeting on 11 November 1993 Monarch had achieved the objectives it had set itself in the wake of the 27 May 1992 vote: it had retained the district centre zoning for its lands, albeit with the retail element restricted to neighbourhood size, and, more importantly from its perspective, it had succeeded in having density levels of 4 houses to the acre reinstated on its lands zoned residential.

9.10 This result was formally reflected when the Dublin County Development Plan was adopted on 10 December 1993. The Plan showed the lands contained in Map 27 with the following zonings:

- 1) Portion of Monarch's lands zoned for residential use at a density of 4 houses per acre (10 houses per hectare) with piped sewerage.
- 2) Adjoining lands, not owned by Monarch, returned to their existing residential zoning, at a density of 1 house per acre.
- 3) Portion of Monarch's lands zoned agricultural.
- 4) Portion of Monarch's lands zoned for town and district centre with the retail element restricted to neighbourhood centre size.

MONARCH'S REZONING CAMPAIGN IN 1994 AND 1995

10.01 Although the development potential of Monarch's lands in Cherrywood was much improved as a consequence of the adoption of the Development Plan on 10 December 1993, approximately 67 acres of its approximately 236 acres were still zoned agricultural.

10.02 The Area Action Plan envisaged in the A1 zoning, following the break-up of the large area covered by Dublin County Council and the establishment of three new councils, and in particular the establishment of Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council (within whose functional area the Cherrywood lands lay) on 1

January 1994, presented Monarch with a further opportunity to have all or a portion of its remaining lands rezoned for development.

10.03 At a meeting on 6 January 1994, Mr Willie Murray, planning officer for Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council, and Monarch executives Mr Eddie Sweeney and Mr Pat Lafferty discussed the Monarch lands. A record of this meeting revealed that they discussed the concept of an Area Action Plan to be drawn up in respect of lands including Monarch's lands. Both sides appeared at this meeting to agree that the Area Action Plan was the vehicle under which the 'anomaly' of the agriculturally zoned Monarch lands within the Cherrywood landtake could be raised. The record of the meeting noted that Mr Murray suggested to the Monarch representatives that the initiative to have the agricultural lands zoned to residential use could come from either the County Manager or the Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown councillors.

10.04 The draft Area Action Plan report prepared by Mr Richard Cremins (Acting Senior Planner) referred to the 'somewhat anomalous' agricultural zoning that attached to some of Monarch's lands. This report concentrated almost entirely on Monarch's lands. The Manager presented the draft Area Action Plan to the Council's Planning and Tourism Committee on 23 May 1994 but it was agreed to defer consideration to a meeting of the Committee to be held on 29 June 1994.

10.05 It was also agreed at the 23 May meeting to defer further consideration of a motion concerning a science and technology park¹² put forward by Cllr Eamon Gilmore (DL) and Denis O'Callaghan (DL), and the location of such a park.

SPECIAL MEETING 29 JUNE 1994

10.06 On 29 June 1994, at a meeting of Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council, the following deferred Gilmore/O'Callaghan motion was proposed and passed unanimously:

That this Committee welcomes the development of a Science and Technology Park in the Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown area and in order to encourage and facilitate such a development, the Council agrees to review the zoning of the lands at Cherrywood, Loughlinstown which are owned by Monarch Properties.

10.07 Prior to this motion, Monarch had actively canvassed councillors on the concept of a science and technology park on Monarch's lands. Monarch had originally raised the concept with officials of Dublin County Council in 1993. There may have been general agreement that the concept could be raised again by Monarch when Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown Council came into being, although Mr Kevin O'Sullivan doubted that this was the case.

10.08 It was further agreed at the meeting of 29 June that:

- 1) The Council would write to the chairman of a Science and Technology Parks Working Group in the Department of Enterprise and Employment recommending Cherrywood as a suitable location for a science and technology park.
- 2) A delegation of councillors and council officials would meet with two Cabinet Ministers for the Administrative Area.
- 3) Copies of the draft Area Action Plan would be put on public display.

10.09 A working group comprising Cllrs Betty Coffey, Seán Barrett, Larry Butler and Eamon Gilmore was established following this meeting. The group held a number of meetings throughout the summer months of 1994 and was invited by the Minister for Commerce and Technology to meet with the Working Group on Science and Technology Parks within the Department of Enterprise and Employment to present a proposal to establish a science and technology park on lands at Cherrywood.

10.10 On 10 October 1994, a motion signed by Cllrs D. Lydon, R. Conroy and Liam T. Cosgrave was lodged with Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council. This motion sought to direct the County Manager to initiate a Draft Variation of the 1993 Development Plan, (in relation to the Cherrywood area) to provide a science and technology park on a portion of Monarch's lands including a small portion zoned agricultural, and to provide for the residential rezoning of the remainder of those lands at a density of 6 houses per acre. This motion also sought the retention of 18 acres of the district centre zoning already provided for on Monarch's lands.

10.11 The Tribunal was satisfied that this motion was organised entirely at the behest of Mr Richard Lynn.

SPECIAL MEETING 14 NOVEMBER 1994

10.12 At this meeting, the County Manager proposed a Draft Variation of the 1993 County Development Plan (relating to the lands in Cherrywood). This included proposals that a portion of Monarch's agriculturally zoned lands be rezoned for use as a science and technology park, the balance of those agriculturally zoned lands to be rezoned residential on piped sewage at a density of 16 houses per hectare, and that the existing district centre zoning on Monarch's lands be re-sited to lands owned by Monarch north of the Wyattville Road.

10.13 The Manager informed the elected members of ongoing negotiations between his officials and Monarch/GRE in relation to the proposed Council involvement in the science and technology park on Monarch's lands, and the acquisition of an equitable interest by the Council in those lands.

10.14 The Manager's proposals were passed by the elected members by 18 votes to 3 with no abstentions.

10.15 A draft of the proposed variation made at that meeting went on public display between 30 November 1994 and 10 March 1995.

THE SPECIAL MEETING OF 24 APRIL 1995

10.16 At a meeting on 24 April a resolution in terms supplied by the Manager, recommending that the draft variation as proposed be adopted without amendment, was passed by 23 votes to 1. As a result, all of Monarch's lands were zoned for development, including provisions for residential use, a district centre and a science and technology park. Different portions of its lands zoned for residential use had densities of 10 houses per hectare and 16 houses per hectare respectively.

THE 1993 DEVELOPMENT PLAN REVIEW

11.01 The review of the 1993 Development Plan for Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown began in May 1996.¹³ By December 1996, the Manager was proposing that the first public display of the Plan would show Monarch's lands zoned A (residential), E1 (science and technology park) and C (district centre). It was also proposed that the density level restrictions on Monarch's lands be removed.

11.02 There was some opposition within the Council to the Manager's proposal to remove the residential density restrictions. On 4 February 1997 a motion was proposed seeking the re-introduction of the density limitations which had been in the 1993 Plan. A Manager's report in favour of removing the density restrictions was read at the meeting. No vote was taken on the motion.

¹³ The review of the Dún Laoghaire Borough Development Plan began at the same time.

11.03 A motion to have the draft plan go on display with density level restrictions was put to a vote on 2 April 1997 but was unsuccessful.

11.04 The Draft Development Plan 1997 went on public display between 21 May and 22 August 1997. On that plan, Monarch's lands were divided into portions for residential use, a science and technology park, and a district centre.

11.05 Submissions were received from Monarch, in effect seeking 1) the extension of the E1 (science and technology) zoning to lands zoned agricultural which it had acquired after the 1993 County Development Plan had been varied in 1995, 2) an extension of the district centre zoning and 3) the removal of the restriction in relation to the retail area of the existing district centre zoning.

COUNTY COUNCIL MEETINGS 21 JANUARY, 16 JUNE AND 13 JULY 1998

11.06 At a special meeting of the County Council on 21 January 1998 the Manager's revised recommendation that the Cherrywood area be the subject of an Area Action Plan was approved. Motions to extend the science and technology park and extend the district centre zoning which were signed by Cllrs Lowry, Matthews, Liam T. Cosgrave and Conroy were passed by a majority of councillors.

11.07 A motion seeking to delete the retail cap restrictions on the district centre zoning, which was proposed by Cllrs Matthews and Liam T. Cosgrave, did not go to a vote, the councillors instead agreeing to accept the Manager's recommendation to replace the existing retail cap with a less restrictive one.

11.08 The Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council Draft Development Plan 1997, containing the above changes as Changes 4, 5 and 15, went on public display between 7 April and 15 May 1998. These amendments were confirmed at a special meeting of the Council on 16 June 1998.

11.09 At that meeting, two motions received by the County Council which took issue with the proposal to extend a science and technology park zoning to the newly acquired agriculturally zoned Monarch lands were put to a vote and lost.

11.10 Monarch had achieved all its initial objectives with the adoption on 13 July 1998¹⁴ of the Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council Development Plan which included the above amendment to Map 10. The area for the science and technology park had been extended by the rezoning of agriculture zoned lands which had been acquired by Monarch, the acreage of the district centre zoning had effectively been doubled, and the erstwhile restrictive retail cap had been replaced by a less restrictive one. Moreover, residential density levels no longer applied to Monarch's residentially zoned lands.

MONARCH CHEQUE PAYMENTS TO NAMED POLITICIANS AND POLITICAL PARTIES 1991–7

12.01 Monarch acknowledged cheque payments made between 1991 and 1997 to in excess of 60 named politicians (including payments to charitable or voluntary organisations on behalf of, or at the request of, named politicians), and to political parties, amounting to a total of IR£127,515.

12.02 These payments were made in the following amounts and years:

- 1991: IR£23,450.
- 1992: IR£35,650 (inclusive of payments made in January 1993 referable to the November 1992 Dáil election and/or the January 1993 Seanad Election).
- 1993–7: IR£68,415 (excluding the payments made in January 1993 referable to the Seanad Election).

12.03 In the course of written information, and in documentation furnished to the Tribunal in 2000, Monarch provided lists of recipients of such payments. Many of the recipients gave sworn evidence to the Tribunal. In almost all cases, they acknowledged receipt of the payments, although a number of them had either no recollection or only vague recollection of receiving the payments.

12.04 Approximately IR£6,550 of the total was paid to the Progressive Democrat Party (including IR£2,000 on 1 February 1994, stated in Monarch's books to be an 'interest free loan' to the party). These sums were probably solicited by Cllr Helen Keogh.

12.05 The Tribunal was satisfied that the information and evidence provided to it by Monarch and its witnesses accurately identified recipients of payments Monarch made by cheque to or on behalf of politicians and political parties in the period 1991 to 1997. The records submitted by Monarch which list the recipients of the payments totalling IR£127,515 made in the period from 1991 to 1997 are attached as Exhibit 2 in this chapter.

12.06 Monarch's stated position was that these payments were political contributions generally made in response to requests by individual politicians. Monarch maintained that payments were made to councillors/election candidates in 1991 on foot of requests from them for assistance with expenses relating to the 1991 Local Elections. Monarch maintained that its 1992 payments were intended as assistance with expenses relating to the General Election in November 1992, and the linked Seanad Election in early 1993.

12.07 While the payments were heavily concentrated in the years 1991 and 1992,¹⁵ around the times of the 1991 Local Elections, and the 1992 General Election (including the Seanad Election of January 1993) respectively, Monarch was unable to provide the Tribunal with any documentary evidence which supported its contention that such payments had been solicited.

12.08 Mr Sweeney told the Tribunal that he was unable to say why particular amounts were chosen for payment to particular politicians. Mr Reilly believed that the councillors chosen to receive payments were based on a list prepared by Mr Lynn. Mr Lynn took issue with Mr Reilly's evidence that he, Mr Lynn, had asked Mr Reilly to telephone people on the list and ask if they wanted political donations.

12.09 Mr Monahan's secretary, Ms Ann Gosling, expressed the view that paying councillors was 'a necessary evil'.

12.10 In most instances, particularly in relation to payments made in 1991 and 1992, the recipients took issue with Monarch's claim that they had solicited payments. In those cases where recipients were questioned as to the reason for, or purpose of the payments, they categorised them as political contributions paid at the time of an election (Local, General, Seanad or By-Election).

12.11 While the Tribunal believed it likely that some individuals named as recipients of payments in 1991 and 1992 may have sought assistance from Monarch in the run-up to the elections, the Tribunal was satisfied to accept Mr Philip Reilly's evidence that, prior to the 1991 elections, Mr Lynn had asked him to identify from a list those people he felt should be telephoned by Monarch personnel with a view to offering them support for the election.

MONARCH CHEQUE PAYMENTS IN 1991

13.01 Monarch records, supported by sworn evidence, established that between May and October 1991 it expended IR£23,450 in favour of 39 named politicians, including a total of IR£400 to two political parties. The records indicated that the named politicians received donations towards their expenses as candidates in the June 1991 Local Elections. Of the 39, 26 were Fianna Fáil candidates, 8 were Fine Gael candidates, 4 were Progressive Democrat candidates and 1 was an Independent candidate.

¹⁵ Close to half of the total of IR£127,515 paid in the period 1991–7 was paid in the years 1991 and 1992.

13.02 The first of the recorded 39 payments to election candidates was on 30 May 1991, some six days after the County Council vote on 24 May, the result of which was a severe setback to Monarch's ambition to rezone much of its Carrickmines landholding.

13.03 The contributions ranged from IR£50 to IR£5,000,¹⁶ with most of the politicians receiving payments of hundreds of pounds. Thirty of the recipients were elected councillors standing for re-election.

THE TREATMENT OF THE 1991 POLITICAL PAYMENTS IN MONARCH'S BOOKS

13.04 Mr Lynn, Mr Glennane and Mr Sweeney told the Tribunal that the payments to councillors were legitimate political donations relating to candidates in the Local Elections of June 1991, although no such specific designation is recorded in Monarch's books. These payments were allocated in Monarch's books as a cost to the Cherrywood project.

13.05 Neither Mr Lynn, Mr Glennane nor Mr Sweeney was prepared to accept responsibility for the decision to allocate these payments to councillors in Monarch's books as a cost to the Cherrywood project. Mr Glennane did, however, state that he believed that the councillors sought donations from Monarch because they knew that Monarch was involved with the Cherrywood lands.

13.06 In a letter he wrote to Mr Martyn Baker of GRE on 2 October 1992, Mr Sweeney stated: 'I am also enclosing a background memo as to the input of the Monarch Technical Team and also the political input made to date which you may find useful.' While this letter was discovered to the Tribunal, the accompanying memo it referred to was not.

13.07 The Tribunal rejected the Monarch executives' stance as to the decision to allocate the so-called political payments as an expense to the Cherrywood project. The Tribunal was satisfied that this decision was taken at executive level within Monarch, and almost certainly involved Mr Lynn, Mr Glennane, Mr Sweeney and Mr Monahan.

¹⁶ Cllr Tom Hand was the recipient of IR£5,000, the largest, by a multiple of 5, of any single payment to a councillor in 1991. This issue is considered later in this chapter.

13.08 Monarch's records showed that the IR£23,450 expended between May and October 1991 was posted within MPSL's general ledger, initially to the 'Sponsorship' (IR£15,350) and 'Promotions' (IR£8,100) accounts of MPSL and were transferred for year end 1992 to the 'General Promotion' account, within that ledger. Mr Glennane stated that the purpose of this 'General Promotion' account was to record payments made by MPSL regarded as having been expended for the purpose of promoting the Cherrywood development.

13.09 A working paper prepared by Monarch's auditors in January 1996 concerning expenditure under the heading 'General Promotion and Advertising' provided an insight into Monarch's decision to categorise the 1991 payments to politicians under the categorisation 'General Promotion' when it stated:

Items booked by the client under this heading relate to costs incurred which relate to particular properties under development, e.g. Monarch will spend money in an area on various forms of promotional activity if they are developing there. The reason behind this is to tray and sway/influence local opinion on the worthiness/good of their project in the area.

13.10 The Tribunal was satisfied that the IR£23,450 expended on councillors was transferred to the Cherrywood general promotions account in April 1992 because it was a cost incurred, and perceived by Monarch to have been incurred, in pursuance of its objective to improve the zoning of its lands, and their density levels.

'STRATEGY CONSULTANCY FEES' AND MONARCH'S CLAIM FOR REIMBURSEMENT FROM GRE

14.01 Mr Lynn agreed in evidence that in his letter of 16 March 1992, to GRE seeking part reimbursement of sums expended to date on the Cherrywood project, he attached a schedule he had prepared which provided details of monies expended by Monarch on the Cherrywood project in the period to February 1992. This document, under the heading 'Cherrywood Properties Ltd—Draft Development Plan Cashflow Projections', also provided cash flow projections under various categories, including 'strategy consultancy fees'. Expenditure of IR£25,000 per month under this category was projected for the months of March, April and May 1992.

14.02 This document, duly varied by Monarch in the interim, was resubmitted, dated 28 April 1992, to GRE and recorded expenditure by Monarch up to April 1992 of IR£22,150 described in the document as 'strategy consultancy fees.'

14.03 Messrs Glennane, Sweeney and Lynn all agreed that this sum (the sum being claimed) was the substantial portion of the IR£23,450 paid by Monarch by way of political donations in the period May to October 1991. The Tribunal was satisfied that the claim made to GRE in 1992 for half of the IR£22,150 related to payments to councillors by Monarch in May/June 1991 in furtherance of its rezoning objectives for its Cherrywood lands.

14.04 Monarch was attempting to recover 50 per cent of that expenditure from GRE. It was at this time (April 1992) that the IR£23,450 previously recorded in MPSL's books under the headings 'Sponsorship' and 'Promotions' expenditure of MPSL, was transferred and thereby designated by Monarch to the 'General Promotion' account as a specific cost relating to Cherrywood.

14.05 The Tribunal was satisfied that the 'strategy consultancy fees' listed in the schedule of IR£22,150 resubmitted to GRE dated 28 April 1992 were for the most part the political payments that were specifically made by Monarch by cheque to named parties in the months of May and June 1991. The Tribunal was satisfied that the term 'strategy consultancy fees' was used by Monarch to categorise payments by it to politicians, including councillors and political parties.

14.06 Consideration of internal Monarch memoranda by the Tribunal disclosed that GRE disputed payment of the 'strategy consultancy fees', and, that by July 1992 Monarch was continuing to bill GRE for those fees, by which time a cash sum of IR£3,000 had been added to the total claimed under 'strategy consultancy fees.'

14.07 A perusal of Monarch books and records satisfied the Tribunal that, on 5 May 1992, the above mentioned IR£3,000 was obtained from the encashment of a cheque dated 5 May 1992¹⁷ (which, according to the cheques payment book, was made payable to 'cash') and debited to a current account of MSPL on 7 May 1992. The Tribunal was further satisfied that it was expended in connection with Cherrywood. Moreover, someone within Monarch, most probably Mr Pat Cooling who worked within Monarch's cash department according to Mr Glennane, in a handwritten document entitled 'Cherrywood Costs May '92', went to the trouble of specifically attributing this IR£3,000 cash expenditure to 'strategy'.

14.08 Both Mr Glennane and Mr Lynn told the Tribunal that they could not assist as to who in Monarch had made the decision to add the IR£3,000 cash expenditure to the 'strategy consultancy fees' claim being made of GRE.

¹⁷ The paid cheque was not available to the Tribunal.

Although Mr Glennane conceded that he signed the cheque for IR£3,000 made out to 'cash', neither he nor Mr Lynn could account to the Tribunal for what purpose IR£3,000 had been spent in the context of Cherrywood. Mr Glennane suggested that it might have been connected to the purchase of cars by Mr Monahan, a suggestion rejected by the Tribunal.

14.09 While conceding that the IR£3,000 cash expenditure was being claimed from GRE as a strategy consultancy payment, Mr Glennane disagreed that it could have been a political payment, while at the same time conceding that the balance of the 'strategy consultancy fees' claim related solely to political payments made by Monarch to Local Election candidates in May/June 1991, as advised by Monarch to GRE in April 1992. Likewise, Mr Lynn rejected any suggestion that the IR£3,000 was a political payment, while agreeing it was he who had included it as a strategy consultancy fee in the claim to GRE. Neither Mr Glennane nor Mr Lynn were in a position to advise the Tribunal as to the purpose or beneficiary of this payment.

14.11 While the Tribunal was unable to identify the beneficiary or beneficiaries of this IR£3,000 cash payment, it was satisfied, on the balance of probability, that the sum was paid by Monarch to one or more councillors for the purposes of furthering its rezoning objectives. The Tribunal heard evidence that in early May 1992, Monarch was taking active steps to have issues concerning the rezoning of its lands brought before the Council.

14.12 In the course of its attempts to recoup from GRE 50 per cent of the 1991 'strategy consultancy fees' Monarch increased the figure expended to IR£27,850 to reflect costs that had been omitted from its earlier cost accumulation.

MONARCH'S CASH PROJECTIONS FOR MARCH–MAY 1992 FOR STRATEGY CONSULTANCY FEES

14.13 As already seen, Mr Lynn's schedule, prepared for GRE in March 1992, detailing Monarch's expenditure on Cherrywood under various categories had included, under the heading 'strategy consultancy fees' future expenditure of IR£25,000 per month (total IR£75,000) for the period March to May 1992 inclusive.

14.14 In its revised version of the schedule, drawn up in late April 1992, Monarch apprised GRE of the requirement for IR£10,000 expenditure for 'strategy consultancy fees' in May 1992 and IR£50,000 in June 1992.

14.15 Mr Lynn sought to explain this projected expenditure as merely the making of provision for the possibility of a By-Election or a General Election being held, whereupon Monarch would have been called on to make political donations.

14.16 The Tribunal believed, however, that a more likely rationale for these ‘strategy consultancy fee’ projections was not Monarch’s expectation of an election and a desire to support the democratic process, but rather a desire to have an agreement in place with GRE whereby whenever Monarch saw fit to make payments to politicians in order to promote its rezoning plans for Cherrywood, 50 per cent of these fees could be recovered from its joint venture partner. The Tribunal was satisfied that Monarch had within its contemplation that payment would be made to councillors in the course of its rezoning project irrespective of whether or not an election was called.

14.17 While the recovery of 50 per cent of the ‘strategy consultancy fees’ continued as an issue between Monarch and GRE, by 27 July 1992 Mr Sweeney was continuing to project such fees on behalf of Monarch, which at that point totalled IR£10,000 for the period August to December 1992.

14.18 The Tribunal regarded Mr Sweeney’s letter to GRE of 27 July 1992 as a prescient indicator of Monarch’s approach to the Development Plan review process then underway in Dublin County Council. The Tribunal was satisfied that the IR£10,000 (included in Monarch’s IR£63,500 Development Plan projected costs for August to December 1992) referred to in the letter was the sum Monarch expected it would need to pay councillors in the period August to December 1992, in the context of the Development Plan review.

14.19 At the same time as Monarch was considering making payments to councillors in the context of the ongoing review, Mr Sweeney was also advising GRE of the projected costs associated with any planning permission application (exclusive of appeal) that might be made in respect of Cherrywood. A schedule prepared by Mr Lynn and headed ‘Cherrywood Properties Limited Planning Application Cashflow Projections’ was attached to Mr Sweeney’s letter of 27 July. In that document, expenditure on a planning permission application was projected under different categories. A number of these categories were entirely normal such as land, environmental and retail impact surveys, quantity surveyors and similar items, such as might have been expected in such a process.

14.20 However, the costings also included the sum of IR£40,000 in ‘strategy consultancy fees’, designated by Monarch as payable in the third month of the planning process. The Tribunal was satisfied that the reference to ‘strategy consultancy fees', in this context was in reality Monarch's provision for payments to be made to councillors in the context of the planning application process.

14.21 The Tribunal was satisfied that the decision to make provision for payment of 'strategy consultancy fees' into the future was taken at executive level within Monarch, and in all probability by Mr Glennane, Mr Sweeney, Mr Lynn and Mr Monahan.

MONARCH CHEQUE PAYMENTS IN 1992

15.01 Monarch's books recorded political payments totalling IR£33,850 as having been paid in the year 1992, with the bulk being paid to named individuals between 20 October and 16 December 1992 as General Election or Seanad Election expenses. A General Election was called on 5 November 1992 and took place on 25 November 1992. Polling in the Seanad Elections took place between 18 January and 1 February 1993. A portion of the IR£33,850 was paid as political contributions prior to October 1992 in relation to political fundraising events and golf outings, in amounts ranging from IR£50 to IR£1,000.

15.02 The recipient of the largest single payment prior to October 1992 was Cllr Tom Hand, who received IR£1,000 on 28 February 1992. Some nine months earlier, Monarch had paid a sum of IR£5,000 to Cllr Hand. Cllr Hand was not a candidate in the 1992 General or Seanad Elections.

15.03 Of the 26 election candidates who received contributions from Monarch in the period October to December 1992, 19 were elected members of Dublin County Council, of whom 10 were Fianna Fáil, 6 Fine Gael, 1 Labour, 1 Progressive Democrat and 1 Independent.

15.04 The Tribunal rejected the claims of Mr Lynn and Mr Sweeney that these contributions were paid in response to requests for funds from election candidates, and believed that the decision to make these payments to the named individuals for the most part was entirely that of Monarch.

15.05 Cllr Eamon Gilmore told the Tribunal of receiving a telephone call from Mr Lynn at about the time the 1992 General Election was called, with an offer of financial assistance. To Cllr Gilmore's credit, he declined this offer. Cllr Gilmore also told the Tribunal that Mr Lynn had made similar offers of financial assistance to him in either 1997 or 1999, which he had also declined. The Tribunal entirely accepted the truth of Cllr Gilmore's evidence.

15.06 Cllr Helen Keogh told the Tribunal that she returned a cheque in the sum of IR£500 sent to her from Monarch in November 1992. Cllr Keogh was a candidate in the General Election in November 1992. Cllr Keogh stated that she 'just was a bit uneasy about accepting a personal donation knowing that . . . there would be a lot of debate about the ongoing planning issues and so on.' Cllr Keogh's testimony, like Cllr Gilmore's, assisted the Tribunal in concluding that the majority of the payments made by Monarch in 1992 were probably unsolicited.

15.07 Cllr Keogh had no recollection of having received a donation from Monarch in 1991 for IR£300, which appeared from Monarch documentation to have been paid to her. Cllr Keogh suggested the possibility that it was in fact paid or passed on to her Party, the Progressive Democrats.

15.08 The Tribunal was satisfied that as with its finding in respect of the 1991 political payments, the decision taken by Monarch in 1992 to make General Election and Seanad Election contributions to the councillors in question was motivated by its desire to ensure sufficient councillor support to achieve increased zoning and residential density levels on its Cherrywood lands.

15.09 The individual payments made by Monarch in the period October to December 1992 ranged from IR£400 to IR£5,000. The IR£5,000 was paid on 18 November 1992 to Mr Albert Reynolds, then Taoiseach, as a contribution to the General Election expenses of the Fianna Fáil Party. At the same time, IR£2,500 was sent to Mr John Bruton, leader of the Fine Gael Party, for the benefit of the Party.

15.10 Thirteen of the councillors who received payments from Monarch in the period October to December 1992 also received payments from Monarch in 1991.

15.11 While the records of the 1992 political payments showed contributions being made to a number of political parties and to one Independent candidate, it was nonetheless the conclusion of the Tribunal that at that time Monarch believed itself to have a special relationship with certain Fianna Fáil councillors. The Tribunal regarded Mr Monahan's letter of 18 November 1992 to Mr Reynolds as indicative of this special relationship.

15.12 In that letter to Mr Reynolds, Mr Monahan stated:

[Monarch] have been greatly assisted by your party members in Dublin County Council without whom it is fair to say, we would not have achieved the part-zoning which now obtains on the lands. Your members have been to the fore in encouraging good development based on proper planning criteria, endorsed by the Council's own professional staff. In so doing your party shows an admirable stance for a common sense approach to development and for being positive towards job creation. Unfortunately other parties who have been against all proposed developments during the Review of the Draft Development plan now appear to take the high road on job creation possibilities in the course of the General Election.

Mr Monahan also stated in this letter that Monarch had, by that time, subscribed directly to members of the Fianna Fáil Party who were standing in the General Election. The Tribunal believed that this statement belied any suggestion by Mr Glennane, Mr Lynn and Mr Sweeney that the Monarch political payments were entirely in response to requests from candidates.

15.13 The payments made to two Fianna Fáil councillors (IR£2,500 to Cllr Lydon in December 1992 and a total of IR£3,000 to Cllr Wright in November/December 1992) respectively equaled and exceeded the IR£2,500 given by Monarch to Fine Gael.

15.14 In its books and records Monarch dealt with the IR£33,850 payments in the following manner:

- The payments of IR£5,000 and IR£2,500 respectively were paid from a Monarch Property Ltd bank account to the leaders of the Fianna Fáil and Fine Gael parties, and were ultimately posted to the 'sponsorship' account within MPSL's books as a cost of the Cherrywood development.
- A substantial portion of the remaining balance of IR£26,350, including all of the individual payments made to General Election and Seanad candidates, was treated in MPSL's books in the same way as the 1991 payments, as a cost of the Cherrywood project.

THE TREATMENT OF THE 1992 POLITICAL DONATIONS IN MONARCH'S BOOKS AND RECORDS

15.15 The Tribunal was satisfied that, as with the 1991 payments, the fact that Monarch treated the 1992 political contributions in this manner in its books evidenced expenditures it incurred in the pursuit of its zoning objectives for its Cherrywood lands.

15.16 It was the Tribunal's conclusion that Monarch's treatment of payments to political parties, politicians and elected councillors was similar to the treatment of items of expenditure associated with its efforts to rezone its Cherrywood lands in the context of the Development Plan review, and was regarded in the same light.

THE 1992 POLITICAL PAYMENTS AND MONARCH'S CLAIM FOR REIMBURSEMENT FROM GRE

15.17 Monarch had sought to recoup from GRE 50 per cent of its 1991 Local Election contributions, as a cost relating to Cherrywood. Monarch appeared to limit its attempts to recoup 50 per cent of the cost of the 1992 political contributions from GRE to the IR£7,500 paid to the party leaders of Fianna Fáil and Fine Gael. In evidence, Mr Glennane confirmed that Monarch sought to recoup 50 per cent of this expenditure, designated as a cost relating to Cherrywood, from GRE.

15.18 GRE took issue with Monarch's claim to recoup 50 per cent of these sums, and requested that the recoupment claim be resubmitted to them under the heading 'additional management fee'. In response, Mr Sweeney of Monarch advised GRE on 13 July 1993 that the said sums totalling IR£7,500 'were paid bona fide the parties concerned', and therefore should not rank as payments envisaged under the heading 'additional Management Fee.'

15.19 Both Mr Glennane and Mr Sweeney denied in evidence that Mr Sweeney's description of the payments to the leaders of the Fianna Fáil and Fine Gael Parties in November 1992 as 'bona fide' implied that the balance of the political payments made by Monarch in 1992 were less than 'bona fide'. The Tribunal believed, however, that by attributing the appellation 'bona fide' to specific payments, Mr Sweeney was consciously recognising another category of expenditure being incurred by Monarch – namely, payments being made to certain politicians for the purposes of ensuring their support for Monarch's rezoning plans.

15.20 Ultimately, GRE did pay Monarch 50 per cent of the IR£7,500 claimed, most probably on foot of an invoice dated 29 June 1993.

MONARCH CHEQUE PAYMENTS IN 1993

16.01 Cheque payments to politicians and political parties recorded in Monarch's books in 1993 amounted to IR£5,520. Of this sum, IR£2,400 was attributed by Monarch in MPSL's books as a cost of Cherrywood. This figure included IR£800 given to Cllr Anne Ormonde (a contribution to her expenses in the Seanad Election of January/February 1993), IR£1,000 to Cllr Tony Fox,¹⁸

¹⁸ This issue is dealt with elsewhere in this chapter.

£100 to Cllr Anne Devitt by way of fundraiser and two payments of IR£200 and IR£300 respectively to Fine Gael Dublin West and Fine Gael Dublin South West.

16.02 It was noteworthy that Cllrs Ormonde, Fox and Devitt, whose donations were accounted for as a cost of Cherrywood were members of Dublin County Council at the time.

16.03 It was the Tribunal's conclusion that the treatment of these payments in Monarch's books evidenced yet again Monarch's true understanding that the payments were not bona fide political donations, but were in fact monies that Monarch felt were required to be expended to achieve its zoning objectives. It was not the case, as suggested by Mr Glennane, that the payments were attributed to the Cherrywood project simply because 'they had to get posted somewhere.'

16.04 The Tribunal was satisfied, however, that substantial payments were in fact made by Monarch to certain politicians and county councillors in 1993¹⁹ using cash from cashing its own cheques.²⁰

MONARCH CHEQUE PAYMENTS IN 1994

17.01 Monarch's records for 1994 identify payments to politicians or political parties amounting to IR£24,820. Included in this figure were the following:

- IR£3,000 paid on 28 July 1994 to 'A&L Lawlor', confirmed by Mr Glennane as a payment to Mr Liam Lawlor TD.²¹
- IR£15,000 paid on 19 September 1994 to PR firm Saatchi & Saatchi on behalf of the Fianna Fáil Party.

17.02 The balance of the IR£24,820 related in the main to donations to political parties through fundraisers and golf events.

17.03 Out of the IR£24,820, four payments (totalling IR£1,700) were attributed by Monarch in MPSL's books as a cost relating to Cherrywood. These payments were a Fianna Fáil constituency fundraiser (a payment of IR£1,000), and Fine Gael constituency fundraisers (payments of IR£100, IR£400 and IR£200 respectively).

¹⁹ See elsewhere in this chapter.

²⁰ This matter is considered in more detail elsewhere in this chapter.

²¹ This payment is considered elsewhere in the Report.

THE IR£15,000 PAYMENT TO SAATCHI & SAATCHI

17.04 The Tribunal has established that IR£15,000 was paid by Monarch on 19 September 1994 to the PR firm of Saatchi & Saatchi on behalf of Fianna Fáil. According to Mr Glennane and Mr Sean Fleming, the then financial controller of Fianna Fáil, Mr Monahan made contact with Saatchi & Saatchi at the behest of someone, presumably within Fianna Fáil, with the objective of discharging a debt owed by Fianna Fáil to that PR firm. According to Mr Glennane, Mr Monahan had negotiated with Fianna Fáil the sum Monarch was prepared to pay in full and final discharge of the Saatchi invoice of IR£30,250. A figure of IR£15,000 was agreed.

17.05 The Tribunal noted the position adopted in evidence by Mr Glennane in relation to this payment when he said he had neither approved of, nor signed, the cheque for the payment. It appeared to the Tribunal that, according to Mr Glennane's version of events, while he knew that the payment was being made for Fianna Fáil, he believed it to be a waste of money. However, in contrast to this position, in the course of 1993, Mr Glennane signed a number of AIB cheques to cash and was thereby instrumental in facilitating access to, and the use of, large sums of cash. No one in Monarch, including Mr Glennane, was in a position to provide any credible account of the ultimate beneficiaries of these payments.

17.06 The Tribunal did not accept the evidence of Mr Glennane regarding these funds.²² Equally, the Tribunal did not accept the evidence of Mr Glennane credible on the issue of the Saatchi & Saatchi cheque and believed that in all probability he acquiesced in the payment of the IR£15,000 'pick-me-up' on behalf of Fianna Fáil.

MONARCH POLITICAL PAYMENTS CASH PROJECTIONS 1994

18.01 There was no election at either local or national level in 1994. The European Parliament election was held in June 1994.

18.02 In a report prepared in June 1994 for GRE which incorporated future cash projections, Monarch made provision under the heading 'general promotion' for General Election and Seanad Election expenditure 'two years hence'. A total of IR£87,000 was projected under this heading.

²² This issue is dealt with under the heading 'Monarch's cash payments 1992–6.'

18.03 Monarch likewise made provision under the heading ‘zoning costs’ for expenditure of IR£10,000 on ‘lobbying—entertainment’.

18.04 Mr Glennane denied in evidence that he had any input in assessing what costs the Cherrywood project would absorb in the event of elections being held in 1996. Mr Lynn told the Tribunal that the IR£87,000 expenditure projected for the 1996 elections had been his assessment of what it would cost the Cherrywood project. While agreeing that this figure was a substantial increase on the amount of IR£33,850 recorded in respect of the 1992/3 General and Seanad Elections, Mr Lynn insisted that the IR£87,000 projection was only an estimated figure.

18.05 The Tribunal was satisfied that, in assessing its cost exposure on the Cherrywood lands in terms of future political payments at election time, Monarch took the same approach to the cost of rezoning Cherrywood as it had previously taken, namely, that payments to politicians/county councillors at election times were part and parcel of the cost of its land rezoning. The Tribunal noted that at the time of compiling the aforementioned figures Monarch had achieved some considerable success in the 1993 Plan (in particular, the increased residential density on its lands and the provision for a district centre). Monarch was continuing in its endeavours to achieve further rezoning and density increases. A science and technology park was the subject of discussion. Monarch was anxious to ensure that councillors would see it as a generous provider of funds, and would therefore be more inclined to support its proposals.

18.06 The Tribunal was satisfied that the cash projections furnished to GRE in 1994 were almost certainly the work of Mr Glennane, Mr Sweeney, Mr Lynn, and Mr Monahan. The Tribunal believed it likely that Mr Glennane, contrary to his contention, contributed to the content of the document.

MONARCH CHEQUE PAYMENTS IN 1995, 1996 AND 1997

MONARCH CHEQUE PAYMENTS IN 1995

19.01 Recorded payments to politicians or political parties in the Monarch books for 1995 amounted to IR£4,690, of which IR£2,500 was paid to Mr Liam Lawlor TD on 5 January 1995. The balance consisted of payments to political parties ranging between IR£100 and IR£1,000.

19.02 A total of IR£1,850 in respect of four of the six political party fundraising events (in respect of which Monarch had paid IR£2,190 in total) was posted as a cost to the Cherrywood project in MPSL’s books.

19.03 No local or national election took place in 1995.

MONARCH CHEQUE PAYMENTS IN 1996

19.04 Monarch's records for 1996 identified IR£11,715 as having been paid to politicians and political parties in that year.

19.05 None of these payments, with the exception of a payment to Cllr Olivia Mitchell in the sum of IR£400, was attributed as a cost to the Cherrywood project in MPSL's books.

19.06 The Tribunal believed that the expenditures were not posted as a Cherrywood cost in MPSL's books (with the exception of the payment to Cllr Mitchell) because the Cherrywood stock account (where the Cherrywood attributed costs had ended up), held in MPSL's books, had been written off by Mr Glennane, in his capacity as financial director. Mr Glennane told the Tribunal that this decision was taken in January 1997. Hence the Tribunal concluded that, by January 1997, and thereafter, Monarch saw no point in attributing the 1996 payments to politicians as a cost of Cherrywood, having written off similar costs incurred in previous years.

MONARCH CHEQUE PAYMENTS IN 1997

19.07 Monarch's records in 1997 identified payments of IR£23,470 to named politicians or to political parties.

19.08 This expenditure was not attributed as a cost to the Cherrywood project in MPSL's books, probably again because Mr Glennane had by this time written off similar costs incurred in previous years.

19.09 Of the IR£23,470, one councillor (Cllr Mitchell) received IR£1,000 as a 'General Election contribution' while seven councillors (Cllrs O'Halloran, Fox, Ardagh, Keogh, Ormonde, M. J. Cosgrave and Hanrahan) received lesser sums. In that year, Monarch made General Election contributions amounting to IR£4,950 to Fianna Fáil, IR£5,000 to Fine Gael, IR£3,500 to the Labour Party, IR£3,000 to the Progressive Democrats and IR£1,000 to Democratic Left.²³

²³ A General Election was held on 6 June 1997, followed by a Seanad Election (22 July–6 August 1997).

THE TRIBUNAL'S OBSERVATIONS AND CONCLUSIONS ON MONARCH'S CHEQUE PAYMENTS TO COUNCILLORS 1991–7

20.01 In the course of public hearings at the Tribunal, 46 of the 57 councillors who received payments by cheque from Monarch in the period 1991 to 1997 were examined on oath by the Tribunal in relation to those payments.

20.02 Information and evidence available to the Tribunal in respect of five councillors who had died before public hearings into the Cherrywood module had commenced, and who had received payments from Monarch in the period 1991 to 1997, was examined by the Tribunal to a limited extent in the course of its public hearings.

20.03 Payments to Mr Lawlor, a councillor until mid-1991, are dealt with elsewhere in this chapter.²⁴

20.04 Individual payments to councillors by Monarch were usually within the range of IR£300 to IR£600 (with one councillor receiving IR£50). A small number of payments of IR£1,000 each were made, and one councillor received IR£5,000 in one payment.²⁵ A number of councillors received payments on a number of separate occasions, and in a small number of instances, sums amounting to some thousands of pounds were paid to individual councillors over a period of seven or eight years, commencing in mid 1991.²⁶

20.05 In the majority of cases of payments to councillors by Monarch, the recipients were established, previously elected public representatives. In a minority of cases, payments were made to individuals standing for election for the first time.

20.06 The Tribunal considered two aspects of these payments separately: on the one hand, Monarch's reason and motivation for deciding to provide (in most instances) very generous financial support to individuals seeking election as councillors in 1991, and to the Dáil and/or Seanad in late 1992/early 1993; and, on the other hand, the acceptance of such payments by the individuals concerned.

20.07 While witnesses who represented Monarch during the years 1991 to 1997 maintained, in general, that the sums so expended were bona fide unconditional political contributions, the Tribunal was unable to accept this contention as being either truthful or accurate, or to accept that such a belief was ever truly held by the senior executives within Monarch who had knowledge of such payments.

²⁴ Payments from Monarch to Mr Lawlor exceeded IR£70,000.

²⁵ See Exhibit 3.

²⁶ Cllr Ned Ryan received a total of IR£3,000 in 1991/2, and IR£1,000 in 1996. Cllr Wright received a total of IR£3,300 in 1991/2. Cllr Michael Keating received a total of IR£2,600 in 1991/2. Cllr Finbar Hanrahan received a total of IR£2,095 in 1991, 1992 and 1997.

20.08 The Tribunal was satisfied that the payments made to elected and ‘would-be’ elected councillors were so made as an important feature of a systematic, organised, and concerted operation designed to ensure the greatest possible level of councillor support for the project to rezone the Cherrywood lands, and were not, as contended by Monarch, bona fide political donations to councillors (and individuals standing for election), as part of the democratic process. On the contrary, the system adopted by Monarch was the antithesis of the democratic process and was designed to corrupt councillors by way of inducement, to compromise the disinterested performance of the councillors’ public duty to consider rezoning applications on their merit, having due regard to the concept of proper planning and the common good. The Tribunal was further satisfied that the payments were deliberately made at election time when it was known that election candidates were likely to incur expenditure in the course of their campaigns for re-election.

20.09 The purpose of this campaign, from Monarch’s perspective, was to garner support for the rezoning proposals that were underway or imminent at the time of payment, and which would be presented to county councillors in the course of the review of the two Development Plans. There was a direct and identifiable association between the payments to councillors (or would-be councillors) and the pending or expected proposals to the County Council relating to the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands.

20.10 While the extent to which Monarch lobbied individual elected councillors (including lobbying conducted by its agents, such as Mr Dunlop) varied from councillor to councillor, the Tribunal was satisfied that most, if not all, of the recipients of Monarch’s financial largesse should have known and probably did know in 1991, and almost certainly knew in 1992, that Monarch was behind the payments they received. They also knew that Monarch was closely and actively associated with the proposed rezoning of a substantial portion of the lands in Carrickmines, and that as such, it would require and was seeking their voting support at County Council meetings in order to ensure that rezoning (or the rezoning of as much of those lands as possible).

20.11 Many of the recipients of payments from Monarch protested that there was no link (and that there never could be any link) between the payment(s) made to them and the exercise of their vote at relevant County Council meetings, and that the payments did not influence them in their voting on motions relevant to Monarch. The extent to which such payments did in fact induce councillors to consider the rezoning applications (and related or linked motions) in a manner which would or might benefit the Cherrywood lands was impossible to determine in all cases. The Tribunal was satisfied that some councillors who received payments from Monarch and who proceeded to exercise their votes in support of motions favourable to those lands, did so solely or primarily on the merits of the proposals, and with due regard to proper planning considerations and the common good. Notwithstanding this, the fact of the matter was that, viewed objectively, the acceptance of such donations by a politician from a landowner/developer who was seeking the rezoning of his lands, an aspiration which for the most part, as found by the Tribunal in its consideration of the making of the Development Plans, required to be voted on by individual councillors, served only to negate the required disinterested exercise by a councillor of that voting duty.

20.12 The appropriate position, and the position which ought to have been adopted by councillors (or individuals seeking political election), to whom Monarch made or tendered payments was as follows:

- 1) Where at the time of the receipt of the payment, the recipient councillor (or individual seeking political election) was aware of or suspected that the donor was (or represented) a developer/landowner whose lands were, or were likely to be, the subject of a rezoning motion or a motion linked to a rezoning motion within the Council of which he or she was an elected member, or was standing for such election, he or she should have rejected or returned such payment, or at the very least disclosed it and absented himself or herself from the exercise of his or her vote.
- 2) Where at the time of the receipt of the payment the recipient councillor (or an individual seeking political election) was unaware, or did not have reason to believe or suspected, that the donor was (or represented) a developer/landowner whose lands were or were likely to be, the subject of a rezoning motion or a motion linked to a rezoning motion within the Council of which he or she was an elected member, or was standing for such election, but subsequently became aware of such connection, that councillor should either have then returned the payment or disclosed it and absented himself or herself from the exercise of his or her vote.

20.13 In noted and commendable contrast to the position adopted by most councillors to whom payments were offered or paid by Monarch, Cllr Eamon Gilmore declined an offer of payment from Monarch in 1992.

20.14 Cllr Helen Keogh also returned a cheque for IR£500 sent to her by Monarch, in the same year.²⁷

MONARCH'S CASH PAYMENTS 1992–6

21.01 The Tribunal was provided with documentary and oral evidence relating to substantial disbursements of cash sums by Monarch, particularly in the period from 1992 to 1996. In most of these instances there was an absence of documentary evidence which would have identified the recipient of these cash disbursements, and a distinct lack of information on the part of the witnesses who gave sworn evidence to the Tribunal as to the purpose of the payments and the identity of the recipients of such payments.

21.02 The common practice adopted by Monarch in relation to such cash payments was to make company cheques payable to cash or to Allied Irish Banks (AIB), to cash the cheques, and then use the cash for the purpose for which it was intended. Mr Cooling, Monarch's bookkeeper, was instrumental in arranging many of the cash withdrawals. Nevertheless, when questioned by the Tribunal he could not explain the purpose of such withdrawals or identify their recipients.

21.03 Important features of the cash withdrawals examined by the Tribunal were that they were designated as an expense of the Cherrywood project, and that they were attributed in MPSL's books to either 'Promotion open days', 'Sponsorship' or 'General Promotion' accounts. All sums were duly included in MPSL's Cherrywood stock/WIP (work in progress) as having been paid by MPSL on behalf of the Cherrywood project. In the narrative section of the Cherrywood-related accounts in MPSL's books, figures alone were recorded, without any attribution or designation identifying the recipients, beneficiaries, or purpose of these expended cash sums. Almost all the sums were round-figure amounts.

21.04 The cash sums expended in the years 1992 to 1996 amounted to IR£162,885, as follows:

- 1992: IR£18,000
- 1993: IR£41,885
- 1994: IR£42,500
- 1995: IR£49,000
- 1996: IR£11,500

²⁷ Equally commendable was the decision taken by Cllr Pat Rabbitte and his (then) political party to return a payment of money to Mr Frank Dunlop. This matter is considered elsewhere in the report.

CASH PAYMENTS 1992

21.05 Monarch's books and records refer to the expenditure of IR£3,000 in cash in early May 1992.²⁸ The cheque payments book identified a cheque for IR£3,000 dated 5 May 1992 attributed to 'Cherrywood', and the payee as 'cash'. A handwritten list of outlays entitled 'Cherrywood costs May 1992' identified this payment as 'cash—IR£3,000—strategy'.

21.06 As already set out, half of this sum of IR£3,000 was subsequently included in a reimbursement claim to Monarch's partner GRE, and was categorised as 'strategy consultancy fees'. The Tribunal has already concluded as to the likely purpose of this expenditure.

21.07 Mr Glennane was unable to assist the Tribunal in identifying the purpose and/or beneficiaries of two cash sums of IR£10,000 and IR£5,000 in November 1992.

21.08 Monarch's books identified a cheque payment on 17 November 1992 of IR£10,000 to AIB. This cheque was cashed. The payment was allocated in Monarch's books as a Cherrywood cost, but without identifying the purpose or beneficiary of the money. Eleven of a further 26 payments entered on the same page of the cheque payments book as the cheque for IR£10,000 represented payments to identified politicians for sums ranging from IR£400 to IR£1,000.

21.09 On 19 November 1992, Monarch's books likewise identified a cheque payment of IR£5,000 to AIB. This cheque was cashed. As with the cheque of 17 November 1992, the payment was allocated in Monarch's books as a Cherrywood cost, but without identifying the purpose or beneficiary of the money. In the page of the cheque payments book in which this cheque to AIB for IR£5,000 was entered, two of the remaining 27 entries represented payments to identified politicians, each for IR£500. The IR£5,000 cheque was recorded immediately between the two cheque payments to politicians.

21.10 A General Election was held on 25 November 1992.

21.11 Although Mr Glennane was Monarch's financial director, he was unable to explain the purpose or beneficiary of the IR£15,000 cash obtained in November 1992. He suggested that it might have been used to buy bank drafts, but acknowledged that had this been so, the purpose and/or the beneficiary of the funds would have been recorded.

²⁸ See also section on 'Strategy consultancy fees'.

21.12 Mr Cooling, Monarch's bookkeeper, satisfied the Tribunal that he cashed the two cheques in question and handed the cash to whichever Monarch executive had requested it. He did not name the executive/s concerned. The Tribunal was satisfied that these cash sums were disbursed by Monarch to one or more individuals in the course of the 1992 General Election.

CASH PAYMENTS 1993

21.13 Cash payments amounting to IR£41,885 were recorded in Monarch's books and records between 11 October and 7 December 1993. This total figure was broken down as follows:

- 11 October: IR£1,985
- 12 October: IR£3,000
- 31 October: IR£4,500
- 1 November: IR£2,000
- 2 November: IR£2,500
- 2 November: IR£3,000
- 2 November: IR£5,000
- 2 November: IR£5,000
- 2 November: IR£6,000
- 3 November: IR£5,000
- 10 November: IR£900
- 7 December: IR£3,000

21.14 All these cash sums (which may have included Monarch's cheques exchanged for bank drafts in some instances) were posted in 'general promotion' or 'sponsorship accounts' as a cost of the Cherrywood project.

21.15 Mr Glennane was unable to provide any definite information on the purposes of these payments, or the recipients' identities. He could not shed light on who ultimately received the funds in question (other than to suggest Mr Monahan). The payments were disbursed over a period of just eight weeks in 1993. Mr Glennane speculated that Mr Monahan might have used some or all of these cash sums to purchase cars and antique furniture, or to provide himself with ready cash in the lead-up to Christmas. He speculated that the sums in question may have been incorrectly posted to the Cherrywood project. He conceded that no receipts, invoices or other documentation relating to the cash sums were available, other than the record in Monarch's books.

21.16 Mr Glennane dismissed totally any suggestion that cash payments as recorded in MPSL's books for Cherrywood went to politicians or that county councillors had been bribed with these funds.

21.17 Mr Glennane stated that he was unable to assist the Tribunal as to who made the decision to attribute this cash expenditure as a cost of Cherrywood. He suggested that whoever had posted the expenditure to the ‘sponsorship’ account or ‘general promotion’ account may or may not have sought direction as to where specifically such expenditure was to be posted. According to Mr Glennane, the emphasis would have been on posting the expenditure somewhere in MPSL’s books and, if wrongly posted, the error would be corrected at the end of the year. Mr Glennane told the Tribunal that inappropriate postings would not generally have come to his attention.

21.18 Mr Glennane agreed that the first two October 1993 payments (IR£1,985 and IR£3,000) had been posted to the Cherrywood sponsorship account, and he agreed that such postings indicated these payments had been made to sway or influence local opinion.

21.19 Of the payments which had been attributed in the Cherrywood general promotions account as a cost of Cherrywood, Mr Glennane agreed that Mr Lynn had sought recoupment of 50 per cent of the following five cash payments: the 2 November IR£6,000 payment, the 3 November IR£5,000 payment, the further 2 November IR£5,000 payment, the 7 December IR£3,000 payment, and the 2 November (L & C) payment of IR£2,500, a total of IR£21,500. In March 1994 he had written to GRE in support of the claim, enclosing a detailed breakdown of these sums as having been expended on the Cherrywood project under the heading ‘Community/PR’ (5021).

21.20 Mr Glennane agreed that other than the list of expenditure provided by Mr Lynn to GRE, Monarch could not and had not produced any invoices or documents to back up these cash payments and he agreed that there was no documentation within Monarch as to what these funds were truly used for.

21.21 Mr Glennane suggested that Monarch officers would not knowingly have reclaimed expenditure from GRE if they had known that it was used by Mr Philip Monahan to buy items such as cars and antiques.

21.22 Mr Lynn was also unable to shed light on the purpose of the large cash expenditure by Monarch during this eight-week period in 1993, although he was responsible for the inclusion of the figure of IR£21,500 in the Monarch reimbursement claim made to GRE.²⁹ Mr Lynn told the Tribunal that when he raised questions relating to this expenditure with Monarch’s accounts department, he was referred to Mr Monahan, but he never in fact discussed these payments with him.

21.23 Mr Sweeney similarly could not provide any explanation to the Tribunal as to this cash expenditure in 1993.

CASH PAYMENTS 1994

21.24 Monarch expended some IR£42,500 in cash associated with the Cherrywood project in 1994. This figure was broken down as follows:

- 27 May: IR£10,000 (L&C Ansbacher account)
- 15 June: IR£10,000 (L&C Ansbacher account)
- 16 June: IR£7,000
- 12 August: IR£1,000
- 6 October: IR£10,000
- 20 December: IR£4,500

21.25 All of these cash sums were posted to MP SL's 'general promotion' account and ultimately formed part of the Cherrywood stock WIP ('work in progress') within MP SL.

21.26 Two cheques were drawn on MP SL's AIB current account made payable, according to its cheque payments book, to Ansbacher Bankers Ltd in the sum of IR£10,000 each on 27 May and 15 June 1994 respectively. On 16 June and 12 August 1994, cheques for IR£7,000 and IR£1,000 respectively were cashed. On 6 October 1994, IR£10,000 was withdrawn from AIB in cash, and on 20 December 1994 a cheque for IR£4,500 was cashed.

21.27 As with the 1993 cash payments, none of these cash expenses, as detailed by Monarch, were supported by any available invoice, a fact which was noted by Monarch's auditors. Mr Cooling agreed that, from a general accounting point of view, if the funds in question had been paid to a supplier or creditor of Monarch, an invoice (or other supporting documentation) vouching same would have been available, and the postings would have been made to a creditors' ledger on MP SL's books, and not the general promotions account, as occurred.

21.28 Mr Glennane's evidence in relation to these transactions was that he was not in a position to identify the ultimate recipients and he again suggested that Mr Monahan was the person likely to have been in receipt of these funds. Mr Glennane suggested that the IR£20,000 Ansbacher cash might have been obtained to make repayment on a loan.

21.29 In relation to the IR£7,000 in cash obtained on 16 June 1994, Mr Glennane did not believe that there was any connection between it and a decision made by Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council to initiate a variation of the 1993 Development Plan for a science and technology park.³⁰ In particular, Mr Glennane saw no connection between the IR£7,000 cash being obtained on 16 June 1994 and the preparation on the same day by Mr Lynn of a list of councillors whose voting support was considered imperative by Monarch. However, the Tribunal was satisfied that such a connection probably existed, and was known by Mr Glennane and his colleagues.

21.30 In respect of the IR£1,000 cash obtained in August, Mr Glennane believed that sum would have been obtained by Mr Monahan.

21.31 Mr Glennane disputed that there was any connection between Monarch being put in funds to the tune of IR£10,000 on 6 October 1994 and a motion signed on 10 October at the behest of Monarch for the provision of a science and technology park. Again, the Tribunal has concluded that there was such a connection, and the Tribunal was satisfied that such a sum was duly distributed by Monarch to certain unidentified councillors.

CASH PAYMENTS 1995

21.32 In 1995 Monarch made cash disbursements associated with the Cherrywood project to the tune of IR£49,000. This figure was broken down as follows:

- 19 April: IR£8,000
- 26 April: IR£2,000
- 25 May: IR£5,000
- 1 June: IR£5,000
- 21 July: IR£2,000
- 26 July: IR£1,000
- 10 August: IR£1,500
- 26 September: IR£4,000
- 27 September: IR£5,500
- 4 December: IR£5,000
- 4 December: IR£2,500
- 11 December: IR£7,500

³⁰ On 29 June 1994 a motion was passed unanimously by the Tourism Committee of Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council welcoming the suggestion of a science and technology park, with the Council agreeing to review the zoning of Monarch's lands at Cherrywood.

21.33 Remarkably, despite being Monarch's financial director, Mr Glennane was unable to provide any definite explanation for any of the 12 cash amounts making up the total of IR£49,000. He had no recollection of the amounts ever being queried by the company auditors or at board level, or of anyone requesting information from him relating to any of these transactions.

21.34 Mr Cooling, Monarch's bookkeeper, acknowledged that this 'sea of cash', for which there was no auditors' trail, was expended by Monarch in connection with the Cherrywood project.

MONARCH CASH PAYMENTS 1996

21.35 In 1996 Monarch made disbursements in cash amounting to IR£11,500, consisting of two payments of IR£5,000 each in January and one payment of IR£1,500 in March.

21.36 Each sum was attributed in MPSL's books as a cost associated with the Cherrywood project.

21.37 As was the case with cash expenditure in earlier years, none of the witnesses associated with Monarch was in a position to provide a satisfactory explanation to the Tribunal as to the purpose of the cash payments, or the identity of recipients.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO THE CASH PAYMENTS

22.01 The Tribunal was satisfied that a significant portion of Monarch's cash expenditure of IR£162,885 in the years 1992 to 1996 consisted of secret payments to certain elected councillors as part of its campaign to secure support for its rezoning project. While the Tribunal was unable to establish the identity of such individuals, it was satisfied that such payments were made.

22.02 Such expenditure was almost certainly corrupt. Those persons likely to have participated in this activity or to have known of it included Mr Monahan, Mr Lynn, Mr Glennane and Mr Sweeney.

22.03 The Tribunal was satisfied that the books and records of Monarch were so ordered as to conceal the true nature and identity of the ultimate recipients of such funds.

22.04 The Tribunal was satisfied that at all relevant times Mr Monahan, Mr Glennane, Mr Sweeney and Mr Lynn were parties to the deliberate concealment of the identity of the recipients of these funds in Monarch's books. In particular, the Tribunal did not accept Mr Glennane's claim to ignorance of the purpose of these cash payments to be unconvincing given his role as financial director for Monarch.

22.05 In relation to the IR£41,885 cash payments recorded between 11 October and 7 December 1993, the Tribunal rejected as completely implausible Mr Glennane's evidence that the probable purpose of these payments was to put Mr Monahan in funds to buy cars or antiques or to have cash at Christmas time. Not a single documentary record, memorandum or otherwise to underpin Mr Glennane's belief in this regard was provided to the Tribunal.

22.06 Equally implausible was Mr Glennane's contention that postings to the books of MPSL were done 'willy-nilly' and that any errors in such postings were corrected at year's end. There was no documentary evidence to suggest that any 'error' in posting the IR£41,885 cash expenditure to the 'sponsorship' or 'general promotions' account was ever detected or sought to be corrected by Monarch personnel. The Tribunal was therefore satisfied that this expenditure was correctly posted. The Tribunal was also satisfied that by posting the payments to these accounts in MPSL's books, Monarch recorded expenditure that had in fact occurred in connection with the Cherrywood lands.

22.07 Due to the manner in which the expenditures were recorded, namely by the insertion of the cash figure expended only, the Tribunal was satisfied that there was a deliberate policy decision on the part of Monarch to conceal the true purpose of these payments.

22.08 The Tribunal considered it significant that in no instance of the 1993 cash payments inquired into did Monarch identify the recipient. Specifically, the portion of the Cherrywood general promotions account in which the cash payments totalling IR£21,500 (the subject of a claim to GRE for 50 per cent recoupment) were posted, do not identify either the recipient, beneficiary or purpose of these payments. This is all the more extraordinary to the Tribunal when other entries in the Cherrywood general promotions account are considered. For example, in respect of entries covering transactions carried out between 7 September 1993 and 11 February 1994, Monarch went to the trouble of diligently recording the identity of the recipient of as little as IR£5.

22.09 It appeared that 50 per cent of this expenditure was recouped by Monarch from GRE in 1994 as a Cherrywood related expense.

22.10 The Tribunal was satisfied that there was a connection between the significant cash withdrawals made by Monarch from its accounts between 11 October and 7 December 1993 and a motion or motions listed for hearing on 3 November 1993 (but ultimately dealt with on 11 November 1993) with the potential to adversely affect Monarch's rezoning ambitions for its lands.

22.11 The Tribunal considered it significant that some IR£33,000 of the IR£41,885 expended by Monarch between 11 October and 7 December 1993 in connection with Cherrywood was expended in that same period. The timing of this expenditure, coupled with the manner in which it was treated in Monarch's books, led the Tribunal inexorably to the conclusion that all or a substantial portion of it was to certain councillors in exchange for their vote on Monarch linked proposals.

22.12 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Glennane, Mr Sweeney and Mr Lynn were aware at all material times of the purpose for which these funds were being used.

22.13 For the reasons already expressed in respect of the 1993 cash payments of IR£42,500, the Tribunal was also satisfied that in all likelihood a substantial portion of the cash obtained by Monarch from its bank accounts in 1994 was paid to certain elected councillors in Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council. In particular, the Tribunal was satisfied that Monarch used the cash amounts obtained in June and October 1994 for making payments to certain councillors for their vote and support in Monarch linked proposals.

22.14 In relation to the 1995/6 cash withdrawals, the Tribunal was likewise satisfied that all or a substantial proportion of this expenditure (IR£49,000 in 1995 and IR£11,500 in 1996) was incurred by Monarch in making payments to certain councillors in Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council and/or other politicians.

22.15 The Tribunal believed that at least a portion of these payments were made to certain elected councillors in return for their support for proposals which were voted on/agreed to in April 1995 at Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council, and which enabled Monarch to achieve a science and technology park zoning, and, more importantly, an increased residential density levels on a portion of its residentially zoned lands.

22.16 The Tribunal was also satisfied that, notwithstanding the adoption in April 1995 of the variation to the 1993 Plan, Monarch continued to make payments to elected councillors in Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council (and possibly other politicians) throughout 1995, ensuring that such individuals would remain 'on side' when the 1993 Plan, as varied, came under review. Such a review commenced in mid-1996. The Tribunal was satisfied that in the course of contemplating that review, Monarch's objective was to achieve even greater levels of residential/industrial/town centre zoning for its lands at Cherrywood, and to achieve greater residential density levels on all of its residentially zoned lands. The Tribunal believed that as far as Monarch was concerned, this objective could only be achieved if ongoing payments were being made to certain councillors or other politicians.

22.17 Insofar as the Tribunal satisfied itself that unattributed cash payments were made to certain unidentified councillors in the years 1992 to 1996, the Tribunal was satisfied that such payments were corruptly made by Monarch and corruptly received by the recipients.

22.18 The Tribunal was satisfied that no attempt was made by Monarch to recoup 50 per cent of the 1994-6 cash expenditure from GRE, although it was possible that some of these cash sums were incorporated in 'management' fees included in a recoupment claim to GRE.

THE MONARCH PAYMENTS TO POLITICIANS - AN OVERVIEW

23.01 Monarch's campaign to rezone its Cherrywood lands for development commenced in earnest (in 1991) in the lead up to the special meeting of 13 May 1992 and concluded on 13 July 1998 with the adoption by Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council of its revised development plan. County Council meetings and votes of councillors in 1990 and 1991 paved the way for the Cherrywood rezoning project.

23.02 Undoubtedly, based on the evidence given to the Tribunal, enormous sums of money were paid to a wide range of councillors or aspiring councillors in Dublin County Council prior to 1 January 1994 and in Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council subsequent to that date.

23.03 The Tribunal identified up to IR£290,400 in Monarch's books, comprised of cheque payments to identified individuals and political parties and cash payments to unidentified individuals. It is satisfied that much of this was paid by Monarch to politicians and political parties between 1991 and 1997 in connection with the Cherrywood rezoning project. This sum excluded payments made by Monarch to Mr Dunlop, or disbursements by Mr Dunlop to councillors for the purposes of securing support for the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands, and does not include all of the payments to Mr Lawlor.

23.04 The most significant concentration of cheque payments occurred in 1991 and in 1992. Of the total sum, approximately IR£127,515 was paid by individual cheque payments to identified politicians and/or political parties. Approximately IR£162,885, as found by the Tribunal, was disbursed in cash to unidentified politicians. The vast majority of this IR£162,885 cash disbursement occurred at pivotal times in the course of Monarch's campaign to rezone its Cherrywood lands. In the view of the Tribunal, this expenditure constituted a major financial assault on the democratic process.

23.05 The cash payments made in 1992 totalled IR£18,000 while in the years 1993, 1994 and 1995, cash sums exceeding IR£40,000 per annum were disbursed. In 1996 cash payments were made totalling IR£11,500.

MONARCH PAYMENTS TO MR DUNLOP

24.01 The Tribunal established that the sum of IR£85,000 was recorded in Monarch's books as the total of monies it paid to Mr Dunlop, of which IR£80,000 was paid between March and December 1993, with the balance of IR£5,000 being paid in August 1995.

24.02 Payments made by Monarch to Mr Dunlop were miscalculated by both parties in information they provided to the Tribunal prior to the relevant oral evidence being heard.

24.03 Monarch maintained that it paid Mr Dunlop a total of IR£52,500, being IR£47,500 between May and December 1993 and IR£5,000 in August 1995. Monarch asserted these figures in information it provided to the Tribunal on 22 June 2000, and again in a draft written statement submitted by Mr Monahan to the Tribunal on 10 April 2003.

24.04 On 30 May 2006, shortly before the commencement of the public hearings of the Cherrywood Module, and after the Tribunal had furnished Monarch with a brief of documentation relevant to the module, Monarch revised its claim of a total payment of IR£52,500 and said that the correct figure for the amount paid to Mr Dunlop was IR£85,000.

24.05 Mr Dunlop, on the other hand, maintained in 2000 that he had received a total of IR£25,000 in two separate payments, IR£10,000 and IR£15,000. He supported this assertion by furnishing to the Tribunal, with his October 2000 statement, two remittance advices in the sums of IR£15,000 and IR£10,000, dated 11 and 12 March 1993 respectively. At the end of the year 2000, therefore, the Tribunal had two conflicting accounts as to the amount of money Monarch had paid Mr Dunlop. On Monarch's version, a total of IR£52,500 had been paid, and it had cited the first payment of IR£10,000 as having been made on 26 May 1993. Yet on Mr Dunlop's version of events, within days of his meeting Mr Sweeney on 8 March 1993, he had been paid his fee of IR£25,000 in two tranches.

24.06 On 9 May 2001, having been informed by the Tribunal that Monarch had stated that it had paid him IR£52,500, Mr Dunlop advised the Tribunal that he had received IR£75,000 from Monarch. He attached a schedule compiled by his accountants Coyle & Coyle showing the breakdown of the sum of IR£75,000 to which he now admitted. Mr Dunlop subsequently revised this figure down to IR£60,000, his accountants having removed a figure of IR£15,000 from their previous schedule on the basis that payments to Mr Dunlop from Monarch had been over-stated.

24.07 However, despite Mr Dunlop's revision of the initial figure of IR£25,000 up to IR£60,000 in 2001, there remained a difference of IR£25,000 between the total the Tribunal had established Mr Dunlop had been paid (IR£85,000) and the figure he was suggesting.

24.08 The Tribunal believed, based on an analysis of documentation furnished to it by Monarch and by Mr Dunlop, that Mr Dunlop received a minimum of IR£85,000 from Monarch.

24.09 Mr Sweeney and Mr Glennane maintained that Monarch's initial agreement with Mr Dunlop was for a monthly retainer of IR£4,000 of which IR£25,000 was paid up front. Monarch told its partner, GRE, that Mr Dunlop was being paid IR£4,000 per month. Mr Dunlop rejected the evidence relating to an agreement for a monthly retainer.

24.10 The evidence disclosed to the Tribunal did not support the suggestion of a monthly retainer of IR£4,000 (or any other monthly sum) as having been agreed with, or paid to, Mr Dunlop.

IR£15,000 PAID ON 11 MARCH 1993

24.11 Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd recorded receipt of a payment of IR£15,000 from Monarch on 11 March 1993. The payment was lodged to the account of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd (as part of a composite lodgement of IR£16,604) on 12 March 1993 and was duly debited from the AIB bank account of MPSL.

IR£10,000 PAID ON 12 MARCH 1993

24.12 Monarch paid Mr Dunlop IR£10,000 by cheque on 12 March 1993. While accepting that he received this cheque, Mr Dunlop was unable to say precisely where or how it was negotiated. It was not lodged to the Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd bank account.

24.13 An AIB bank statement showed a lodgement of IR£1,000 on 12 March 1993 to the AIB College Green account of Mr Frank and Mrs Sheila Dunlop at AIB College Street. Mr Dunlop accepted that it was possible that he cashed the IR£10,000 cheque on that day and that IR£9,000 in cash was retained and a sum of IR£1,000 lodged to the account.

24.14 The sum of IR£10,000 was debited to the AIB bank account of MPSL in March 1993. The Tribunal was not furnished by either Monarch or Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd with any invoice to underpin either of these payments.

IR£10,000 PAID ON 26 MAY 1993

24.15 The next documented payment to Mr Dunlop on MPSL's cheque payments book was IR£10,000 on 26 May 1993. Monarch's discovery to the Tribunal revealed that it had in its possession an invoice from Mr Dunlop dated 10 April 1993 in the sum of IR£10,000 plus VAT (i.e. IR£12,100). Mr Dunlop's discovery failed to yield a copy of this invoice or other reference to it. The invoice discovered by Monarch was marked 'Paid 1 June 1993' although no cheque or debit in this amount (IR£12,100) has been located or identified in MPSL's cheque payments book or bank statements.

24.16 What did appear from Monarch's discovery was that on 26 May 1993 a cheque was drawn on MPSL's AIB current account payable to Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd in the sum of IR£10,000. This was signed by Mr Glennane and Mr Cooling.

24.17 While Mr Dunlop initially conceded that, given the existence of a remittance advice from Monarch to him dated 26 May 1993 (in Monarch's discovery), and evidence of the IR£10,000 cheque being debited to MPSTL's bank account on 3 June 1993, he must have received the payment, he changed his evidence after seeing the cheque in question. According to Mr Dunlop, the signature 'Frank Dunlop' on the back of the cheque endorsing it was not his. He professed not to have any recollection of the cheque.

24.18 Investigations by the Tribunal, and evidence from Mr Patrick Murphy, proprietor of Clearys Public House in Inchicore, Dublin, established that the Monarch cheque for IR£10,000 made payable to Mr Dunlop, dated 26 May 1993, was in fact cashed by Mr Liam Lawlor in Mr Murphy's public house. The back of this cheque was endorsed 'Frank Dunlop' and also carried the word 'Clearys'. The Tribunal concluded that this Monarch cheque for IR£10,000 made payable to Mr Dunlop, dated 26 May 1993, was in fact cashed by Mr Liam Lawlor in Mr Murphy's public house.

24.19 Mr Glennane acknowledged in evidence that the likely recipient of the proceeds of the IR£10,000 was indeed Mr Lawlor, but he disagreed with the suggestion that anyone in Monarch, including Mr Monahan, would have given the cheque to Mr Lawlor.

24.20 The Tribunal has considered a number of scenarios whereby a Monarch cheque made payable to Mr Dunlop would fall into Mr Lawlor's hands. Mr Dunlop's position was that he could not recollect giving a third party cheque to Mr Lawlor and he had no recollection in this instance of handing any such cheque to Mr Lawlor.

24.21 By May 1993 Mr Lawlor was in receipt of a number of cheques from Monarch, most notably two 'Comex' cheques totalling IR£56,300, paid to Mr Lawlor in October 1990 by a Monarch related company, L&C, which dealt with Monarch's Tallaght shopping centre development. Equally, there was documentary evidence that later in 1993 Mr Lawlor was in receipt of other payments from Monarch, both directly and indirectly,³¹ via an entity named Prague Strategic Studies, and otherwise. Therefore, had Monarch wished to put Mr Lawlor in funds, it had a number of options available for doing so without using Mr Dunlop's name.

24.22 Despite Mr Dunlop's protestations, the Tribunal was satisfied that the most likely manner in which this cheque for IR£10,000 ended up in Mr Lawlor's hands was that Mr Dunlop gave it to him.

³¹ Via Mrs Hazel Lawlor.

THE INVOICE DATED 10 APRIL 1993 AND THE IR£10,000 CHEQUE
DATED 26 MAY 1993

24.23 On Day 661 Mr Dunlop denied that the invoice dated 10 April 1993 had emanated from his office. He contended that the typeface was not of the type used by his office, and he pointed out that the invoice was not numbered. All other Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd invoices from Mr Dunlop to Monarch were numbered.³²

24.24 The Tribunal was satisfied that this invoice was generated by someone within Monarch either with or without Mr Dunlop's consent. The Tribunal was satisfied that this was done so that Monarch could furnish GRE with an invoice supporting its claim for recoupment of 50 per cent of Mr Dunlop's fees. This 'Frank Dunlop' invoice was provided to GRE in December 1993 together with a Monarch payment certificate dated 1 June 1993.

24.25 As already stated, neither Monarch nor Mr Dunlop's discovery disclosed any payment of IR£12,100 to Mr Dunlop on 1 June 1993 or on any other date. By June 1993 the only recorded payments to Mr Dunlop, apart from the cheque of 26 May 1993, were the two cheques of IR£15,000 and IR£10,000 paid in March 1993. By June 1993 Monarch had invoiced GRE for 50 per cent of the IR£25,000 which they said they had paid 'on account to Mr Dunlop in March'. GRE rejected Monarch's claim.

24.26 It appeared to the Tribunal that Monarch, either of its own accord or with Mr Dunlop's acquiescence, chose to generate a Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd invoice to comply with GRE's demand that its payments to Mr Dunlop adhere to the monthly retainer arrangement for which GRE was contending. It may have been that this 10 April 1993 invoice was created only when Monarch ultimately furnished GRE, in December 1993, with another two of Mr Dunlop's invoices so as to recoup 50 per cent of the amount they had by then paid Mr Dunlop.

24.27 The Tribunal saw no direct correlation between the 10 April 1993 invoice and the cheque dated 26 May 1993 payable to Mr Dunlop, which ended up in Mr Lawlor's possession. The Tribunal considered it more likely that this cheque was paid in the same manner as the previous two cheques paid to Mr Dunlop in March 1993, namely that a request emanated from him that he needed more money, and the May 1993 IR£10,000 cheque was then paid to him without a corresponding invoice.

24.28 The Tribunal was satisfied that the payment of this sum of IR£10,000, albeit encashed in Mr Lawlor's favour, constituted a payment by Monarch to Mr Dunlop.

TWO PAYMENTS OF IR£7,500 EACH PAID ON 1 JULY
AND 17 SEPTEMBER 1993

24.29 Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd provided Monarch with an invoice dated 19 May 1993 in the sum of IR£12,396.69 plus VAT at IR£2,603.31, a total of IR£15,000. The invoice was numbered 834 and was marked 'paid 19/5 and 17/9/93'. While Monarch's discovery of documentation to the Tribunal did not include a copy of invoice no. 834, Mr Dunlop's discovery did include a copy of this invoice.

24.30 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that this invoice was paid in two tranches, IR£7,500 on 1 July 1993 and IR£7,500 on 17 September 1993. Documentary evidence suggested that the two sums were lodged to the bank account of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd on 2 July and 17 September respectively as part of composite lodgements.

IR£15,000 PAID ON 2 NOVEMBER 1993

24.31 Monarch's discovery of documentation to the Tribunal produced an invoice from Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd dated 2 November 1993 for IR£15,000 with no VAT (cited VAT exempt). A cheque from Monarch for that sum duly issued on that date and was negotiated, presumably by Mr Dunlop, on that date. It was not lodged to the account of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd. The Monarch payment was authorised by Mr Sweeney.

24.32 The invoice in question stated that the service provided by Mr Dunlop was the 'provision of media and communications training' for 1993/4.

24.33 Mr Dunlop acknowledged to the Tribunal that he never provided media or communications training or services to Monarch, and this was acknowledged by both Mr Sweeney and Mr Glennane in the course of their evidence. Neither Mr Glennane nor Mr Sweeney was in a position to offer the Tribunal any explanation as to why the invoice included this incorrect information, or why it was VAT exempt. Mr Sweeney told the Tribunal that he did not recollect noticing that the invoice was VAT exempt.

24.34 Mr Glennane did not see any connection between the payment of IR£15,000, VAT-free, on 2 November 1993, on foot of an invoice which included an erroneous description of the services provided to Monarch by Mr Dunlop, and the Cherrywood lands motion scheduled for a meeting of Dublin County Council on 3 November 1993. Mr Lynn told the Tribunal that he was unaware of any payments to Mr Dunlop at this time.

24.35 Unusually, the VAT-exempt invoice was not submitted by Monarch to GRE for partial reimbursement. No credible explanation for this was given to the Tribunal.

24.36 Mr Dunlop's diary for 2 November 1993 recorded a scheduled meeting between himself and Mr Sweeney. Although Mr Sweeney denied this, the Tribunal believed it likely that at that meeting Mr Dunlop was provided with a cheque for IR£15,000 from Monarch, and that Mr Sweeney was aware or believed that the payment (and its urgency) was linked to the special meeting of Dublin County Council scheduled for the following day when motions affecting Monarch's interest were on the agenda. The Tribunal also believed it likely that Mr Sweeney was aware of the need to place Mr Dunlop in funds to pay councillors for their support for Monarch's rezoning project.

24.37 This payment was made to Mr Dunlop at approximately the same time (October and November 1993) as Monarch disbursed cash payments for which no credible explanation was provided to the Tribunal. The Tribunal concluded that all or a portion of these cash disbursements by Monarch were used to bribe elected councillors to support Monarch's rezoning proposals.

24.38 By 2 November, 1993, the total paid to Mr Dunlop amounted to IR£65,000.

IR£15,000 PAID 21 DECEMBER 1993

24.39 Monarch records indicated that a cheque for IR£15,000 was paid to Mr Dunlop on 21 December 1993 'on a/c'.

24.40 Documentation discovered to the Tribunal by Monarch included an invoice (no. 955) from Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd dated 6 December 1993, claiming fees of IR£25,000 plus VAT (a total of IR£30,250) and 'miscellaneous' costs of IR£927.22 plus VAT. The invoice total was IR£31,371.94.

24.41 However, an invoice with the same number and date was identified in Mr Dunlop's discovery of documentation to the Tribunal, addressed to Monarch, claiming professional fees of IR£17,500 plus VAT (IR£21,175) together with 'miscellaneous' costs of IR£927.22 plus VAT. The total of this invoice was IR£22,296.94.

24.42 This issue became further complicated when a third invoice numbered 955 and dated 6 December 1993 came to light. It was contained in Monarch's discovery of documentation to the Tribunal. It claimed the sum of IR£22,296.94, but allowed credit to Monarch for IR£15,000, leaving the figure outstanding as IR£7,296.94. This invoice was faxed by Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd to Monarch on 4 May 1994.

24.43 The sum of IR£15,000 actually paid by Monarch to Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd on 21 December 1993 was lodged to the company's bank account on that date.

24.44 No credible explanation was provided to the Tribunal by Mr Dunlop or Mr Glennane as to how three invoices with the same number were generated, each containing different information.

24.45 The Tribunal did not accept as true, the evidence provided to the Tribunal by both Mr Dunlop and Mr Glennane in relation to this payment, and the reasons for the multiple, but similarly numbered, invoices.

IR£5,000 PAID IN AUGUST 1995

24.46 In August 1995 Monarch paid IR£5,000 by cheque to Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd. It appeared to have been lodged to that company's bank account.

24.47 This payment brought the total sums paid by Monarch to Mr Dunlop to IR£85,000.

HOW MR DUNLOP DEALT WITH THE IR£85,000 RECEIVED FROM MONARCH

24.48 The Tribunal was satisfied that the IR£85,000 paid by Monarch to Mr Dunlop was dealt with by him as follows:

- IR£50,000 was lodged to the Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd bank account.
- IR£10,000 was cashed by Mr Dunlop and part was paid into one of his 'war chest' accounts.
- IR£15,000 paid on 2 November 1993 was cashed by Mr Dunlop.
- IR£10,000 was given to Mr Lawlor.

SUCCESS FEE

24.49 Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd issued an invoice to Monarch on 14 December 1993 for IR£50,000 plus VAT. This represented a success fee being claimed by Mr Dunlop.

24.50 Mr Dunlop maintained that Monarch never paid him a success fee. While he issued the invoice on 14 December 1993 he said this was done following a discussion with Mr Sweeney and Mr Glennane in which he was urged to claim a success fee in order to see how far such a claim would be entertained.

24.51 Documents discovered to the Tribunal by Monarch indicated that the question of Mr Dunlop's success fee was the subject of correspondence and discussion between Monarch (as represented by Mr Sweeney) and GRE as far back as September 1993. Correspondence to GRE from Monarch on 28 September 1993 made reference to the agreement of a success fee payment of IR£50,000 to Mr Dunlop.

24.52 On being asked to account for the fact that the documentary evidence available to the Tribunal established that by September 1993 payments totalling IR£50,000 had been paid to Mr Dunlop, Mr Sweeney told the Tribunal that Mr Monahan had advised him that a success fee of IR£50,000 had been agreed with Mr Dunlop. It was Mr Sweeney's understanding that Mr Dunlop had been paid a success fee at this time.

24.53 However, the Tribunal rejected Mr Sweeney's evidence on this issue because, as of September 1993, no County Council vote had taken place since Mr Dunlop had been first retained (March 1993), and there was therefore no basis on which he could have considered himself entitled to a 'success fee'.

24.54 Neither Mr Sweeney nor Mr Glennane was in a position to identify any financial record within Monarch indicating a payment to Mr Dunlop of the IR£50,000. The only payment to Mr Dunlop that followed upon the two invoices he issued to Monarch in December 1993 (i.e. the 6 December 1993 invoice for IR£31,371.04³³ and the 14 December invoice for IR£50,000 plus VAT) was the cheque issued on 21 December 1993, for IR£15,000. Mr Glennane described this payment to Mr Dunlop as a payment on his general account, including a success fee, but he was unable to identify any document or record suggesting that the IR£15,000 was part of a success fee.

³³ In fact, two invoices, with the same date and number, were generated by Frank Dunlop Associates, for different amounts (IR£22,296.94 and IR£31,371.94). Only the latter was paid. Mr Dunlop was unable to explain why two invoices had been generated, but suggested that there may have been a re-negotiation of the amount of the invoice.

24.55 The Tribunal was unable to determine exactly what arrangements existed between Mr Dunlop and Monarch in relation to a success fee.

24.56 It was clearly convenient for Mr Glennane and Mr Sweeney to insist to the Tribunal that portion of the IR£85,000 paid to Mr Dunlop contained a success fee, as this assertion tended to lend credence to their evidence as to the terms of Mr Dunlop's retention. The thrust of that evidence (which was rejected by the Tribunal) was that Mr Dunlop had been engaged on a monthly fee of IR£4,000. Had this been in fact the case, the records should have indicated that Mr Dunlop, by December 1993, had received IR£36,000 (plus VAT). Yet the records established that by this time Mr Dunlop had been in receipt of IR£80,000, IR£65,000 of which had been paid to him before any 'success' had been achieved by Monarch.

24.57 Ultimately the Tribunal was satisfied that Monarch paid Mr Dunlop a significant amount of money in pursuit of its objective to increase the permitted residential density of its lands, in the knowledge that Mr Dunlop would pay some of this money to certain councillors.

24.58 In the Tribunal's view, the flurry of activity in December 1993 between Mr Dunlop and Monarch, and between Monarch and GRE, concerning the exchange of invoices, was merely a calculated manoeuvre by Monarch to produce documentary support to assist in recouping from GRE 50 per cent of the money paid to Mr Dunlop.

MONARCH'S RECOUPMENT FROM GRE IN RELATION TO MR DUNLOP

25.01 Evidence to the Tribunal established that Monarch issued GRE with four invoices seeking to recoup 50 per cent of what Monarch described as fees paid to Mr Dunlop between April and December 1993, pursuant to a IR£4,000 per month retainer agreement. Monarch also sought 50 per cent of a IR£50,000 success fee they claimed was paid to Mr Dunlop. The total amount claimed from GRE was IR£52,030.

25.02 Three of the Monarch invoices, dated 12 July 1993, 31 August 1993 and 10 December 1993 respectively, claimed 50 per cent of the money Monarch claimed it had paid Mr Dunlop on a monthly basis.

25.03 The fourth invoice sought 50 per cent of a IR£50,000 plus VAT success fee paid to Mr Dunlop.

25.04 When Monarch wrote to GRE on 15 December 1993, it attached three invoices from Frank Dunlop & Associate in support of its claims.

25.05 These invoices were:

- The 10 April 1993 invoice for IR£12,100
- The 6 December 1993 invoice no. 955 for IR£31,371.94
- The 14 December 1993 invoice no. 1251 for IR£50,000 plus VAT, total IR£60,500.

25.06 This latter invoice was accompanied with confirmation by Monarch that Mr Dunlop was paid on 14 December 1993 (the same date as the invoice). The description of work on the invoice was ‘success fee’.

25.07 On foot of the four Monarch invoices forwarded to GRE, underpinned by the three Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd invoices, GRE duly paid Monarch IR£52,030. By virtue of this payment Monarch recouped more than half of the monies which its own accounts record as having been paid to Mr Dunlop in 1993.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS ON THE MONARCH PAYMENTS TO MR DUNLOP

26.01 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Monahan, Mr Glennane, Mr Sweeney and Mr Lynn knew of the essential purpose of Mr Dunlop’s engagement – that is, the lobbying of county councillors with the corrupt payment of money (where deemed by Mr Dunlop as being necessary) in order to ensure their support for motions promoting the rezoning of the Monarch lands in Cherrywood.

26.02 Mr Dunlop was paid a minimum of IR£85,000 between 1993 and 1995 with the two objects of:

- 1) Remunerating and rewarding him for the effort he was to expend in promoting the Cherrywood project.

- 2) Providing him with funds for disbursement to councillors in the course of the Cherrywood project to ensure their support for that project.

26.03 In the absence of any agreement between them, both Mr Dunlop and Monarch separately engaged in a process of misinforming the Tribunal of the total amount of payments made by Monarch to Mr Dunlop in circumstances where they probably expected that the Tribunal would not embark on a detailed investigation of such payments in the course of the Cherrywood module.

26.04 The manner in which Monarch disbursed payments to Mr Dunlop in 1993 assisted the Tribunal in reaching its finding that, on the balance of probability, such payments were, at least in part, made for the purposes of enabling Mr Dunlop to make corrupt payments to councillors. The payments did not follow any particular pattern nor were they paid in accordance with an agreed schedule of payments, expressly or by implication. Furthermore, on occasion, these payments were made without any explanatory invoices, sometimes without VAT.

26.05 Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd's invoices, on occasion containing false information, were generated for the purposes of enabling Monarch to reclaim 50 per cent of their face value from GRE. These invoices did not always accurately represent the amounts paid on foot of them to Mr Dunlop. Invoices may also have been generated for other purposes.

MONARCH AND MR LIAM LAWLOR TD (FF)

27.01 Mr Lawlor was a Fianna Fáil county councillor until mid-1991, and a TD until 2002. He had not represented the Cherrywood area of Co. Dublin in either capacity. The Tribunal was satisfied from documentation it examined that, between October 1990 and 1996, Mr Lawlor received payments amounting to at least IR£72,800 from Monarch.³⁴ Save in the case of two of these payments (IR£2,500 paid in 1995 and IR£1,000 paid in 1996), Monarch's books and records did not identify Mr Lawlor as the recipient of the payments.

27.02 The Tribunal considered each of the payments and such documentary trail as was found to exist in relation to them.

27.03 In a document provided to the Tribunal on 29 January 2001, Mr Lawlor informed the Tribunal that he had received IR£40,000 from Monarch in 'political donations' and 'consultancy fees'. On 9 April 2002, Mr Lawlor advised the Tribunal that the IR£40,000 figure was estimated and constituted political contributions towards election campaigns and running his constituency office. In a letter dated 18 June 2003, Mr Lawlor revised the IR£40,000 figure downwards to IR£30,000, without providing any explanation for this revision.

27.04 In June 2000, Monarch advised the Tribunal through its solicitors that it had made political donations to Mr Lawlor totalling IR£6,500 (IR£3,000 in 1994, IR£2,500 in 1995, and IR£1,000 in 1996).

27.05 This total significantly underestimated the sums which the Tribunal established were actually paid by Monarch to Mr Lawlor. The documentary trail examined by the Tribunal showed that between 1990 and 1996 some IR£72,800 was paid.

PAYMENTS TO MR LAWLOR IN 1990

27.06 On 16 October 1990, L&C Properties recorded in its cheque payments book two payments of IR£28,000 and IR£28,300 respectively made to Comex Trading Corporation.

27.07 Comex Trading Corporation was a fictitious entity³⁵ used by Mr Lawlor for the purposes of generating false invoices as a basis for obtaining funds.³⁶

27.08 On 26 October 1990, the payment of IR£28,300 was lodged to the Bank of Ireland account of Economic Reports Ltd, an entity beneficially owned by Mr Lawlor. While the Tribunal has not identified the manner in which Mr Lawlor dealt with the second Comex cheque for IR£28,000, it was satisfied that he did indeed receive that payment.

27.09 The reason for these payments was not clarified. Mr Glennane and Mr Sweeney claimed that they were unaware of Comex Trading Corporation and its use by Mr Lawlor to generate invoices and receive funds, and they were unable to explain what services he had provided to Monarch in return for such funding.

27.10 Mr Sweeney's evidence was that he had not retained Comex in the context of the Tallaght development and that he did not know that Comex was an entity used by Mr Lawlor for raising invoices until apprised of that fact by the Tribunal.

27.11 Mr Glennane's evidence was that he could not recall if he had been aware, in October 1990 that two payments had been made to Comex. He too told the Tribunal that he only became aware of the Lawlor/Comex connection when it was brought to his attention by the Tribunal. Mr Glennane denied authorising any payment to Mr Lawlor in 1990, via Comex or otherwise.

³⁵ Acknowledged as such by Mr Lawlor in an affidavit sworn for the High Court on 21 January 2002.

27.12 Mr Sweeney told the Tribunal that Mr Monahan had introduced Mr Lawlor to him, and that he understood Mr Lawlor's involvement with Monarch in 1990 to relate to the Tallaght shopping centre development, and more particularly, the provision of advice in relation to it on Monarch's dealings with Dublin Corporation and Dublin County Council. Mr Sweeney was unable to say if Mr Lawlor had assisted Monarch in achieving tax designation status for the Tallaght development.

27.13 While he had not been privy to any of the negotiations that undoubtedly took place between Mr Lawlor and Mr Monahan in relation to monies paid to Mr Lawlor in 1990, Mr Sweeney rejected a suggestion Mr Lawlor made in his correspondence with the Tribunal, namely, that Mr Sweeney, together with Mr Monahan, had paid Mr Lawlor approximately IR£40,000 by way of political donations and/or consultancy fees. In the course of his evidence, Mr Sweeney described how Mr Monahan had telephoned him in either 2001 or 2002 to ask if he (Mr Sweeney) had given IR£40,000 to Mr Lawlor.

THE TREATMENT OF THE LAWLOR/COMEX PAYMENTS IN L&C'S BOOKS

27.14 The Tribunal considered the manner in which payments to Mr Lawlor/Comex were treated in L&C Properties' books to be significant.

27.15 In the first instance the expenditure was recorded in the L&C Properties Ltd cheque payments book as two cheques to 'Comex Trading Corp'. In the L&C Ltd general ledger report for 1991, the payments were designated as 'strategy plan' in the nominal ledger account professional and consultant fees.

27.16 The two October 1990 payments were the only payments designated as 'strategy plan' fees in L&C's books (relating to professional and consultant fees for the fiscal year 1991). The Tribunal considered it significant that the word 'strategy' as a description of a payment to a politician was used by Monarch in the context of its Cherrywood project. It was under the heading 'Strategy Consultancy Fees' that, in 1992, Mr Lynn claimed from GRE 50 per cent of the monies expended in 1991 on politicians/councillors, and it was under this same category that he projected future expenditure in the context of the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands.³⁷

27.17 The Tribunal noted with interest the timing of the payments made to Mr Lawlor. They were made upon the completion of the Tallaght shopping centre project,³⁸ and at a time when the draft plans for the Carrickmines Valley were in the process of being presented to the members of Dublin County Council.

27.18 The Tribunal was satisfied that in 1990 Monarch personnel were conscious of the potential influence which Mr Lawlor could exercise in the context of the review of the 1983 Development Plan.

27.19 The Tribunal was satisfied that, from Monarch's perspective, Mr Lawlor was being remunerated in October 1990 for services previously provided by him in relation to its Tallaght development, and in contemplation of future services that he might provide in respect of ongoing developments, including Cherrywood. For reasons better known to Monarch, and which no Monarch witness has shared with the Tribunal, Monarch went to considerable efforts in its books to conceal the nature of the service provided by Mr Lawlor when it used the term 'strategy plan'. Mr Glennane suggested that the term may have been taken from Mr Lawlor's invoice.

27.20 Although throughout 1990 Mr Lawlor was an elected TD and an elected member of Dublin County Council, the manner of the October 1990 payments to him and their treatment in L&C Properties' books, coupled with the way in which he dealt with at least one of the cheques, belied his suggestion that payments he received from Monarch were political donations. It was the view of the Tribunal that there could be no justification for the payment by Monarch, or the acceptance by Mr Lawlor, of a sum of IR£56,300 in 1990 in circumstances where, the Tribunal was satisfied, both Monarch and Mr Lawlor knew that Dublin County Council had embarked on its consideration of rezoning proposals for the Carrickmines valley. The timing of the two payments of IR£28,000 and IR£28,300, coupled with their designation in Monarch's books and records as 'strategy plan' (a term akin to that used by Monarch in 1992 to describe payments it had made to Local Election candidates in 1991) led the Tribunal to conclude that the payments were, in part at least, connected to Mr Lawlor's role as an elected member of Dublin County Council. In all the circumstances, these payments were corrupt.

NO PAYMENTS TO MR LAWLOR IN 1991 AND 1992

27.21 Curiously, Mr Lawlor was not identified as a recipient of a payment from Monarch at the time of the 1991 Local Elections (in which he lost his Council seat), or the 1992 General Election (in which he retained his Dáil seat), although large numbers of his fellow councillors and TDs were generously supported in one or both elections. Monarch records did not identify Mr Lawlor as a recipient of any payment in 1991 or 1992, a fact which surprised Mr Sweeney. It was possible that some of the cash payments made to unidentified individuals were, in fact, paid to Mr Lawlor.

³⁸ The centre was opened on 23 October 1990.

PAYMENTS TO MR LAWLOR IN LATE 1993

27.22 Monarch appeared to have paid Mr Lawlor, indirectly, three times in late 1993, the payments totalling IR£10,000. In none of these instances was Mr Lawlor named or designated the recipient of these funds.

27.23 On 23 November 1993, a payment of IR£3,000 was made to Mrs Hazel Lawlor, Mr Lawlor's wife. This was probably done at the behest of Mr Lawlor.

27.24 On 22 December 1993, and on 31 December 1993, two cheques for IR£4,000 and IR£3,000 respectively were paid to 'cash'. They were attributed in MPSL's cheque payments book as payments to 'Prague Strategic Studies'. Both cheques were cashed in the Lucan branch of Bank of Ireland, where Mr Lawlor had a bank account.

27.25 The Tribunal was satisfied that 'Prague Strategic Studies' was a fictitious entity, and may have been used by Mr Lawlor for the purpose of generating one or more false invoices to facilitate payments from Monarch.

27.26 Because of the reference to 'Invoice' in the 'Prague Strategic Studies' entry in MPSL's books, the Tribunal considered it reasonable to conclude that Mr Lawlor may have provided an invoice styled 'Prague Strategic Studies' to Monarch. MPSL's books suggested that a sum of IR£10,000 was invoiced and paid. The Tribunal considered it possible that the IR£3,000 Mrs Lawlor received, and the cheques for IR£4,000 and IR£3,000 cashed by Mr Lawlor, were the sums paid out by Monarch in satisfaction of this invoice.

27.27 Mr Glennane was unable to provide a credible explanation as to why such payments had been made to Mr Lawlor. His suggestion that the payments related to a 'Prague Project' with which Monarch was involved, was almost certainly incorrect.

27.28 The 'Prague Project' was a description used to identify a business arrangement then ongoing between Monarch and Mr Ambrose Kelly which involved Mr Lawlor. MPSL's books clearly identified Mr Kelly as the recipient of funds in relation to that business arrangement.

27.29 The Tribunal did not accept that Mr Lawlor's involvement in the Monarch/Kelly 'Prague Project' (which appeared never to have become a reality) was the real reason why Monarch paid him IR£10,000 between November and December 1993. The Tribunal considered it more likely that Mr Lawlor was being remunerated by Monarch in the context of the Cherrywood rezoning project and the Development Plan review at that time. By 10 December 1993, the Development Plan for County Dublin had been finalised. By virtue of successful votes on Monarch-related motions on 11 November, Monarch had retained the district centre zoning on its lands and had had reinstated density levels of 4 houses per acre on its residentially zoned lands.

27.30 While Mr Lawlor was not a councillor in November 1993, the Tribunal was nevertheless satisfied that in the run up to the November 1993 votes, Monarch perceived him as a person with influence over certain Fianna Fáil councillors within the Council. Consequently, the Tribunal concluded that the payments made to Mr Lawlor in November and December 1993 were likely to have been made in this context.

27.31 Mr Sweeney denied that Mr Lawlor lobbied councillors to support the Cherrywood project, although he accepted that Mr Lawlor may have attended meetings with Mr Dunlop at which the lobbying of councillors was discussed.

27.32 Mr Lynn denied having any involvement with Mr Lawlor after May 1991, but accepted that Mr Lawlor was influential and knowledgeable in planning matters in Dublin County Council.

27.33 In a one-page document provided by Monarch to the Tribunal, purporting to refer to payments it made to Mr Dunlop between March and September 1993 in connection with the Cherrywood project, there appeared handwritten references to the November/December 1993 payments to Mrs Lawlor and to Prague Strategic totalling IR£10,000, suggesting an association between these three Lawlor payments and the Cherrywood project itself.

27.34 Furthermore, in its MPSL books, Monarch specifically attributed the 23 November 1993 payment of IR£3,000 to Mrs Lawlor as a cost in connection with the Cherrywood lands.

27.35 The Tribunal noted that Mr Glennane's diary contained seven references to Mr Lawlor, and one reference to Mrs Lawlor between 17 November and 15 December 1993. It was likely therefore that Mr Glennane's knowledge of these payments, and his knowledge of Mr Lawlor's association with Monarch in November/December 1993 was greater than he indicated to the Tribunal.

Indeed, the Tribunal regarded it as incredible that Mr Glennane, having regard to his position as, in effect, financial controller, did not have an intimate knowledge of the payments to Mr Lawlor, and their purpose.

PAYMENTS TO MR LAWLOR IN 1994–6

27.36 In their ‘political payments’ list for 1991 to 1997, Monarch listed payments of IR£2,500 in 1995 and IR£1,000 in 1996 to Mr Lawlor. It further attributed a payment of IR£3,000 designated to ‘A & L Lawlor’, made in July 1994, as a payment to Mr Lawlor.

THE TRIBUNAL’S CONCLUSIONS ON THE PAYMENTS TO MR LAWLOR

27.37 The Tribunal was satisfied that:

- 1) The bulk of the payments made to Mr Lawlor were for purposes other than political.
- 2) The total sum of IR£56,300 paid in October 1990 was, in all probability, connected to assistance Mr Lawlor rendered to Monarch in relation to the Tallaght shopping centre development and the campaign to rezone Cherrywood.
- 3) The IR£10,000 paid to Mr Lawlor in November/December 1993 was paid in connection with the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands.

27.38 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Glennane, Mr Sweeney and Mr Lynn did not fully disclose to the Tribunal their knowledge as to the services provided to Monarch by Mr Lawlor, and the manner and detail in which payments to him were effected and accounted for.

27.39 The Tribunal was satisfied that, while Mr Lawlor mostly dealt with Mr Monahan in connection with Monarch issues, the three named executives were at all times fully aware of Mr Lawlor’s involvement with Monarch, and were probably aware of the extent of the payments made to him in the period 1990 to 1996.

27.40 Both Monarch and Mr Lawlor failed to provide the Tribunal with correct information as to the payments by Monarch to Mr Lawlor in the period 1990 to 1996.

PAYMENTS TO COUNCILLORS BY MONARCH AND MR DUNLOP

28.01 In the course of private interviews with the Tribunal’s legal team in 2000, Mr Dunlop named Cllrs Lydon and Hand as two members of Dublin County Council to whom he had paid money in return for their support for the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands. No sworn evidence was given to the Tribunal of payments by Mr Dunlop to either Cllr Lydon or Cllr Hand in connection with the Cherrywood lands.

28.02 In his written statement to the Tribunal in October 2000, Mr Dunlop named Cllrs Fox and McGrath as recipients of money in return for their support for the Cherrywood proposals. Neither had been referred to by Mr Dunlop, in the context of Cherrywood, in the course of the Tribunal's private interviews in 2000. Mr Dunlop neither repeated nor withdrew the allegation of payments to Cllrs Lydon and Hand in that statement.

ALLEGED PAYMENTS BY MR DUNLOP TO CLLR TONY FOX (FF)

28.03 Cllr Fox was an elected councillor during the years between 1991 and 1997, having been first elected to Dublin County Council in 1985. He transferred to Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council from early 1994 and was Cathaoirleach in 1996/7. Cllr Fox invariably described himself as pro development. He generally voted in favour of rezoning land for development and voted at all relevant times in favour of proposals which promoted or assisted the rezoning of Monarch's Cherrywood lands, as did a number of other councillors.

28.04 Mr Dunlop alleged that he paid IR£2,000 in cash to Cllr Fox in return for his agreement to support the rezoning of Monarch's Cherrywood lands. Mr Dunlop described Cllr Fox as a 'key' figure within Dublin County Council.

28.05 Mr Dunlop consistently gave evidence to the Tribunal, in a number of modules, that he and Cllr Fox were regularly in contact during the course of the review of the Dublin County Development Plan, and that he had on a number of occasions paid Cllr Fox sums of money, at his request, in order to secure his support for the rezoning of specific parcels of land in the course of the Development Plan review. Mr Dunlop stated in the course of his evidence in the Cherrywood module: 'Hardly a week passed that I would not have discussed matters with Tony Fox.'

28.06 Mr Dunlop recalled lobbying Cllr Fox to support the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands and discussing it with him. It was his belief that he initiated contact with Cllr Fox in relation to the Cherrywood lands shortly after his retention by Monarch in early March 1993. On being approached, Cllr Fox had stated that he would have to be given 'something' for his support.

28.07 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that Cllr Fox commented to him that Monarch had been 'mean'. Mr Dunlop interpreted this comment as a reference by Cllr Fox to his belief that Monarch had either failed to pay him money, or had paid him inadequately, in return for his support for Monarch's Cherrywood project. (Monarch records indicate that Monarch paid Cllr Fox IR£600 in 1991 as a political contribution, and IR£1,000 in late January 1993³⁹ as a contribution to election expenses in the November 1992 General Election, an election in which Cllr Fox was not a candidate.)

28.08 Mr Dunlop stated that payment of the IR£2,000 was not made until after the vote of 11 November 1993. He was unable to confirm to the Tribunal exactly when or where the payment was made save that it was likely to have been paid at one of the usual locations where he met Cllr Fox – i.e. Dublin County Council, its environs, or Cllr Fox's home.

28.09 Although Cllr Fox acknowledged to the Tribunal that there was contact between himself and Mr Dunlop during the review of the 1983 Development Plan, and that Mr Dunlop had lobbied him for his support for various developments in the course of that review, he maintained that he did not know of Mr Dunlop's role as a lobbyist for Monarch. Cllr Fox recalled being lobbied by Monarch personnel in relation to the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands, but claimed that Mr Dunlop had never raised the issue with him.

28.10 The Tribunal heard evidence of telephone contact between Cllr Fox and Mr Dunlop's office. While Cllr Fox did not necessarily accept the accuracy of the telephone records maintained by Mr Dunlop's secretary, he agreed that he did on occasion telephone Mr Dunlop's office. Cllr Fox suggested that many or all of these calls were simply return calls made to him in the first instance by Mr Dunlop.

28.11 Cllr Fox strongly denied requesting any payment from Mr Dunlop and, more specifically, denied that he received IR£2,000 or any sum from Mr Dunlop in relation to the Cherrywood lands. On a number of occasions in the course of his sworn evidence to the Tribunal in this and other modules, Cllr Fox denied that he had ever received money from Mr Dunlop by way of political donation or for any other purpose.

28.12 The Tribunal rejected Cllr Fox's evidence that he was unaware that Mr Dunlop had been retained by Monarch. The Tribunal was satisfied to accept Mr Dunlop's evidence that he lobbied Cllr Fox in relation to Cherrywood and it preferred Mr Dunlop's evidence that the question of money arose in the course of such lobbying endeavours. The Tribunal was assisted in reaching this conclusion by Mr Dunlop's clear recollection of Cllr Fox's reference to Monarch as being 'mean'.

28.13 As to whether or not Mr Dunlop paid IR£2,000 to Cllr Fox as he alleged, the Tribunal preferred Mr Dunlop's evidence on that issue to that of Cllr Fox and was therefore satisfied that Mr Dunlop did in fact pay IR£2,000 cash to Cllr Fox shortly after the Dublin County Council vote on 11 November 1993, and that he did so, in effect, at Cllr Fox's request, and that the payment was corrupt.

In preferring Mr Dunlop's testimony over that of Cllr Fox, the Tribunal also took cognisance of the fact that Cllr Fox was satisfied to accept a cheque for IR£1,000 from Monarch in January 1993 (by way of claimed election contribution) in circumstances where, as matters transpired, he had been neither a General Election nor a Seanad Election candidate. These circumstances suggested to the Tribunal a willingness on the part of Cllr Fox to accept money in the absence of any 'election' reason for so doing (even if it would have been justifiable, which it was not).

28.14 The Tribunal was satisfied that throughout 1993, and subsequently, there was frequent contact, including telephone contact, between Mr Dunlop and Cllr Fox. It was acknowledged by Cllr Fox that there was extensive contact between himself and Mr Lynn in the period 1991 to 1997.

PAYMENTS TO CLLR TONY FOX BY MONARCH

28.15 Records provided to the Tribunal by Monarch indicated that it paid Cllr Fox sums of money totalling IR£2,160 in the period between mid June 1991 and early 1997. A further payment of IR£250 made by Monarch on 14 April 1994 may have been passed by Cllr Fox to the Fianna Fáil Party. In addition, payments of IR£250 and IR£300 were made by Monarch in respectively February 1995 and March 1997 to Bradford Rovers Football Club in Cllr Fox's electoral area, both sums having been solicited as a contribution to the club by Cllr Fox.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£600 ON 5 JUNE 1991

28.16 Monarch's books indicated that it paid a cheque for IR£600 to Cllr Fox on 5 June 1991 and that the cheque's purpose was 'local election expenses'. Similar sized payments, and a number of smaller and larger payments, were made to a large number of other councillors who were standing for re-election in the 1991 Local Elections. Cllr Fox told the Tribunal that he did not solicit this payment. He also told the Tribunal that at the time he received the payment of IR£600 in 1991, it was the largest election contribution he had received.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£1,000 ON 29 JANUARY 1993

28.17 Monarch paid IR£1,000 to Cllr Fox on 29 January 1993 and claimed that this was as a contribution towards his expenses in the November 1992 General Election.⁴⁰

28.18 Mr Lynn's evidence was that when Cllr Fox told him that he was contemplating running in the General Election he advised Cllr Fox that he would recommend to Monarch that he be given financial support. Cllr Fox told the Tribunal that in contemplation of running for the General Election he wrote to Monarch for financial support and believed he had done so at Mr Lynn's suggestion. No such letter has been located by the Tribunal in the discovered Monarch's records.

28.19 Cllr Fox was not selected by the Fianna Fáil convention as a candidate for either the General or Seanad Elections 1992/3.⁴¹ Cllr Fox told the Tribunal that while he had decided to stand in the General Election in 1992 he failed to get a party nomination for either the Dáil or Seanad.

28.20 Despite this, on 29 January 1993, some two months or so after the Dáil election in which Cllr Fox failed to secure a nomination, Monarch contributed IR£1,000 to Cllr Fox, a sum matching that paid by Monarch to 7 politicians who were in fact candidates in the 1992 General Election. Cllr Fox acknowledged that this payment of IR£1,000 in early 1993 was at that time the largest contribution ever received by him at election time.

28.21 The Tribunal believed that this payment was made to Cllr Fox on this occasion to ensure his support for Monarch's zoning plans for Cherrywood.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£280 ON 14 JUNE 1996

28.22 Monarch's records indicated that it paid a cheque for IR£280 to Cllr Fox on 14 June 1996, and that its stated purpose was 'golf fundraiser'.

28.23 Cllr Fox acknowledged that he solicited this payment from Monarch.

⁴⁰ Monarch records indicated that a cheque for IR£1,000 was paid to Cllr Fox on 29 January 1993 with its purpose being described as 'general election 1992'.

⁴¹ The 1992 General Election commenced with the Dáil election which was called on 5 November and which was held on 25 November 1992 and concluded with the Seanad Election for which polling took place between 18 January and 1 February 1993.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£280 ON 13 FEBRUARY 1997

28.24 Monarch's records indicated that it paid a cheque for IR£280 to Cllr Fox on 13 February 1997, with its purpose stated as 'golf outing'. Cllr Fox acknowledged that he solicited this payment from Monarch.

CLLR FOX'S VOTING RECORD

28.25 There was no record of Cllr Fox having voted on the McDonald/Coffey motion⁴² at the special meeting of Dublin County Council held on 6 December 1990.

28.26 On 24 May 1991, Cllr Fox was recorded as voting against Option 1 (Map DP90/129A), a proposal that did not favour Monarch's rezoning ambitions. This map, as subsequently amended, went on statutory public display in the period September to December 1991.

28.27 On 27 May 1992, Cllr Fox voted in favour of adopting Map DP92/44 (the Manager's map), a proposal favourable to Monarch's interests. This motion was not successful. On the same date Cllr Fox voted against the successful Barrett/Dockrell motion which severely hampered Monarch's ambitions for increased-density residential zoning for its lands.

28.28 Cllr Fox supported the Monarch position at the special meeting of 11 November 1993 of Dublin County Council by voting in favour of increasing the residential density for Monarch's lands to 4 houses per acre, having earlier been lobbied by Mr Lynn and, the Tribunal was satisfied, by Mr Dunlop for this support.

28.29 On 5 May 1992 Cllr Fox signed and probably lodged a motion seeking to move the line of the SEM further west to facilitate a golf course. He did so at the request of Mr Lynn and Mr Lafferty of Monarch. Mr Lafferty had earlier brought Cllr Fox to view the proposed SEM line, on the ground.

28.30 While Monarch was not associated with the golf course, if this motion had succeeded, it would have significantly increased the area of its lands available for residential use. Cllr Fox agreed that if this motion had been successful, this would have been a favourable outcome for Monarch.

⁴² See above.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS IN RELATION TO PAYMENTS TO CLLR FOX BY MONARCH

28.31 The Tribunal was satisfied that:

i. Cllr Tony Fox probably solicited (although not in writing) the payment of IR£1,000 from Monarch made in late January 1993, although he had not been a candidate in either the November 1992 General Election or the subsequent Seanad Election. His probable soliciting of the IR£1,000 payment in late 1992 arose in circumstances where some six months previously he had done Monarch's bidding by lodging a motion, the objective of which was to enhance Monarch's chances of having a greater portion of its lands rezoned. Cllr Fox, at both the time he solicited and received the payment was aware that he would, in his capacity as a councillor, be in the future required to consider the issue of rezoning of Cherrywood lands. In all the circumstances, this payment was corrupt.

ii. While Monarch's motivation in paying IR£600 to Cllr Fox at the time of the 1991 Local Elections was corrupt, in that it was intended to compromise the disinterested performance by Cllr Fox of his duties as a councillor, its acceptance by Cllr Fox was in the circumstances improper.

iii. The payments of IR£280 in June 1996, and IR£280 in February 1997 were probably perceived by both donor and recipient as bona fide political donations.

28.32 Cllr Fox received, in total, a payment of between IR£4,000 and IR£5,000 from Monarch and its agent Mr Dunlop over a period of two to three years.

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR COLM MCGRATH (FF) BY MR DUNLOP

28.33 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he paid a sum of IR£2,000 in cash to Cllr Colm McGrath in return for his support for the Monarch proposals for the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands. Mr Dunlop stated that he paid Cllr McGrath this money following the 11 November 1993 vote, which had been supported by Cllr McGrath and many other councillors. It was Mr Dunlop's belief that he paid Cllr McGrath in or at either Cllr McGrath's Clondalkin office, the Royal Dublin Hotel on O'Connell Street, the Gresham Hotel on O'Connell Street, the environs of Dublin County Council, or the Green Isle Hotel in Clondalkin, Co. Dublin.

28.34 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that when he lobbied Cllr McGrath to support the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands, Cllr McGrath said to him 'fine, it'll cost you.'

28.35 Mr Dunlop said that he then negotiated with Cllr McGrath, and eventually they agreed a payment of IR£2,000.

28.36 Cllr McGrath rejected Mr Dunlop's evidence that he had been paid IR£2,000 or that he had been paid in return for his support for the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands. He rejected the suggestion that he would ever have stated to Mr Dunlop that his support would come at a cost. He acknowledged being lobbied by Mr Dunlop, but he did not specifically recollect being lobbied by him in relation to Cherrywood, save on one occasion where he acknowledged to Mr Dunlop that he was supportive of Monarch's proposals. Cllr McGrath told the Tribunal that he never knew that Monarch had retained Mr Dunlop's services. He said that if he and Mr Dunlop did speak of Cherrywood, the discussion was of a general nature.

28.37 Cllr McGrath told the Tribunal that it was never 'clear' to him that Mr Dunlop had been retained by Monarch. He described Mr Dunlop as 'hovering on the wings of it, seemed to be hovering on the background.'

28.38 Cllr McGrath rejected Mr Dunlop's suggestion that he was a 'key figure' within the County Council.

28.39 Cllr McGrath acknowledged that there was frequent contact between himself and Mr Dunlop in 1993. Telephone records maintained by Mr Dunlop's secretary suggested that he and Mr Dunlop were in regular telephone contact. For example, these records indicated 21 occasions between March and October 1993 when Cllr McGrath contacted Mr Dunlop's offices. Cllr McGrath did not suggest that any of these telephone records were forged, but would not confirm that any of them were accurate. He suggested that he was probably returning calls originally made to him by Mr Dunlop.

28.40 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr McGrath knew from shortly after Mr Dunlop's retention by Monarch in early March 1993 that Mr Dunlop had been so retained, and that Cllr McGrath was extensively lobbied by Mr Dunlop to support the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands.

28.41 The Tribunal rejected Cllr McGrath's evidence that he had had only a general discussion with Mr Dunlop about the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands.

28.42 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop did in fact pay Cllr McGrath a sum of IR£2,000 in cash after the special meeting of Dublin County Council on 11 November 1993, and that he did so in response to a request for payment by Cllr McGrath. The said payment was a corrupt payment.

PAYMENTS TO CLLR MCGRATH BY MONARCH

28.43 Monarch records discovered to the Tribunal revealed the following payments recorded as having been made to Cllr Colm McGrath:

- 5 June 1991: IR£600 Monarch recorded the purpose of this payment as 'local election expenses'. Cllr McGrath told the Tribunal that he 'possibly' solicited this payment.
- 17 November 1992: IR£500 Monarch recorded the purpose of this payment as 'general election expenses'. Cllr McGrath told the Tribunal that this payment was sent to him 'probably' in response to a fundraising brochure being sent to Monarch.
- 3 July 1996: IR£500 Monarch's records state the purpose of this payment as 'golf classic'. On 4 May 1996, Cllr McGrath wrote a letter to Mr Philip Monahan, addressing him as 'Dear Philip', seeking a contribution to his General Election 'war chest'. Cllr McGrath received a cheque for IR£500 on 3 July 1996. In his evidence to the Tribunal, Cllr McGrath stated his belief that he had only met Mr Monahan on one occasion.
- October 1996: IR£500 Monarch's records indicate that this payment was made on 3 October 1996. In the course of his evidence to the Tribunal, Cllr McGrath acknowledged receipt of this IR£500 from Monarch as a contribution towards a 'golf classic' fundraising event.
- May 1999: IR£500. This payment was recorded by Monarch as being in respect of a 'golf classic'. Local Elections were held on 10 June 1999.

28.44 While Cllr McGrath acknowledged receiving the donations from Monarch, he had no specific recollection of them. He believed that he probably solicited these payments. He denied any connection between any payments to him from Monarch and the support he had given its proposals up to December 1993.

28.45 In correspondence with the Tribunal, Cllr McGrath acknowledged that he had been lobbied 'on several occasions' by Mr Lynn, and that he had contact with Mr Philip Reilly. He was unable to recollect any contact with Mr Monahan, Mr Sweeney or Mr Glennane.

28.46 In a letter to the Tribunal of 14 December 2000 in response to a request for information, before he gave sworn evidence, Cllr McGrath stated through his solicitor, that 'I received unconditional political donations . . . from . . . Monarch Limited. The . . . donations typically IR£500, were in cheque form and lodged to my bank account' and 'Monarch Properties and/or Mr Richard Lynn supported my fundraisers with unconditional cheque donations which were lodged to my bank account.'

28.47 In 1990 Cllr McGrath voted in favour of the successful McDonald/Coffey motion limiting development of the Carrickmines Valley to the east of the then proposed SEM line. On 24 May 1991 Cllr McGrath voted against Option 1 – a motion that did not favour Monarch but was successful. In 1992 and 1993 Cllr McGrath voted in favour of motions which facilitated or supported the rezoning of Monarch’s lands. On 27 May 1992, he seconded Cllr Lydon’s motion in relation to Map DP92/44, which was a Council proposal favourable to Monarch’s ambitions for the lands. Cllr McGrath had no recollection of what precisely prompted him to second the motion. He suggested that it may have been merely that he was sitting beside Cllr Lydon at the time, or it may have been out of common courtesy, or it may have been a desire to facilitate a debate on a proposal.

28.48 In his sworn evidence to the Tribunal, Cllr McGrath provided the following explanation:

‘If a colleague had a motion before the floor and was proposing a motion, courtesy alone was enough reason ...enough to second somebody’s motion. Because without a seconder a motion doesn’t fly and it falls. So common courtesy sometimes just was the reason why some people seconded motions. To get them on the floor for debate and then to be dealt with by the Council. So there may necessarily have been no motive or no reason behind sometimes seconding a motion. But I would be fairly confident in that case I was happy to second that motion because I supported it.’

28.49 Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that he believed Cllr McGrath ‘just stood up and seconded it.’

28.50 Cllr McGrath agreed that he had been lobbied by Mr Lynn and Mr Reilly to support the Cherrywood rezoning motion in the names of Cllrs Lydon and Hand. He accepted that prior to the 27 May 1992 meeting, he had discussed the proposal with ‘various representatives from Monarch’, and particularly with Mr Lynn and Mr Reilly. He said he had no recollection of being asked to support the Monarch proposal, but accepted that he may have discussed with Mr Reilly ‘in general terms who might be likely to support it’. Cllr McGrath voted in favour of the successful Marren/Coffey motion on 11 November 1993, resulting in increased density on Monarch’s residentially zoned lands.

28.51 The Tribunal was satisfied that on those occasions when Cllr McGrath received cheque payments from Monarch, of IR£600 on 5 June 1991 and IR£500 on 17 November 1992, he was aware of Monarch’s interest in the Cherrywood lands and of the fact that those lands were the subject of rezoning proposals, and that motions to facilitate that end would come before the council of which he, Cllr McGrath, was a member, and that he would be called upon to exercise his vote in relation to such proposals. The fact that Cllr McGrath proceeded to participate in those votes, having solicited and received the aforementioned payments, was entirely inappropriate. Until January 1994, Cllr McGrath was in a position, by virtue of the casting of his vote, to assist Monarch in its rezoning ambitions for the Cherrywood lands. Thus his acceptance of payments, and the possibility of he, himself, having solicited the payments made to him in 1991 and 1992, compromised him in the required disinterested performance of his duties as a councillor in the making of a development plan.

28.52 While Monarch maintained that the payments it made to Cllr McGrath, and in particular the payments of IR£600 on 5 June 1991 and of IR£500 on 17 November 1992, were bona fide political contributions, the Tribunal was satisfied that this was not the case. The Tribunal believed that the purpose of these payments was to ensure and copper-fasten Cllr McGrath's support for Monarch's project to rezone its Cherrywood lands, and that accordingly Monarch's purpose in making these payments was corrupt.

PAYMENTS BY MONARCH EXCEEDING IR£3,000 TO CLLR TOM HAND (FG PAYMENTS TO CLLR HAND)

29.01 The Tribunal inquired into the involvement of Cllr Hand with Monarch, and more specifically his involvement in the Cherrywood project. It did so primarily because of the evidence that Monarch had paid him IR£5,000 in 1991 and IR£1,000 in 1992. These sums represented the largest payments to an identified councillor by Monarch in the period 1991/2.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£5,000 IN 1991

29.02 Records discovered to the Tribunal by Monarch revealed the payment of IR£5,000 to Cllr Hand on 30 May 1991. The records indicated the purpose of this payment to be 'local election expenses'.

29.03 This payment represented by far the largest single payment of those Monarch made to 39 councillors between 30 May and 13 June 1991. The polling date for the Local Elections in 1991 was 27 June 1991. Only four councillors, besides Cllr Hand were favoured with cheques of four figures each receiving IR£1,000 each. The remaining 34 recipients were paid sums of less than IR£1,000.

29.04 Mr Sweeney suggested that the size of the IR£5,000 donation might have meant that it was intended for the Fine Gael Party, rather than for Cllr Hand himself. This was merely speculation on Mr Sweeney's part.

29.05 Mr Lynn also told the Tribunal that he had understood this payment was made on the basis that Cllr Hand intended to apportion the sum among Fine Gael Dublin County Council candidates in the Local Elections. Mr Lynn told the Tribunal that, when seeking a financial contribution from Monarch, Cllr Hand was 'acting . . . like . . . the election agent for all candidates and outgoing councillors for the local election. And he pulled the wool over my eyes very nicely'. The Tribunal was not provided with any evidence to support Mr Lynn's contention that Monarch in fact understood that Cllr Hand intended to share the IR£5,000 payment with fellow Fine Gael candidates, or that Cllr Hand did in fact distribute any portion of this sum.

29.06 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Lynn did not, contrary to what he stated in evidence, believe or understand that Cllr Hand intended to use Monarch's payment to him of IR£5,000 to benefit fellow Fine Gael County Council Local Election candidates. There was no evidence to suggest that Cllr Hand in fact disbursed anything from this fund to colleagues and the Tribunal was satisfied that no such disbursement occurred.

29.07 In a letter to the Tribunal dated 22 June 2000, Monarch's solicitors stated that the payment to Cllr Hand was a 'total contribution' to Fine Gael in the Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown area.

29.08 It was noteworthy that the Monarch records clearly identified the payment of IR£5,000 as a payment to Cllr Hand alone for his election expenses. Furthermore, the records indicated that seven Fine Gael Local Election candidates (excluding Cllr Hand) were identified as also receiving individual payments, ranging from IR£300 to IR£600, including a payment of IR£50 to Fine Gael candidate Cllr Ridge. In those circumstances the Tribunal rejected Monarch's explanations, as provided to the Tribunal in correspondence and in evidence, for the provision of IR£5,000 to Cllr Hand.

29.09 Monarch did not seek a receipt or receive acknowledgement from Cllr Hand following the payment of IR£5,000.

29.10 The Tribunal was satisfied that the payment of IR£5,000 was paid by cheque to Cllr Hand and was intended solely for his use.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£1,000 IN 1992

29.11 Monarch records indicated that a cheque for IR£1,000 was paid to Cllr Hand on 28 February 1992. The purpose of this payment was stated in the Monarch books to be 'fundraiser'.

29.12 This payment to Cllr Hand had some interesting features. He was the only councillor paid anything in the first seven months of 1992. Individual payments to other councillors/candidates in the General Election held on 25 November 1992 (and the Seanad Election of early 1993) did not begin until 20 October 1992. In total, 26 councillors/candidates were paid. The great majority were paid sums of IR£1,000 or less.

29.13 No explanation was provided to the Tribunal as to why a decision was made to benefit Cllr Hand to the extent of IR£1,000 on 28 February 1992, at a time when no election was underway, or was even expected, other than Mr Sweeney's suggestion that payments to councillors, while normally made at election time, could also be made at other times, and that in most cases Monarch would make a donation if requested. Mr Sweeney could not recall a single instance when such a request was refused. It was noteworthy that the IR£1,000 payment was made to Cllr Hand some three months prior to his signing a motion (together with Cllr Lydon) seeking the rezoning of the Cherrywood lands.

THE LYDON/HAND MOTION 27 MAY 1992

29.14 At a special sitting of Dublin County Council held on 27 May 1992, one of the motions lodged with the Council (on 4 May 1992) was in the names of Cllrs Lydon and Hand. That motion sought to rezone the bulk of the Monarch lands in Cherrywood for residential purposes at a density of 4 houses per acre, and to provide for retail and hotel development in a smaller portion of the lands. This motion was withdrawn by Cllr Lydon following consultation between himself and Mr Lynn.

29.15 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Hand knew, both on the occasion in 1991 when he was paid IR£5,000 and the occasion in 1992 when he was paid IR£1,000 by Monarch, that Monarch had an interest in lands which were the subject of rezoning proposals which had come, or were likely to come, before the County Council of which he, Cllr Hand was a member, and that he would be called upon to vote on those proposals. The acceptance by Cllr Hand of sums of IR£5,000 and IR£1,000 in 1991 and 1992 respectively compromised the requirement that he discharge his duties as an elected representative in a disinterested manner. The scale of the payment made by Monarch to Cllr Hand in 1991 can only be regarded as extraordinarily large, particularly when compared to the amounts other Local Election candidates received. While the Tribunal has rejected Mr Lynn's evidence that the provision of IR£5,000 to Cllr Hand was intended for disbursement among local Fine Gael election candidates (including Cllr Hand), it was satisfied, given the general thrust of Mr Lynn's evidence, that a discussion took place between them prior to the provision of the IR£5,000. It was therefore probable that Cllr Hand sought this amount of money, and that his request was readily acceded to by Monarch. The Tribunal was also satisfied that when seeking such a large payment Cllr Hand was aware of Monarch's rezoning ambitions for its lands. The Tribunal has already found that Monarch's motive in making such payments to Cllr Hand in 1991 was corrupt.

29.16 Although the Tribunal did not identify evidence sufficient to link the payments to Cllr Hand totalling IR£6,000 specifically to any particular agreement by him to support County Council motions relating to Cherrywood, it was satisfied, on the balance of probability, that Monarch, in making these payments to Cllr Hand in 1991/2, and Cllr Hand in receiving those payments did so expressly or by implication on the understanding that Cllr Hand would provide that support. As such, the payments were corrupt.

PAYMENTS BY MONARCH EXCEEDING IR£3,000 TO CLLRS G. V. WRIGHT (FF) AND DON LYDON (FF)

PAYMENTS TO CLLR WRIGHT

30.01 Cllr Wright was an elected councillor in Dublin County Council from 1985 to the end of 1993, and from the beginning of 1994 was a member of the newly established Fingal County Council. Cllr Wright acknowledged that he was the 'whip' of the Fianna Fáil councillor group in Dublin County Council from June 1991 to December 1993, and he was also the whip and leader of the Fianna Fáil group in the Senate from 1991.

30.02 Records disclosed to the Tribunal by Monarch indicated that Cllr G. V. Wright received a total of IR£3,300 in three payments from Monarch in the period 1991/2. These were:

- IR£300 on 13 June 1991, stated in Monarch's records to be in respect of 'local election expenses'.
- IR£1,000 on 17 November 1992, stated in Monarch's records to be in respect of 'Gen. election expenses'.
- IR£2,000 on 16 December 1992, stated in Monarch's records to be in respect of 'Senate election expenses'.

30.03 Elections took place in or around the payment dates as indicated above and Cllr Wright was a candidate in those elections.

30.04 In his written statement to the Tribunal on 17 November 2004, Cllr Wright stated that he had received IR£1,000⁴³ from Monarch. He provided similar information to the Fianna Fáil internal inquiry of 2000. Subsequently, in a further written statement to the Tribunal dated 2006, Cllr Wright commented on the disclosure to the Tribunal by Mr Monahan/Monarch of payments to him of IR£300 in 1991 and of IR£1,000 and IR£2,000 in 1992, a total of IR£3,300. In that statement, Cllr Wright maintained that he had no recollection of the IR£300 and the IR£2,000 payments, but he accepted that he had received them, suggesting that they may have been sent by post to his constituency office in Malahide, and lodged to his bank account by a member of his staff. The implication was that these two payments had been received in Cllr Wright's constituency office, and a staff member had lodged them unknown to him.

30.05 Cllr Wright described his accounts into which political donations were lodged as quasi-political accounts from which expenses associated with his political work were then discharged.

30.06 In his sworn evidence to the Tribunal, Cllr Wright acknowledged that he recalled the IR£2,000 payment in December 1992, but believed he was out of his constituency office on the day of its arrival.

30.07 Cllr Wright did not believe that he had solicited any of the three payments. In relation to the 1991 IR£300 payment he told the Tribunal 'I have no record of any request'.

30.08 Cllr Wright supported Monarch's proposals on those occasions when issues relating to them came before the Council. In particular, Cllr Wright supported the proposals favouring Monarch's interests at the special meeting of Dublin County Council on 27 May 1992 and voted against proposals which were in opposition to those interests. He likewise supported Monarch at the special meeting of 11 November 1993.

30.09 Cllr Wright told the Tribunal that he had been pro development, and that his support for Monarch's proposals was consistent with his approach to rezoning proposals coming before the Council in relation to other, non Monarch, lands. In particular, Cllr Wright told the Tribunal that he favoured development which included a residential component, and would provide employment.

30.10 Cllr Wright acknowledged that he had been lobbied by Mr Monahan, Mr Lynn and Mr Murray of Monarch. Mr Lynn had done most of the lobbying. The latter's expenses claim forms submitted to Monarch referenced his meetings with Cllr Wright (and with other councillors), meetings which continued even after the break-up of Dublin County Council in January 1994. Cllr Wright stated that Mr Murray was also a local political supporter in his Malahide constituency. He recalled one occasion when he was visited by Mr Lynn in his Malahide constituency office.

30.11 The Tribunal did not accept Cllr Wright's 2004 contention that he had a recollection of having received only one payment from Monarch, namely IR£1,000. Furthermore, the Tribunal rejected Cllr Wright's position, as stated by him to the Tribunal in 2006, that, while acknowledging receipt of the three Monarch payments totalling IR£3,300, he still had no recollection of the receipt of the IR£300 payment in 1991 or the IR£2,000 payment in December 1992.

30.12 The Tribunal did not believe it to be credible that Cllr Wright did not at that time recollect the three payments from Monarch.

30.13 The acceptance of such donations by Cllr Wright compromised the required disinterested performance of his duties as a councillor in the making of the Development Plan, particularly in circumstances where, at least from May 1992, he could have been in no doubt about Monarch's rezoning ambitions for its lands.

30.14 The Tribunal was satisfied that Monarch's payments to Cllr Wright, totalling IR£3,300 within an 18-month period, were not bona fide political contributions, particularly having regard to the substantial total sum involved. On the contrary, the payments were part of a systematic financial assault by Monarch on elected councillors/candidates, designed to secure support and favouritism in respect of proposals coming before the Council seeking the rezoning of Monarch's lands in Cherrywood, or proposals which, if successful, would facilitate the rezoning of its lands. As such, the payments, from Monarch's perspective, were corrupt.

PAYMENTS TO CLLR DON LYDON (FF)

30.15 Cllr Lydon was an elected member of Dublin County Council between 1985 and the end of 1993. He was a councillor in Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council from January 1994. He represented the Stillorgan ward, an area adjacent to the Cherrywood lands.

30.16 Monarch records disclosed to the Tribunal indicated that Monarch paid a total of IR£3,100 to Cllr Lydon in 1991 and 1992, as follows:

- IR£600 on 5 June 1991, stated in Monarch's books to be for 'local election expenses.'
- IR£2,500 on 16 December 1992, stated in Monarch's books to be for 'Seanad election expenses.'

30.17 Local Elections were held in June 1991, and a Seanad Election was held in early January 1993.

30.18 Dublin County Council records to the period ending 31 December 1993 indicated that on 24 May 1991 Cllr Lydon voted against Option 1.⁴⁴ Option 1 did not favour Monarch, and was adopted by a majority vote.

30.19 Cllr Lydon had a specific involvement with two motions listed for the special meeting of Dublin County Council on 27 May 1992. The first motion (the Lydon/McGrath motion) was lost by a margin of two votes, and the second (the Lydon/Hand motion) was withdrawn by Cllr Lydon. The second motion⁴⁵ was lodged with the County Council on 4 May 1992, having been signed by Cllr Lydon and Cllr Tom Hand.

30.20 Mr Lynn told the Tribunal that he had drafted this motion, following consultation with Cllr Lydon, and possibly also Cllr Hand.

30.21 Mr Lynn also told the Tribunal that he had prepared a 'position paper' outlining arguments in favour of the proposal, and that this was distributed to most councillors, including, probably, Cllr Lydon who was to propose the Lydon/Hand motion. Mr Lynn said that he provided Cllr Lydon with the information which enabled him to take the issue to the floor of the chamber.

30.22 The withdrawal of the Lydon/Hand motion from the meeting on 27 May 1992 took place following a conversation between Cllr Lydon and Mr Lynn, immediately outside the Council chamber, after Cllr Lydon had beckoned Mr Lynn to leave his seat in the public gallery to discuss the matter with him.

30.23 Following the defeat of the Lydon/McGrath motion, and the withdrawal of the Lydon/Hand motion, two further motions were passed that day, one proposed by Cllr Gilmore and the other proposed by Cllr Seán Barrett.

⁴⁴ See section on Cllr Lydon.

⁴⁵ The motion in the names of Cllrs Lydon and Hand sought to rezone the bulk of Monarch lands in Cherrywood for residential purposes at a density of 4 houses per acre, and to provide for retail and hotel development in a smaller portion of the lands.

30.24 On 14 November 1994 a motion listed before a special meeting of Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council was signed by Cllrs Conroy, Lydon and Liam T. Cosgrave. That motion proposed the creation of a science and technology park on a portion of Monarch's lands. Mr Lynn told the Tribunal that he drafted this motion and obtained the signatures of the three councillors. Cllr Conroy believed he signed the motion at the request of a fellow councillor, and not by anyone associated with Monarch.

30.25 Cllr Lydon acknowledged that he had been lobbied by Monarch over a number of years, and particularly in 1992. Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that he knew Mr Lynn very well, and met him 'often'. Mr Lynn described himself as having been close to Cllrs Lydon and Hand and said that both gave him plenty of their time which he found to have been 'invaluable'. Cllr Lydon said he also knew Mr Sweeney of Monarch, and had discussed the science and technology park proposal with him. Cllr Lydon said he did not recollect being lobbied by Mr Philip Reilly of Monarch, whom he had met on a number of occasions, but acknowledged that he knew Mr Reilly was lobbying for Monarch, and that Mr Reilly had mentioned the Monarch lands to him.

30.26 Cllr Lydon acknowledged receiving the sums of IR£600 in June 1991 and IR£2,500 in December 1992 from Monarch. This latter payment was the largest single payment made by Monarch to an identified councillor in 1992, out of a total of 26 individual payments to identified councillors in relation to the Dáil and Seanad Elections in late 1992/early 1993.

30.27 Cllr Lydon, in his evidence to the Tribunal, tended to minimise the level of contact between himself and Mr Lynn. He told the Tribunal:

'Well I doubt if you would believe this but I hardly ever discussed Cherrywood with him (Mr Lynn). It was mostly just a bit of – I like meeting him because he was a bit of craic and after a few minutes with him, you were laughing. He was a very sociable man and after meetings, he would buy drinks or meals or food for anybody irrespective of Party or creed or anything else.'

And

'I am sure he mentioned Cherrywood and naturally from time to time but – I would be supportive of Cherrywood, I wanted to see development in that area from way back because it wasn't a matter that if it was going to be developed, it was only a matter of when. The whole area from Stepside down through Sandyford, Ballyogan, Carrickmines, down to Cherrywood, down to Druids Glen had to be built on.'

And

'No, he probably asked me early on and I would say yes, I am very supportive of it and he'd probably leave it at that, he wouldn't keep asking you.'

30.28 The Tribunal heard other evidence indicating significant and frequent level of contact between Cllr Lydon and representatives of Monarch (for example, an invoice dated 29 February 1992 provided to Monarch by Mr Bill O'Herlihy, Monarch's PR representative, referred to, inter alia, a two-hour meeting between Monarch and Cllr Lydon on 11 February 1992). Cllr Lydon doubted that he had ever met anyone for as long as two hours. He did, however, accept that he met Mr O'Herlihy in relation to Monarch in February 1992.

30.29 Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that Mr Lynn asked him to sign and propose the Lydon/Hand motion for the special meeting of Dublin County Council on 27 May 1992. He agreed to do so on the basis that the proposal to zone land for a district centre be changed to a neighbourhood centre, with provision for a hotel development. He did so because he was conscious that there was concern within the community that a very large retail development in Cherrywood might damage Dún Laoghaire shops. Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that he believed Mr Lynn had chosen him to sign and propose the motion because of his, Mr Lynn's, belief that a councillor more closely associated with the Dún Laoghaire area would not wish to support the proposal because of potential local opposition to it. Cllr Lydon said that he signed and proposed the motion because it was, in his opinion, a 'good development.'

30.30 Cllr Lydon said that as a matter of courtesy he had informed Mr Lynn of his intention to withdraw the Lydon/Hand motion on 27 May 1992. It was his view that it was pointless to proceed with that motion in the face of the defeat of the Manager's proposed motion (the Lydon/McGrath motion).

30.31 Mr Lynn opined that there was a conflict between the two motions, and that Cllr Barrett's motion should not have proceeded once Cllr Gilmore's had passed. Cllr Lydon had subsequently raised this technical or procedural issue at a later meeting in an unsuccessful attempt to reopen the matter. This was done at Mr Lynn's request.

30.32 While Cllr Lydon acknowledged raising at a subsequent councillors' meeting the procedural/technical issue following the passing of the Gilmore/Barrett motions on 27 May 1992, and that Mr Lynn had requested him to do so, he maintained that it was his intention to do so in any event. Cllr Lydon dismissed as 'cheeky' the contention, in a letter written to GRE by Mr Lynn on behalf of Monarch on 17 June 1992, that the Gilmore/Barrett procedural issue had been raised by Cllr Lydon 'on our behalf'.

30.33 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Lydon was viewed by Monarch as an important councillor, particularly in 1992/3, in the context of its proposals to rezone their lands in Cherrywood, and that Cllr Lydon facilitated Monarch at crucial stages within that period and when requested to do so by Monarch.

30.34 The receipt by Cllr Lydon of sums totalling IR£3,100 from Monarch (whether or not they were solicited by him) within an 18-month period in 1991/2, in circumstances where he knew that lands in which Monarch had an interest were to be the subject of proposals coming before Dublin County Council facilitating or seeking the rezoning of those lands for development, and in respect of which Cllr Lydon would be called upon to exercise his vote, compromised the requirement incumbent on Cllr Lydon that he exercise his functions as an elected representative in a disinterested fashion. The acceptance by him of a sum of IR£2,500 in December 1992, in the wake of the role he played as an active promoter of Monarch's interests within the Council (by virtue of his actions in May 1992 in both signing and promoting motions supportive of Monarch), strongly indicated the extent of Cllr Lydon's abuse of his role and duty as an elected representative in the course of the review of the Development Plan.

30.35 The Tribunal rejected Monarch's contention that the payments of IR£600 in June 1991 and IR£2,500 in December 1992 were bona fide political contributions whether or not one or both had been solicited. Monarch's primary purpose in making the payments was to ensure Cllr Lydon's support for its proposals relating to the Cherrywood lands and to ensure that he would do their bidding in that regard. As such, the said payments were made with a corrupt intention.

THE INVOLVEMENT OF MR RICHARD LYNN

31.01 Mr Richard Lynn took up employment with Monarch in 1989. Previously, he had been the Town Clerk in Dundalk, Co. Louth and while in that position became known to Mr Philip Monahan. Mr Monahan/Monarch were the developers involved in the Dundalk shopping centre.

31.02 Mr Lynn was engaged by Monarch at the time it was purchasing the Cherrywood lands and was appointed project coordinator. He was retained specifically to promote the Cherrywood rezoning project in the review of the 1983

Dublin Development Plan. Mr Lynn left Monarch in 1997 when the Cherrywood lands were sold to Dunloe Ewart.

31.03 Mr Lynn forged links with a number of elected county councillors (particularly Cllrs Lydon and Hand) in Dublin County Council, and with Council officials. He engaged in regular and frequent lobbying of councillors designed to persuade them (or a significant number of them) of the merits of the various proposals that would come before them by way of motions in the course of the review of the Dublin County Development Plan. The practice of lobbying councillors in the absence of payment (or expectation of payments) was itself legitimate, and generally provided developers, landowners and other interested groups with a means of informing elected county councillors and officials about issues relevant to zoning and planning.

31.04 However, the Tribunal was satisfied that in the course of his extensive lobbying activities, Mr Lynn tapped into the very considerable financial resources made available to him by Monarch and used them to influence many of the elected councillors to promote and support Monarch's ambition to rezone as much of its landbank at Cherrywood as possible. The emphasis was on residential development, and increasing the density of housing to the greatest possible extent.

31.05 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Lynn masterminded the Monarch strategy of making generous payments of money to large numbers of councillors at election time for the purposes of ensuring their support for the Monarch project to rezone its Cherrywood lands. Moreover the Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Lynn was instrumental in the disbursement of cash payments to certain unidentified councillors, which were funded from the substantial cash withdrawals made from accounts associated with Monarch in the years 1992 to 1996. These payments were disbursed while Monarch's campaign to rezone its lands was ongoing and were part of Monarch's corrupt campaign to inundate councillors with generous cash payments either on the basis of their express agreement to support that campaign within the County Council, or on the expectation that they would do so. Such payments were a cynical and corrupt attempt to compromise the disinterested performance of the duties of elected representatives.

31.06 As previously stated, the Tribunal considered that this blatant use of money constituted an abuse of the democratic system in that it enabled Monarch to seek to influence the voting patterns of elected councillors while exercising their public duty to make decisions in the course of the review of the Dublin County Development Plan. More particularly, the Tribunal considered that it was a means of influencing or persuading significant numbers of elected councillors to support rezoning proposals favouring the Cherrywood lands and, in consequence enormously increasing the monetary value of those lands.

THE INVOLVEMENT OF MR PAUL MONAHAN

32.01 Mr Paul Monahan is the late Mr Philip Monahan's son. He was appointed managing director of Monarch Properties in 2001. Between that date and August 2003 approximately, he gradually took over the management of the Monarch Group.

32.02 Mr Monahan told the Tribunal that he did not discuss details of Monarch's business with his father prior to his death on 3 August 2003, even during the period when his father knew himself to be terminally ill. Mr Monahan informed the Tribunal that as a result he was not in a position to assist the Tribunal in relation to the Monarch group's activities associated with the Cherrywood lands in the early 1990s.

32.03 The Tribunal believed it likely that Mr Paul Monahan knew significantly more about the events of the early 1990s than he suggested.

CLLR SEÁN BARRETT (FG) AND MR MICHAEL SMITH

33.01 Cllr Seán Barrett was a Fine Gael councillor for County Dublin between June 1974 and November 1982, and between June 1991 and December 1993. He was an elected Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown councillor between January 1994 and November 1994. Cllr Barrett was appointed a Government minister in 1994. He was an opponent of the proposals to rezone the Cherrywood lands and particularly opposed residential development for the lands which exceeded 1 house per acre.

33.02 Cllr Barrett's opposition to the Monarch proposals was known in the early 1990s.⁴⁶ It was known to his fellow elected councillors, to the Monarch executives and to the public relations consultant, Mr Bill O'Herlihy who had been engaged by Monarch in late 1991 to lobby elected councillors to support the Monarch proposals, and in particular Fine Gael councillors including Cllr Barrett.

33.03 Mr Michael Smith was an environmental activist in the early 1990s. He was a known opponent of Monarch's plans to rezone and develop the Cherrywood lands. He, with a friend and fellow barrister, Mr Colm Mac Eochaidh, was responsible for advertising⁴⁷ through a firm of Newry solicitors on 3 July 1995 for information relating to corruption in the planning system in Ireland, which was indirectly instrumental in the 1997 Oireachtas decision to establish this Tribunal of Inquiry.

33.04 Cllr Barrett described how, in the course of his weekly advice clinic, he was approached by a man whom he was unable to identify, and never met again. This man offered him IR£80,000 approximately to act in a professional consultancy basis promoting a swapping of lands in Cherrywood, owned by Monarch, with other lands in the Killiney/Dún Laoghaire area which in turn would be the subject of development.

33.05 Cllr Barrett rejected the approach, and emphasised to the man that he would oppose the suggested development of the Killiney/Dún Laoghaire lands. Cllr Barrett's memory of this event was vague but he was certain that it had occurred, and he clearly viewed it with disquiet.

33.06 Cllr Barrett told the Tribunal that following this event, he was the subject of newspaper articles some of which suggested or hinted that he had accepted a large sum of money in return for persuading Fine Gael councillor colleagues to vote in favour of the Monarch plans for the Cherrywood lands, while he continued himself to oppose it.

33.07 Cllr Barrett roundly denied that he had engaged in any such activity. He was adamant that his opposition to the Monarch plans for the development of Cherrywood was genuine and consistent, while at the same time emphasising that he 'had no objection to ultimately development taking place in this particular area . . . at a later stage when there would be proper debate and discussion through the local council, i.e. Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council.'

33.08 Cllr Barrett acknowledged that he received a payment of IR£600 from Monarch on 5 June 1991, which he said was unsolicited. Monarch's cheque payments book identified this payment as a donation towards Cllr Barrett's Local Election expenses. Cllr Barrett told the Tribunal that this donation was not used by him personally, and was handed over to the local Fine Gael Party organisation.

33.09 Monarch cheque payments book also identified a IR£500 donation paid to Cllr Barrett on 19 November 1992 in relation to the General Election which was held at that time. Cllr Barrett had no recollection of this donation, and the ⁴⁷ The Irish Times and the Irish Independent editions of 3 July 1995.

Monarch cheque had on its reverse side a bank account number which Cllr Barrett did not recognise. It was therefore possible that Cllr Barrett never received this payment, and remained unaware of it until it was disclosed in the course of the Tribunal's inquiries.

33.10 Mr Michael Smith described an incident which occurred in 1992 at a time when he was actively protesting against Monarch's development plans for Cherrywood. He told the Tribunal that he was approached by Mr Philip Monahan and became involved in a heated exchange of words with him. Mr Smith stated that Mr Monahan alleged to him that Cllr Barrett was being paid money by Monarch in return for ensuring that Fine Gael councillors would support the Monarch proposals for Cherrywood, while he would continue his personal opposition to it. Mr Smith said that Mr Monahan also alleged that he had placed his bloodstock insurance business with Cllr Barrett.

33.11 Mr Smith acknowledged that he repeated this allegation to various individuals, including a constituency colleague of Cllr Barrett. He also told Phoenix Magazine which, while not publishing details of the allegation of money being paid to Cllr Barrett by Monarch, did publish the allegation that Mr Monahan's bloodstock business had been placed with Cllr Barrett.

33.12 Cllr Barrett told the Tribunal that none of Mr Monahan's insurance business had been placed with him at any time. Cllr Barrett also told the Tribunal that, at the time, because of his full-time involvement in politics, he was not involved in the day-to-day running of his insurance business.

33.13 The Tribunal accepted Mr Smith's evidence that in the course of a heated exchange of words with Mr Monahan in 1992, Mr Monahan made serious allegations against Cllr Barrett to the effect that Monarch had paid, or was paying, money to Cllr Barrett to ensure Fine Gael councillor support for the Monarch proposals to develop the Cherrywood lands, and that Mr Monahan had favoured Cllr Barrett with his bloodstock insurance business. The Tribunal was, however, satisfied that neither allegation was true.

33.14 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Barrett at the material time was a genuine opponent of Monarch's plans to develop the Cherrywood lands, and that he did not seek to persuade or influence his fellow Fine Gael councillors to support those plans in any way.

ITEM - 1117 - DUBLIN COUNTY COUNCIL DRAFT DEVELOPMENT PLAN 1991

We propose that the lands, the subject of the above submission, be zoned according to the attached map and we further propose that the submission in relation to the lands at Cherrywood, Loughlinstown be amended to provide

- : that the residential Zoning A1 have a density not exceeding an average of 12 houses per hectare with the parks taken into account i.e. less than 5 houses per acre (or 17 houses per hectare excluding the public parks area - 6.6 houses per acre) or in any event provide for not more than 956 housing units and

- : that the retail element be subject to a detailed retail impact assessment and in any event be substantially reduced from the proposed 120,000 sq.ft. to a maximum of 80,000 sq.ft. retail space for the currency of the plan and that the reduced retail space be replaced by a leisure based activity e.g. an hotel, thus ensuring no job losses occur through the retail reduction and

- : that the Council obtain an undertaking from the Developers that they will use their best endeavours to complete the development within five years from the date the Development Plan is finally adopted and hand over to the Council, if it so requests, the areas designated Zone F on the attached map.

Dear Taoiseach,

We have pleasure in making a contribution to the general expenses of your Party for this General Election. We all agree that what this country now needs is a strong, united government to provide the right atmosphere to make it attractive to invest in the development of the country.

As you are aware, we in Monarch together with our partners Guardian Royal Exchange, London, are in a position to commence a major development in Loughlinstown, Co. Dublin, but are caught in the throes of the Review of the County Dublin Development Plan which is holding up developments. We have been greatly assisted by your Party Members on Dublin County Council, without whom it is fair to say, we would not have achieved the part-zoning which now obtains on the lands. Your Members have been to the fore in encouraging good development based on proper planning criteria, endorsed by the Council's own professional staff. In so doing, your Party shows an admirable stance for a common sense approach to development and for being positive towards job creation. Unfortunately other parties who have been against all proposed developments during the Review of the Draft Development Plan, now appear to take the high road on job creation possibilities in the course of the General Election.

I am pleased also to advise you, Taoiseach, that we have also subscribed directly to Members of your Party who are running in this General Election.

Wishing you all the best in your endeavours.

Yours sincerely,

Re: Invoices Submitted on Cabinteely

Dear Martyn,

Thank you for your letter of 7th inst. with regard to the above and note that you have passed for payment Invoice Nos. 2059, 2060, 2061 and 2063.

I note that you feel that the Proforma Invoice for the balance of the £500,000 i.e £270,000 and the payment thereof, relies on the completion of documentation vis-a-vis Tallaght. This was not part of our understanding of the agreement as we had sought to keep these two matters quite separate and perhaps you would re-look at this situation in terms of part payment as this is a great deal of money to be outstanding.

As regards Invoice 2062 and your reference to the two payments of £2,500 and £5,000, you will note that these sums were paid bona fide to the parties concerned. They therefore would not rank within the payments envisaged which had been disbursed through the additional Management Fee and I therefore feel that they could not be written out in the way that you suggest.

Regarding item No. 6 - Invoice No. 2066: I note that you wish to delete the £4,100 paid to Noel Smyth & Partners being expenditure solely for the company. However, you will note from the Third Party Schedule estimated at £18,500 (further copy attached) that these sums had been estimated at £5,000 but in the event and, as I have already explained, having regard to the requests made, have exceeded that sum. I will cancel Invoice No. 2066 in the gross sum of £20,370 and reissue Invoice No. 2069 for £16,270 (taking account of the £4,100) leaving your contribution at £8,135 plus VAT.

Your item No. 4 - Invoice No. 2064: I am prepared to cancel Invoice No. 2064 and reissue Invoice No. 2068 at £4,000 per month for April, May, June and July if you feel that you should pay only on a monthly basis. Please note that Frank Dunlop & Associates were engaged from April and requested that part of their payment be "up front" before they would take on the assignment. That is the reason for the payment by us of £25,000 to date.

Your item No. 5 - Invoice No. 2065; I am surprised that you have not authorised payment of this invoice. It is incorrect to say that attendance at the conference arose from any connection with the Chamber of Commerce. At my request Richard had been in touch with Anthony Padfield and had faxed him details of the conference in your absence and had requested that a representative of GRE should also attend. The outcome of the conference has been used to good effect, with Councillor Donal Marren and Deputy Eamon Gilmore in particular and may yet provide us with the mechanism of obtaining an acceptable zoning on Cherrywood. I would ask you to re-look at this matter again, as it is all tied up with our need to optimise the land zoning and to possibly attain industrial zoning to enable the development of Dublin Science & Technology Park. We will need your full support in this approach.

I suggest a further meeting in the next two weeks to get a very clear line on a number of things including the industrial zoning, costs to the end of the year and strategy of preparation of planning permission. With this in mind I will contact Paula to suggest a suitable date.

I thank you for your prompt attention to the invoices that I left with you and I would appreciate if you would arrange early payment of the ones indicated above. If you have any difficulty with the matters I have referred to in this letter please let me know.

Many thanks.

Yours sincerely,

RE: PHILIP MONAHAN, MONARCH PROPERTIES LIMITED AND THE MONARCH GROUP
DONATIONS AS TO ELECTED REPRESENTATIVES AND OFFICIALS

Dear Ms. Howard,

I refer to previous correspondence in the above regard and enclose herewith for your attention list of contributions prepared by my client which payments are set out in chronological order and extracted from the cheque payment journal and details the reference to payees and reflects the recitals on said cheques.

All contributions made by the Monarch Group were made by cheque.

In relation to the 1991 List, all of the contributions are believed to have arisen on foot of requests for assistance to defray local election expenses, save as set out no records have been located in this regard.

In respect of the contribution of the 30th May shown as "T. Hand FG" - same was a total contribution to the Fine Gael, Dun Laoghaire/Rathdown area.

In respect of the 1992 List, the payments in October, November and December were contributions to defray expenses in respect of the General Election and the Senate Election.

There are two further payments in the 1993 list in this regard.

Again it is believed that these contributions would have arisen on foot of requests for assistance to defray such expenses and no records have been located in this regard.

MONARCH 2 - 3

Noel Smyth & Partners,

In respect of the 1993 List, these would have arisen on foot of requests for assistance and some records exist to support same.

In respect of the 1994 List a similar position would arise and in addition on the 28th July of that year a cheque was written to "A & L Lawlor" in the amount of £3,000.00. Our clients believe that this may have been a political contribution made to deputy Liam Lawlor. No documentation supporting this payment has been located.

In respect of the 1995 List and the 1996 List it is believed that all such contributions would have arisen on foot of requests, again some documentary evidence is available.

In respect of the period 1998 - 1999 - 2000 the records show two payments being made, namely:-

1. 28th April 1999 - contribution of £200 to Fine Gael
2. 18th April 2000 - contribution of £100 to PD's.

We would advise that Frank Dunlop & Associates were engaged by the Monarch Group in 1993 to provide PR Consultancy Services to the Group in relation to the Cherrywood Project. Included in the List is the dates and amounts inclusive of VAT of payments for such work.

We trust the above is in order and if you require any further information you might contact the writer.

Yours sincerely,

PP-Martin Kearney

CHAPTER FOUR - BALLYCULLEN BEECHILL MODULE

INTRODUCTION

1.01 Forty witnesses gave evidence when this module, which concerned an inquiry into the rezoning of two plots of land with which Mr Christopher Jones Senior (Mr Jones) was associated, was heard in public over 18 days between February and March 2006 and 1 February 2007. A small number of documents relating to Mr Liam Lawlor's involvement with these lands were read into the record on Day 916 (28 October 2008). Information provided by or on behalf of four deceased councillors, Cllrs Jack Larkin, Cyril Gallagher, Séamus Brock and Tom Hand, was also read into the record during the course of this module.

1.02 In 1948 Mr Jones acquired a controlling interest in, and became managing director of, H. A. O'Neil Ltd, then a small plumbing contracting company ('O'Neils').

1.03 From the mid-1960s onward Mr Jones became involved, as an investor and director, in a variety of trading companies. These included shopping companies, radiator manufacturers, steel tube manufacturers and a building company as a minority shareholder. In the early 1970s the directors of O'Neil's and the other companies with which Mr Jones was involved decided to come together and seek a quotation in the Stock Exchange for an informally constituted group of companies under a holding company to be called the Jones Group Plc. In 1972 O'Neil's and the other relevant companies became wholly-owned subsidiaries of the Jones Group which achieved its quotation in the Stock Exchange in 1973 with 38 per cent of the share capital being held by Mr Jones and his family interest. From December 1972 to June 1993 Mr Derry Hussey was financial director of the Jones Group and a director of many of its subsidiaries including Beechill Properties Ltd. He held no shares in Beechill Properties Ltd and less than 1 per cent of the Jones Group. He was a non-executive director of a number of companies connected with Mr Jones, including Ballycullen Farms Ltd.

BALLYCULLEN FARMS LTD

1.04 In 1963, on Mr Jones' proposal, O'Neil's bought a farm of 194 acres in Ballycullen in south Co. Dublin. A further 25 acres adjoining the farm were added to the holding in 1967/8. These lands were contained in Folios 2381 and 16077 of the Register of Freeholders County of Dublin and lay to the east of the Ballycullen Road and south-west of the Southern Cross motorway – the M50. Apart from a very small portion zoned A1 (to provide for new residential communities in accordance with an approved area action plan at 5 houses per acre) these lands were zoned B (to protect and provide for the development of agriculture) in the 1983 Dublin County Development Plan.

1.05 Since it was never intended that the Ballycullen farm would form part of the public group, as it was deemed inappropriate for a public company to own and conduct a farm, the farm was transferred in December 1972 into a new subsidiary, Ballycullen Farms Ltd, a company owned by the same people who had owned O’Neil’s and in the same proportions, namely 77 per cent by Mr Jones, 9 per cent by Ms A. O’Neil (a shareholder in O’Neil’s) and 14 per cent by Mr Gerard Jones and his family. In 1973 Mr Jones acquired Ms O’Neil’s 9 per cent interest through a trust company, C. J. Trust Company. Mr Gerard Jones’ interest in Ballycullen Farms came into the ownership of Mr Jones in November 1996. By 2002 Ballycullen Farms Ltd no longer owned any lands at Ballycullen.

1.06 By the early 1970s the farm had become a successful dairy operation with a prize-winning pedigree Friesian herd. Mr Jones gave evidence that its operation was becoming progressively more difficult to run because the character of the area had changed over ten years from largely rural to largely urban. Housing developments had been constructed near and around the farm, and therefore it was decided to move the farm operation to a more rural area. In the early 1970s, in anticipation of ultimately moving the dairy operation from Ballycullen, Mr Jones acquired through a family trust an established dairy farm in Kinnegad and the dairy operation moved there in the mid 1990s. In 1974 Mr Jones had acquired a 300 acre farm in Dunshaughlin, Co. Meath which was run as a dry stock farm.

BEECHILL PROPERTIES LTD

1.07 In the early 1970s Beechill Properties Ltd, which at the end of 1972 became a wholly owned subsidiary of the Jones Group, acquired a property comprising about 4.9 acres in Clonskeagh at the junction of Clonskeagh Road and Beaver Row on the south side of the river Dodder in Dublin. This property consisted of offices, workshops and stores, including a large storage shed which had been let on a short lease. These lands (Beechill lands) later became the headquarters of the Jones Group.

1.08 The lands were zoned F (to preserve and provide for open spaces) in Map 15 of the 1983 Dublin County Development Plan although the area where the property was situated was originally used for light industry use and offices. By the mid-1980s it had become almost completely an office area, and the Jones Group had substantially reduced or discontinued its workshop and storage usage at the site. In 1995/6 the Beechill property was sold by public tender for IR£3m.

1.09 At a special meeting of Dublin County Council held on 10 May 1990 the members 'noted' the proposed change of the zoning from F (open space) to E (industrial) on these Beechill lands which were contained in Map 23 of the 1990 Draft Dublin Development Plan, a proposed change which carried over in the published 1991 Draft Development Plan which went on public display between September and December 1991.

1.10 A motion signed by Cllrs Don Lydon (FF) and Tom Hand (FG) was received within the Council on 28 September 1992 resolving that the Beechill lands be zoned for office use compatible with extensive office use of adjoining lands. It was proposed to a special meeting of the Council held on 16 October 1992. The Manager recommended that the motion not be passed as it could not be implemented in its current form since there was no zoning category of 'office use' in the Draft Development Plan. The Manager's recommendation that a specific objective be included in the written statement to facilitate development of offices at this location was adopted. Map 23 of the Dublin County Development Plan 1993 amendments to the 1991 Draft Development Plan showed these lands zoned E with a specific local area objective 'to facilitate the development of offices at Beechill Court' when it went on public display between July and August 1993.

1.11 At a special meeting of the Council on 2 November 1993, the Manager's report recommending confirmation of these changes was adopted without a vote and as a result the lands were zoned E in the 1993 Dublin County Development Plan with the inclusion in the written statement of the specific objective 'to facilitate the development of offices.'

MR FRANK DUNLOP'S RETENTION

2.01 Mr Dunlop was retained in February 1991 as a lobbyist by Mr Jones to assist in the campaign by Ballycullen Farms Ltd to rezone its lands. Mr Dunlop's retention arose in the context of a provision in the Dublin County Draft Development Plan, published by the Manager in 1990, that some 32 hectares (77 acres) of the Ballycullen lands would be rezoned from F (open space) to E (industrial) with the remainder of the lands to retain their 1983 zonings.

2.02 On foot of a proposal by the Council's planning department to rezone a portion of the Ballycullen lands for industrial use, a submission was made to the Council on 7 February 1991 by Mr Seán O'Laoire of Murray O'Laoire Architects, Mr Jones' professional advisors, seeking such industrial zoning. However, this proposal did not find favour with a number of councillors, and by 8 February 1991 motions had been submitted in the names of Cllrs Breda Cass, Mary Muldoon, Eithne FitzGerald and Alan Shatter seeking a reversion to B (agriculture) of the 32 hectares (77 acres) proposed to be rezoned industrial in the 1990 Draft Development Plan.

2.03 Notwithstanding its submission on this issue, it did not appear that Ballycullen Farms Ltd took any steps to ensure that a motion would be brought before the County Council seeking industrial zoning for a portion of the Ballycullen lands. The last date on which such a motion could have been brought was 15 February 1991.

2.04 In addition to the opposition of Cllrs Cass, Muldoon, FitzGerald and Shatter to the planners' proposal for industrial zoning for some 77 acres, it appeared that Mr Jones himself came under pressure from local TDs to ease the campaign he was waging to change the agricultural zoning on his lands. Mr Jones maintained that in early 1991 both Mr Séamus Brennan TD¹ and Mr Tom Kitt TD (Mr Kitt was also a councillor in early 1991) had met with him to make such a request. Mr Jones told the Tribunal that he did not accede to this request. It was Mr Jones' evidence that in early 1991 it was his intention to go 'full steam ahead' with his rezoning campaign.

2.05 The Tribunal concluded that by the time Mr Jones first met with Mr Dunlop on 21 February 1991 he recognised and appreciated that his attempts during the then ongoing review of the 1983 Development Plan to secure residential and other zoning for his Ballycullen lands would likely be met with opposition, both from elected members of the County Council and from various other interested persons or groups who were keen to ensure that the lands retained their agricultural zoning.

2.06 Mr Dunlop credited Mr Liam Lawlor TD with an involvement in his retention as a lobbyist by Mr Jones. The latter did not recollect any such involvement by Mr Lawlor. However, the Tribunal believed it probable, by virtue of Mr Lawlor's ongoing association with Mr Jones regarding the Ballycullen lands, and by virtue of Mr Dunlop and Mr Lawlor's close association, that Mr Dunlop was recommended to Mr Jones by Mr Lawlor.

2.07 According to Mr Dunlop, he advised Mr Jones during their first meeting that the review of the Development Plan provided an opportunity to make a submission to the County Council to seek a change of zoning for the lands. Mr Dunlop said that he suspected that Mr Jones had already taken advice from Mr Lawlor on this issue. Mr Dunlop also testified that he apprised Mr Jones of the need to lobby councillors in support of Ballycullen Farm Ltd's rezoning proposals and informed him of the role played by councillors in bringing rezoning motions before the Council. An undated note, furnished by Mr Dunlop to the Tribunal, which was probably made by Mr Dunlop in the course of his 21 February 1991 meeting with Mr Jones, suggested that the name of Cllr Tom Hand had been raised by either Mr Dunlop or Mr Jones at their meeting.

2.08 Mr Dunlop next met Mr Jones on 12 April 1991, a meeting which was followed some three weeks later by the first of a series of 13 payments made to Mr Dunlop between May 1991 and July 1995, amounting to a minimum of IR£61,420.83.

2.09 On 30 May 1991 the motions in the names of Cllrs Cass, Muldoon, FitzGerald and Shatter (opposing the Manager's plan to rezone a portion of the lands industrial) were passed, without objection, by the members of the County Council. The result was that when the Draft Development Plan 1991 was put on first public statutory display on 2 September 1991 the Ballycullen lands retained their B (agricultural) zoning, as provided for in the 1983 Development Plan.

2.10 Mr Dunlop again met with Mr Jones on 12 and 20 June 1991, and following those meetings Mr Dunlop wrote to Mr Jones on 1 July 1991 advising him of the need for Ballycullen Farms Ltd to make a submission to the County Council on their rezoning proposals for the lands, during the period of the first public statutory display. Mr Dunlop attached to his letter an 'action plan' for the weeks of 22 and 29 July 1991 and the week of 19 August 1991, urging Mr Jones to put in place the necessary professional teams (such as architects, design consultants, town planners and public affairs/PR consultants) to assist the company in its rezoning campaign. Mr Dunlop also advised Mr Jones that from 29 July 1991 'on-the-ground contacts' with residential and community groups should commence.

2.11 Following meetings by Mr Dunlop with Mr Jones on 23 and 25 July 1991, Mr Jones wrote to Mr Dunlop on 29 July 1991 advising him that two employees of Ballycullen Farms Ltd, Mr Oliver Brooks and Mr Frank Brooks, were willing to provide assistance in the rezoning campaign for the lands. The evidence established that both men had close connections with Fianna Fáil and were happy to assist in lobbying councillors on behalf of Ballycullen Farms Ltd.

2.12 Mr Dunlop submitted a comprehensive 'Draft Action Plan'² to Mr Jones on 30 August 1991 (probably in the course of a meeting with him which took place on that date) which contained a more detailed outline of the procedures within the County Council pertaining to its Development Plan.

2.13 Mr Dunlop also outlined to Mr Jones what his proposed ‘public affairs programme’ would comprise and he advised, inter alia:

Given the previous history of interaction with both planners and elected members vis-à-vis the Ballycullen lands we propose an intensive public affairs programme during the public display period but not before the finally agreed submission is ready. Copies of the submission, together with detailed maps in respect of our proposals will be made available to those elected members with whom we will have contact. It is vitally important that this contact is unified and cohesive. We recommend that all contact, unless otherwise required, be made by Frank Dunlop. This is a matter for discussion with Mr Jones.

The most important points of contact relate to the new electoral county of South Dublin. There are 26 elected members in this electoral area. Within reason, and where judged appropriate, each one will have to be contacted and given a briefing as to what is proposed.

2.14 Mr Dunlop proceeded to list, in his preferred order of priority, the twenty-six members of the South County Dublin Council electoral area. He then went on to refer to other ‘important points of contact’, listing another ten councillors.³

2.15 Mr Dunlop identified three government ministers: Mr Séamus Brennan TD, Ms Mary Harney TD and Mr Chris Flood TD, as persons who should also be briefed on Mr Jones’ rezoning proposals. He recommended that these individuals should be contacted either by Mr Jones alone or Mr Jones and Mr Dunlop.

2.16 In the course of his ‘Draft Action Plan’ Mr Dunlop set out a proposed action schedule for the month of September 1991, recommending that the ‘public affairs programme’ should begin on 30 September 1991.

2.17 Mr Dunlop continued to liaise closely with Mr Jones in the last quarter of 1991, meeting with him and his professional advisers on 16 September. The Tribunal was satisfied that these meetings were likely to have focused on the proposals being prepared by Mr Jones’ professional advisers for submission to the County Council during the ongoing statutory display period. This submission was lodged on 3 December 1991, on behalf of Ballycullen Farms Ltd, seeking A1 (residential) zoning for 56.08 hectares of its lands, and F (open space) zoning for the balance of the lands (21 hectares).

2.18 Following the expiry of the first statutory display period on 3 December 1991, and the period permitted for the making of oral representations on the proposed Draft Plan (March 1992), the County Council's special meetings to consider the next stage of the Draft Development Plan commenced on 10 April 1992.⁴

2.19 As of January 1992 Mr Dunlop was contemplating, in the context of such consideration of the Draft Plan, that it would be Summer 1992 at the earliest before Map 20,⁵ on which the Ballycullen lands were located, would be before the Council for consideration.⁶

2.20 Mr Dunlop's diary recorded three scheduled meetings with Mr Jones, on 5, 19 and 25 March 1992, and a further meeting on 2 April 1992. The Tribunal was satisfied that these meetings were likely to have been concerned with the relatively imminent requirement (given Mr Dunlop's belief that the Ballycullen rezoning issue would be determined by the Council in May/June 1992 as per his letter of 9 April 1992 to Mr Jones) that a motion to rezone the lands be prepared and signed by a councillor or councillors.⁷

2.21 The documentary evidence provided to the Tribunal by Mr Dunlop suggested that Mr Jones, and to a lesser extent Mr Hussey, were in frequent telephone contact with him from April 1992 onwards. Equally, from the month of April 1992, both Mr Dunlop's diary and the telephone records maintained by his secretary disclosed regular, and on occasions almost daily contact between Mr Dunlop and councillors. The Tribunal was satisfied that one of the matters in respect of which Mr Dunlop was having such contact was the Ballycullen rezoning, although this was only one of a number of rezoning proposals with which he, as a lobbyist, was concerned in 1992.

2.22 It appeared that by mid-1992 liaison by Mr Dunlop and Mr Jones (and other persons connected with Ballycullen Farms Ltd) had commenced in earnest.

⁴In January 1992 the Council was of the view that the new Development Plan would be finalised by December 1992. This in fact did not happen until December 1993.

⁵Mistakenly referred to by Mr Dunlop as Map 19 in his letter to Mr Jones of 20 January 1992.

⁶This did not happen until October 1992.

⁷By 14 April 1992 Mr Jones himself was alert to this possibility in advance of his meeting with Cllr Lydon.

2.23 On 8 April 1992 Mr Dunlop wrote to Cllr Cass, then a known opponent of the Ballycullen rezoning proposals, seeking a meeting between her and Mr Jones.

2.24 In a letter of 15 April 1992, probably in response to Mr Jones' faxed request to him on 14 April 1992, and probably in expectation of the Ballycullen rezoning proposal being the subject of Council deliberations in mid-June 1992, Mr Dunlop advised Mr Jones, inter alia, as follows:

Because we have a submission to the Plan requesting rezoning of the lands at Ballycullen from agriculture to residential we require a motion to be submitted NINE (9) working days before the date on which our map will be considered. This motion must be signed by a Councillor and be accompanied by a relevant map and the area for rezoning outlined in red. The map must also be signed by the Councillor, specifically within the red boundaries.

I attach the text of the motion.

2.25 In early June 1992, via Mr Hussey, Mr Dunlop was provided with a condensed version, prepared by Murray O'Laoire, Architects, of the submission which had been lodged with the Council on 3 December 1991. Murray O'Laoire's letter of 2 June 1992 to Mr Hussey, enclosing the document in question, stated, inter alia:

Please find enclosed note on submission to Draft Dublin County Development Plan in respect of the above as requested at our meeting on Friday. I think that Frank Dunlop should take this and polish it up/improve it for whatever audience it is intended. I have kept it to one page on purpose as I suspect that no more will be read by any councillor. You will see that I have included the A1 zoned lands at 90 acres as suggested at the meeting. Further discussions with Dr Brian Meehan suggest that the horse trading I discussed will take place but obviously if Frank Dunlop's feeling for the councillors is that a lesser figure could swing the vote then getting some rezoning takes precedence.

2.26 It is clear from the above quoted extract that by mid-1992 Mr Jones and his professional advisers, including Mr Dunlop, were expecting that, in order to achieve A1 residential zoning on the Ballycullen lands, they might have to settle for residential zoning on a somewhat smaller acreage than that proposed in the December 1991 submission (as would prove to be the case).

2.27 Meetings took place between Mr Dunlop and Mr Jones on 29 May, 15 June and 22 July 1992. By 30 June 1992 Mr Dunlop was in possession of the map, prepared by Murray O'Laoire, which was required to be attached to any motion brought before the Council seeking the rezoning of the lands.

2.28 In or about the month of July/August 1992 Mr Dunlop was retained by Beechill Properties Ltd/Mr Hussey as a lobbyist to provide assistance to that company in its campaign to have the zoning status of its lands at Beechill regularised. By the time of Mr Dunlop's retention as a lobbyist, he had already had dealings with Mr Hussey through the latter's involvement (albeit less than that of Mr Jones) in the campaign to rezone the Ballycullen lands.

2.29 As the Beechill issue was not considered or expected to be controversial,⁸ the meetings between Mr Dunlop and Mr Jones/Mr Hussey which took place on 17 and 31 August, 11 and 17 September⁹ and 19 and 27 October 1992 probably continued to concern the much more controversial issue of the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands.

2.30 By September 1992 Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms Ltd had resolved to limit their A1 (residential) proposal to 24.6 hectares (60 acres) as was evident from a draft letter prepared by Mr Dunlop for Mr Jones to send to Cllr Cass.¹⁰

2.31 As of 28 September 1992 Mr Dunlop had procured the signature of Cllrs Lydon and Hand on a motion¹¹ proposing the rezoning to A1 (residential) of 60 acres of the Ballycullen lands with the remaining lands proposed to be rezoned F (open space).

2.32 It was likely that a topic of discussion at the meetings which took place between Mr Dunlop and Mr Jones on 19 and 27 October 1992 was the lodging by Cllr Muldoon and others of motions seeking to retain the 1983 Development Plan B (agriculture) zoning for the Ballycullen lands. These motions, (together with the Lydon/Hand motion) were to come before the councillors on 29 October 1992. Mr Jones met with Cllr Muldoon in October 1992 to put his case for his rezoning proposals to her. Cllr Muldoon, however, remained steadfastly opposed to such proposals and voted accordingly on 29 October 1992.

⁸The zoning of these lands was regularised by the Council on 16 October 1992 without a vote though a motion had been lodged on 28 September 1992 in the names of Cllrs Lydon and Hand seeking such regularisation. On 2 November 1993 the regularisation of the zoning status of these lands was confirmed. No objections were received from the public.

⁹Mr Lawlor was in attendance at the 17 September meeting.

¹⁰Cllr Cass duly supported A1 (residential) zoning for 60 acres albeit with residential density limited to 360 houses in total—such density proposal having been put before the Council by Cllr Cass together with Cllr Hannon.

¹¹See Exhibit 2.

2.33 On 12 October 1992 Mr Jones met with Cllr John Hannon (FF) at Wynn's Hotel, Dublin, a meeting organised by Mr Dunlop although he was not present. The Tribunal accepted that Cllr Hannon gave his support for A1 (residential) zoning and F (open space) zoning for the lands following undertakings given by Mr Jones to Firhouse Community Council, as advised to Mr Hannon by letter from Mr Jones on 27 October 1992. On 29 October 1992, Cllr Hannon, together with Cllr Cass, successfully sought an amendment to the Lydon/Hand motion, which restricted density levels on the lands to 360 houses.

2.34 Mr Dunlop's next meeting with Mr Jones took place on 4 November 1992. This meeting followed the rezoning on 29 October 1992 of some 24.6 hectares (60 acres) of the land to A1 (residential) (albeit with restricted density) with the balance of the lands being zoned F (open space).

2.35 On 6 November 1992 Mr Dunlop received a cheque for IR£11,000 from Mr Jones. By this date Mr Dunlop (as appeared from documentary evidence available to the Tribunal) had received a total of IR£35,500. Of the seven payments which comprised this total, three had been paid by Ballycullen Farms Ltd (two in 1991 and one on 20 February 1992), one payment was made on 28 August 1992 by Beechill Properties Ltd, and the remaining payments (early May, 11 August and 6 November 1992) were made by way of personal cheque from Mr Jones. Mr Dunlop's eighth payment, a IR£2,500 personal cheque from Mr Jones, was received by him on 9 December 1992.

2.36 In the course of his evidence, Mr Dunlop was asked to explain why, on 29 July 1992 in the course of discussions with Mr John Aherne of AIB regarding the provision of a loan (for Citywest) he advised Mr Aherne that by November 1992 he expected to be in receipt of IR£50,000 from Ballycullen Farms Ltd. Mr Dunlop denied that any one sum of IR£50,000 was paid to him between 29 July and the end of November 1992. The documentation available to the Tribunal established that in the period in question (July to November 1992) Mr Dunlop received a total of IR£21,000, made up of three payments of IR£2,500, IR£7,500 and IR£11,000, paid on 11 and 28 August and 6 November 1992 respectively.

2.37 Save for telephone contact made to Mr Dunlop's office by Mr Jones in May 1993, and the issuing of an invoice for IR£7,500 by Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd to Mr Hussey of Beechill Properties Ltd on 8 January 1993, there appeared to have been little communication between Mr Dunlop and Mr Jones and/or Mr Hussey in the first half of 1993.

2.38 Regular contact between Mr Dunlop and Mr Jones resumed in September 1993, probably in the context of the expiry of the second statutory public display period of the 1993 amendments to the 1991 Draft Development Plan. This display took place between 1 July and 4 August 1993, in the course of which a number of objections concerning the proposal were received by the Council, as displayed on the draft map, to zone the Ballycullen lands A1 (residential) and F (open space).

2.39 In the lead-up to the special meeting of 28 October 1993, scheduled to deal with the Ballycullen lands, motions were submitted by Cllrs Muldoon (FG), Shatter (FG), Doohan (Lab.), and Buckley (Lab.) seeking to reverse the A1 (residential) zoning achieved for the lands a year previously. Moreover, Cllr Muldoon had lodged a further motion which sought to reverse the F (open space) zoning that had been achieved for the balance of the lands. The objective of these motions was to restore agricultural zoning status to the entire of the Ballycullen lands.

2.40 On Day 609 Mr Dunlop described the renewed contact he had with Mr Jones in late 1993 as 'renewed panic', in view of the motions which had been lodged objecting to the residential and open space zoning for the lands.

2.41 Mr Dunlop's renewed contact with Mr Jones coincided with Mr Jones' provision to him of a cheque for IR£2,000 on 3 October 1993. Mr Dunlop, in evidence, described this payment as effectively the resumption of his retainer as a lobbyist. Throughout October 1993 there was regular contact between Mr Dunlop and Mr Jones. Moreover, on 5 October 1993, Mr Jones met separately with Cllrs Lydon and Wright. The Tribunal was satisfied that during the month of October 1993 Mr Dunlop (and probably Mr Jones and others associated with Ballycullen Farms Ltd) continued the intensive campaign of lobbying councillors and it was probable that the level of contact which Mr Dunlop had with named councillors, evident from the documentation supplied by him, related to, inter alia, the Ballycullen rezoning issue.

2.42 On 21 October 1993, Mr Dunlop met with Mr Jones who paid him IR£6,000. An analysis of Mr Dunlop's office telephone records indicated that on 22 October 1993 Mr Dunlop directed his staff to telephone Mr Jones and advise him 'not to worry, Frank Dunlop will contact him later this evening', advice that presumably was in response to Mr Jones' concern that the zoning achieved on the lands might not be confirmed by the councillors.

2.43 Immediately prior to the special meeting of the Council on 28 October 1993, the proposed zoning of the Ballycullen lands was (since 29 October 1992) as follows:

- 24.3 hectares zoned A1, to provide for new residential communities in accordance with approved area action plans (360 houses in total at a density of 6 or less houses per acre)
- 52.78 hectares, zoned F, to preserve and provide for open space and recreational amenities
- Ballycullen House to be preserved for heritage centre purposes.

2.44 At the special meeting on 28 October 1993, motions tabled by Cllrs Muldoon and Shatter which proposed that the Ballycullen lands revert to their pre 29 October 1992 zoning status (agriculture) were defeated by substantial majorities. Consequently, the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992 was confirmed on 28 October 1993 (with minor changes), with those lands now zoned as follows:

- 24.3 hectares zoned A1, to provide for new residential communities in accordance with approved area action plans (360 houses in total, at a density of 15 houses per hectare),
- 52.78 hectares zoned F, to preserve and provide for open space and recreational amenities,
- Ballycullen House to be preserved for heritage centre purposes.

2.45 Subsequent to the adoption on 10 December 1993 of the 1993 Development Plan, regular contact between Mr Dunlop and Mr Jones continued, albeit on a lesser scale than during the review period. Mr Dunlop's records indicated that contact was made in February 1994 (including a payment to Mr Dunlop of IR£6,050), May, June, August, September and October, 1994. It is likely that such contact concerned ongoing discussions between Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms Ltd and the Council concerning a mapping error – the 1993 Development Plan showed some 31.6 hectares (77 acres) of the Ballycullen lands zoned A1 (residential) as opposed to the 24.6 hectares (60 acres) which had been voted for by councillors in 1992 and 1993.

2.46 Also in 1994, in the course of the drawing up by South Dublin County Council of a Draft Action Plan for the area, negotiations took place between Ballycullen Farms Ltd and the County Council relating to Ballycullen's purchase of some 8.75 acres of County Council lands. These negotiations were conducted with a view to Ballycullen Farms Ltd returning to the County Council the 8.75 acres (together with an additional 11.2 acres of its own lands) for use as open space. Ballycullen Farms Ltd's objective was to seek an increase in residential density on its residentially zoned lands from 6 houses to the acre to 8 houses to the acre – an objective which would require a material contravention vote of South Dublin County Council, given that it contravened the 1993 Development Plan.¹²

2.47 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he did not make representations to councillors regarding the mapping error that had been discovered regarding Ballycullen's residentially zoned lands. Mr Dunlop also maintained that he did not play any role in relation to the ongoing negotiations between Ballycullen Farms Ltd and the County Council in Ballycullen's bid to obtain increased density, and that he did not engage in the lobbying of councillors of South Dublin County Council in the course of their consideration of a Draft Action Plan for the area.

2.48 Mr Dunlop could not say why Mr Jones' diary for the 5 September 1994 contained the entry 'payment Frank Dunlop.' Mr Dunlop did not believe he received a payment at that time. There was no documentary evidence available to the Tribunal of a payment being made to Mr Dunlop in September 1994.¹³

2.49 Mr Jones' diary for 13 October 1994 recorded a meeting with Mr Dunlop. Mr Dunlop accepted as 'probable' that that he met Mr Jones on 13 October 1994 notwithstanding the absence of an equivalent entry in his diary. Some seven days later (20 October 1994) Mr Dunlop received a cheque for IR£9,075.

2.50 There was minimal contact between Mr Dunlop and Mr Jones in 1995. In July of that year Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd's cash receipts book recorded the receipt of IR£295.83, attributable to the Jones Group, although Mr Dunlop was unable to explain the reason for that payment or the amount.

2.51 There was no evidence of any communication between Mr Dunlop and Mr Jones in 1996. Mr Dunlop's diary for 1997 recorded only one meeting with Mr Jones on 7 February. This note may have referred to a meeting with either Mr Jones or Mr Christopher Jones Junior.

2.52 Mr Dunlop's diary for 1 December 1998 recorded a meeting with Mr Jones at the County Club, Dunshaughlin. Mr Dunlop could not give a reason for a meeting with Mr Jones on that date. He rejected any suggestion that he and Mr Jones might have discussed the Tribunal (by then in existence for over a year, ¹²This was duly achieved in February 1996.

¹³The next recorded payment was 20 October 1994.

notwithstanding that the Tribunal had been in contact with Mr Dunlop by 1 November 1998.¹⁴

2.53 Mr Dunlop accounted for the note ‘Davenport re Jones’ in his diary for 3 December 1998 as a reference to the involvement by Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd with a sponsorship initiative of O’Neils, one of the companies associated with the Jones Group.

PAYMENTS MADE TO MR DUNLOP IN RELATION TO THE BALLYCULLEN/BEECHILL LANDS

3.01 Between May 1991 and July 1995 substantial sums of money were paid to Mr Dunlop by Mr Jones Senior, Ballycullen Farms Ltd and Beechill Properties Ltd.

3.02 On 7 May 1991 Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd was paid IR£2,500 by way of cheque from Ballycullen Farms Ltd. As there was no definite trace of this cheque being lodged to any account, the Tribunal assumed that the cheque was cashed by Mr Dunlop. Mr Dunlop acknowledged the possibility that a cash lodgement to his Irish Nationwide Building Society (INBS) ‘warchest’ account of IR£2,300 on 8 May 1991 may have represented part of the IR£2,500 payment from Ballycullen Farms. Mr Jones’ accompanying letter was suggestive of a previous fee having been paid to Mr Dunlop, although Mr Dunlop had no recollection of any payment prior to May 1991.

3.03 On 10 September 1991 Ballycullen Farms Ltd paid Mr Dunlop a cheque for IR£5,000. Mr Jones’ accompanying letter stated:

I am enclosing herewith a cheque for IR£5,000 which is the agreed first instalment of the IR£15,000 fee agreed for the PR work required in promoting the rezoning proposal of the Ballycullen lands.

This cheque may have been part lodged or part cashed or entirely cashed. This payment may have formed a portion of the IR£9,953.40 lodged to a Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd bank account on 13 September 1991.

3.04 While Mr Dunlop believed that invoices may have issued in respect of these two sums (totalling IR£7,500) none were identified from documentation furnished to the Tribunal by Mr Dunlop or by Ballycullen Farms Ltd. If invoices were indeed issued, it was unlikely that they included a VAT element, given their round-figure amounts. Ballycullen Farms attributed both payments to 'dev. Fund' in its accounts.

¹⁴The Tribunal’s first letter to Mr Dunlop was dated 6 October 1998.

3.05 On 20 February 1992¹⁵ Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd issued an invoice¹⁶ to Ballycullen Farms Ltd for 'professional education and training services'¹⁷ in the sum of IR£5,000 (with VAT at 0 per cent). Ballycullen Farms Ltd paid this invoice by cheque.¹⁸ The attributed payee on the cheque stub was 'Frank Dunlop' with the words 'BC Development'. This cheque for IR£5,000 was negotiated at an AIB bank; IR£4,250 was lodged to a joint account in the names of Mr Dunlop and his wife and the balance was retained in cash. When questioned about this payment on Day 606 Mr Dunlop was unable to give an explanation as to why VAT was billed at 0 per cent, save that he said that the question of whether VAT would be applied in respect of a particular invoice could arise as a result of a conversation with the client. However, his evidence was that he did not have a recollection of speaking about this matter to Mr Jones or to anyone on his behalf.

3.06 On a date in early May 1992 Mr Jones paid Mr Dunlop a cheque drawn on his personal account payable to 'cash' for IR£2,000. The cheque was subsequently endorsed by Mr Dunlop, and presumably cashed by him.¹⁹

3.07 On 11 August 1992 Mr Jones again wrote a cheque for Mr Dunlop drawn on his personal account payable to 'cash', in the sum of IR£2,500. On 16 September 1992 IR£2,200 of this cheque was lodged to an account of Frank and Sheila Dunlop at AIB, College Street, with IR£300 being retained in cash by Mr Dunlop.

3.08 The Tribunal first became aware of the May 1992 and the August 1992 cheques on 3 March 2006 when Mr Jones' solicitors wrote to the Tribunal identifying two cheques from Mr Jones' personal account payable to 'cash'. They had not previously been discovered to the Tribunal. There was also a third cheque paid to 'cash' in Mr Jones' discovery on 3 March 2006, which was subsequently identified by the Tribunal as a payment made to Cllr Lydon on 9 December 1993.

¹⁵Mr Dunlop was at this time engaged in intensive lobbying of councillors to support the rezoning of the Ballycullen Farm's lands, as he then expected that the relevant motion would come before the councillors in June 1992.

¹⁶See Exhibit 3.

¹⁷ This invoice description did not represent or describe the services provided by Mr Dunlop to Ballycullen Farms.

¹⁸See Exhibit 4.

¹⁹ In April 1992 Mr Jones also paid IR£2,000 to Cllr Lydon (by way of cheque payable to cash).

3.09 On 28 August 1992 a cheque for IR£7,500 was paid to Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd by Beechill Properties Ltd. The cheque was sent with a letter signed by Mr Hussey. The Tribunal was satisfied that this payment was made subsequent to the furnishing by Mr Dunlop of either an invoice dated 18 August 1992 or an undated 'fee note', both of which specified, though worded slightly differently, the provision of 'professional services in respect of public affairs communications programme and training'. Both documents showed VAT at 0 per cent. This cheque appeared to have been authorised by Mr Hussey. Mr Hussey accepted that Beechill Properties Ltd paid this sum to Mr Dunlop in relation to the Beechill rezoning project. There was no record of this cheque having been lodged to the accounts of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd, or to any account operated by Mr Dunlop. The Tribunal believed that, as a matter of probability, Mr Dunlop cashed this cheque.

3.10 The fact that there were in existence an invoice and a separate 'fee note,' each for IR£7,500, in August suggested that Mr Dunlop received a second payment of IR£7,500 in August 1992. Mr Hussey said it was his belief that both documents related to the one identified payment of IR£7,500, while Mr Dunlop said it was possible that he received two payments of IR£7,500 each.

3.11 On 6 November 1992 (eight days after the Ballycullen rezoning vote in Dublin County Council), a cheque²⁰ was paid to Mr Dunlop by Mr Jones, drawn on his personal account in the sum of IR£11,000. It was accompanied by Mr Jones' letter which stated 'Dear Frank, Enclosed herewith cheque as agreed. Many thanks for all your help.' The cheque was sent to Mr Dunlop following a meeting with Mr Jones at the Goat Grill on 4 November 1992. Mr Dunlop suggested that this payment included a 'success fee' of IR£2,500. However this was not so, as Mr Dunlop was paid this sum of IR£2,500 (the success fee) on 9 December 1992. The cheque for IR£11,000 was part cashed and part lodged by Mr Dunlop. A portion of that payment, IR£2,500, was lodged to the personal account of Mr Dunlop and his wife at AIB. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that the retained cash amount of IR£8,500 was used to bribe councillors in relation to the review of the Development Plan. At around this time, Mr Dunlop had accumulated cash funds of at least IR£73,500, being the IR£8,500 from Mr Jones, a sum of IR£10,000 from Davy Stockbrokers and IR£55,000 withdrawn in cash after a transfer of IR£70,000 by Riga Ltd (Mr Owen O'Callaghan).

3.12 On 9 December 1992 Mr Dunlop received another cheque in the sum of IR£2,500 drawn on the personal account of Mr Jones. Mr Dunlop accepted that this payment probably came about following a discussion he had with Mr

²⁰See Exhibit 4.

Jones on 4 November 1992 about the payment of a success fee. Mr Jones' letter which accompanied the cheque made reference to the payment being made to 'clear the Ballycullen re-zoning account.'

3.13 Discovery made by Mr Dunlop revealed that on 8 January 1993 Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd issued an invoice for IR£7,500 (with no VAT element) to 'Mr Derry Hussey, Beechill Properties Ltd.', described as 'To second tranche of agreed fee re zoning of lands at Beechill'. The copy invoice furnished by Mr Dunlop to the Tribunal bore the following note in manuscript 'CR Note 12/1/93'. There was no evidence available to the Tribunal suggesting that this invoice was ever discharged.

3.14 On 3 October 1993 Mr Dunlop was paid IR£2,000 by Mr Jones, again by cheque drawn on Mr Jones' personal bank account.

3.15 On 21 October 1993 a cheque was paid to Mr Dunlop in the sum of IR£6,000 drawn on the personal account of Mr Jones payable to 'Frank Dunlop'. This cheque was cashed by Mr Dunlop, and a portion of the proceeds (IR£1,750) lodged to an account (No. 12909006) of Mr Dunlop and his wife at AIB.

3.16 The cheques for IR£2,000 dated 3 October 1993 and for IR£6,000 dated 21 October 1993 paid to Mr Dunlop by Mr Jones from one of his personal accounts were paid in the same month as the rezoning vote in relation to the Ballycullen lands came onto the Council agenda (28 October 1993). By October 1993 the Ballycullen rezoning was again a contentious issue, with a number of motions having been lodged with the Council seeking to have the rezoning obtained on 29 October 1992 reversed. The Tribunal found it significant that Mr Jones paid Mr Dunlop in such a manner at this time. No invoices were furnished to the Tribunal by either Mr Jones or Mr Dunlop in relation to these payments, and it was likely that no invoices were in fact furnished by Mr Dunlop.

3.17 On 3 February 1994 Mr Dunlop was paid IR£5,000 plus VAT at 21 per cent (total IR£6,050) following the issuing of an invoice by Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd dated 3 February 1994 to Mr Hussey of Jones Group Plc. This cheque, together with other monies, formed part of a composite lodgement in the amount of IR£11,737 to the bank account of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd.

3.18 Receipt of the cheque was recorded in the cash receipts book of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd as being from the Jones Group. This was the first occasion on which any of the payments received by Mr Dunlop to that date were formally recorded in the cash receipts book of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd. Mr Dunlop believed that Mr Hussey would have requested VAT invoices for payments from Beechill. This 3 February 1994 invoice issued by Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd to 'Derry Hussey, Jones Group Plc' probably followed a meeting which took place between Mr Dunlop and Mr Hussey on the same date. It is probable that one of the matters discussed at that meeting was the fact that on 31 December 1993 Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd had issued an invoice to Mr Hussey 'Jones Group Plc' for IR£7,500 plus VAT (IR£9,075) for work described as 'To third tranche of agreed fee re zoning of lands at Beechill'. On 3 February 1994 Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd ostensibly cancelled this invoice by the issuing of a credit note to Mr Hussey in the sum of IR£9,075 (IR£7,500 plus VAT).

3.19 Mr Dunlop apparently received a further payment from Jones Group Plc on 20 October 1994 in the sum of IR£9,075. This payment would appear to have been made on foot of the invoice sent by Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd on 31 December 1993 (ostensibly cancelled on 3 February 1994) as was evident from the manner in which Mr Dunlop noted receipt of this payment. Mr Hussey denied that this payment was made to Mr Dunlop.

3.20 The cheque was duly cashed by Mr Dunlop. Documents discovered by Mr Dunlop revealed that a portion of this encashed cheque was applied by him to a business venture with which he was associated in Navan, Co. Meath.

3.21 On 31 July 1995, Jones Group Plc paid Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd a sum of IR£295.83. That cheque was lodged to the account of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd on 2 August 1995.

3.22 The Tribunal was therefore satisfied that at a minimum the total sums paid to Mr Dunlop by Mr Jones and/or Ballycullen Farms Ltd and/or Beechill Properties Ltd and/or Jones Group Plc amounted to IR£61,420.83. The correct total may have been in excess of this figure.

3.23 This sum of IR£61,420.83 was considerably in excess of what was first disclosed by Mr Dunlop to the Tribunal. In his earliest dealings with the Tribunal Mr Dunlop maintained that he received a total of IR£17,500 from the Jones' interest, comprising an agreed fee of IR£15,000 and a success fee of IR£2,500. Mr Dunlop maintained this position until he gave evidence on Day 606.

3.24 Information originally supplied to the Tribunal by Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms Ltd/Beechill Properties Ltd, and prior to evidence being given to the Tribunal by Mr Jones and Mr Hussey identified a total of IR£26,000²¹ only as having being paid to Mr Dunlop.

²¹Comprised of IR£2,500 on 7 May 1991; IR£5,000 on 10 September 1991; IR£5,000 on 20 February 1992; IR£11,000 on 6 November 1992; IR£2,500 on 9 December 1992.

3.25 Neither Mr Dunlop, Mr Jones nor Mr Hussey gave an explanation as to the significant discrepancy between the figures provided to the Tribunal prior to the public hearings in which their sworn evidence was taken and the amounts disclosed in the course of that evidence. The significant under-calculation was identified by the Tribunal in the course of its examination of documentation discovered by the parties.

3.26 On Day 148 in a list entitled ‘1991-1993 (inclusive)’ being developments with which he was connected and in respect of which he bribed councillors Mr Dunlop attributed the receipt by him of IR£17,500 to ‘Ballycullen Farms near Rathfarnham’. When compiling his October 2000 statement, Mr Dunlop again only made reference to having received a total of IR£17,500 in the period ‘1991 – 1993 inclusive’. This was notwithstanding his provision of documentation to the Tribunal, by way of discovery, which showed receipt of approximately IR£43,420.83 from Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms Ltd/Beechill Properties Ltd (itself an underestimation). Thus in this statement Mr Dunlop underestimated the amount of money he received from interests associated with the Ballycullen/Beechill lands to the extent of approximately IR£43,920.83 (at a minimum).

3.27 In relation to the payments made to Mr Dunlop by Ballycullen Farms Ltd/Beechill Properties Ltd/Mr Jones between 1991 and 1994, the following features were evident:

- The majority of the payments claimed by Mr Dunlop were claimed without VAT, and paid in round-figure sums. Many of the cheques, it appeared, were cashed, with considerable monies being retained by Mr Dunlop and the balances of monies being lodged into personal bank accounts operated by Mr Dunlop and his wife (and possibly on one occasion being lodged to one of his ‘warchest’ accounts).
- Only two of the payments received by Mr Dunlop were lodged to the account of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd, namely the 3 February 1994 and 31 July 1995 payments, and those appeared also to have been the only payments formally recorded in the books of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd. It was also possible that a portion of the IR£5,000 payment of 10 September 1991 was lodged as part of a composite lodgement of IR£9,953.40 to the account of Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd on 13 September 1991.
- Few of the payments made by Mr Jones and/or Ballycullen Farms Ltd to Mr Dunlop appear to have been preceded by the issuing of an invoice by Mr Dunlop.

- Six out of a total of 13 payments (of which the Tribunal had documentary evidence) were payments made to Mr Dunlop from Mr Jones' personal funds, and were not therefore evident from the accounts of Ballycullen Farms Ltd (or of Jones Group Plc).
- The documentary evidence suggested that two of the 13 documented payments to Mr Dunlop/Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd (specifically of 3 February and 20 October 1994) were made on foot of invoices issued to Mr Hussey.
- On Day 620 Mr Hussey disputed that Beechill Properties Ltd made any payments to Mr Dunlop after the August 1992 payment. The Tribunal noted, however, that for whatever reason Mr Dunlop directed the invoice of 3 February 1994 (and indeed the 31 December 1993 invoice, ostensibly cancelled on 3 February 1994) to Mr Hussey.
- Few of the hallmarks of ordinary business dealing that might be expected to operate as between a service provider (Frank Dunlop/Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd) and a business enterprise (Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms Ltd) appeared to attach to the payments Mr Dunlop received from either Mr Jones and/or Ballycullen Farms Ltd. The Tribunal noted, in particular, that Mr Dunlop himself and not Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd was named as payee on many of the round-figure payments and, on occasions, cheques were made out to 'cash'. Many of the round-figure payments were made at crucial times in the rezoning of, in particular, the Ballycullen lands.

3.28 Mr Dunlop was unable to provide any satisfactory explanation as to why some payments were made to him on foot of invoices while others were not. His explanation for frequently part cashing and part lodging the cheques was that he needed to retain significant amounts of cash in the course of the review of the Development Plan. He retained the cash in order to have funds from which payments were made to councillors so as to secure their support for various rezoning motions which were at that time moving through the Council in the course of the review of the Dublin County Development Plan.

WERE MR JONES AND/OR MR HUSSEY AWARE OF MR DUNLOP'S PRACTICE OF BRIBING COUNCILLORS IN RELATION TO REZONING ISSUES?

4.01 In the course of his evidence to the Tribunal on Day 607, Mr Dunlop confirmed the content of a written statement he made to the Tribunal on 15 October 2004 to the effect that both Mr Jones and Mr Hussey understood, at the time he was retained by them in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands, that councillors were to be bribed in order to ensure the successful rezoning of these lands.

4.02 In that statement, Mr Dunlop stated:

In the discussions leading up to the agreement regarding fees Mr Chris Jones indicated to me that he was aware that councillors would be required to be paid and that if they were not there was no hope for land such as his to be rezoned. I informed him then, and subsequently Derry Hussey at a later meeting, that 'the ways of the world' would have to apply. Mr Jones said that he was fully aware of the situation but that people such as himself had no option but to comply. I concluded that Mr Chris Jones was aware of the system then pertaining in Dublin County Council. There was no doubt in my mind that both Messrs Jones and Hussey knew that payments to certain councillors would be necessary not only to get the required motion signed but to ensure its passage through the Council. Mr Chris Jones agreed to this procedure being used in respect of the Ballycullen farm lands. Separately Mr Hussey, at a meeting with me, acknowledged that payments to councillors would be required in respect of the lands surrounding the offices of Jones Group Plc at Beechill. However, this matter was not discussed in specific detail.

4.03 Mr Dunlop also stated in evidence that, as far as he was concerned, Mr Jones had 'unambiguously' conveyed to him his awareness of the 'system'. Mr Dunlop stated that Mr Jones had said to him that he was 'fed up giving money to political parties' and that he had acquiesced when Mr Dunlop had stated that 'the ways of the world would have to apply' and said 'I know you are going to have to do what you are going to have to do'. Mr Dunlop said that Mr Jones knew that councillors would have to be paid. Mr Dunlop was less specific as to what allowed him to conclude from what Mr Hussey had said that he was aware that such payments would be made to elected councillors. Mr Dunlop said that he stated to Mr Hussey that 'the ways of the world' would have to apply, and that Mr Hussey responded 'ok fine'.

4.04 Mr Dunlop had met Mr Hussey primarily in the context of having been retained to assist in the rezoning of the Beechill lands. Mr Dunlop met Mr Jones and Mr Hussey in relation to the Ballycullen lands, but Mr Dunlop dealt primarily with the former in relation to those lands. Mr Hussey did not attend the initial meetings between Mr Dunlop and Mr Jones.

4.05 In the course of his evidence on Day 607 Mr Dunlop stated as follows:

'The point that I was making earlier and that I wish to make now again is that in contrast to we'll say getting monies from a developer who says I am giving you this money and I know you have to give money to councillors and I have had to do it myself previously, which was the instance in one module that we dealt with previously, or in another module which has not been dealt with, where for example monies were given to me and taken back because the developers said I will pay the councillor myself, I am looking after him myself, none of that took place in this instance. This was a discussion between two and on occasion three people in relation to the process at Dublin County Council. Neither Mr Jones nor Mr Hussey ever said to me we want you to give X amount of money to X councillor, or we know you will be giving X amount of money to X councillor, or out of this 15,000 or whatever amount of money it happens to be, you will give this amount. It is a recognition on their part that there is a system involved, given their history with the lands.'

4.06 Also on Day 607, the following exchange between Counsel for the Tribunal and Mr Dunlop took place:

Q. 212 'Are you telling the Tribunal that Mr Jones told you unambiguously that he knew councillors would need to be paid, to get his lands rezoned?'

A. 'Well the answer to that is yes.'

Q. 213 'So you had a conversation with Mr Jones in which Mr Jones told you he knew councillors needed to be paid?'

A. 'He knew that the way the system of the world operated.'

Q. 214 'That is one . . .'

A. 'The ways of the world.'

Q. 215 'That is one phrase Mr Dunlop, the phrase, what you have said is that Mr Jones indicated to me that he was aware the councillors would require to be paid. I suggest there is a world of difference between that statement and knowing how the ways of the world work?'

A. 'Well there may well be. Depending on which way you approach the matter, what is at issue here to put it simpliciter is whether or not the participants in this development namely Mr Jones and Mr Hussey, but we are dealing with Mr Jones now, in my view, as a result of my initial meetings with him and there were hundreds of meetings with him as you well know, was he aware that a system applied in Dublin County Council where councillors needed to be paid? My view is yes, he did. He was so aware.'

Q. 216 'Yes but your opinion or conclusion Mr Dunlop that Mr Jones knew a system pertained or your belief that Mr Jones knew it is one thing?'

A. 'Yes.'

Q. 217 'A statement that Mr Jones agreed with you that you would implement that procedure on his behalf is a different matter.'

A. 'Yes. Well felicity of language he may well, he agreed with me that given the background to the whole scenario, whatever was required to be done to get the thing moving. Now that does not necessarily as I have said to you earlier on mean that he said to me 'I want you to pay Hand or Lydon' or whatever', he did not.'

Q. 218 'No, it has always been your position Mr Dunlop that insofar as the specifics are concerned you never discuss specifics, in other words who would have to be paid with Mr Jones or Mr Hussey?'

A. 'Correct.'

4.07 Mr Dunlop also stated:

'Yes, Ms Dillon, you see, in the context of the clinical atmosphere in which you deal with these things now, these are meetings that take place with intelligent, reasonable, honourable people who know what business is about, who have been dealing in the construction industry for the best part of 30 years and it does not require, on any given occasion, for somebody to say 'I want you to pay X, Y and Z'. The culture of the meeting, the atmosphere of the meeting, the circumstances of the meeting, to any reasonable, outside, objective person would indicate that the context was that the ways of the world would apply.'

4.08 Mr Dunlop intimated that the fact that Mr Jones had involved Mr Lawlor in the project to rezone the Ballycullen lands was further confirmation for him that Mr Jones was aware that councillors would have to be paid if the project to rezone the lands was to be successful.

4.09 On Day 607 Mr Dunlop was questioned as follows:

Q. 604 'Are you saying because you understood Mr Lawlor had an involvement in Ballycullen or with Mr Jones that that was a factor that led you to believe that Mr Jones was aware of the system that pertained in Dublin County Council?'

A. 'Well I am glad you brought that point up because without coat trailing in relation to a dead man or a man who is recently deceased, that is a factor. I mean I don't know who the contact was made by, whether it was by Chris Jones to Liam Lawlor or whether Liam Lawlor made the contact to Chris Jones, or whether Liam Lawlor was invited to make contact with Chris Jones by somebody else, I just don't know. But the very fact that Liam was involved in some fashion or other or whatever detail we may know or not know from here on in, yes would have been a blip on the horizon in relation to any knowledge, you know actual, implied, constructive or otherwise that Mr Jones might have in relation to the system.'

4.10 Later Mr Dunlop expanded on this, stating that Mr Lawlor's entry on to the horizon 'raised a flag'. Mr Dunlop opined as follows:

'Liam wasn't shy about explaining matters to people. Now by saying that I am not under any circumstances saying that Liam Lawlor explained a system or what needed or need not to be done or what he said I would or would not do for Chris Jones, but he was not shy when it came to saying what was required.'

4.11 Mr Dunlop acknowledged that notwithstanding his belief that both Mr Jones and Mr Hussey appreciated that the 'ways of the world' meant having to make payments to councillors, he, Mr Dunlop, did not ever specifically say to them that he was going to have to pay money to councillors. Mr Dunlop maintained that such a disclosure on his part 'just wasn't part of the culture' and Mr Dunlop stated 'and certainly in the context of those two gentlemen they never asked, and I never gave information. Either on request or voluntarily.'

4.12 Mr Dunlop further maintained that, notwithstanding the absence of direct dialogue between himself and Mr Jones and Mr Hussey on the issue of payments to councillors, 'My belief arising out of the discussions I had with both men was that they were aware'.

4.13 Both Mr Jones and Mr Hussey vehemently denied that they knew or had any awareness of Mr Dunlop's activities in bribing councillors, or that he was to involve himself in the payment of money to councillors in the course of the project to rezone the Ballycullen and Beechill lands.

4.14 In evidence on Day 620 Mr Jones denied ever making the statements attributed to him by Mr Dunlop and he denied that Mr Dunlop had ever said to him that 'the ways of the world would have to apply'. As far as Mr Jones was concerned he had 'never heard that comment in my life from anybody' including Mr Dunlop. Mr Dunlop had never discussed making payments to councillors with him, save a discussion they had had regarding Cllr Hand. Mr Jones told the Tribunal, however, that between February and June 1991, he had had a conversation with Mr Dunlop in which Mr Dunlop had raised the issue of political donations. This issue, according to Mr Jones, was raised in light of the then impending Local Elections (June 1991).

4.15 On Day 620 the following exchange took place between Counsel for the Tribunal and Mr Jones:

Q. 247 'Did Mr Dunlop ever discuss with you the fact that councillors were going to have to be paid to secure their support?'

A. 'No but he indicated that the elections which were on around the time of our zoning, that he would have to make donations to some of these councillors as political donations.'

Q. 248. 'Can you remember- So the election took place I think in June of 1991?'

A. 'That's right, yes.'

Q. 249 'And you must have had that conversation with Mr Dunlop before that, isn't that right?'

A. 'I would think, so, yes.'

Q. 250 'And I think your first contact with Mr Dunlop, from the documentation, appears to be February of 1991, isn't that right?'

A. 'That's correct.'

Q. 251 'So sometime between February and June of 1991, you had a conversation with Mr Dunlop or a meeting with Mr Dunlop, in which Mr Dunlop discussed making political contributions to councillors. Is that right?'

A. 'Yes. We didn't go into any detail on that, Ms Dillon. He made comments regarding donations, but I mean, I didn't see anything wrong with that.'

Q. 252. 'What did Mr Dunlop say, can you remember, Mr Jones?'

A. 'Well that these elections were on the way and he said that we had to make political donations, which I had to make as well.'

Q. 253. 'When you say you had to make political donations, was that for the local election in 1991?'

A. 'Yes. There was a general election some time fairly soon afterwards.'

Q. 254 'Yes. I think that was November 1992?'

A. '92, yes. I'm not very certain about the dates but . . .'

Q. 255 'Well the local election was I think June of 1991?'

A. 'Yes.'

Q. 256 'Before the local elections, Mr Dunlop said to you that he was going to have to make payments to the councillors for the local elections, isn't that right?'

A. 'Donations.'

Q. 257 'Donations. And did you say to him that you too were going to have to made donations?'

A. 'I don't think so.'

Q. 258 'I thought you said a moment ago that you said to him that you'd have to make donations as well?'

A. 'Well no. I'm saying to you that I also had to make donations.'

Q. 259 'You didn't say that to [. . .] Mr Dunlop?'

A. 'I may well have done.'

4.16 In evidence on Day 620 Mr Hussey stated that he had never had any discussion with Mr Dunlop about payments to councillors in relation to the Ballycullen lands, and insofar as Beechill was concerned, there had never been a suggestion that anyone was going to have to be paid. According to Mr Hussey, he had never considered any issue or question of corrupt payments being made in relation to Ballycullen or Beechill. Mr Dunlop said that Mr Hussey did not attend his initial meetings with Mr Jones, and he only recalled Mr Hussey being present at meetings concerning Ballycullen once or twice.

4.17 Mr Dunlop first mentioned the Ballycullen lands to the Tribunal on Day 148 and identified the names of Mr Jones and Mr Hussey in the context of naming land owners/developers who had retained him and paid him money as a lobbyist. On Day 148 Mr Dunlop referred to the Ballycullen lands as 'relatively innocent' and involving 'two very honourable people'.

4.18 In the course of his private interview with the members of the Tribunal's legal team on 11 May 2000, and in a discussion of the Ballycullen rezoning issue, Mr Dunlop stated the following:

'People whose bona fides were quite genuine came to me. I did allude to that. One of those that I did say the other day was old Chris Jones of the Jones Group. Old Chris Jones had been run around the place ragged for a variety of political entities because obviously Chris didn't know the system or wasn't prepared to or Derry Hussey, his financial controller was saying not on or whatever. And I eventually got called in. I specifically suspect that also in that case I was called in as a result of some contact with Liam Lawlor. I have no proof, none whatsoever. But definitely the disbursements of money to politicians was never discussed with Chris Jones and or Derry Hussey.'

4.19 On Day 607, Mr Dunlop acknowledged that this statement by him in the course of his private interview on 11 May 2000 was inconsistent with part of his statement made in October 2004 and with evidence given to the Tribunal as to his belief that Mr Jones and Mr Hussey were aware of his intention to pay bribes to councillors.

4.20 In a subsequent private interview with the members of the Tribunal's legal team on 18 May 2000, Mr Dunlop stated the following:

'I told Mr Jones and on occasion Mr Hussey but certainly Mr Jones that the ways of the world would have to apply and he said he was fully aware of that and he said that he had difficulties in the context of one Fine Gael, two Fine Gael councillors, Breda Cass who was then in Fine Gael and subsequently left, and Mary Muldoon.'

In the course of his evidence on Day 607 Mr Dunlop emphasised that his references on 18 May 2000 to Cllrs Cass and Muldoon was not intended to suggest any impropriety on their part, and evidence heard by the Tribunal did not establish any such impropriety. On the contrary, the evidence established that Cllrs Muldoon and Cass conducted themselves at all relevant times as conscientious and honourable councillors.

4.21 In the course of his October 2000 statement, Mr Dunlop had not placed an asterisk beside the reference to 'Ballycullen Farm'. The placing of an asterisk beside the names of particular lands was Mr Dunlop's way of indicating that he believed the landowner/developer associated with those lands knew of his practice of making corrupt payments to councillors. On Day 607 Mr Dunlop was unable to explain why he had not done so notwithstanding the fact that he had referred to the 'ways of the world' discussion he had had with both Mr Jones and Mr Hussey. He sought to explain this failure on the basis that no direct or specific words had been used or instruction given by either Mr Jones or Mr Hussey to him to pay money to named councillors. On Day 607 he went on to say:

'That's the only explanation for the absence of the asterisk and also in the context of, and maybe blindsiding myself by my—I mean, my relationship with Mr Jones, I mean this is somewhat a little bit difficult, I have a high regard for Mr Jones, I do believe he is an honourable man, he is a distinguished gentleman, he is of the old school, and I am not suggesting that because of that I didn't put the asterisk in front of the Ballycullen Farm names, but I am trying to explain to you the difference in the circumstances that I apply in each, in relation to each development, where there is a clear knowledge on the part of some people saying look I know you are going to have to give money to councillors I had to do it myself or here is money to give to councillors and take it back because I am going to do it myself.'

4.22 Mr Dunlop, however, accepted in evidence that, notwithstanding the reference to 'the ways of the world' in the October 2000 statement, he had not in that statement attributed corrupt knowledge to Mr Jones or Mr Hussey. However, he went on to do so more directly in his October 2004 statement. He agreed that 'nothing dramatic' had happened between October 2000 and October 2004 which enabled him to be more conclusive about his level of awareness on the part of Mr Jones and Mr Hussey about his, Mr Dunlop's, corrupt activities.

4.23 The Tribunal noted that, from the outset, Mr Dunlop was adamant in his recollection that he had used the phrase 'the ways of the world' to both Mr Jones and Mr Hussey when discussing the work he would have to do to get the lands rezoned. The Tribunal was satisfied that some such words were used, and were used in the context of the timeframe in which Mr Dunlop was retained. Mr Dunlop's initial meetings with Mr Jones occurred in February and April 1991, the April meeting occurring some two months prior to the Local Elections. Mr Jones himself, while denying ever having heard or acquiesced with the phrase 'the ways of the world' told the Tribunal that one of the matters he did discuss with Mr Dunlop was the payment of political donations to councillors in the context of the then upcoming Local Elections. Mr Dunlop denied having such a discussion with Mr Jones. The Tribunal was satisfied, however, that such a discussion probably did take place between the two.

4.24 The Tribunal was also satisfied that Mr Jones took on board the perceived need to make 'political donations' in the course of his project to have the Ballycullen lands rezoned. Mr Jones himself acknowledged making political donations to a number of councillors in relation to the Local Elections in 1991, albeit long after those elections had taken place.

4.25 There was no evidence before the Tribunal of substantial payments being made by Mr Jones to politicians in the period up to or during the June 1991 Local Elections, apart from Mr Jones' cheque of 19 June for IR£1,000 to Fianna Fáil (apparently sent to the then Taoiseach, Mr Charles J. Haughey, following the receipt of a request for political donations) and the Lawlor/Comex payments of IR£5,000 (1990/1) and IR£7,500 (July 1991).²²

4.26 There was evidence of Mr Jones having made a payment to Cllr Lydon of IR£2,000 in April 1992, some days after they had met to discuss Cllr Lydon's support for the Ballycullen rezoning motion.

4.27 Moreover, there was evidence of a substantial number of payments made to a number of councillors either by Mr Jones and/or Ballycullen Farms Ltd and/or on his/its behalf at the time of the November 1992 General Election (including to councillors who were not candidates in that election). These disbursements were made within weeks of the Beechill/Ballycullen rezoning votes in October 1992 and were made at a time when these rezonings remained on the County Council agenda, by virtue of the need for County Council confirmation meetings which ultimately occurred in October 1993.

4.28 On Day 621 Mr Jones was asked how he had decided to make donations if as he acknowledged, he had never met some of the councillors given donations in November 1992. He replied 'that must have taken some inspired view of it or something' and stated that he must have received some assistance 'from people that were part of the scene in the council'. Mr Jones did not believe that he had discussed the matter in any detail with Mr Dunlop. With regard to the claimed discussion with Mr Dunlop prior to the June 1991 Local Election (when Mr Dunlop had said that donations would have to be made), Mr Jones could not recall if Mr Dunlop had named those to whom donations would have to be given.

4.29 The Tribunal was satisfied that in all probability Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms Ltd made the 'political donations' in the knowledge that, (as Mr Dunlop had indicated), the 'ways of the world' would have to apply.

4.30 The largesse of the political donations on the part of Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms Ltd, which occurred after the retention of Mr Dunlop, was noteworthy. None of the recipients of this largesse, with the exception of Cllr Hand,²⁰ had apparently previously been the recipients of political contributions from Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms Ltd. Cllr Lydon, a key player in the Ballycullen rezoning, who was unacquainted with Mr Jones prior to April 1992, was the recipient from him of some IR£9,000 over a 20-month period. Cllr Wright was the recipient of IR£5,000 from Mr Jones in November 1992. In all, within weeks of the first vote on the Beechill/Ballycullen rezoning issues, Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms Ltd paid out approximately IR£20,000 as political donations. In addition, IR£1,000 was paid to Cllr Hand by Mr Hussey/Beechill, probably after October 1992 and IR£17,500 in total was paid to Mr Lawlor by Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms Ltd by the end of December 1992. Therefore, by the year ending December 1992, Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms Ltd and Mr Hussey/Beechill had paid out approximately IR£40,000 to politicians who were involved with the rezoning of the Ballycullen/Beechill lands. In December 1993 Cllr Lydon received a sum of IR£2,000 (part of the IR£9,000 referred to above) from Mr Jones and Cllr Hand received a second IR£1,000 sum from Mr Jones, via Mr Dunlop. (Mr Dunlop denied knowledge of this payment.)

²⁰Mr Jones made political contributions to Cllr Hand prior to (and subsequent to) 1992. Such contributions were in the region of IR£200/IR£300 at election time.

4.31 Although Mr Dunlop expressed his belief that both Mr Jones and Mr Hussey were aware of the perceived need to pay particular councillors in order to secure their support for rezoning proposals by virtue of having acquiesced when he stated 'the ways of the world' would have to apply, and of being close business associates, the Tribunal was satisfied that only Mr Jones had a full awareness of this perceived need.

4.32 The evidence heard by the Tribunal established two important facts which, when considered together, led it to conclude as a matter of probability that Mr Jones was, as Mr Dunlop believed, aware of the perceived need to pay councillors to achieve the rezoning of land. These were:

- The number, circumstances, timing and total amount of payments made by Mr Jones from his personal funds to Mr Dunlop, rather than through company funds
- The number, circumstances, timing and total amount of payments made by, or organised by, Mr Jones directly to councillors who were directly involved in voting for motions relevant to the project to rezone the Ballycullen/Beechill lands.

4.33 Mr Hussey confirmed to the Tribunal that he arranged a payment of IR£1,000 to Cllr Hand from Beechill Properties Ltd, probably sometime in late 1992, with some unease or reluctance on his part, following a request to do so by Mr Dunlop, and in the knowledge of Cllr Hand's involvement in rezoning and planning issues relating to lands both in Ballycullen and Beechill. Subsequently, Mr Hussey declined to organise a second payment to Cllr Hand, requested by Mr Dunlop, and was probably unaware that Mr Jones later made that second payment, also in the sum of IR£1,000, to Cllr Hand from his (Mr Jones') personal funds.

4.35 The Tribunal was not satisfied on the balance of probability that Mr Hussey possessed the degree of knowledge and awareness of Mr Dunlop's actual or intended practice of paying councillors to support the rezoning of land that Mr Dunlop suggested.

ALLEGED PAYMENTS TO COUNCILLORS

ALLEGED PAYMENTS TO COUNCILLORS OTHER THAN BY MR DUNLOP

5.01 The Tribunal undertook a detailed inquiry into payments alleged to have been made to councillors by, or on behalf of, Mr Jones, Mr Hussey, Ballycullen Farms Ltd, Beechill Properties Ltd, (or any related companies or entities) in the early 1990s.

5.02 In total, approximately IR£25,000²⁴ was alleged to have been paid to councillors by or on behalf of the individuals/companies referred to in the previous paragraph.

5.03 The Tribunal was advised by oral evidence or by reference to Ballycullen/Beechill records that the following payments were made to the following councillors in the period 1992/3:

- IR£9,000 in 1992/3 to Cllr Don Lydon (FF) (IR£2,000 on 27 April 1992, IR£5,000 on 12 November 1992 and IR£2,000 on 9 December 1993)
- IR£5,000 in November 1992 to Cllr G. V. Wright (FF)
- IR£2,000 in 1992/4 to Cllr Tom Hand (FG)
- IR£250 on 24 November 1992 to Cllr Tony Fox (FF)
- IR£500 on 19 November 1992 to Cllr Colm McGrath (FF)
- IR£1,000 in the year ending December 1992 to Cllr Cyril Gallagher (FF) (Mr Jones believed that this payment was handed over by Mr Oliver Brooks.)
- IR£500, possibly in 1992, to Cllr John O'Halloran (Lab)
- IR£500 on 16 November 1992 to Cllr Larry Butler (FF)
- IR£1,000 in the year ending December 1992 to Cllr Liam Creaven (FF)
- IR£1,000 in the year ending December 1992 to Cllr M. J. Cosgrave (FG) (Mr Jones believed that this payment was handed over by Mr Oliver Brooks.)
- IR£1,000 in the year ending December 1992 to Cllr Ned Ryan (FF)
- IR£1,000 in November 1992 to Cllr Anne Ormonde (FF) (probably made by Mr Frank Brooks)
- IR£500 or IR£600 in the year ending December 1992 to Cllr Sheila Terry (PD/FG)
- IR£500 in the year ending December 1992 to Cllr Michael Keating (FG)
- IR£500 in the year ending December 1992 to Cllr Charlie O'Connor (FF)
- IR£250 in the year ending December 1992 to Cllr Marian McGennis (FF) (Cllr McGennis did not accept that she received this payment)
- IR£1,000 in November 1992 to Cllr John Hannon (FF)
- IR£250 in the year ending December 1992 to Cllr Brock (FF)

Each of the foregoing alleged payments was considered separately by the Tribunal.

²⁴ Additionally, IR£500 was paid to Mr Séamus Brennan TD, and IR£2,500 was paid to Mr Tom Kitt TD.

ALLEGED PAYMENTS TO COUNCILLORS BY MR DUNLOP

5.04 Mr Dunlop alleged that he made the following payments in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands rezoning projects to the following councillors in 1992:

- IR£2,000 in October 1992 to Cllr Don Lydon (FF)
- IR£2,000 in October 1992 to Cllr Tom Hand (FG)
- IR£1,000 in October 1992 to Cllr Tony Fox (FF)
- IR£1,000 in October/November 1992 to Cllr Liam T. Cosgrave (FG)
- IR£1,000 in October 1992 to Cllr Colm McGrath (FF)
- IR£1,000 in October/November 1992 to Cllr Cyril Gallagher (FF)
- IR£1,000 in October/November 1992 to Cllr Jack Larkin (FF)
- IR£1,000 in October/November 1992 to Cllr Seán Gilbride (FF)
- A payment of not less than IR£500 being part of a composite IR£5,000 payment alleged by Mr Dunlop to have been paid to Cllr John O'Halloran (Lab/Ind) in the course of the making of the 1993 Development Plan.

The foregoing alleged payments were each considered separately by the Tribunal.

5.05 Motions crucial to the specific rezoning of the Ballycullen/Beechill lands were voted on by councillors at meetings of Dublin County Council on the following dates:

- 16 October 1992 (Beechill)
- 29 October 1992 (Ballycullen)
- 28 October 1993 (Ballycullen)
- 2 November 1993 (Beechill)

5.06 Elections were held on the following dates:

- Local Elections: 27 June 1991
- General Election: 25 November 1992
- Seanad Election: January/February 1993

There were no elections in 1993 (other than the Seanad Election in January/February 1993).

CLLR DON LYDON (FF)ALLEGED PAYMENTS TO CLLR LYDON BY MR JONES

6.01 Mr Jones made payments totalling IR£9,000 to Cllr Lydon between April 1992 and December 1993. A further payment was made to Cllr Lydon in the sum of IR£500 in 1999.

6.02 On 27 April 1992, Mr Jones paid a cheque in the sum of IR£2,000 to Cllr Lydon, drawn on his personal bank account. The cheque was made payable to 'cash', and was lodged (as part of a larger lodgement) to a joint savings account, in the names of Cllr Lydon and his wife, in Bank of Ireland on the following day.

6.03 Although Mr Jones recalled meeting Cllr Lydon on 'a couple of occasions', he could not recall with certainty if they met on, or close to 27 April 1992 (the date of the cheque), but agreed that it was possible that they did so. Mr Jones stated that he could have posted the cheque to Cllr Lydon. He acknowledged, however, that he and Cllr Lydon may have met around this time as he, Mr Jones, wanted to discuss the forthcoming Ballycullen rezoning motion with Cllr Lydon.

6.04 Mr Jones told the Tribunal that when he and Cllr Lydon met they discussed money in the context of the financial strain which Cllr Lydon led Mr Jones to believe he was under 'with all of these various campaigns he was going for, the Senate and the local elections.'

6.05 In the following exchange between Counsel for the Tribunal and Mr Jones on Day 621 Mr Jones was asked to explain the reason for the payment of IR£2,000 to Cllr Lydon in April 1992:

Q. 266 'Now, why would you have paid 2000 pounds to Mr Lydon?'

A. 'The only explanation I can give you is that I gave it to you before, was that I had a lot of—I wouldn't say, but sympathy with Mr Lydon. Because he seemed to be under both mentally and financial strain to cope with all of these various campaigns that he was going for, the Senate and the local elections. That's all I can say.'

Q. 267 'At the meetings that you had with Mr Lydon, regardless of when they took place, did he discuss with you the financial strain that he was under?'

A. 'Yes.'

Q. 268 'Did he talk about how expensive things were?'

A. 'Yes.'

Q. 269 'So you were discussing money with Mr Lydon?'

A. 'I was, indeed, yes.'

Q. 270 'And was it your impression or did you understand from Mr Lydon that he was looking for a contribution or assistance from you?'

A. 'Well he didn't ask me for any assistance. But I kind of got the impression that he needed it.'

Q. 271 'Right. And who would have raised the topic of the financial strain that he was under or his financial affairs?'

A. 'Well I think it would have come out in the discussion of having to travel the whole country to mount the campaign for the Senate and deal with the local authority at the same time.'

Q. 272 'But if you did meet him in April 1992, what you wanted to discuss with Mr Lydon was the motion, isn't that right?'

A. 'It would appear so from the correspondence, yeah.'

Q. 273 'And in the course of that discussion Mr Lydon raised with you, as best you recollect, is the financial strain under which he then perceived himself to be?'

A. 'Well, I wouldn't put it as directly as that. We discussed the various implications of what he was going to go through. And I took it that there was serious money involved in all of this.'

6.06 Cllr Lydon acknowledged to the Tribunal that a meeting took place between himself and Mr Jones (whom he described in evidence invariably as 'a lovely gentleman', and 'a remarkable man') in April 1992 in Mr Jones' offices at Beechill in Clonskeagh, Co. Dublin, and that during this meeting the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands was discussed. Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that he was impressed with aspects of the project. Cllr Lydon said that in the course of this meeting, Mr Jones indicated to him that he wished to give him something towards his election campaign. He was presented with a cheque for IR£2,000, either at that meeting or shortly afterwards. Cllr Lydon stated that Mr Jones had expressed his appreciation to him for professional help he had provided to a third party. This was a reference to Cllr Lydon's work as a psychologist with the St John of God Hospital. Nevertheless, Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that he considered the IR£2,000 payment to be a political donation.

6.07 There was no election scheduled for the period in or around April 1992. The closest previous election was the Local Election in 1991, and the closest subsequent election was the General Election of November 1992 (with the linked Seanad Election in January/February 1993). Cllr Lydon agreed that the April 1992 cheque was the first political donation he had received from Mr Jones.

6.08 Mr Jones made a second payment to Cllr Lydon, in the sum of IR£5,000, on 12 November 1992 by way of a personal cheque²⁵ payable to ‘Mr Don Lydon’. Mr Jones acknowledged to the Tribunal that, in deciding to pay Cllr Lydon the IR£5,000, he took account of the assistance rendered by him in signing a motion for Ballycullen and supporting its rezoning. Mr Jones did not accept, as maintained by Cllr Lydon, that the cheque had been given to him in the Goat Grill. Mr Jones believed that he would have subsequently sent it to Cllr Lydon. He told the Tribunal that at the meeting with Cllr Lydon in November 1992 his impression of Cllr Lydon was that of a ‘distressed’ man, a man ‘unsure’, as he advised Mr Jones, of his decision to try to become a full-time politician.

6.09 In his evidence to the Tribunal, Cllr Lydon stated that the payment was probably made in the course of what he described as a chance meeting between the two men at the Goat Grill public house in Co. Dublin. This meeting occurred shortly after the motion to rezone the Ballycullen lands had been passed on 29 October 1992. That motion had been signed by Cllr Lydon and Cllr Hand. Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that in the course of their chance meeting, and to his surprise, Mr Jones wrote him a cheque drawn on his personal account, in the sum of IR£5,000. Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that Mr Jones conveyed to him his appreciation for his support in relation to the recent Ballycullen rezoning motion.

6.10 As to the reason why he was paid IR£5,000, Cllr Lydon stated, in the course of his evidence: ‘Because of the election had been called and there was a Senate election coming up. That’s why he gave me the donation. When we discussed the size of it, he said again, it was an appreciation for what I had done.’

6.11 Cllr Lydon also told the Tribunal that Mr Jones ‘obviously thanked me for my support, or seconding the thing or whatever it was and then went on to talk about other things. He is a very amiable man.’

6.12 Cllr Lydon described the IR£5,000 payment as ‘an awful lot of money’, and confirmed that it was probably one of the two largest²⁶ donations he had ever received.

6.13 Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that the amount of the payment ‘astounded’ him, and he believed it again reflected Mr Jones’ appreciation of the professional assistance he had provided to a third party known to Mr Jones. Cllr Lydon maintained that while he regarded the payment as a political donation made in the context of the then forthcoming Seanad Election he had not viewed the payment as having been made in gratitude for his involvement in the October 1992 rezoning motions.

²⁵See Exhibit 6.

²⁶The other being, according to Cllr Lydon, IR£2,500 received from Monarch Properties.

6.14 On Day 613, Cllr Lydon was asked the following question: ‘Why would you take [something] from somebody who you felt was giving you money in appreciation for voting in support. Did you not see anything wrong with that?’ Cllr Lydon responded: ‘Not in the slightest. No, I mean why would there be anything wrong with it, I mean—if he wants to give me money, it’s his business. I am delighted to accept it.’

6.15 Cllr Lydon was then asked: ‘Surely it’s your business as well. I mean did it not dawn on you that this looks like a payment for supporting the rezoning?’ Cllr Lydon replied: ‘No. You see Mr Jones is a Fianna Fáil man.’

6.16 Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that Mr Jones gave donations ‘left right and centre to everybody all over the place.’

6.17 The following exchange then took place between the Tribunal and Cllr Lydon:

Q. ‘If you had voted against the rezoning, do you think he would have given you money?’

A. ‘I must give you an honest answer to that, I think he probably would, he’s that kind of man. One of nature’s gentleman.’

Q. ‘So even if you had voted against it, he would have given you [the payment]’

A. ‘I would say he might have given me a donation, maybe. Because he is a remarkable man.’

Q. ‘That would make him a remarkable man. But anyway, you don’t see anything wrong in the proximity [between the vote and the payment]?’

A. ‘Sure the whole thing was over at that stage. I mean there was no big deal with about it. He probably said I am very appreciative of what you did and I said nothing to it and then he went on to discuss the other matter again and the reason for the size of the cheque was because of what I had done before and he said we were very, very appreciative. I think he said something like if—maybe it was that or the other meeting, something along we can never repay you. He may tell you different when he sees you but that’s the way I remember it.’

6.18 While the payment of April 1992 in the sum of IR£2,000 was lodged to a joint savings account in the names of Cllr Lydon and his wife, the IR£5,000 payment made to Cllr Lydon on 12 November 1992 was lodged to a Bank of Ireland account in the sole name of Cllr Lydon's wife, on 11 December 1992.

6.19 On approximately 9 December 1993 a cheque payable to cash in the sum of IR£2,000, drawn on Mr Jones' personal account, was given to Cllr Lydon, and was subsequently lodged to a Bank of Ireland joint account in the names of Cllr Lydon and his wife.

6.20 Mr Jones' diary for 5 October 1993 recorded a scheduled meeting between himself and Cllr Lydon ('Don Lydon 6.o.c.')²⁷ The Tribunal was satisfied that such a meeting probably took place despite an absence of recollection of the meeting on the part of both Mr Jones and Cllr Lydon. (In fact, Cllr Lydon expressed a doubt that it had taken place.) The meeting was in the period shortly prior to Dublin County Council meetings in October/November 1993 when the Council's agenda included rezoning issues relating to the Beechill and Ballycullen lands.²⁸ When it was put to Mr Jones (by Tribunal Counsel) that he and Cllr Lydon had in common at this time an interest in the (then) forthcoming confirmation meeting relating to the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands, Mr Jones said 'I'm sure it must be, yes.'

6.21 It appeared to the Tribunal that neither Mr Jones nor Mr Hussey was concerned about the Beechill proposal at this juncture, as their objective for these lands had been achieved in the previous year, without recourse to a Council vote, and they did not expect that any difficulty would arise on 2 November 1993 when the matter came up for confirmation. This view was proved correct, and the Beechill rezoning was confirmed by the County Council on 2 November 1993.

6.22 However, the Ballycullen rezoning was a different matter. While these lands had been rezoned on 29 October 1992 for open space and residential development (albeit with restricted density) on foot of a motion signed by Cllrs Lydon and Hand on 28 September 1992, on 12 October 1993 councillors were notified of the lodgement of a number of motions seeking to have the zoning revert to the previous agricultural zoning. The Tribunal was satisfied that it was in this context that Mr Jones and Cllr Lydon met on 5 October 1993. It was likely that at this meeting they discussed Cllr Lydon's ongoing support, and the need to counter any proposal seeking to return the Ballycullen lands to agricultural zoning.

²⁷See Exhibit 7

²⁸Dublin County Council meetings were subsequently scheduled and took place on 28 October and 2 November 1993 in relation to, respectively, the Ballycullen and Beechill lands.

6.23 On 28 October 1993 the Muldoon/Shatter motions which sought to have the lands revert to agricultural zoning were defeated. The zoning of the lands was therefore confirmed residential and open space on 28 October 1993.

6.24 In a letter dated 3 November 1993,²⁹ some days following the successful outcome of the Ballycullen rezoning project, Mr Jones wrote to Cllr Lydon in the following terms: 'Dear Don, Thank you indeed for your nice letter and your kind remarks. I need hardly say we are deeply indebted to you for all your help. I will contact you shortly and arrange to meet for a chat some evening.'

6.25 Cllr Lydon agreed that it was in the aftermath of this success that he must have written to Mr Jones, hence the reference to his, Cllr Lydon's, 'nice letter'.

6.26 The 'chat' referred to in that letter almost certainly took place when the two men met in the Goat Grill on 8 December 1993. In his diary for that date Mr Jones, who stated that he quite frequently met people in the Goat Grill for lunch, had the following entry 'Goat Lunch'. On 9 December 1993 a payment of IR£2,000 was made to Cllr Lydon. The cheque³⁰ was made payable to 'cash'.

6.27 Both Mr Jones and Cllr Lydon maintained that the three payments (made in April and November 1992 and December 1993, and totalling IR£9,000) were political donations to Cllr Lydon. In relation to the IR£5,000 cheque paid to Cllr Lydon, dated 12 November 1992, Mr Jones acknowledged that in making the payment he had taken into account Cllr Lydon's assistance in signing a motion and in the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands. Mr Jones also acknowledged that his 9 December 1993 payment of IR£2,000 to Cllr Lydon 'could well be' in discharge of his 'indebtedness' to Cllr Lydon, as he saw it. The Tribunal was satisfied that the payments, and in particular the size of the payments, were prompted by a sense of appreciation or gratitude on the part of Mr Jones for the important role that had been and was going to be played by Cllr Lydon in successfully promoting the rezoning of the Ballycullen and Beechill lands as they meandered their way through the rezoning process in the Council.

6.28 Cllr Lydon maintained that his support for the rezoning of these lands was based on the merit of the proposals, and that Mr Jones' contributions in no way represented a payment in return for support, either past or future. The Tribunal was entirely satisfied, however, that the reason Mr Jones and Cllr Lydon met in April 1992 was to discuss Cllr Lydon's support for the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands and, more particularly, to discuss the possibility of Cllr Lydon signing a motion to rezone the lands. It was a fact that by October 1992 Cllr Lydon was a signatory to two motions connected with Mr Jones' interests, one in relation to the Ballycullen lands and the other relating to the Beechill property. The Tribunal was satisfied that by 14 April 1992 Mr Jones was preparing for his forthcoming meeting with Cllr Lydon, hence his fax to Mr Dunlop requesting that he be provided with 'the text of the submission that Don Lydon has to make to the Council'. The Tribunal was satisfied that what was being requested by Mr Jones was the text of a motion that was to be signed by Cllr Lydon.³¹

²⁹See Exhibit 8.

³⁰See Exhibit 9.

6.29 Irrespective of whether any document was shown to Cllr Lydon by Mr Jones on the day they met, the Tribunal was satisfied that they discussed the necessity for a rezoning motion for the Ballycullen lands. The Tribunal was equally satisfied, even accepting Mr Jones' account of what was communicated to him by Cllr Lydon regarding the latter's 'financial strain', that what was being communicated to Mr Jones by Cllr Lydon (and in all probability understood by Mr Jones) was that Cllr Lydon was making a request for money in return for his support and in return for his signature to any motion to rezone the Ballycullen lands.

6.30 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Jones and Cllr Lydon met in the Goat Grill in or about November 1992. The Tribunal accepted Mr Jones' evidence that Cllr Lydon once again apprised him of the financial strain he was under and that Mr Jones conveyed to him his appreciation of his contribution to the successful outcome of the vote of 29 October 1992. The Tribunal was satisfied that the Ballycullen rezoning was the primary motive for the payment of the IR£5,000 to Cllr Lydon, particularly since both Mr Jones and Cllr Lydon appreciated in November 1992 that the lands would again feature on the County Council agenda sometime in 1993 (following the second statutory public display of the Draft Development Plan). As such, the payment of IR£5,000 was in reality a cynical exercise on the part of Mr Jones designed to ensure Cllr Lydon's continuing support for the Ballycullen rezoning. The Tribunal had no doubt that the size of the cheque reflected Cllr Lydon's ongoing importance to Mr Jones.

6.31 The Tribunal did not accept Cllr Lydon's explanation for his receipt of the cheque and believed that this explanation was tendered by him in order to obscure the link that might otherwise appear to have existed between his support and his signature for the Ballycullen rezoning proposal, and the payment to him of IR£5,000 within approximately 14 days of the first vote. The Tribunal noted that the Council records did not indicate any disclosure made by Cllr Lydon of the receipt of money from Mr Jones.

6.32 The Tribunal was satisfied that the December 1993 payment of IR£2,000 to Cllr Lydon was directly linked to the support provided by him for the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands and that such payment was, in all probability, agreed by Cllr Lydon and Mr Jones during the course of their meetings of 5 October or 8 December 1993 in the context of the confirmation of the zoning achieved on 28 October 1993. It may well have been that this request was couched in terms of the 'financial strain' imposed on Cllr Lydon's political career but the Tribunal had no doubt but that once again Cllr Lydon had communicated to Mr Jones that he was seeking money for support he was providing (or had provided) in the context of the Ballycullen and Beechill rezonings. The Tribunal considered it significant that the payment made to Cllr Lydon was made by way of cheque payable to 'cash'.

6.33 The Tribunal was satisfied that the said payments totalling IR£9,000, particularly having regard to the manner in which they were paid, did not constitute bona fide political donations to Cllr Lydon whether or not those payments were made at or close to the time of an election. (In fact, only the second payment was made at the time of an election.)

6.34 Cllr Lydon was an elected public representative who actively engaged in the review of the Dublin County Development Plan, together with other elected councillors. Part of that review included motions to rezone lands in Ballycullen and Beechill in which Mr Jones had an interest, which interest was well known to Cllr Lydon. As such, the Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Lydon abused his position as a councillor, in that he presented himself to Mr Jones as an individual who was prepared to provide crucial support for Mr Jones' rezoning ambitions, while at the same time both seeking, and displaying, a willingness to accept substantial payments of money.

6.35 Notwithstanding Mr Jones' assertions to the Tribunal that Cllr Lydon never made support for the rezonings conditional on receipt of financial support, the Tribunal was satisfied that in the course of discussions between Mr Jones and Cllr Lydon, Cllr Lydon discussed his own financial pressures or difficulties, whether real or contrived, in the hope or expectation that Mr Jones would pay him money, which indeed he did.

6.36 The Tribunal was also satisfied that Cllr Lydon expressly or by implication sought the payment of money from Mr Jones in circumstances in which Mr Jones was led to believe that Cllr Lydon's support for the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands was dependent upon his receipt of substantial sums of money.

6.37 The Tribunal was satisfied that the payments made to Cllr Lydon by Mr Jones amounting to IR£9,000 over a 20-month period in 1992/3 were inextricably linked to Cllr Lydon's support for, in particular, the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands. The Tribunal was satisfied that all these payments were, in reality, solicited by Cllr Lydon, at a time when Mr Jones was engaged in a process which required, or had recently required, councillors to exercise their vote in relation to specific motions relating to lands in which Mr Jones had an interest. The Tribunal was satisfied that the three payments totalling IR£9,000 were solicited and paid in connection with the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands and were intended to influence by inducement the disinterested performance by Cllr Lydon of his public duties as an elected councillor. The said payments were corrupt.

6.38 The Tribunal rejected any likely connection between any portion of the IR£9,000 paid to Cllr Lydon and professional services provided by him to a third party known to Mr Jones.

6.39 According to Cllr Lydon, the IR£500 he received in 1999 was given as a result of what was effectively a 'round robin' letter he had sent seeking financial support in the context of the 1999 Local Elections. The Tribunal noted that at the time of this payment Cllr Lydon's electoral ward was within Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown County Council but that the Ballycullen lands, following the break-up of Dublin County Council in January 1994, were within the remit of South Dublin County Council. The Tribunal noted therefore that at the time of this payment Cllr Lydon was not a councillor within the Council area in which the lands were situated, a factor which, together with the fact that Mr Jones' zoning ambitions for the lands had been achieved by this time, probably accounted for Mr Jones being less generous to Cllr Lydon at this time than previously.

THE SEQUENCE AND MANNER OF DISCLOSURE BY MR JONES OF THE PAYMENTS MADE TO CLLR LYDON

6.40 On 10 November 2003 the Tribunal received a statement from Mr Jones attached to which was a schedule in which Cllr Lydon was listed as having received IR£7,000 of political donations as of 31 December 1992. Discovery of documentation made by Mr Jones subsequently included, inter alia, a copy of the November 1992 IR£5,000 cheque which comprised part of that IR£7,000.

6.41 On 8 March 2006, on the eve of his sworn testimony to the Tribunal, Mr Jones' solicitors furnished to the Tribunal a large number of copies of cheques which included the April 1992 'cash' cheque which had been lodged to the account of Cllr Lydon and his wife. Also included in the batch of copy cheques was the cheque for IR£2,000 dated 9 December 1993 made payable to cash, which bore on its reverse side the Bank of Ireland account number 89256888. This was an account of Cllr Lydon. In the course of his testimony to the Tribunal Mr Jones accepted that he had made this payment in December 1993, in addition to the payments previously acknowledged as payments to Cllr Lydon.

THE SEQUENCE AND MANNER OF THE DISCLOSURE BY CLLR LYDON OF PAYMENTS HE RECEIVED FROM MR JONES

6.42 On 26 January 2006 Cllr Lydon, through his solicitors, provided a statement to the Tribunal which, inter alia, stated the following:

Our client recalls that he was a candidate for election to the Seanad following upon the General Election of November 1992. The Seanad campaign would have commenced at the time of the General Election with the Seanad election concluding in the early part of 1993. During the course of the Seanad campaign, Mr Chris Jones gave our client by way of a donation the sum of IR£5,000. Our client believes to the best of his recollection that the overall contribution made by Chris Jones amounted to about IR£7,000. Evidence in regard thereto was given by our client to the Tribunal at a previous hearing.

6.43 Prior to furnishing this statement and prior to his sworn evidence in this module, Cllr Lydon had, in a letter to the Tribunal dated 5 June 2002, identified the April 1992 IR£2,000 cheque payable to cash as having been received from Mr Jones and having been duly lodged as part of a composite lodgement of IR£2,505.68 to his and his wife's joint bank account. Cllr Lydon had previously informed the Tribunal (in the course of the Carrickmines Module) that he had received two cheques for IR£5,000 during the 1992 election campaign, one of which he had identified as being from Mr Jones.

6.44 On 29 November 2004, in response to queries raised by the Tribunal in relation to a series of lodgements to his wife's Bank of Ireland current account, including a lodgement of IR£10,000 on 11 December 1992, Cllr Lydon's solicitors identified Mr Jones as the donor of the IR£5,000 (being half of the said lodgement) and gave as the reason for its receipt professional counselling services provided by Cllr Lydon to relatives of Mr Jones in his capacity as a clinical psychologist.

6.45 On Day 613, during the course of his sworn evidence, Cllr Lydon conceded that the information provided on his behalf by his solicitors was incorrect in that he no longer contended that the reason for the payment of IR£5,000 was remuneration for professional services. However, he continued to give the work he had done in a professional counselling capacity as a reason for the amount received by way of (as claimed by him) political donation from Mr Jones.

6.46 While Cllr Lydon, in the course of his evidence on Day 613, outlined his recollection as to how he came to receive the IR£2,000 in April 1992, and the IR£5,000 in November 1992, he did not allude to the fact that in December 1993 he had been in receipt of a further IR£2,000 ‘cash’ cheque from Mr Jones. On Day 719, following his recall as a witness by the Tribunal to explain this payment, Cllr Lydon acknowledged that he had received this cheque in December 1993. Cllr Lydon attributed his failure to that point to disclose the payment to the fact that, although he had received copy bank statements for the relevant period, the bank statements for December 1993 had been omitted by his bank. He conceded on Day 719 that merely looking at the lodgements recorded in such bank statements would not of itself have informed him of the source of such lodgements. Cllr Lydon’s evidence was that he had no recollection of the receipt of this cheque, though when the copy cheque was produced by the Tribunal he accepted that he had received it.

6.47 On his first day giving sworn evidence in this module, Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that, following his receipt of the IR£5,000 cheque from Mr Jones in November 1992, he received no further money from that source, and that he had no recollection of meeting Mr Jones after the meeting in November 1992 other than going to ‘see him one day just to say hello’ despite being shown an entry in Mr Jones’ diary for 5 October 1993 which noted ‘Don Lydon 6 o’clock, Goat’. Cllr Lydon accepted, however, that such a meeting may have taken place.

6.48 While Cllr Lydon acknowledged in sworn evidence on Day 613 that, following the vote of 28 October 1993, he had in all probability written to Mr Jones (as reflected in Mr Jones’ letter to him of 3 November 1993) and while he acknowledged that Mr Jones had obviously written to him on 3 November 1993 suggesting meeting for a chat, Cllr Lydon did not believe that such a further meeting had taken place. The Tribunal did not accept that Cllr Lydon on Day 613 was unable to recollect his 5 October 1993 meeting with Mr Jones. Moreover, it appeared inconceivable to the Tribunal that when providing information to it prior to Day 613, and when giving evidence on that day, Cllr Lydon failed to recollect the payment made by Mr Jones in December 1993. Cllr Lydon’s evidence in this respect was rejected by the Tribunal.

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR LYDON BY MR DUNLOP

6.49 Mr Dunlop alleged that Cllr Lydon received IR£2,000 from him in return for signing and supporting the motions seeking the rezoning of the Beechill and Ballycullen lands which came before the County Council on 16 October and 29 October 1992 respectively. Mr Dunlop also alleged that he paid IR£2,000 to Cllr Lydon's co-signatory on these motions, Cllr Hand.

6.50 On Day 146 Mr Dunlop identified Cllr Lydon on his confidential list headed 'Preliminary List' as one of 16 councillors who had requested monies from him as bona fide political donations. At this time in his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Dunlop was maintaining that he had not made any improper or corrupt payments to councillors and that any payments he had made were legitimate political donations, a stance he subsequently altered significantly.

6.51 However, Cllr Lydon was not identified on any of the following three confidential lists that Mr Dunlop later provided to the Tribunal:

- The list headed '1991 local election contributions' provided on Day 147. This listed councillors numbered 1 to 16 to whom Mr Dunlop said he had made payments totalling IR£112,000²⁹ in cash, out of withdrawals from his 042 Rathfarnham account, in the course of the 1991 Local Election (none of which payments related to Ballycullen because the Ballycullen motion was not lodged until 28 September 1992 with the related vote in October 1992).
- The list headed '1992 list' provided on Day 148 listing councillors numbered 17 to 30 to whom Mr Dunlop said he had made payments in 1992 out of a withdrawal of IR£55,000 from the Rathfarnham account. Mr Dunlop had by then conceded that he had made certain improper or corrupt payments.
- The list without a heading (which for convenience the Tribunal shall refer to in this report as 'the continuation list') that was also provided on Day 148 as a continuation of the 1991 Local Election list and the 1992 list, containing a list of councillors numbered 31 to 38. These names, which had already appeared on the 1991 Local Election list and the 1992 list, were of councillors to whom Mr Dunlop said he made other payments at other times.

²⁹On Day 606 (8 February 2006) he accepted that he was there identifying 'improper' payments.

6.52 Since Cllr Lydon was absent from all three lists, he was not cross-referenced as a recipient of monies in relation to the Ballycullen lands in the course of a specific cross-referencing exercise conducted by Mr Dunlop on Day 148. In this exercise, the names of the councillors he had cited on the three lists were each cross-referenced against the names cited on a further confidential list headed '1991-1993 (inclusive)', brought pre-prepared to the witness box and provided by Mr Dunlop to the Tribunal also on Day 148. On this list, 'the composite list of persons from whom [he] received various sums of money', Mr Dunlop identified the developers who had provided him with money in connection with the review of the Development Plan.

6.53 Ballycullen Farms Ltd was identified at item number 2 on the 1991-1993 list.

6.54 However, on 11 May 2000, some two days after he provided three lists ('the 1992 list', 'the continuation list' and the '1991-1993 list'), in the course of a private interview with the Tribunal's legal team, Mr Dunlop named Cllr Lydon and Cllr Hand as recipients of money in relation to the Ballycullen lands.

6.55 In his private interview, Mr Dunlop advised the Tribunal that on a number of occasions he visited Cllr Lydon at his place of work at St John of God, Stillorgan, Co. Dublin, and that on a number of occasions he gave him money in amount of 'two, two and a half grand'. Mr Dunlop also stated that Cllr Lydon certainly would have received money in relation to Ballycullen.

6.56 Mr Dunlop repeated this assertion in a number of subsequent statements, albeit with some slight variation, prior to giving his sworn evidence to the Tribunal. For example, on 18 May 2000, Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal at private interview that Cllr Lydon received a payment of 'something of the order of two, two and a half grand' and referred to this level of payment as the 'going rate' for payments to councillors.

6.57 Cllr Lydon informed the Fianna Fáil inquiry in May 2000 that he had received a cheque for IR£1,000 from Mr Dunlop as a payment for election purposes in the period 1991-2. In a statement to the Tribunal on 13 December 2000, Cllr Lydon stated that he had received a payment of IR£1,000 from Mr Dunlop 'back in the early nineties' which he believed was for the 1993 Seanad election, being one of only two political donations received by him from Mr Dunlop, the other being at the time of the Local Elections in 1999.

6.58 Mr Dunlop maintained in his statement made to the Tribunal on 11 February 2003, that prior to his appearance at the Tribunal in April 2000, he was contacted by Cllr Lydon for the purposes of ascertaining what could be said (to the Tribunal) by way of explanation as to the reason for the IR£1,000 cheque payment. Mr Dunlop stated that at the time Cllr Lydon said he wanted to categorise the payment as a legitimate donation relating to the 1993 Seanad Election, unconnected to any Dublin County Council vote. Mr Dunlop maintained that he had concurred with this suggestion and it was mutually agreed that no reference would be made to any other payments.

6.59 Mr Dunlop alleged that he and Cllr Lydon reached an agreement for a payment of IR£2,000 when Mr Dunlop had made an approach to Cllr Lydon for his signature to the motions for the rezoning of the Ballycullen and Beechill lands. Mr Dunlop alleged that Cllr Lydon's request was couched in terms of what he, Mr Dunlop, was going to do for Cllr Lydon, and that on that basis IR£2,000 had been agreed. Mr Dunlop maintained that his arrangement with Cllr Lydon was most probably concluded in September 1992, prior to the submission of two motions to the Council.

6.60 During the period of the Development Plan review, Mr Dunlop met with Cllr Lydon at his place of work in Stillorgan, save on one or two occasions when they met in the environs of the County Council offices. Mr Dunlop believed that his arrangement with Cllr Lydon regarding the Ballycullen/Beechill lands was concluded at Cllr Lydon's place of work, as it was normally at that location that he met Cllr Lydon. Mr Dunlop maintained that he would have paid Cllr Lydon at his place of work. Mr Dunlop claimed to have paid Cllr Lydon on the morning of 2 October 1992. He said he may have called to see Cllr Lydon by prior arrangement and there paid Cllr Lydon IR£2,000 cash in an envelope. This money was sourced from the confluence of funds which he had available to him at the time, including at least IR£12,500 received by Mr Dunlop from Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms Ltd/Beechill Properties Ltd.

6.61 Mr Dunlop's diary for 10 September 1992³³ recorded a meeting with Cllr Lydon. On 11 September Mr Dunlop had a meeting with Mr Jones. As a matter of probability, the proposed Ballycullen/Beechill rezoning motions were discussed with Cllr Lydon on 10 September 1992. The Tribunal was satisfied that at some point between 10 and 28 September 1992 (most likely between 17 and 28 September, given the contents of Mr Lawlor's fax to Mr Jones of 17 September), Cllr Lydon, in the presence of Mr Dunlop, appended his signature to three motions relating to the Ballycullen lands, one of which, dated 28 September 1992, was ultimately submitted to the County Council. Likewise, within the same timeframe, Cllr Lydon signed a motion relating to the Beechill lands dated 28 September 1992, which was ultimately lodged with the County Council. Although, unusually, neither motion bore the date-received stamp of the County Council, the Tribunal was satisfied that the motions were received by the County Council in advance of the special meetings dealing respectively with the Beechill and Ballycullen lands.

6.62 Mr Dunlop's diary recorded a scheduled meeting for 2 October 1992 between himself and Cllr Lydon. Cllr Lydon claimed to have no recollection of a meeting with Mr Dunlop on 2 October, 1992 but did not dispute its having taken place. It was likely, according to Mr Dunlop, that it was at this meeting that he handed over the IR£2,000 cash in an envelope to Cllr Lydon but Cllr Lydon denied that he had received any such payment.

6.63 On 30 September 1992 (two days previously), Mr Dunlop's record of telephone messages received by his office recorded a call from Cllr Lydon. The Tribunal was satisfied that at some point between 30 September and the morning of 2 October 1992, an arrangement was made for Mr Dunlop to call to Cllr Lydon's workplace. Cllr Lydon stated that in all his time as a councillor, he never voted for, or voted against, or abstained on a motion in response to a receipt of money from Mr Dunlop. He claimed that the only monies he had received from Mr Dunlop were two political donations, one was an unsolicited donation of IR£1,000 by way of cheque from Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd received during his 1993 Seanad campaign, and the other was a donation for approximately IR£200 by cheque from Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd in 1999 for the Local Election campaign in response to a request to him and to others for support.

6.64 Cllr Lydon was asked in the course of his evidence why Mr Dunlop would visit him in his office in Stillorgan to ascertain if he would support a proposal being promoted by him when the opportunity for such brief discussion arose easily when they regularly met in the environs of the County Council at the time of meetings. Cllr Lydon suggested that Mr Dunlop 'used to go around visiting people all over the place.'

6.65 Indicative of the close relationship between Mr Dunlop and Cllr Lydon was the following response given by Cllr Lydon on Day 613, relating to one or more meetings between the two men in early October 1992: 'he [Mr Dunlop] would come into my office and he always went through the same thing. He came into my office and sometimes he would be rushing and most of the time, he would rare [sic] sit down, he would say I'm proposing something, will you support it and I would say yes and then he would go on and talk about himself.'

6.66 In a letter from Cllr Lydon's solicitors in January 2006, it was stated on his behalf that to the best of his recollection he had had no contact with Mr Dunlop in relation to the Beechill/Ballycullen lands. In that written statement, Cllr Lydon advised the Tribunal of his acquaintance with Messrs Oliver and Frank Brooks, employees of Mr Jones over a period of 15–20 years. This acquaintance had come about through their and Cllr Lydon's shared connections through Fianna Fáil. He had made the acquaintance of Mr Jones at about the time when the question of the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands was being mooted.

6.67 While Cllr Lydon conceded in the course of his evidence that the documentation which had been circulated to him by the Tribunal prior to the public hearings in this module suggested that he must have had contact with Mr Dunlop in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands, and that such contact dated back to a time shortly prior to the relevant motions being lodged with the County Council, it was his recollection that at this time there was telephone contact, but no face-to-face contact between himself and Mr Dunlop. Cllr Lydon said that initially he did not know that Mr Dunlop was involved with the Ballycullen lands and that his contact was then with Mr Oliver Brooks of Ballycullen Farms.

6.68 In evidence Cllr Lydon claimed not to have been aware that Mr Dunlop had been retained by Mr Jones from February 1991 onwards and further claimed not to have known of Mr Dunlop's involvement in relation to the rezoning of the lands. Cllr Lydon also denied that he was aware that, subsequent to February 1991, Mr Dunlop had also been retained on behalf of the Beechill lands

6.69 Cllr Lydon stated that, if the issue of the Ballycullen rezoning was mentioned between himself and Mr Dunlop in the period post April 1992, it would have been only in passing by the latter, among a myriad of other rezoning issues Mr Dunlop had spoken to him about. Cllr Lydon's evidence was that while he could not be sure, his belief was that Mr Dunlop may well have assumed that he, Cllr Lydon, was supportive and 'on board', in relation to Ballycullen.

6.70 Cllr Lydon's evidence in this regard was rejected by the Tribunal. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Lydon did know of Mr Dunlop's involvement with the lands from at least April 1992, if not from 1991. The Tribunal was satisfied that both in his written communications with the Tribunal in January 2006 and in the course of his testimony, Cllr Lydon endeavoured to play down the level of his contacts and meetings with Mr Dunlop in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands.

6.71 On 14 April 1992 Mr Jones faxed Mr Dunlop requesting that he be provided with a text of a 'submission' that Cllr Lydon was to make to a meeting of the Council. Mr Dunlop's office telephone records of 22 April 1992 indicated an attempt by Cllr Lydon to speak by telephone to Mr Dunlop. These records also revealed contact by Cllr Lydon at times when the issue of the Beechill and Ballycullen rezoning were before the Council, and when it was expected that the Ballycullen/Beechill lands issue would ultimately come before the councillors.

6.72 Cllr Lydon told the Tribunal that while he could not recall, and did not therefore deny, a meeting of 2 October 1992 with Mr Dunlop, he denied receiving IR£2,000 from Mr Dunlop at any such meeting, as alleged by Mr Dunlop.

6.73 In the course of an examination of the accounts of Cllr Lydon and his wife, it was noted that there was a lodgement of IR£1,900 in cash to a joint account held by himself and his wife on 8 October 1992, six days after the meeting between him and Mr Dunlop, which was also the occasion when Mr Dunlop claimed he paid Cllr Lydon the sum of IR£2,000. Cllr Lydon explained this lodgement as 'cash in hand' and he explained that he normally kept in excess of IR£10,000 in cash to enable himself and his wife to buy and sell antiques, and that such sums would have been withdrawn from his and his wife's bank accounts. Cllr Lydon said he and his wife often withdrew and re-lodged money and moved money between accounts in order to keep the accounts 'alive'.

6.74 The rezoning of the Ballycullen and Beechill lands was at all times supported by Cllr Lydon as it made its way through the Council, and particularly in the crucial rezoning motions which were held on 29 October 1992 and 28 October 1993.

6.75 The Tribunal was satisfied that, as a matter of probability, Mr Dunlop did indeed pay Cllr Lydon IR£2,000, and that it was paid in return for Cllr Lydon's support for the rezoning of the Ballycullen/Beechill lands. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop had a clear recollection of the payment and the circumstances in which it was paid and the reasons for its payment. The propensity displayed by Cllr Lydon in subtly requesting and accepting substantial sums of money from Mr Jones, inter alia, assisted the Tribunal in rejecting Cllr Lydon's denial that he sought or received money from Mr Dunlop. The said payment constituted an inducement intended to compromise the disinterested performance of public duties on Cllr Lydon's part, and was corrupt.

6.76 It was therefore the case that Cllr Lydon received a total of IR£11,000 in connection with his support for the rezoning of the Ballycullen/Beechill lands in the period 1992/1993. The payments in question were corrupt payments.

PAYMENTS MADE TO CLLR LYDON IN RELATION TO THE BALLYCULLEN/BEECHILL LANDS: A SUMMARY

6.77 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Lydon was corruptly paid and corruptly received a total of IR£11,000 in connection with the Ballycullen/Beechill lands, summarised as follows

- IR£2,000 on 27/28 April 1992, paid by Mr Jones, from his personal funds.
- IR£5,000 on 12 November 1992, paid by Mr Jones, from his personal funds.
- IR£2,000 on 9 December 1993, paid by Mr Jones, from his personal funds.
- IR£2,000 on or about 2 October 1992, paid in cash by Mr Dunlop.

CLLR G. V. WRIGHT (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENTS TO CLLR WRIGHT BY MR JONES

7.01 In his written statement to the Tribunal dated 7 November 2003, Mr Jones identified two political donations which he said he made to Cllr Wright. The first of these was in the sum of IR£500 made on 31 December 1992. Mr Jones described this donation as 'local elections Donation'. The second payment to Cllr Wright was of IR£500 made on 27 May 1997, and described by him as 'Political Donations.'

7.02 In a second statement from Mr Jones dated 23 February 2006, Mr Jones disclosed that the information provided by him to the Tribunal on 7 November 2003 in relation to the first payment to Cllr Wright was erroneous, and that the payment was in fact a sum of IR£5,000. By way of explanation for his initial error, Mr Jones stated that his bank had in the interim found a cheque³⁴ made payable to Cllr Wright in the sum of IR£5,000 dated 12 November 1992. In his 2006 statement, Mr Jones confirmed the second payment of IR£500 to Cllr Wright on 27 May 1997.

7.03 The payment of IR£5,000 in November 1992 was made from Mr Jones' personal funds, some days following the announcement of a general election. When asked in the course of his evidence why he had made the payment, Mr Jones replied: 'Well I considered Mr Wright to be very important deputy insofar as he was a very senior deputy in the north county area. So I felt that he would influence his colleagues in support of my motion. So for that reason I thought I'd treat him generously.'

7.04 Mr Jones agreed with a suggestion put to him by his own Counsel that while he had hoped that Cllr Wright would influence fellow councillors to support the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands, he did not intend 'any form of impropriety or wrongdoing or wrongful influence' in relation to Cllr Wright.

7.05 Mr Jones was asked the following question: 'When you were making this donation to Mr Wright, would you have been keeping in mind Mr Wright's support in October '92 for the supporting of the Ballycullen lands'. Mr Jones responded: 'Oh, I would of course, yes.'

7.06 At the time of the IR£5,000 payment, Cllr Wright was the Fianna Fáil whip in the County Council.

7.07 The successful Ballycullen lands rezoning motion was dealt with by the County Council on 29 October 1992, approximately two weeks prior to the payment of IR£5,000 to Cllr Wright. In explaining to the Tribunal why Mr Wright received IR£5,000 for the 1992 general election campaign, and only IR£500 for the 1997 election campaign, Mr Jones stated as follows: 'Well, I felt that in the IR£5,000 payment that he would influence the councillors on my behalf. And I thought that it was sort of a genuine gesture to him as a donation for all of the years that we knew him and so on. I don't think he was in any danger when I gave him the 500.'

7.08 Cllr Wright acknowledged receipt of the 1992 and 1997 payments. However, he confessed to having no recollection of how the IR£5,000 cheque arrived to him or how or where he had negotiated this cheque. Cllr Wright described himself as a pro-development councillor (and was well known to be so), and supported the Ballycullen rezoning on its merits. He and Mr Jones had known each other for twenty or thirty years, although, despite his having been in politics at the time for eleven years, the IR£5,000 payment (which Cllr Wright described as a political contribution) was the first such payment to him by Mr Jones. Cllr Wright did not recollect why Mr Jones had paid him the IR£5,000, but it was his belief that Mr Jones may have thought that there was a possibility that he, Cllr Wright, would be elected to the Dáil in 1992. Cllr Wright intimated that this payment was unrelated to his voting support for the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands approximately two weeks previously.

7.09 Cllr Wright acknowledged that Mr Jones lobbied him in relation to the rezoning of the Ballycullen and Beechill lands.

7.10 Mr Jones' diary recorded a scheduled meeting between himself and Cllr Wright at Buswells Hotel at 12 pm on 5 October 1993, shortly prior to the Ballycullen confirmation motion on 28 October 1993. Mr Jones acknowledged that the issue of common interest to both himself and Cllr Wright at that meeting was the confirmation vote later that month.

7.11 In 2000, Cllr Wright told the Fianna Fáil inquiry that he received a payment of IR£500 from Ballycullen Farms. Cllr Wright said that he recalled receiving IR£500 from Mr Jones and receiving a donation from Mr Jones in 1992, hence his belief that the donation made in that year and the donation made in that amount were one and the same. When asked why he had failed to inform the Fianna Fáil inquiry of the IR£5,000 payment from Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms in 2000, Cllr Wright said that he did not recollect receiving such a payment. Cllr Wright suggested that at the time he provided information to the Fianna Fáil inquiry, knowing that he had received a payment from Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms in 1992, he incorrectly stated it to have been IR£500 (rather than IR£5,000) because he said that he confused the payment with a payment of IR£500 which he received from Mr Jones in 1997. Cllr Wright maintained that this confusion on his part continued until he received documentation from the Tribunal in advance of his sworn evidence to the Tribunal. Cllr Wright agreed that it was only when informed by the Tribunal that it had in its possession a copy of Mr Jones' cheque for IR£5,000, that he acknowledged receipt of this payment in 1992.

7.12 The Tribunal noted that, in response to queries about a lodgement of IR£20,550 to his ICS Building Society account, Mr Wright advised the Tribunal in a statement dated 31 May 2000 that part of this lodgement included a IR£500 political donation from Ballycullen Farms.

7.13 Cllr Wright had two meetings with the Fianna Fáil inquiry. In its report he was recorded as having claimed that he received IR£500 from Ballycullen Farms for the 1992 General Election campaign. He was further recorded as having mentioned that he might have received a donation from Mr Jones and as stating that he was still seeking confirmation of it.

7.14 Subsequent to the meetings, Cllr Wright communicated with the Fianna Fáil inquiry by letter dated 18 May 2000, with five appendices attached.

The letter was included as an Appendix to the inquiry report. In paragraph 3 of that letter Cllr Wright stated:

In relation to Appendix 5³⁵ and again arising from (1)³⁶ it has not been possible to access the appropriate documentation so as to respond comprehensively to your specific enquiry. However, wishing to co-operate to the best of my ability I have over the past week made contact, based on my best recollection, with contributors. I am now in a position to advise the details set out in Appendix 5 arising from the responses of these contacts.

7.15 In Appendix 5, under a heading ‘Political Donations’, Cllr Wright continued as follows:

As stated in my covering letter, following telephone contact, the following donations have been confirmed for the 1992 election:

- 1. Malahide Marina Ltd – IR£2,500,*
- 2. Andeliu Ltd – IR£1,000,*
- 3. Monarch Properties – IR£1,000,*
- 4. Ballycullen Farms – IR£500.*

7.16 In his evidence to the Tribunal on Day 613, Cllr Wright conceded that notwithstanding what was contained in the letter of 18 May 2000 and Appendix 5, he had not made any approach to Mr Jones or Ballycullen Farms. Nor had he sought such confirmation from Mr Jones prior to responding to queries posed by the Tribunal in the year 2000. Cllr Wright acknowledged that his written communications to the Tribunal, and indeed to the Fianna Fáil inquiry, were incorrect insofar as they each suggested that he had made contact with Mr Jones in order to ascertain any political contributions received in 1992.

7.17 In the course of his evidence, Cllr Wright agreed that his recollection of having been in receipt of a cheque for IR£5,000 from Mr Jones in November 1992 was prompted by the Tribunal’s advice to him that it had received a copy of the relevant cheque.

7.18 A question arose as to why, when Cllr Wright was himself under inquiry by Fianna Fáil in 2000, he did not seek to make contact with Ballycullen Farms or with Mr Jones. The Tribunal concluded that Cllr Wright’s lack of action in 2000, or indeed subsequently, in relation to ascertaining what payments he had received from Mr Jones, was itself suggestive of a desire on his part to leave the issue of the IR£5,000 cheque received by him in November 1992 in abeyance, in the hope or expectation that the cheque might never be identified.

7.19 The Tribunal believed it extremely unlikely that Cllr Wright had forgotten about a cheque for IR£5,000 received by him in November 1992. This cheque was one of three IR£5,000³⁷ sums he received for the November 1992 general election campaign. Equally, the Tribunal found it extremely unlikely that Mr Jones had also forgotten about making the IR£5,000 payment to Cllr Wright, or confused the payment with one of IR£500. Mr Jones could not offer any explanation for this mistaken recollection. The question arose as why neither Cllr Wright nor Mr Jones recalled the IR£5,000 cheque from Mr Jones. The Tribunal did not believe it credible on the part of Cllr Wright or Mr Jones that, while they could apparently recall a payment of IR£500 from Mr Jones, they apparently could not recall a payment ten times its size.

7.20 The Tribunal was satisfied the the primary motivation in Mr Jones' IR£5,000 payment to Cllr Wright in November 1992 was not a desire to assist him in relation to his political expenses associated with the General Election at that time. In its view, that sum was in fact paid in recognition of the support previously given by Cllr Wright to Mr Jones in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands rezoning projects and for the purposes of ensuring Cllr Wright's support in the confirmation vote in the following year in relation to the Ballycullen lands and also to ensure that Cllr Wright would exert influence on his Fianna Fáil councillor colleagues to support the Ballycullen rezoning project. The Tribunal was satisfied that the payment was an attempt to influence by inducement Cllr Wright's disinterested performance of his public duties. The said payment was corrupt.

7.21 The acceptance by Cllr Wright of IR£5,000 from Mr Jones in November 1992, in the wake of his vote in support of the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands some two weeks previously, and in the knowledge that the rezoning issue would again come before the Council prior to the completion of the Development Plan, deprived Cllr Wright of any entitlement to categorise the payment as a political contribution unconnected to his support for the rezoning of the lands. The payment to Cllr Wright and his acceptance thereof blatantly compromised the required disinterested performance of his public duty as a councillor. Having accepted the substantial sum of money from Mr Jones, Cllr Wright continued to exercise his vote in October 1993, effectively supporting Mr Jones' project, and he did so without disclosing the receipt of that payment to the Council or to his fellow councillors. This payment was corrupt.

³⁷ In November 1992 Cllr Wright received a cheque payment of IR£5,000 from Mr Owen O'Callaghan and a cash payment of IR£5,000 from Mr Dunlop.

7.22 Cllr Wright was unable to assist the Tribunal as to what he did with this IR£5,000. A perusal of his bank records did not assist him as to what might have become of the cheque. He agreed with Tribunal Counsel that he may well have cashed the cheque. On 18 November 1992 Mr Wright made a lodgement of IR£20,550 to his ICS Building Society account. In a statement to the Tribunal, Cllr Wright stated that he believed that that lodgement probably comprised the following: the IR£5,000 received from Mr O’Callaghan in November 1992; a Malahide Marina Ltd donation of IR£2,500; an Andelu Ltd donation of IR£1,000; a Monarch Properties donation of IR£1,000 and IR£500 attributed by him as a Ballycullen Farms donation (now proved not to be the case). While Cllr Wright had also sought to include in this lodgement a cash donation of IR£5,000 he had received from Mr Dunlop in November 1992 as part of the aforementioned lodgement, he ultimately accepted that the IR£5,000 cash received from Mr Dunlop could not have formed part of the lodgement of IR£20,550, as bank documentation showed that that lodgement was comprised of cheques only.

7.23 In all these circumstances, the Tribunal believed that Mr Jones’ IR£5,000 cheque may have been part of this IR£20,550 lodgement.

7.24 Mr Jones and Cllr Wright met on 5 October 1993, according to an entry in Mr Jones’ diary³⁸ for that date. The entry stated: ‘GV. Buswells 12 oc’.

7.25 This meeting took place approximately three weeks prior to the confirmation vote relating to the Ballycullen lands on 28 October 1993. Mr Jones probably met Cllr Lydon later on 5 October 1993. The Tribunal was satisfied that both meetings probably included a discussion relating to the then forthcoming confirmation meeting at Dublin County Council relating to the Ballycullen lands. Mr Jones stated that one of the reasons for his meeting with Cllr Wright in October 1993 was the expectation that Cllr Wright would use his influence as the Fianna Fáil whip in the Council to ensure that the Ballycullen rezoning would be confirmed.

7.26 By the time Cllr Wright and Mr Jones met on 5 October 1993, Cllr Muldoon and others had submitted motions seeking to have the residential and amenity zoning achieved for the Ballycullen lands in October 1992 removed so that the lands would revert to B zoning. The Tribunal was satisfied that the meeting Mr Jones had with Cllr Wright was to ensure that the latter would exert influence on his Fianna Fáil colleagues to support the Ballycullen rezoning proposal.

³⁸See Exhibit 7.

CLLR TOM HAND (FG)ALLEGED PAYMENTS TO CLLR HAND BY BEECHILL PROPERTIES AND MR JONES

8.01 During the course of the rezoning of the Ballycullen and Beechill lands, Cllr Hand was the recipient of two payments of IR£1,000 from Mr Hussey (Beechill Properties Ltd) and Mr Jones respectively.

8.02 According to Mr Hussey, the first payment to Cllr Hand was made following a request for payment conveyed to him through Mr Dunlop. Mr Dunlop denied any knowledge or involvement on his part in relation to this payment. The payment was made by Beechill Properties Ltd on the instructions of Mr Hussey. The payment was made at some point following the successful rezoning of the Beechill lands in October 1992.³⁹

8.03 In his evidence, Mr Hussey recalled the request for payment made to him in the following terms:

‘My recollection is that Dunlop contacted me and said that Hand wanted his political subscription. And I said, I think I said is that so. And I was surprised. I don’t suppose I was amazed but I was surprised. So I said to him well [what] sort of subscription is he talking about. And I think he said 1000 pounds. So I said I’ll think about that. And I am sure I discussed it with Denis McGee and Chris. And I was tempted to say that you can have no subscription. That seemed a little churlish. Another option was to give him less than he was looking for. I think collectively we decided for what you’d say that it wasn’t worth it and get rid of it and pay him.’

8.04 Mr Hussey’s recollection was that this political subscription was paid after October 1992 by a Beechill Properties Ltd cheque payable to Cllr Hand. The actual date could not be confirmed, as the Beechill accounts were no longer available. Mr Hussey could not recollect whether the cheque had been given directly to Cllr Hand or given to Mr Dunlop for transmission on to him.

8.05 Beechill Properties Ltd proceeded to pay the IR£1,000. Previous political donations to Cllr Hand had been in the region of IR£200–IR£300.

8.06 Mr Hussey strongly rejected any suggestion that the payment of IR£1,000 was improper or corrupt, or that he was paying Cllr Hand for assisting, or supporting, the motion to rezone the Beechill lands. Mr Hussey categorised the payment of IR£1,000 as a political donation.

³⁹ In his written statement to the Tribunal dated 25 November 2003 Mr Hussey suggested that the payment to Cllr Hand was made in 1993. However, later, in his sworn evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Hussey suggested that the payment was probably made after October 1992.

8.07 Mr Hussey told the Tribunal that he had earlier (in 1991 or 1992) met Cllr Hand on the advice of Mr Dunlop. Beechill Properties Ltd was anxious to regularise a planning deficiency on its property as a result of the Jones Group offices being built on the lands of Beechill Properties Ltd, which did not have the correct zoning for such development. Cllr Hand was the local councillor in Clonskeagh where the Beechill lands were situated. In the course of the meeting between Mr Hussey and Cllr Hand, Cllr Hand had indicated to Mr Hussey that he did not foresee any difficulty in having the situation regularised, and had undertaken to talk to planners in the Council in relation to the issue. Ultimately, the Beechill issue was resolved at a meeting of Dublin County Council on 16 October 1992, without a vote.

8.08 While Mr Dunlop accepted that Mr Jones and Mr Hussey met with Cllr Hand at his suggestion, he said that he had not recommended that a payment be made to Cllr Hand. Mr Dunlop denied acting as an intermediary in relation to any payment to Cllr Hand. Mr Dunlop said he was unaware that Mr Jones had himself previously subscribed to Cllr Hand.

8.09 Mr Hussey said that Cllr Hand did not request payment at the time they met in relation to the Beechill issue.

8.10 Mr Hussey's evidence to the Tribunal was that until he saw the Tribunal's circulated brief of documentation in 2006 he had been unaware that a motion signed by Cllr Hand and Cllr Lydon in relation to the Beechill site had been lodged with the County Council prior to the special meeting of 16 October 1992. He was uncertain as to when he became aware that by October 1992 a motion had been signed and tabled by the two councillors in relation to the Ballycullen lands. It was his belief, after having spoken to Mr Dunlop and Cllr Hand, that all that was necessary was to point out to the County Council planners that there was an anomaly in the zoning of Beechill that needed correction. As far as Mr Hussey was concerned, there was no question 'of a vote here or of a resolution.'

8.11 Mr Hussey said he received a second request for a second payment to Mr Hand, again through Mr Dunlop. Mr Hussey refused to make a second payment. However (according to Mr Jones) following an approach from Mr Dunlop to Mr Jones, that second payment, also IR£1,000, was made to Cllr Hand by Mr Jones from his own personal funds.

8.12 Mr Jones said that while he had not been privy to the first payment that was made to Cllr Hand by Mr Hussey on behalf of Beechill Properties Ltd, he accepted that the payment was in fact made.

8.13 Mr Jones recounted to the Tribunal how Mr Dunlop had come to him asking him to make a donation to Cllr Hand after Mr Hussey/Beechill Properties Ltd had refused Mr Dunlop's second request on his behalf. Mr Jones recalled that Mr Dunlop telephoned him and 'suggested that Tom Hand wasn't satisfied that he had [been] rewarded sufficiently for what he did.'

8.14 Mr Jones agreed to make the payment. While he believed that he had made such payment by way of personal cheque drawn on his own account, made payable to Mr Dunlop, he accepted that no cheque drawn on his account made payable either to Mr Dunlop or to Cllr Hand had been furnished to the Tribunal. Mr Jones accepted that it was possible that the cheque he had given Mr Dunlop for Cllr Hand may have been made out to cash. He had, on other occasions, written cheques for Mr Dunlop payable to cash and he had also done so with respect to Cllr Lydon.

8.15 Mr Jones' explanation to the Tribunal for making the payment to Cllr Hand, in the face of Mr Hussey's refusal to do so, was that he wished to defuse what he perceived as an unnecessary row developing between Mr Hussey, Mr Dunlop and Cllr Hand. Cllr Hand was, according to Mr Jones, a local councillor highly thought of and he, Mr Jones, did not wish to have any 'indifference' with him, so he paid the money.

8.16 While Mr Jones was adamant that he had paid Cllr Hand IR£1,000 he could not be sure as to when he had done so, but agreed with Tribunal Counsel that the payment could have been made as late as 1994. This possibility was suggested by two entries in his, Mr Jones' diary, one on 23 March 1994 with the reference to 'Tom Hand' and some other undecipherable word beside it, and one on 14 June 1994 which recorded 'Derry re Tom Hand'. Mr Jones conceded that this latter reference could well have been a reminder to him to talk to Mr Hussey about Cllr Hand, in the context of the IR£1,000 request from Mr Dunlop on behalf of Cllr Hand.

8.17 Cllr Hand had played a particularly supportive role in relation to the projects to rezone the Ballycullen and Beechill lands. With Cllr Lydon, he was a co-signatory of the successful motion to rezone the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992 and a signatory to the motion to regularise the Beechill lands. Cllr Hand also voted against the Muldoon/Shatter proposal.

8.18 Cllr Hand died in June 1996, and therefore did not give sworn evidence to the Tribunal.

8.19 The Tribunal was satisfied that a payment of IR£1,000 was made to Cllr Hand by Beechill Properties Ltd, probably in 1992 and it accepted Mr Hussey's evidence that Mr Dunlop was instrumental in making the request on behalf of Cllr Hand. The Tribunal also accepted Mr Hussey's evidence that subsequently Mr Dunlop came to him on a second occasion seeking a further IR£1,000 for Cllr Hand. The Tribunal further accepted Mr Jones' evidence that a cheque was given to Mr Dunlop in the context of a second request having been made of Mr Hussey and refused by him.

8.20 It was probable that the cheque Mr Dunlop received from Mr Jones for Cllr Hand was made payable to cash. The Tribunal heard evidence of instances where cheques drawn on Mr Jones' Rathgar branch AIB account payable to 'cash' had ended up in Mr Dunlop's hands. In particular, the Tribunal had copies of two such cheques, one dated 11 August 1992 and the other apparently dated 7 May 1992.

8.21 In those circumstances, the Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop received a cheque from Mr Jones for Cllr Hand sometime in either 1993 or (more probably) 1994. The Tribunal believed it likely that the cheque for IR£1,000 or its value was ultimately paid to Cllr Hand by Mr Dunlop.

8.22 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Hand sought a payment of money from Mr Hussey and/or from Mr Jones in the context of the assistance Cllr Hand was providing in relation to both the Beechill and Ballycullen lands.

8.23 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Hand solicited payments of IR£1,000 on two occasions and that both requests were made on his behalf by Mr Dunlop.

8.24 The Tribunal was satisfied that when Mr Hussey made the first payment of IR£1,000 to Cllr Hand, probably through Mr Dunlop, he did so reluctantly and in circumstances where he felt he had little choice but to pay. The Tribunal concluded that Mr Hussey's reluctance to make the payment to Cllr Hand stemmed from his probable belief that Cllr Hand was abusing his position as a councillor in making such a request to a party he knew to have an interest in land which was the subject of rezoning proposals which had come, or would come, before the Council.

8.25 On Day 620, when questioned as to when Mr Dunlop came to him looking for a political contribution for Mr Hand, Mr Hussey's response was as follows: 'I can't pretend to you that I could put a date exactly on that. I don't know. I suspect it was probably after October '92 but I wouldn't be at all sure.'

8.26 In relation to the first IR£1,000 payment to Cllr Hand from Mr Hussey, the Tribunal was satisfied that in all probability he received this payment by means of a Beechill Property Ltd cheque.

8.27 The evidence adduced by Mr Jones to the Tribunal was that in the years prior to 1992 Cllr Hand, as a local councillor, had received no more than IR£200–IR£300 by way of political contributions to his election campaigns. Mr Hussey's testimony to the Tribunal on Day 620 was that while he/Beechill Properties Ltd had made political contributions of IR£1,000 and perhaps more to 'individuals' on occasions, such sums had not been paid to councillors prior to the 1992 payment of IR£1,000 to Cllr Hand.

8.28 In response to further questioning, Mr Hussey agreed that he knew Mr Jones was paying subscriptions to politicians out of his own pocket, which subscriptions Mr Hussey regarded as expenses relating to the rezoning of Ballycullen.

8.29 The Tribunal was satisfied, therefore, that Mr Hussey could not have perceived the IR£1,000 Beechill Properties Ltd paid to Cllr Hand as anything other than an expense of Beechill Properties Ltd.

8.30 Irrespective of the manner in which the request for IR£1,000 for Cllr Hand was couched by Mr Dunlop in his discussion with Mr Hussey, the Tribunal believed that Mr Hussey was alert to the link between the request for the payment on behalf of Cllr Hand and Cllr Hand's endeavours in relation to the Beechill rezoning issue. Mr Dunlop's role was likely also to have alerted him to this link. Mr Hussey said he had contemplated giving Cllr Hand nothing. The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Hussey was uncomfortable with the idea that Cllr Hand was seeking money, and probably doubted that such a payment was a bona fide political donation, and instead considered it to be inappropriate and stemmed from an abuse by Cllr Hand of his role as an elected councillor.

8.31 The Tribunal believed that in all probability, the Beechill payment of IR£1,000 to Cllr Hand was regarded as a fait accompli by Mr Hussey, and the Tribunal concluded that while Mr Hussey may well have felt unease in 1992 at making the payment (which was apparent to the Tribunal in the manner in which Mr Hussey described his response to Mr Dunlop's initial request, and indeed from his refusal of the second request), it was nevertheless considered expedient by the company to make such a payment. In all those circumstances, the Tribunal considered the Beechill Properties Ltd payment to Cllr Hand was not a bona fide political donation. It was, in reality, a reward for providing support as a councillor in a rezoning matter.

8.32 Concerning the second payment of IR£1,000 requested by Mr Dunlop for Cllr Hand, the Tribunal was satisfied that in handing over a cheque to Mr Dunlop for Cllr Hand, Mr Jones had, in all probability, fewer reservations than Mr Hussey about making such a payment. The Tribunal was fortified in this conclusion by the matter-of-fact manner in which Mr Jones made 'political donations' at the time of the 1992 November General Election to councillors whom he did not know (although some of them may have been known to his employees, Messrs Frank and Oliver Brooks), and indeed in some instances to councillors who were not candidates in the General Election. Furthermore, the Tribunal was satisfied that after his encounter with Cllr Lydon in April 1992, Mr Jones was no stranger to the coincidence of a landowner approaching a councillor seeking support for a rezoning motion and a request (be it direct, indirect, or implied) for a 'political donation' from that councillor. The Tribunal therefore rejected Mr Jones' evidence that he gave a cheque to Mr Dunlop for Cllr Hand in order to defuse a row. Rather the Tribunal concluded that the rationale behind the giving of such a cheque was more likely a desire to ensure that Cllr Hand remained supportive of the Ballycullen rezoning/residential development endeavours, and gratitude for his previous support.

8.33 The Tribunal, in arriving at its conclusions in relation to the alleged payments to Cllr Hand, took account of the fact that Cllr Hand is deceased and therefore was unable to give evidence to the Tribunal. Nonetheless, in view of the evidence given by Mr Jones, Mr Hussey and Mr Dunlop, the Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Hand did request and receive the payments in question. The Tribunal was satisfied that unexplained lodgements made to Cllr Hand's accounts certainly allowed for the possibility of his having received IR£1,000 in 1992 from Beechill Properties Ltd. In November 1992 alone, Cllr Hand lodged some IR£35,000 to his bank account at National Irish Bank. In total, between 2 November 1992 and 8 February 1993, some IR£55,000 was lodged to his accounts for which no explanation was provided to the Tribunal.

8.34 The Tribunal was satisfied that in the circumstances, Cllr Hand corruptly sought two payments of IR£1,000 each from Mr Hussey/Beechill Properties Ltd, through Mr Dunlop. Cllr Hand solicited these payments on the basis of his past support for the rezoning of the Beechill lands. In making the two payments of IR£1,000 each, Mr Hussey and Mr Jones probably felt that, in the circumstances, and having regard to Cllr Hand's position as a councillor, they had little choice but to make the payments.

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR HAND BY MR DUNLOP

8.35 On Day 145, in response to questions as to whether any councillor had asked him for money with regard to the Quarryvale rezoning, Mr Dunlop listed Cllr Hand alone. On Day 146, Mr Dunlop also listed Cllr Hand as a person who requested what Mr Dunlop was then referring to as legitimate political donations.

8.36 The Tribunal noted that, while Cllr Hand's name appeared on Mr Dunlop's list of 19 April 2000 (Day 147) entitled '1991 local election contributions' where he was designated a recipient of what Mr Dunlop later maintained (on Day 606) were corrupt payments by way of Local Election contributions he had made in 1991, Cllr Hand's name did not appear on Mr Dunlop's '1992' list, prepared on Day 148, which Mr Dunlop stated contained the names of those who had been paid in 1992, at the time of the General Election, out of the 042 Rathfarnham account.

8.37 Mr Dunlop's explanation for this was that, when compiling the list, he had focused on payments he made at the time of the 1992 General Election, rather than of payments generally for that year. The Tribunal accepted this explanation.

8.38 Cllr Hand's name appeared on a list made by Mr Dunlop on Day 148 which identified persons he claimed to have paid at times other than around the Local Election of 1991 and in 1992. Moreover, the Tribunal noted that on Day 148 Mr Dunlop cross-referenced Cllr Hand's name to Ballycullen Farms. By 11 May 2000, Mr Dunlop had told the Tribunal at a private interview of his payment to Cllr Hand in relation to Ballycullen, and the Tribunal noted that in a further private interview with the Tribunal on 18 May 2000 Mr Dunlop mentioned Cllr Hand in the context of the Ballycullen lands. In Mr Dunlop's subsequent statements to the Tribunal of October 2000, and in his more detailed statement relating to the Ballycullen lands rezoning furnished in 2004, Cllr Hand was listed as the recipient of monies.

8.39 Mr Dunlop alleged in his 15 October 2004 statement that he paid Cllr Hand and Cllr Lydon a sum of IR£2,000 each in cash for their signatures on two motions which came before Dublin County Council on 16 and 29 October 1992, relating to the Beechill and Ballycullen lands respectively. Mr Dunlop said that Cllr Hand had requested a payment of IR£5,000 but had agreed to accept IR£2,000.

8.40 The Tribunal was satisfied, as a matter of probability, that Cllr Hand received IR£2,000 from Mr Dunlop, and that this payment was in response to a request made by Cllr Hand for financial recompense for his signature to the motion in question. While the Tribunal could not be definitive as to when exactly the monies were handed over by Mr Dunlop, it was likely that they were paid, as alleged in evidence by Mr Dunlop, on 2 October 1992.⁴⁰ There was a record in Mr Dunlop's diary of a meeting with Cllr Hand for 9.45 am on that date. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that this meeting had taken place at Cllr Hand's home, and that he had travelled there from Stillorgan where he had earlier that morning met with and paid Cllr Lydon IR£2,000 in cash. However, the Tribunal noted that whereas Mr Dunlop claimed that he paid Cllr Hand at 9.45 am in Dundrum, his telephone records for 2 October 1992 showed that at 11.10 am Cllr Hand telephoned Mr Dunlop and left the following message: 'In DCC, can get him at Information Desk, need to get the stuff in to him there, not at home'. The telephone records also noted Cllr Hand contacting Mr Dunlop's office on two further occasions on that date. Although Mr Dunlop could not explain what 'stuff' Cllr Hand had expected to be given, he rejected any suggestion that the message left by Cllr Hand was a euphemism for the payment that had been agreed between them. Mr Dunlop maintained that Cllr Hand would not have sought money over the telephone.

8.41 In assessing Mr Dunlop's credibility on whether, as he maintained, he had paid Cllr Hand IR£2,000 for the Ballycullen/Beechill motion, the Tribunal took account of the extraordinary level of contact which took place between Cllr Hand and Mr Dunlop in the period from July to October 1992. While the Tribunal was satisfied that the Ballycullen/Beechill motion was not the sole reason for this, it was satisfied that the Ballycullen and Beechill projects were at least two of the matters about which Cllr Hand contacted Mr Dunlop during this period. There were two occasions, on 13 and 21 July 1992 respectively, when Cllr Hand made telephone contact with Mr Dunlop and an entry in Mr Dunlop's diary for 23 July 1992 indicated a meeting of the two men at 'lunch'. Contact from Cllr Hand in the second week of August 1992 was followed with a meeting with Cllr Hand on 13 August 1992. According to Mr Dunlop, at this meeting Cllr Hand probably updated him about County Council matters and may have sought a further meeting. On 17, 19 and 25 August 1992, Mr Dunlop's telephone records showed contact with Mr Dunlop's office by Cllr Hand. There was further telephone contact between Cllr Hand and Mr Dunlop's office on 28 and 31 August 1992.

⁴⁰ In his October 2004 written statement to the Tribunal, Mr Dunlop stated his belief that he had paid Cllr Hand and Cllr Lydon on 2 October 1992, while in his February 2006 statement, he suggested that the payment date was 29 September or 2 October 1992.

8.42 Mr Dunlop's telephone records showed that contact between himself and Cllr Hand on 2 September 1992 was followed on 4 September by Cllr Hand leaving a message advising Mr Dunlop of the scheduled dates for development planning meetings for September, October and November 1992. Mr Dunlop's telephone records showed Cllr Hand making contact with his offices on 8, 25 and 30 September 1992. Mr Dunlop stated in his February 2006 statement that he met Cllr Hand in his home on 28 September 1992 and in a restaurant on the following day.

8.43 The Tribunal considered Mr Dunlop's telephone records of 5, 6, 8 and 9 of October 1992 which recorded telephone contact from Cllr Hand. In addition, Mr Dunlop's diary indicated that meetings between him and Cllr Hand were scheduled for 6 and 8 October 1992. The Tribunal believed that they concerned, at least in part, the Ballycullen rezoning. The Tribunal noted that on 2 October 1992 Cllr Mary Muldoon had lodged a motion seeking to keep the B zoning for the Ballycullen lands. This motion was subsequently proposed by Cllr Muldoon and seconded by Cllr Eithne FitzGerald. This matter was almost certainly a topic of discussion between Cllr Hand and Mr Dunlop.

8.44 On 13 October 1992 Cllr Hand apprised Mr Dunlop of where he could be contacted. Similarly, on 15 October 1992 (the eve of the scheduled meeting relating to the Beechill lands), Cllr Hand telephoned Mr Dunlop twice, and apprised him of his whereabouts. In addition, telephone calls from Cllr Hand were logged on 12 and 14 October 1992.

8.45 Mr Dunlop's telephone records established that on 16 October 1992 four telephone calls were received from Cllr Hand with a further four being received on 19 October 1992. These were followed by two attempted telephone contacts on 21 and 23 October 1992. Mr Dunlop had no doubt that the 16 October 1992 telephone calls related to the Beechill lands.

8.46 On 23 October 1992 Mr Dunlop's telephone records noted the following: '11:15 Tom Hand—said Beechill and Ballycullen O.K.' While Mr Dunlop could not explain the reference to Beechill (that issue having been dealt with without a vote on 16 October 1992) he stated that the message left by Cllr Hand intended to advise him that the Ballycullen rezoning motion was likely to pass.

8.47 In the two days prior to the Ballycullen zoning vote of 29 October 1992, Cllr Hand made contact with Mr Dunlop's office and made further contact on the morning of the vote. On that occasion, Cllr Hand telephoned Mr Dunlop's office at 9.30 am and advised Mr Dunlop that Cllr Hand would be at the Council offices from 12.30 pm. It was a feature of many of Cllr Hand's telephone contacts with Mr Dunlop's office that they seemed to arise out of a desire on Cllr Hand's part to advise Mr Dunlop as to his whereabouts at particular times or dates.

8.48 The Tribunal was satisfied that as a matter of probability Mr Dunlop paid IR£2,000 in cash to Cllr Hand at Cllr Hand's request, in return for his signature on two motions which came before Dublin County Council on 16 and 29 October 1992 relating to the Beechill and Ballycullen lands respectively. This payment was corrupt.

8.49 An analysis of Cllr Hand's finances in the period 2 November 1992 to 8 February 1993 indicated that within a period of a few weeks of the date when Mr Dunlop alleged that he paid IR£2,000 in cash to Cllr Hand, 2 October 1992, Cllr Hand lodged a total of IR£35,000 to his National Irish Bank account, as follows: IR£22,000 on 2 November 1992, IR£3,000 on 3 November 1992 and IR£10,000 on 16 November 1992. No explanation was provided to the Tribunal as to the sources of these lodgements.

CLLR TONY FOX (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENTS TO CLLR FOX BY MR JONES

9.01 Mr Jones told the Tribunal that he paid IR£250 to Cllr Fox on 24 November 1992. A letter which accompanied the payment stated: 'Enclosed herewith contribution to the campaign expenses which I have no doubt are pretty heavy at this time. With best wishes and thank you for all your help.' Cllr Fox accepted that he may have received this payment, and suggested that it was known that he was contemplating standing for election to the Seanad in early 1993. In fact Cllr Fox did not so stand.

9.02 According to Mr Jones, the expression of gratitude in that letter related to the support Cllr Fox had provided for the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands in the Council on 29 October 1992. Cllr Fox also supported the Ballycullen lands rezoning on 28 October 1993. The Tribunal believed that, in the circumstances, Cllr Fox's acceptance of this money was entirely inappropriate.

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR FOX BY MR DUNLOP

9.03 Mr Dunlop alleged that he paid Cllr Fox a sum of IR£1,000 in return for his support for the rezoning of the Ballycullen/Beechill lands, and that the payment was made in the environs of Dublin County Council in O'Connell Street in Dublin immediately prior to or after 16 October 1992, or on 29 October 1992.

9.04 Although he had no specific memory of where and when the payment was made, Mr Dunlop claimed to have a specific memory of speaking to Cllr Fox about money. Mr Dunlop's evidence was to the effect that in the course of lobbying Cllr Fox for his support for the Ballycullen lands rezoning in April 1992, Cllr Fox requested payment from him. Mr Dunlop said that Cllr Fox used the words 'It's going to cost you' or words of similar meaning. Mr Dunlop believed that he probably gave the money in cash to Cllr Fox in an envelope.

9.05 Mr Dunlop was requested, in the course of his evidence, to outline the circumstances in which he and Cllr Fox spoke of money. While Mr Dunlop was unable to date precisely the occasions when he and Cllr Fox spoke of money, he told the Tribunal, referring to Cllr Fox, that 'he would have mentioned money very early on in my lobbying of him'. Mr Dunlop estimated this to have taken place sometime in April 1992.

9.06 Mr Dunlop was asked: 'Do you remember the context in which this discussion took place?'

9.07 Mr Dunlop answered:

'I remember the context of my telling him that I needed his support. I was lobbying for his support. And that I recollect him saying to me at some stage when I told him, I am not specifically saying it was at the very beginning but that I told him that Don Lydon was going to be, I was going to approach Don Lydon to sign it . . . He mentioned money in the very early meetings that took place in relation to the lobbying.'

9.08 Mr Dunlop made the allegation of the payment to Cllr Fox in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands on a number of occasions, and in a number of the statements from 2000, up to and including his sworn evidence to the Tribunal.

9.09 Cllr Fox was adamant that he never received money from Mr Dunlop for any purpose whatsoever throughout his political career. He was fairly certain that Mr Dunlop never lobbied him in relation to the Ballycullen lands, although he acknowledged that Mr Frank Brooks, an employee of Ballycullen Farms Ltd, may well have done so.

9.10 Cllr Fox supported both the Beechill and Ballycullen rezonings.

9.11 Telephone records maintained by Mr Dunlop's secretary suggested that two calls were made by Cllr Fox to Mr Dunlop on 15 October 1992, the day prior to the special meeting of the County Council relating to the rezoning of the Beechill lands. One of these calls was said to inform Mr Dunlop that Cllr Fox was about to leave for the Council offices and could be contacted there, and the second call sought to inform Mr Dunlop of Cllr Fox's arrival at the Council offices.

9.12 In his evidence to the Tribunal, Cllr Fox acknowledged that he may have made the telephone calls to Mr Dunlop's office on 15 October 1992, but he had no recollection of having done so, and in any event could not account for their purpose, other than to suggest that he was simply returning telephone calls made to him earlier by Mr Dunlop. Cllr Fox was certain that the calls did not relate to either Ballycullen or Beechill. Cllr Fox accounted for his contact with Mr Dunlop in 1992 on the basis that it related to the Texas Homecare material contravention issue and the Quarryvale rezoning, both of which were unconnected to Ballycullen/Beechill.

9.13 On Day 147, Cllr Fox appeared on Mr Dunlop's list entitled '1991 local election', as an individual to whom Mr Dunlop made payments in 1991, claimed by Mr Dunlop to have been corrupt, under the cover of the Local Election. However, Cllr Fox did not appear on Mr Dunlop's '1992' list as a recipient of payments in 1992. Mr Dunlop explained this omission by claiming that he was focused on the general election in compiling that list and not other payments made in 1992.

9.14 On Day 148, Cllr Fox's name appeared on the list compiled by Mr Dunlop of persons he paid at times other than the 1991 and 1992 elections. In the course of a private interview with the Tribunal on 18 May 2000, Mr Dunlop said that Cllr Fox had 'probably' received money in relation to Ballycullen. Cllr Fox was listed as a recipient of money in relation to the Ballycullen lands in Mr Dunlop's 2000, 2004 and 2006 statements.

9.15 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Fox was lobbied by Mr Dunlop to support the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands, and that the telephone contact between Cllr Fox and Mr Dunlop's office on 15 October 1992 probably related, in part at least, to the then forthcoming motions seeking the rezoning of the Beechill and Ballycullen lands.

9.16 The Tribunal was satisfied as a matter of probability that Cllr Fox was paid IR£1,000 by Mr Dunlop in 1992 in return for his support for the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands. This payment was corrupt. In reaching this conclusion, the Tribunal was assisted by Mr Dunlop's clear recollection that he had made such a payment, and his recollection of the comments (referred to in the paragraph above) made by Cllr Fox at the time on the subject of payment.

CLLR COLM MCGRATH (FF)ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR MCGRATH BY BALLYCULLEN FARMS

10.01 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Frank Brooks, representing Ballycullen Farms Ltd, made a payment of IR£500 to Cllr McGrath on 19 November 1992, and was reimbursed by Ballycullen Farms in respect of that outlay. Cllr McGrath did not deny receiving the payment.

10.02 Cllr McGrath's political endeavours continued to be supported by the Jones interests by way of a contribution of IR£500 made on 10 October 1996, and a contribution of IR£500 to a golf classic in May 1999.

10.03 The 19 November 1992 payment of IR£500 was said to have been a political donation made at the time of a general election in which Cllr McGrath was standing. Cllr McGrath stated that this payment was made in the context of a golf classic fundraising event.

10.04 At the time the said payment was made, Cllr McGrath had in the recent past supported the Ballycullen and Beechill rezoning projects, and, close to 12 months later, he again supported the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands.

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR MCGRATH BY MR DUNLOP

10.05 On Days 147 and 148, Mr Dunlop provided lists of councillors to whom he said political donations were paid in relation to the 1991 Local Elections and the 1992 general election, and Cllr McGrath's name appeared under both headings. On Day 148 Cllr McGrath's name appeared on a list compiled by Mr Dunlop of people he identified as having been paid money by him at times other than the time of the elections in 1991 and in 1992. However, Mr Dunlop did not list Cllr McGrath in any capacity in connection with Ballycullen Farms on his 'cross referencing' list. Nor did Mr Dunlop make reference to Cllr McGrath in connection with Ballycullen/Beechill in the course of his interviews with the Tribunal in private sessions on 11 and 18 May 2000. However, in written statements made to the Tribunal on 9 October 2000, 15 October 2004 and 6 February 2006, Mr Dunlop alleged that he had paid a sum of IR£1,000 to Cllr McGrath in return for his support for the Ballycullen/Beechill rezoning projects.

10.06 Cllr McGrath made a written statement to the Tribunal on 14 December 2000 in which he acknowledged receipt of 'unconditional political donations' from Mr Dunlop, in amounts ranging from IR£500 to IR£2,000, both in cheques and in cash. Cllr McGrath said that the purpose of such donations was to assist him with election and constituency expenses. On 24 January 2006, Cllr McGrath made a further statement to the Tribunal in which he denied any contact with Mr Dunlop in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill rezoning project.

10.07 Mr Dunlop claimed to have paid IR£1,000 by agreement to Cllr McGrath in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands sometime between 1 October and 15 November 1992. Mr Dunlop claimed that the payment was handed over either before or after the County Council special meetings of 16 or 29 October 1992. Mr Dunlop did not give a specific location for the payment, save that he said he made it either in the environs of the County Council or at the Royal Dublin Hotel, or at the Gresham Hotel, or at Conway's public house.

10.08 Under cross-examination by Cllr McGrath, Mr Dunlop stated that Cllr McGrath's request for monies from him fitted into three categories: 1) political contributions, 2) discharge of a debt owed by Cllr McGrath for IR£10,700,⁴¹ and 3) monies for his support for Mr Dunlop's rezoning projects. Mr Dunlop denied Cllr McGrath's assertions that he had been inconsistent in his evidence, or in the manner in which he had prepared lists during his appearances before the Tribunal in 2000. In the course of his cross-examination, Cllr McGrath challenged Mr Dunlop as to how he, Cllr McGrath, who believed himself to be the recipient of legitimate political donations, could have realised that monies given to him by Mr Dunlop were intended as bribes. Mr Dunlop responded by stating that on a number of occasions when Mr Dunlop had approached Cllr McGrath for support for rezoning matters, Cllr McGrath had commented that the review of the County Dublin Development Plan by the councillors was 'creating multi-millionaires of people and they were getting nothing out of it'.

10.09 Cllr McGrath further put it to Mr Dunlop that he had worked closely with Mr Dunlop to assist many of his clients because of his natural instinct to oblige people. Cllr McGrath suggested to Mr Dunlop that he and Mr Dunlop had had a lot of contact in relation to one particular matter and that he, Cllr McGrath, was a 'quasi-official member' of the actual Quarryvale project team. Mr Dunlop agreed with this suggestion, and pointed out that he had used similar language to describe Cllr McGrath's role in his narrative statement to the Tribunal in relation to Quarryvale.

10.10 Cllr McGrath denied receiving IR£1,000 from Mr Dunlop or receiving any money in return for his support for the Ballycullen and Beechill rezoning. Cllr

⁴¹ Mr Dunlop was subsequently reimbursed by Mr Owen O'Callaghan.

McGrath accepted that he had received IR£500 from Mr Jones/Ballycullen Farms through Mr Frank Brooks in 1992, and was adamant that this was a political donation to him or to his constituency at the time of an election.

10.11 In the course of the cross-examination of Mr Dunlop, Cllr McGrath denied that he had been in receipt of any money from Mr Dunlop in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill rezoning project. Cllr McGrath maintained that Mr Dunlop would have known that it was unnecessary to bribe or attempt to bribe him to support a rezoning motion to facilitate development, as his pro-development stance was well known. Cllr McGrath remarked that Ballycullen was ‘an eminently suitable development’.

10.12 Evidence given to the Tribunal suggested frequent and regular contact between Mr Dunlop and Cllr McGrath during the review of the Dublin County Development Plan.

10.13 Cllr McGrath claimed he received a payment in cash from Mr Dunlop amounting to IR£2,000 in 1992, and that this payment was handed over to him wrapped in a newspaper.⁴² According to Cllr McGrath, this payment was a political donation, and had nothing to do with the Ballycullen or Beechill lands. Cllr McGrath received other political donations on other occasions from Mr Dunlop.

10.14 Although Cllr McGrath denied that Mr Dunlop had lobbied him in relation to the Ballycullen or Beechill lands, he accepted that Mr Dunlop may have spoken to him in passing about the issue.

10.15 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop did lobby Cllr McGrath to support the Ballycullen and Beechill rezonings, and it absolutely rejected Cllr McGrath’s suggestion that these rezonings were only mentioned to him in passing by Mr Dunlop.

10.16 In the period leading up to the Beechill/Ballycullen rezoning issues being dealt with by the County Council, there was extensive contact between Mr Dunlop and Cllr McGrath. This was particularly evident in the months of August, September, October and November 1992. In particular, between 4 June and 28 September 1992 there were approximately 19 telephone contacts recorded between Cllr McGrath and Mr Dunlop’s office. In the period October to November 1992, there were approximately 13 such contacts. Cllr McGrath did not deny the extensive contact, but maintained that it was largely to do with the Quarryvale rezoning project. It may well have been the case that the majority of Cllr McGrath's and Mr Dunlop's contacts and meetings in the latter half of 1992 were in connection with the Quarryvale rezoning project, but the Tribunal was nevertheless satisfied that on occasions, particularly during the months of August to October 1992, Mr Dunlop spoke to Cllr McGrath in relation to the Ballycullen and Beechill lands. Indeed, Cllr McGrath did not seriously dispute this. However, insofar as he accepted that he had been lobbied in relation to Ballycullen/Beechill he seemed to suggest that such lobbying occurred in the course of contact with Messrs Frank and Oliver Brooks, with whom he was acquainted. Cllr McGrath stated that by the time the relevant vote arose in relation to the lands in question, he was aware that the Brooks brothers were working for Mr Jones. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr McGrath was lobbied by the Brooks brothers.

10.17 Cllr McGrath was the beneficiary of a donation from Mr Jones in November 1992, some weeks after the Ballycullen rezoning vote.

10.18 On the question of whether, as a matter of probability, Mr Dunlop paid Cllr McGrath IR£1,000 to support the Ballycullen/Beechill rezoning project, the Tribunal believed the evidence of Mr Dunlop to be more credible than that of Cllr McGrath. The Tribunal took into consideration the manner in which Cllr McGrath received money from Mr Dunlop on other occasions. It was clear that Cllr McGrath had received and admitted receiving cash payments from Mr Dunlop. It was also apparent to the Tribunal (from evidence given in the Quarryvale module) that Cllr McGrath was comfortable about asking Mr Dunlop for financial assistance. The Tribunal believed it probable that Cllr McGrath had, as claimed by Mr Dunlop, complained to Mr Dunlop that he and his fellow councillors were making millionaires out of landowners who brought zoning proposals before the County Council, while councillors were receiving nothing.

10.19 The Tribunal believed it likely that Cllr McGrath received this payment of IR£1,000 from Mr Dunlop sometime in October/November 1992. This was a corrupt payment.

CLLR CYRIL GALLAGHER (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENT OF IR£1,000 TO CLLR GALLAGHER BY BALLYCULLEN FARMS LTD

11.01 Mr Oliver Brooks, an employee of Ballycullen Farms, told the Tribunal that he delivered a Ballycullen Farms cheque in the sum of IR£1,000 to Cllr Gallagher in November 1992. Mr Brooks recalled Cllr Gallagher expressing surprise at the receipt of this payment. While the date of the payment was not established, it was likely that it was made in or about November 1992, at the time of the November 1992 General Election, a time when a number of other councillors received payments.

11.02 Cllr Gallagher had supported the Ballycullen rezoning in October 1992, and would go on to support it in October 1993.

ALLEGED PAYMENT OF IR£1,000 TO CLLR GALLAGHER BY MR DUNLOP

11.03 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he paid a sum of IR£1,000 to Cllr Gallagher out of funds provided to him by Mr Jones. Mr Dunlop said that that payment was made around the time of the October 1992 votes relating to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands in Dublin County Council and that the payment was made in the environs of Dublin County Council. Mr Dunlop maintained that the reason and purpose for the payment was to secure Cllr Gallagher's support for the rezoning of the lands at Ballycullen and Beechill.

11.04 Mr Dunlop first mentioned Cllr Gallagher in the context of the Ballycullen/Beechill rezonings, in his October 2000 statement to the Tribunal. He listed Cllr Gallagher as a recipient of IR£1,000 in later statements he made to the Tribunal, in 2004 and 2006, in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands. Mr Dunlop did not refer to Cllr Gallagher as a recipient of money in relation to Ballycullen/Beechill lands in the course of his private interview by the Tribunal in May 2000.

11.05 On Day 147, Mr Dunlop provided a list to the Tribunal entitled '1991 local election' and included Cllr Gallagher as a recipient of a payment at that time paid under the cover of the Local Elections. Cllr Gallagher's name did not appear in his '1992' list. Mr Dunlop's explanation for this was that in compiling this list he had concentrated on payments made at the time of the November 1992 General Election, rather than 1992 payments generally.

11.06 The Tribunal noted, however, that on a further list provided by Mr Dunlop on Day 148, of persons (already on the previous list) paid at times other than the Local Election in 1991 and 1992, Cllr Gallagher's name did appear but was not cross-referenced by Mr Dunlop to the Ballycullen lands.

11.07 Cllr Gallagher died on 20 March 2000, and did not therefore give sworn evidence to the Tribunal. Prior to his death, Cllr Gallagher provided information on a voluntary basis to the Tribunal, in the course of which he denied receiving any corrupt or improper payments in relation to any rezoning or planning matter. In the course of a private interview with the Tribunal on 15

March 1999, Cllr Gallagher provided details of his bank accounts, and specifically denied having a Post Office account. However, subsequent to his death in 2000, the Tribunal learned that he had had in fact a Post Office savings account into which deposits amounting to approximately IR£43,500 had been made between 1 January 1991 and 12 January 1998, many of them in large round-figure sums, the sources of which remain unknown to the Tribunal.

11.08 While the Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop did indeed make corrupt payments to Cllr Gallagher in return for his support in rezoning motions in other modules, it was not satisfied that Mr Dunlop paid him IR£1,000 specifically in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands. In particular, Mr Dunlop did not provide the Tribunal with any account of the circumstances in which Cllr Gallagher sought payment from him in connection with those lands. The Tribunal also noted that Mr Dunlop did not identify Cllr Gallagher as a recipient of any such payment in the course of his private interview by the Tribunal on 11 May 2000.

CLLR SEÁN GILBRIDE (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENT OF IR£1,000 TO CLLR GILBRIDE BY MR DUNLOP

12.01 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he paid Cllr Gilbride a sum of IR£1,000 in return for his voting support for the rezoning of the Ballycullen/Beechill lands, and that the payment was made 'immediately prior to or after 16 October or 29 October 1992'. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that the payment was solicited by Cllr Gilbride.

12.02 Mr Dunlop also stated in evidence that the payment to Cllr Gilbride was handed over either in the offices of Dublin County Council, at the Gresham Hotel Dublin, at Conway's public house, or the Royal Dublin Hotel in O'Connell Street, Dublin. In a statement made to the Tribunal in 2006, Mr Dunlop identified the place of payment as being the environs of Dublin County Council offices in O'Connell Street, Dublin.

12.03 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he believed he discussed the Development Plan review, including the Ballycullen lands, with Cllr Gilbride in early September 1992. Mr Dunlop's diary recorded meetings with Cllr Gilbride on 8 and 9 September 1992.

12.04 Mr Dunlop indicated that when he sought support from Cllr Gilbride, Cllr Gilbride 'indicated during the course of that meeting what had entailed'. A payment of IR£1,000 was agreed. Mr Dunlop had no doubt but that Cllr Gilbride required payment of money in return for his support. Mr Dunlop recalled instances when he had sought Cllr Gilbride's support for a rezoning issue, not necessarily the Ballycullen/Beechill rezonings, when Cllr Gilbride told him that his support 'would cost' him. On occasions Mr Dunlop suggested that discussions with Cllr Gilbride included a reference by him to the effect that he, Mr Dunlop, would have to 'look after Jack'. Mr Dunlop understood this to mean Cllr Jack Larkin. Mr Dunlop could not be definite as whether Mr Gilbride made reference to Cllr Larkin at the time they discussed the Ballycullen/Beechill rezoning.

12.05 Mr Dunlop also told the Tribunal that he and Cllr Gilbride were in frequent contact during the review of the Development Plan, and that Cllr Gilbride (although a member of the Fianna Fáil party) would telephone Mr Dunlop on a regular basis to apprise him of discussions which Cllr Gilbride had had with individuals within Fine Gael in relation to the Development Plan review. Cllr Gilbride advised Mr Dunlop on likely support from within Fine Gael in relation to rezoning projects with which Mr Dunlop was associated.

12.06 Mr Dunlop's list, provided to the Tribunal on Day 146, of the persons he was then describing as having sought legitimate contributions from him, did not include Cllr Gilbride as such an individual. Mr Dunlop, when questioned on this issue on Day 606, stated: 'He, in the context of the 1991 local election he—let me put it another way, he received monies from me in the context of the 1991 local election, applicable to a specific item, but how, whether you describe that as a legitimate political contribution or not, it was in cash.'

12.07 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that it was his recollection that Cllr Gilbride had never sought a bona fide or legitimate election or political contribution from him.

12.08 In the list entitled '1991 local election' provided by Mr Dunlop to the Tribunal on Day 147, Cllr Gilbride was identified as having received IR£12,000 from Mr Dunlop in 1991. Mr Dunlop attributed this money to 'a separate development'. Cllr Gilbride's name was absent from a similar list (the '1992' list), also provided by Mr Dunlop to the Tribunal on Day 147. Mr Dunlop later explained this omission on the basis that when compiling this list, he was concentrating more on individuals who had received monies at the time of the 1992 general election (November 1992) rather than individuals who had received monies generally in 1992.

12.09 Cllr Gilbride's name was on a list provided to the Tribunal by Mr Dunlop on Day 148 of individuals who received payments from him at times other than the Local Election 1991 or the general election 1992.

12.10 Mr Dunlop did not refer to Cllr Gilbride when providing information to the Tribunal in relation to the Ballycullen lands in the course of private interviews with the Tribunal on 11 and 18 May 2000.

12.11 Mr Dunlop referred to Cllr Gilbride's name in a written statement provided by him to the Tribunal in October 2000. Cllr Gilbride's name subsequently appeared in that context in later statements provided by Mr Dunlop, in 2004 and 2006.

12.12 Cllr Gilbride denied receiving IR£1,000, or any sum, from Mr Dunlop in relation to the rezoning of lands at Ballycullen or Beechill. He denied receiving money at any stage in return for his voting support on any rezoning matter. He maintained that the only sum he ever received from Mr Dunlop was IR£2,000 in cash as a bona fide political donation at the time of the 1991 Local Elections.

12.13 Mr Dunlop's diaries and telephone records, as maintained by his secretary, for the period September to December 1992 indicated 24 recorded contacts between Cllr Gilbride and Mr Dunlop, of which three were meetings. Cllr Gilbride acknowledged that there was a significant level of contact between himself and Mr Dunlop, and he conceded that these telephone records were probably accurate. Cllr Gilbride had earlier given sworn evidence to the Tribunal that he had not in fact engaged in extensive or frequent contact with Mr Dunlop. Cllr Gilbride believed that most of his contact with Mr Dunlop related to the Quarryvale issue.

12.14 Cllr Gilbride was asked to provide an explanation for a lodgement of IR£1,550 to his and his wife's joint bank account on 5 October 1992. Cllr Gilbride initially told the Tribunal that this was a refund of tax, but subsequently he confirmed that it was a payment from another developer unconnected to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands.⁴³ Cllr Gilbride accounted for a lodgement of IR£1,000 in cash on 9 October as a contribution from a relative, unconnected to his political life. In earlier correspondence with the Tribunal, Cllr Gilbride identified a lodgement of IR£1,200 on 18 September 1992 as County Council/VEC expenses, but in evidence he stated this to have been a tax refund. Cllr Gilbride stated that, to the best of his recollection, lodgements of IR£700 on 10 October 1992 and IR£600 on 13 October 1992 related to County Council expenses, although he had no records in relation to them.

12.15 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop lobbied Cllr Gilbride in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill rezonings.

⁴³ See the Quarryvale Module.

12.16 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Dunlop paid IR£1,000 to Cllr Gilbride in return for his support for the rezoning of the Ballycullen/Beechill lands, and that the payment was solicited by Cllr Gilbride. The Tribunal was satisfied that the payment was an attempt to influence by inducement the disinterested performance on the part of Cllr Gilbride of his public duties. The payment was corrupt.

CLLR JACK LARKIN (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENT OF IR£1,000 TO CLLR LARKIN BY MR DUNLOP

13.01 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he paid a sum of IR£1,000 to Cllr Larkin in return for the councillor's support for the motion to rezone the Ballycullen lands. He said he paid Cllr Larkin in the environs of Dublin County Council or at the Royal Dublin Hotel in O'Connell Street, or the Gresham Hotel in O'Connell Street, or Conway's public house off O'Connell Street in Dublin. Mr Dunlop's best belief was that he paid over the money in Conway's, a place in which he and Cllr Larkin often met. He suggested that the payment was made between 1 October 1992 and 15 November 1992.

13.02 Mr Dunlop maintained that Cllr Larkin solicited this payment in return for his support and that the sum of IR£1,000 was agreed between them.

13.03 Mr Dunlop did not identify Cllr Larkin as a recipient of a payment relating to the Ballycullen lands until his statement in October 2000. Prior to that statement, Mr Dunlop had indicated to the Tribunal that only three councillors were paid in relation to the Ballycullen lands. Cllr Larkin was not identified as one of the three. Cllr Larkin's name was mentioned by Mr Dunlop on Day 146 in a list which Mr Dunlop provided to the Tribunal of requests that were made of him by politicians for what he described as legitimate political contributions. On Day 147 Cllr Larkin's name appeared on Mr Dunlop's list entitled '1991 local election' as the recipient of payments Mr Dunlop described on Day 606 (8 February 2006) as corrupt payments given under the aegis of the 1991 Local Elections. However, Cllr Larkin's name did not appear on Mr Dunlop's '1992 list', given on Day 147, where he dealt with payments he claimed to have made out of the 042 Rathfarnham account in 1992—payments Mr Dunlop later clarified as having been made in the course of the 1992 General Election.

13.04 Neither did Cllr Larkin's name appear on Mr Dunlop's other list given on Day 148. This was the list of the persons on the 1991 and 1992 lists he claimed to have paid at times other than the time of the Local Election in 1991 or in 1992. He was not mentioned in relation to the Ballycullen lands in the course of private interviews on 11 or 18 May 2000.

13.05 Cllr Larkin was first named by Mr Dunlop as a recipient of money in his October 2000 statement, and thereafter his name appeared in Mr Dunlop's two further statements made in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands in 2004 and 2006.

13.06 Cllr Larkin was not present at the meetings of Dublin County Council on either 16 or 29 October 1992 and thus did not participate in any voting on those dates related to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands or any other rezoning matter.

13.07 Evidence given to the Tribunal suggested that Cllr Larkin was a hospital in-patient between 9 September and 4 December 1992, and that he spent a considerable period in a nursing home after that hospital confinement. It was within this period that Mr Dunlop indicated to the Tribunal that he had paid IR£1,000 to Cllr Larkin. Evidence to the Tribunal also indicated that Cllr Larkin was not present at Dublin County Council meetings between 13 July 1992 and some time prior to 17 December 1992. It was within this period that the Beechill and Ballycullen motions were successfully voted through by the Council. Cllr Larkin's absence during this lengthy period was almost certainly as a direct consequence of ill-health.

13.08 The Tribunal was unable to accept Mr Dunlop's evidence about his dealings with Cllr Larkin in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands. In his earlier evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Dunlop had set the time parameters for his payment to Cllr Larkin, and indeed other councillors, as being between 1 October and 15 November 1992. When it was brought to his attention that it was physically impossible for him to have paid Cllr Larkin in the environs of the County Council during this timeframe, Mr Dunlop sought to extend the timeframe to before 9 September 1992 and beyond 18 November 1992. This did not strike the Tribunal as credible. Accordingly, the Tribunal believed that while Mr Dunlop may well have spoken about the Ballycullen/Beechill lands with Cllr Larkin (given that a meeting between the two on 2 September 1992 was recorded in Mr Dunlop's diary), the Tribunal was not satisfied that the evidence suggested that a payment of IR£1,000 was made to Cllr Larkin by Mr Dunlop in relation to the lands. It seemed to the Tribunal that had Cllr Larkin approached Mr Dunlop seeking payment of IR£1,000 at some point following his discharge from the nursing home after 18 October 1992, in circumstances where he had not been in a position to vote for Mr Dunlop's project, this event would have imprinted itself on Mr Dunlop's memory.

CLLR LIAM T. COSGRAVE (FG)

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR COSGRAVE BY MR DUNLOP

14.01 Mr Dunlop alleged that he paid Cllr Liam T. Cosgrave IR£1,000 in cash in return for his support for the rezoning of the Ballycullen/Beechill lands prior to or after 16 October 1992, or 29 October 1992. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he paid Cllr Cosgrave in the environs/vicinity of Dublin County Council.

14.02 On Day 146 (18 April 2000), Mr Dunlop prepared a list called the 'Preliminary List' in which he identified 16 members of Dublin County Council as having requested money from him, but as bona fide political donations. Cllr Cosgrave was one of the 16. Mr Dunlop's position therefore as of that date was that any payments made by him to councillors were legitimate political donations.

14.03 On Day 147 (19 April 2000), Mr Dunlop prepared a list entitled '1991 local election contributions'. The purpose of this list was to explain how Mr Dunlop had expended all or some of the money, totalling IR£112,000 withdrawn from his 042 Rathfarnham account. In that list, Mr Dunlop identified what in his opinion were improper payments from that account. Cllr Cosgrave was not included in that list. This list, however, dealt only with payments made by Mr Dunlop in 1991, and therefore would not include any payments made by him in relation to the Ballycullen lands issue, as that matter did not arise until 1992.

14.04 On Day 148 (9 May 2000), Mr Dunlop provided the Tribunal with the '1992 list'. In that list, which he had prepared overnight and which he brought with him to the witness box, he sought to identify individuals to whom he made improper or corrupt payments in 1992, in the context of explaining the withdrawals from his Rathfarnham account. That list identified Cllr Cosgrave as being a recipient of IR£5,000 (the Newtownpark Avenue payment). It did not make any reference to a payment of IR£1,000 which Mr Dunlop claimed he paid to Cllr Cosgrave in connection with Ballycullen, an omission Mr Dunlop accounted for by the absence of the 'road map'⁴⁴ when preparing the list.

14.05 A further list was prepared on Day 148 by Mr Dunlop with a list of names numbered 31 to 38, which Mr Dunlop said was a continuation of the 1991 election list and the 1992 list. Another list headed '1991–1993 (inclusive)' was also prepared by Mr Dunlop on Day 148. This identified the developers he said provided him with money in connection with the review of the County Dublin Development Plan.

⁴⁴ This reference to a 'road map' is a reference to development plan documentation such as minutes of the special meetings at which the review of the Development Plan was considered etc.

14.06 In the course of a cross-referencing exercise conducted on Day 148 in relation to the 1991 election list, the 1992 list and the ‘continuation’ list (with the names numbered 31 to 38) on the one hand, and the 1991–3 (inclusive) list on the other hand, Mr Dunlop identified Cllr Cosgrave as a person to whom he paid money in relation to Ballycullen Farms.

14.07 In a subsequent private interview with the Tribunal, Mr Dunlop did not identify Cllr Cosgrave as a person who was paid in connection with the Ballycullen lands. The persons he identified as having been paid money by him in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands were Cllrs Lydon, Hand and Fox.

14.08 Cllr Liam Cosgrave was identified as a recipient of IR£1,000 in relation to the Ballycullen lands in Mr Dunlop’s statement of October 2000 and again in his statement of 15 October 2004. In a further statement provided by Mr Dunlop to the Tribunal in February 2006, Cllr Cosgrave was omitted from his list of recipients of IR£1,000 payments.

14.09 Mr Dunlop maintained that his earlier omission of Cllr Cosgrave as a recipient of money in relation to Ballycullen, in his February 2006 statement, was due to an oversight on his part.

14.10 Cllr Cosgrave denied receiving money from Mr Dunlop in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill rezonings. Cllr Cosgrave told the Tribunal that Mr Dunlop had not lobbied him in relation to those projects and he denied any knowledge of Mr Dunlop’s involvement as a lobbyist in these projects.

14.11 Cllr Cosgrave acknowledged the receipt from Mr Dunlop of what he described as ‘several legitimate political donations’. Cllr Cosgrave said that most of these contributions were in the region of IR£500 to IR£1,000, that the majority of them were paid by cheque, and that they were always specifically categorised by Mr Dunlop as election contributions. In a statement made to the Tribunal on 28 March 2003, Cllr Cosgrave stated that Mr Dunlop made political donations to him amounting to IR£6,000 between 1992 and 1999, including IR£3,000 within the 1992/3 period. In the course of his sworn evidence to the Tribunal, Cllr Cosgrave claimed he received IR£2,000 in cash as a political donation from Mr Dunlop between 11 and 26 November 1992 at the time of the General Election in which he was a candidate. Cllr Cosgrave emphatically denied that he received the IR£1,000 payment which Mr Dunlop claimed to have paid him for his support for the Ballycullen rezoning

14.12 Cllr Cosgrave acknowledged that he had had contact with Mr Dunlop in the period October/November 1992. He did not deny, based on Mr Dunlop's office record of telephone calls, that he contacted Mr Dunlop's offices on 15 October 1992 (the eve of the Beechill special meeting of 16 October 1992) and 29 October 1992 (the day of the Ballycullen motion). Cllr Cosgrave supported the Ballycullen motion. The Beechill motion was carried without any vote.

14.13 The Tribunal rejected Cllr Cosgrave's evidence that he had not been lobbied by Mr Dunlop in relation to the Ballycullen/Beechill lands. It was clear to the Tribunal that Cllr Cosgrave was in fairly regular contact with Mr Dunlop during the making of the 1993 Development Plan, in particular during the October 1992 period. It was extremely unlikely that Mr Dunlop would not have availed of the opportunity in the lead-up to both votes to lobby Cllr Cosgrave to support the Beechill and Ballycullen projects in circumstances where Mr Dunlop and Cllr Cosgrave were in contact on the dates of both votes.

14.14 As a matter of probability, the Tribunal was satisfied that the payment identified by Mr Dunlop, namely IR£1,000, was paid by him to Cllr Cosgrave, and that this was paid in connection with the Ballycullen/Beechill rezoning project, and more specifically his support for it, and that this fact was known to Cllr Cosgrave. The said payment was therefore a corrupt payment.

CLLR JOHN O'HALLORAN (LAB.)

ALLEGED PAYMENT OF A DONATION TO A CHARITY ASSOCIATED WITH CLLR O'HALLORAN

15.01 Mr Jones identified Cllr O'Halloran as the recipient of a donation of IR£3,000 in support of a charity with which he was associated, in the year ending 31 December 1992. Cllr O'Halloran acknowledged that he received a charitable donation, but stated that the amount was much less than the suggested sum of IR£3,000. Cllr O'Halloran also stated that he did not participate in a charity walk in 1992. Mr Oliver Brooks, an employee of Ballycullen Farms, told the Tribunal that it was his belief that Mr Jones' figure of IR£3,000 as the amount of that charitable donation was erroneous, that the correct figure was IR£500, and that it was paid in either 1992 or 1997.

15.02 The Tribunal believed there to have been insufficient evidence to determine when Mr O'Halloran may have received the IR£500 or any other sum from the Jones group, whether by way of charitable donation or otherwise.

15.03 Cllr O'Halloran was present at the meeting on 16 October 1992 at which the Beechill rezoning motion was adopted without a vote, but was not present for the Ballycullen rezoning vote on 29 October 1992. Cllr O'Halloran voted against the Muldoon/Shatter motion to revert the Ballycullen farm lands to an agricultural zoning on 28 October 1993.

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR O'HALLORAN BY MR DUNLOP

15.04 Mr Dunlop alleged that Cllr O'Halloran solicited a payment when Mr Dunlop asked him to support the Ballycullen rezoning, and he arranged a payment of money in the lead-up to the vote on Ballycullen. Mr Dunlop was unable to recall the precise amount paid to Cllr O'Halloran in relation to Ballycullen.

15.05 Cllr O'Halloran denied the payment of any money to him by Mr Dunlop in relation to the Ballycullen rezoning project. He did not attend or vote in relation to the Ballycullen rezoning at the County Council meeting of 29 October 1992. He supported the confirmation of that rezoning in October 1993, and voted in support of a material contravention on 12 February 1996 for the construction of 600 houses on the Ballycullen lands.

15.06 Cllr O'Halloran maintained that he had never been lobbied in any way by Mr Dunlop in relation to the Ballycullen lands, and did not believe that he was lobbied by anyone in relation to that project. He recalled being lobbied by Messrs Frank and Oliver Brooks, employees of Ballycullen Farms Ltd, in relation to a separate planning issue. Cllr O'Halloran told the Tribunal that, although he knew Mr Dunlop was a lobbyist in relation to a number of land holdings and was aware of his frequent presence in and around the County Council, it was his recollection that Mr Dunlop had only lobbied him in relation to the Quarryvale development. Cllr O'Halloran maintained that he had only become aware of Mr Dunlop's involvement in Ballycullen /Beechill through the Tribunal.

15.07 Mr Dunlop's records indicated telephone contact by Cllr O'Halloran on a number of occasions in September 1992, in addition to a scheduled meeting on 16 September 1992, at which, according to Mr Dunlop, the Ballycullen lands (and other Development Plan issues) were discussed. Mr Dunlop's office recorded telephone contact by Cllr O'Halloran on 15 October 1992 (the eve of the Beechill special meeting) and Cllr O'Halloran's name appeared in Mr Dunlop's diary for a meeting at 8.30 pm on the same day. While Mr Dunlop believed that the Ballycullen/Beechill matter may well have been mentioned by him to Cllr O'Halloran on that date, a project other than Ballycullen/Beechill (namely Quarryvale) had in fact been the focus of that particular meeting. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he would have neither agreed to pay Cllr O'Halloran nor paid him at that meeting.

15.08 Mr Dunlop's telephone records showed contact made by Cllr O'Halloran on 20 October 1992, when a message was left for Mr Dunlop advising him that Cllr O'Halloran was at the County Council. Further telephone contact by Cllr O'Halloran was recorded on 22 October 1992.

15.09 Mr Dunlop accepted that Council records showed that Cllr O'Halloran was not in attendance for the Ballycullen zoning vote on 29 October 1992. Mr Dunlop, in evidence, maintained that payment was nevertheless made to Cllr O'Halloran. According to Mr Dunlop, Cllr O'Halloran received something in the order of IR£500 or, as described by him on another occasion, 'a small sum'.

15.10 Mr Dunlop's office telephone records indicated two telephone calls from Cllr O'Halloran to his office on 3 November 1992. Mr Dunlop's diary for 4 November 1992 indicated that a meeting took place on that date between Mr Dunlop and Cllr O'Halloran. Mr Dunlop stated his belief that 4 November 1992 was the date on which he paid a sum in the order of IR£500 to Cllr O'Halloran.

15.11 Cllr O'Halloran said he was not in a position to dispute the accuracy of Mr Dunlop's diary and telephone records as he could not recall 'each time' he spoke to Mr Dunlop. Cllr O'Halloran maintained that the only development matter he discussed with Mr Dunlop was Quarryvale.

15.12 In the course of his evidence, Cllr O'Halloran was queried about the contacts he had had with Mr Dunlop in the period from September to November 1992 and about meetings recorded in Mr Dunlop's diary. While he could not confirm such contact, he did not dispute Mr Dunlop's telephone records of contact on 1 September 1992, and two calls at 3 pm on 10 September 1992, on which day Cllr O'Halloran left a message for Mr Dunlop. Likewise, on 14 September 1992 Cllr O'Halloran was recorded as requesting Mr Dunlop to call him, and Cllr O'Halloran appeared to telephone back at a later stage to query why Mr Dunlop had not made contact. Cllr O'Halloran agreed that telephone contact made on 15 September 1992 and on the morning of the next day was likely to have been connected to the meeting scheduled in Mr Dunlop's diary for 16 September 1992. While Cllr O'Halloran agreed that this meeting may well have taken place, he maintained that it was in relation to Quarryvale, and denied any suggestion that Ballycullen had been discussed.

15.13 Mr Dunlop's telephone records also noted an entry referable to Cllr O'Halloran on 17 September 1992.

15.14 Cllr O'Halloran did not dispute further telephone contact on 3 November 1992, nor did he dispute that he may have met Mr Dunlop on 4

November 1992 as suggested by an entry in Mr Dunlop's diary. While he could not recollect such a meeting, any such meeting would have been in relation to Quarryvale. He denied, as alleged by Mr Dunlop, that he was paid money in relation to Ballycullen on 4 November 1992.

15.15 In his early dealings with the Tribunal, Cllr O'Halloran stated that he had received a political donation from Mr Dunlop in the sum of IR£2,500 in 1996, at the time of a By-Election (this donation was recouped by Mr Dunlop from Mr Owen O'Callaghan). He later advised the Tribunal that he received a cash payment of IR£500 from Mr Dunlop sometime between 1991 and 1993, and that this payment had been made in the vicinity of the County Council offices. He recalled Mr Dunlop advising him on one occasion of his intention to make the contribution, and recalled being paid the contribution on a second occasion. The payment had been made by Mr Dunlop without explanation. Cllr O'Halloran could not say what led Mr Dunlop to give him IR£500 in cash. Mr Dunlop had handed it over to him at the County Council offices and had not explained why. He, Cllr O'Halloran, had not at the time related it to any election campaign. Cllr O'Halloran believed that the IR£500 cash may have been preceded by receipt by him of a cheque for IR£250 from Frank Dunlop & Associates Ltd. Cllr O'Halloran also acknowledged that he received a IR£500 cheque from Mr Dunlop at the time of the 1999 Local Elections (from which he withdrew as a candidate).

15.16 The Tribunal did not accept Cllr O'Halloran's contention that he was unaware of Mr Dunlop's retention as a lobbyist in connection with the Beechill/Ballycullen lands, and believed it likely that Cllr O'Halloran was lobbied by Mr Dunlop to support one or both of these projects.

15.17 The Tribunal was satisfied that there was a significant level of contact between Mr Dunlop and Cllr O'Halloran, both at face-to-face meetings and informally at the time of County Council meetings. The Tribunal does not believe it credible that Mr Dunlop would not have canvassed Cllr O'Halloran's support for all or most of the land rezonings with which he was involved.

15.18 Cllr O'Halloran was initially named by Mr Dunlop as a recipient of monies from him in relation to the Ballycullen lands in his October 2000 statement. He was again named in a later statement furnished to the Tribunal in 2004 by Mr Dunlop.

15.19 On Day 146, when apprising the Tribunal of people he said sought legitimate political contributions from him, Mr Dunlop did not name Cllr O'Halloran. Neither did Cllr O'Halloran's name appear in Mr Dunlop's '1991 local election' list.

15.20 In his list headed '1992', Mr Dunlop did not list Cllr O'Halloran as a person who received monies from him in 1992, in relation to the general election.

15.21 Nor did Cllr O'Halloran's name appear on the list furnished by Mr Dunlop on Day 148, of persons (already named in the earlier 1991 and 1992 lists) Mr Dunlop claimed to have paid at times other than the Local Election of 1991, or the general election in 1992. Equally, Cllr O'Halloran's name was absent from Mr Dunlop's 'cross referencing' list, prepared on Day 148, in which he purported to cross reference payments to certain developments, including Ballycullen Farms. No mention was made of Cllr O'Halloran in connection with Ballycullen when Mr Dunlop was privately interviewed by the Tribunal on 11 and 18 May 2000.

15.22 Although the Tribunal took account of the fact that Cllr O'Halloran did not vote on 29 October 1992, the Tribunal was not satisfied that this factor could be the sole determinant in relation to Mr Dunlop's allegation against Cllr O'Halloran.

15.23 The Tribunal rejected Cllr O'Halloran's claim that he was unaware of Mr Dunlop's involvement in the Ballycullen/Beechill rezoning projects. In Cllr O'Halloran's own words, Mr Dunlop was 'a constant presence' in the County Council. The Tribunal was satisfied that extensive contact took place between Cllr O'Halloran and Mr Dunlop in the course of the preparation of the Development Plan, and, while it may well have been the case that a substantial part of that contact related to the Quarryvale rezoning project, in which Cllr O'Halloran was an active participant, it was not the case that all of Mr Dunlop's and Cllr O'Halloran's dealings related to this project. It was inconceivable that Mr Dunlop would not have sought the support of Cllr O'Halloran, given Mr Dunlop's active lobbying role for Mr Jones and Ballycullen Farms. The Tribunal preferred the evidence given by Mr Dunlop to that given by Cllr O'Halloran, and believed it likely that at some point, probably between 1 September and mid-October 1992, Cllr O'Halloran and Mr Dunlop discussed the Ballycullen/Beechill lands.

15.24 For the Tribunal's conclusions relating to the allegations of payments to Cllr O'Halloran, see Chapter Two, Part 7.

CLLR SÉAMUS BROCK (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR BROCK BY MR JONES

16.01 According to Mr Jones, Cllr Brock received a sum of IR£250 from him in the year ending 31 December 1992 as a ‘local election’ donation. Mr Jones wrote to Cllr Brock on 24 November 1992 in the following terms:

Dear Séamus

Enclosed herewith a contribution to the campaign expenses, which I have no doubt are pretty heavy at this time.

With best wishes and thank you for all your help.

Yours sincerely,

Chris Jones.

16.02 Mr Jones said he believed that his donation to Cllr Brock was in respect of the Local Elections which had been held approximately 18 months earlier. Mr Jones understood that Cllr Brock had not been a candidate in the November 1992 general election.

16.03 Cllr Brock voted in favour of the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992, and he again supported the confirmation of that rezoning in October 1993.

16.04 Cllr Brock died in May 1994, and therefore did not have the opportunity to provide a statement or evidence to the Tribunal. Nevertheless, the Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Brock received this payment.

CLLR LARRY BUTLER (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR BUTLER BY MR JONES

17.01 Mr Jones sent a cheque in the sum of IR£500 to Cllr Butler on 16 November 1992, accompanied by a letter stating: ‘Dear Larry, Enclosed a contribution to the campaign expenses, which I have no doubt will be pretty heavy and thank you for all your help.’

17.02 Mr Jones told the Tribunal that the ‘help’ for which he thanked Cllr Butler was a reference to the Ballycullen rezoning motion on 29 October 1992. Mr Jones also stated that the ‘campaign’ referred to in his letter was the 1991 Local Election held approximately 18 months previously.

17.03 Cllr Butler voted in favour of the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992 and again supported the confirmation process in relation to those lands in October 1993.

17.04 Cllr Butler was not a candidate in the General Election of November 1992 (or the Seanad Election in January/February 1993) although he did engage in political fundraising at that time in relation to the campaign.

17.05 Cllr Butler told the Tribunal that if he was fundraising for the 1992 elections he would have forwarded donations received to the Fianna Fáil Party, or alternatively lodged the money to his own account and sent a sum of equal value to the Fianna Fáil Party. Cllr Butler agreed that it was possible that Mr Jones' donation was the source of a lodgement of IR£500 made to his account on 30 November 1992. He agreed that his bank records did not reflect any immediate payment to the Fianna Fáil Party of IR£500. The Tribunal believed it probable that the lodgement to Cllr Butler's account did indeed represent Mr Jones' payment of IR£500. Cllr Butler agreed that the 1992 political donation he received from Mr Jones appeared to be the first such political support from him and, save for IR£50 in 1995, no further financial support came to him from that source.

17.06 The Tribunal was satisfied that the payment of IR£500 was intended to compromise Cllr Butler's disinterested performance of his duty as a councillor. Cllr Butler's acceptance of the payment was improper.

CLLR LIAM CREAVER (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR CREAVER BY MR JONES

18.01 Mr Jones advised the Tribunal of his belief that Ballycullen Farms made a 'local election' donation to Cllr Creaven in the sum of IR£1,000 in the year ending December 1992. The Local Elections had been held approximately 18 months previously. Mr Jones said he never met Cllr Creaven.

18.02 Although Mr Creaven's name was included on Mr Jones' schedule, and Mr Jones gave sworn testimony that it was his belief that the IR£1,000 was paid to Cllr Creaven, no contemporaneous documents were furnished to support the existence of such a payment. Cllr Creaven agreed that he was at that time friendly with Mr Oliver Brooks, an employee of Mr Jones, and could not therefore exclude the possibility of having received a donation in that context, although he was at pains to emphasise that he had no recollection of such a donation.

18.03 Lodgements made to Cllr Creaven's bank account in the relevant period, although capable of including a payment of IR£1,000, did not particularly assist the Tribunal in its efforts to determine whether Cllr Creaven had received IR£1,000 from Mr Jones.

18.04 Cllr Creaven agreed that he had failed to recollect a contribution from Ballymore Homes when he first engaged with the Tribunal and indeed when speaking to the Fianna Fáil inquiry in 2000.

18.05 The Tribunal took the view that, having regard to the strength of Mr Jones' belief that the payment had been made, coupled with the fact of Cllr Creaven's friendship with Mr Oliver Brooks during the relevant time period, Mr Creaven probably did receive IR£1,000 from Mr Jones, most probably in or about November 1992. Cllr Creaven voted in favour of the Ballycullen rezoning and went on to support it again in October 1993. This payment was corrupt, and ought not to have been accepted by Cllr Creaven in circumstances where he was almost certainly aware of the association between its donor and the lands which were to be the subject of consideration by councillors in the course of their review of the Development Plan.

CLLR M. J. COSGRAVE (FG)

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR M. J. COSGRAVE BY MR JONES

19.01 Mr Jones advised the Tribunal that he paid a cheque of IR£1,000 to Cllr M. J. Cosgrave in the year ending December 1992, and that it was likely paid by his employee, Mr Oliver Brooks, using a Ballycullen Farms cheque. Cllr Cosgrave was a candidate in the Seanad Election of January 1993.

19.02 Cllr Cosgrave advised the Tribunal that he had no recollection of any such payment from Mr Jones. He agreed that his recollection could be faulty, as had proven to be the case when dealing with the Fianna Gael inquiry in 2000 and again when inquiries were initially made of him by the Tribunal when he had failed to recollect a contribution of IR£1,000 from Ballymore Homes to his 1993 Seanad election campaign.

19.03 Cllr Cosgrave had supported the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992 and voted against the Muldoon/Shatter motion. Despite the lack of any contemporaneous records or memory on his part, the Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Cosgrave was probably the recipient of IR£1,000 from Mr Jones, most likely given to him by Mr Oliver Brooks, whom he knew.

CLLR NED RYAN (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR RYAN BY MR JONES

20.01 Mr Jones advised the Tribunal that he paid IR£1,000 as a 'local election' contribution to Cllr Ryan in the year ending 31 December 1992. The Local Elections were held some 18 months previously.

20.02 Cllr Ryan told the Tribunal that this contribution of IR£1,000 was given to him by Mr Oliver Brooks in respect of the Seanad election in January/February 1993, in which he was a candidate.

20.03 Cllr Ryan said that the IR£1,000 donation was both unsolicited and unexpected, and was the largest donation received by him in 1992. He said that its payment was not connected to his support for the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands. Nevertheless, the payment was made and received at a time when Cllr Ryan would have known of the fact that the donor was associated with lands which were being considered for rezoning by the Council. Cllr Ryan's acceptance of the money in these circumstances was entirely inappropriate.

20.04 Cllr Ryan supported the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992, and voted against the Muldoon/Shatter motion.

CLLR ANNE ORMONDE (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR ORMONDE BY MR JONES

21.01 Documentation furnished to the Tribunal by a firm of accountants acting for Ballycullen Farms Ltd indicated that a payment of IR£1,000 had been made by Ballycullen Farms to Cllr Ormonde in or about May 1991. Cllr Ormonde was unable to recollect any such payment, and doubted that she had received such a payment. The Tribunal was unable to determine whether a donation was in fact made to her in May 1991.

21.02 Cllr Ormonde advised the Tribunal that she received a cheque for IR£1,000 from Mr Jones in November 1992, although her name did not appear on the schedule of recipients of such payments furnished to the Tribunal by Mr Jones. Cllr Ormonde believed that this cheque had been given to her by Mr Frank Brooks of Ballycullen Farms Ltd in connection with the general election in November 1992, in which she was a candidate, and in which Mr Brooks acted as her election agent. The Tribunal accepted Cllr Ormonde's evidence that such a sum was received by her from Mr Jones.

21.03 Mr Jones made a payment of IR£5,000 to Cllr Ormonde on 31 October 1996 in response to a request from her for a political donation in relation to the then forthcoming General Election. In March 1998, Ballycullen Farms Ltd discharged a bill amounting to IR£747.29 for the printing of posters used by Cllr Ormonde in the course of her general election campaign in the previous year and due to be paid by her.

21.04 Cllr Ormonde also received a political donation from Mr Jones in the sum of IR£400 on 13 May 1997, in addition to a further political donation of IR£500 on 31 May 1999.

21.05 Cllr Ormonde voted in favour of a material contravention motion at a meeting of South Dublin County Council on 12 February 1996, which provided for the construction of 600 houses on the Ballycullen lands.

CLLR SHEILA TERRY (PD)

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR TERRY BY MR JONES

22.01 Mr Jones identified Cllr Terry as a recipient of either IR£500 or IR£600 in the year ending 31 December 1992. Mr Jones told the Tribunal that he believed this donation had been made through either Mr Frank Brooks or Mr Oliver Brooks of Ballycullen Farms Ltd.

22.02 Cllr Terry had no recollection of receiving any such donation. She accepted, however, that she had been lobbied to support the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands, probably by Mr Dunlop and Mr Oliver Brooks, and Ballycullen's agricultural advisor, Mr Vincent Flynn, whom she knew. She also recalled visiting the lands with Mr Flynn, at Mr Oliver Brooks' request.

22.03 Mr Oliver Brooks stated that he had no recollection of making such a payment, but accepted in evidence that when the schedule was being compiled by him, together with Mr Frank Brooks and Mr Jones, Cllr Terry's name had been added to the list of recipients for the year ending December 1992 in the belief that such a payment had been made.

22.04 In the circumstances the Tribunal was unable to determine if, in fact, Cllr Terry received a sum of £500 or £600 from Mr Jones.

22.05 Cllr Terry supported the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992, and voted against the Muldoon/Shatter motion.

CLLR MICHAEL KEATING (FG)

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR KEATING BY MR JONES

23.01 Mr Jones advised the Tribunal that Cllr Keating received IR£500 from him in the year ending 31 December 1992. He told the Tribunal that he made this donation personally to Cllr Keating in Cllr Keating's home (which was close to his own) in 1992, having been advised to contact him by Mr Dunlop.

23.02 Cllr Keating maintained that he did not know Mr Jones and had no recollection of receiving any donation from him, although he conceded that a donation might have gone directly to his constituency organisation at the time of the November 1992 General Election, in which he was a candidate.

23.03 Cllr Keating supported the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992 and also voted against the Muldoon/Shatter motion.

23.04 The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Keating did receive IR£500 from Mr Jones in the year ending 31 December 1992, and that it was paid personally to him by Mr Jones in Cllr Keating's home. The Tribunal rejected Cllr Keating's denial of any knowledge of the payment and his statement that he did not know Mr Jones.

23.05 Mr Jones' schedule recorded a further election donation as having been made on 30 June 1996. Cllr Keating's belief was that all such donations would have been received by his constituency organization rather than himself personally, since his retirement from politics in 1995.

CLLR CHARLIE O'CONNOR (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR O'CONNOR BY MR JONES

24.01 Mr Jones advised the Tribunal that Cllr O'Connor was paid IR£500 in the year ending 31 December 1992. Cllr O'Connor acknowledged receiving this sum at the time of the November 1992 general election, in which he was a candidate. His recollection was that the cheque arrived by post.

24.02 Mr Jones told the Tribunal that the payment to Cllr O'Connor was intended as a donation towards Cllr O'Connor's General Election campaign. He described Cllr O'Connor as having been very helpful in relation to the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands. Cllr O'Connor had voted in favour of the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992 and voted against the Muldoon/Shatter motion.

24.03 Cllr O'Connor received further political donations from Mr Jones in 1996 and in 2002 of IR£500 and €650 respectively.

24.04 On 16 October 1992, Cllr O'Connor was present in Dublin County Council, when the assembled councillors 'agreed' to the Manager's recommendation that a proposal to include a specific objective to facilitate the development of offices at the Beechill location be adopted. On 2 November 1993, Cllr O'Connor was again present in Dublin County Council when the councillors ‘confirmed’ an amendment ‘to facilitate the development of offices’ on the Beechill lands without a vote.

24.05 Cllr O’Connor voted in favour of the material contravention motion in February 1996, facilitating the construction of 600 houses on the Ballycullen lands.

24.06 Cllr O’Connor’s acceptance of IR£500 from Mr Jones in late 1992 was, in the circumstances, entirely inappropriate.

CLLR MARIAN MCGENNIS (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR MCGENNIS BY MR JONES

25.01 Mr Jones advised the Tribunal that he paid IR£250 to Cllr McGennis in the year ending 31 December 1992, through his employee Mr Oliver Brooks, who knew Cllr McGennis.

25.02 Cllr McGennis told the Tribunal that she had no recollection of receiving a donation of IR£250 from Mr Jones or Mr Brooks, and doubted that she had done so. Cllr McGennis was certain that she had never met Mr Jones. She said she knew Mr Oliver Brooks, but not in 1992. Cllr McGennis was a candidate in the November 1992 General Election.

25.03 Mr Brooks told the Tribunal that he had a vague recollection of Cllr McGennis soliciting a contribution from him in relation to a fundraiser she was then organising.

25.04 The Tribunal is satisfied that Cllr McGennis received £250 from Mr Jones in 1992.

25.04 Cllr McGennis voted in favour of the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992, and against the Muldoon/Shatter motion.

CLLR JOHN HANNON (FF)

ALLEGED PAYMENT TO CLLR HANNON BY MR JONES

26.01 While Cllr Hannon’s name did not appear on Mr Jones’ schedule as having received a donation in the year ending 31 December 1992, Mr Jones told the Tribunal that he recollected a payment of IR£1,000 to Cllr Hannon at the time of the November 1992 General Election. This payment was made through Mr Frank Brooks.

26.02 Cllr Hannon accepted that the payment had been received by him, and stated that it was unsolicited. Mr Jones, while acknowledging that Cllr Hannon did not solicit a donation from him, stated that Cllr Hannon did seek his support for the then upcoming election, in return for his vote.

26.03 Cllr Hannon, together with Cllr Breda Cass, was instrumental in placing a motion before the County Council on 29 October 1992 seeking to restrict the residential density on the lands which were the subject of a residential rezoning motion proposed by Cllrs Lydon and Hand. The Hannon/Cass motion was passed unanimously, and when the Ballycullen lands were ultimately rezoned on 29 October 1992, they were rezoned with restricted residential density.

CLLR HANNON'S CLAIMED RECEIPT OF A CASH DONATION IN NOVEMBER
1992 FROM MR DUNLOP

26.04 Cllr Hannon told the Tribunal that in November 1992, during the course of the General Election campaign, he received an unsolicited payment in cash from Mr Dunlop. Cllr Hannon said that Mr Dunlop telephoned him and made an appointment to visit him in his home, without explaining the purpose of his visit. Mr Dunlop duly called to Cllr Hannon in his home and handed him an envelope in which there was either IR£500 or IR£1,000 in cash.

26.05 Mr Dunlop claimed to have no recollection of the payment, or of ever visiting Cllr Hannon in his home, or of even knowing his address.

26.06 Cllr Hannon said that he viewed the payment of either IR£500 or IR£1,000 from Mr Dunlop as a political donation, and, according to his letter to the Tribunal of 2 May 2000, it had 'nothing whatsoever to do with any vote I cast as a council member of Dublin Co. Council at any time'.

26.07 In spite of Mr Dunlop's denial of making any such payment to Cllr Hannon, the Tribunal was satisfied from Cllr Hannon's own evidence that he had received either IR£500 or IR£1,000 from Mr Dunlop in November 1992. While there was no evidence to suggest that the payment was in any way directly connected to Cllr Hannon's support within the County Council for any particular rezoning project, the Tribunal believed that Cllr Hannon must have known, at the time he received such a payment from Mr Dunlop, that this payment was given in the context of Mr Dunlop's ongoing involvement in a number of rezoning issues, albeit in the course of an election campaign. In those circumstances, the payment was corrupt.

26.08 Cllr Hannon voted in favour of the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992 and also voted against the Muldoon/Shatter motion.

26.09 Cllr Hannon voted in favour of the material contravention vote in 1996, in which the Ballycullen lands' zoning was altered to permit the construction of 600 houses.

26.10 Cllr Hannon also received IR£500 from Ballycullen Farms in 1999.

The payments by Mr Jones to Cllrs Brock (FF), Butler (FF), Creaven (FF), M. J. Cosgrave (FG), Ryan (FF), Keating (FG), O'Connor (FF), McGennis (FF), Hannon (FF), Fox (FF), McGrath (FF), Gallagher (FF) and Ormonde (FF)

27.01 In his narrative to the Tribunal on 7 November 2003, Mr Jones stated the following:

Throughout my business career I've made and continue to make personal and corporate contributions to political parties and to politicians/public representatives. Many of these were made over the extended period while I endeavoured, as described above, to secure the re-zoning of the Ballycullen lands. Subscriptions were made at times in response to requests, and I also made a number of donations to community and charitable organisations with which a local councillor may have been associated in their particular area. More generally however the subscriptions were for expenses for local or general elections. I enclose . . . a schedule setting out the subscriptions and donations made by me or on my behalf. They were made normally by cheque through BFL (Ballycullen Farms Ltd). At times the cash situation in BFL was such that I had to pay them out of my personal funds. Oliver and Frank Brooks made a number of subscriptions, which are included in the schedule, and either BFL or I reimbursed Oliver and Frank in respect of subscriptions they made.

27.02 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Jones and Messrs Frank and Oliver Brooks availed of the opportunity presented by the General Election in November 1992 to indicate to certain councillors their appreciation of what had been achieved by the vote of 29 October 1992, and to ensure that such councillors remained supportive into the future. While the Tribunal accepted Mr Jones' evidence that he contributed to the political campaigns of others in November 1992, (for example, Mr Tom Kitt TD, and Mr Séamus Brennan TD), and not just councillors who had voted on 29 October 1992, the Tribunal noted that all of the councillors who, the Tribunal was satisfied, received the election donations voted in favour of the Ballycullen rezoning. Mr Jones told the Tribunal that one of the factors he took into account in making the decision to donate to a councillor was whether or not the councillor had been supportive of the Ballycullen rezoning.

27.03 The Tribunal did not accept the evidence of Mr Jones that the majority of the payments made to councillors in November 1992 were in effect bona fide political donations referable to the 1991 Local Election—an election that had taken place almost 18 months previously. The Tribunal concluded that the primary objective of the November 1992 payments was to consolidate councillors' support for the Ballycullen rezoning. Mr Jones' evidence when responding to Tribunal Counsel's questions as to why he was so generous to Cllr Wright was particularly instructive in this regard, and the Tribunal considered it indicative of the mindset that prevailed at that time.⁴⁵ The Tribunal considered the making of the payments to have been wholly improper. Where donations were solicited by councillors, the response to such requests on the part of Mr Jones and the Ballycullen Farm's interest can best be described as a cynical exercise, designed to advance the rezoning project. While Mr Dunlop denied knowledge of the Jones/Ballycullen Farms/Brooks payments, and expressed surprise at them, the Tribunal was satisfied that to some extent Mr Jones' largesse in November 1992 was influenced by what he said he was told by Mr Dunlop when they met in 1991.

27.04 Mr Jones, in making such payments, engaged in a practice which in the circumstances was designed to compromise the disinterested performance of councillors' duties in the course of their obligation to make the Development Plan. Mr Jones' actions were therefore, in all the circumstances, corrupt.

27.05 Apart from specific instances, the Tribunal was unable to determine conclusively which councillors received donations directly from Mr Jones and which received them through the two Brooks brothers. The Tribunal was satisfied, however, that the councillors who received cheques through the Brooks brothers were left in no doubt as to the source of such payments. The Tribunal believed it to be inconceivable that these councillors did not appreciate and were not aware of the proximity in time between the 29 October 1992 vote on the Ballycullen lands and the receipt, approximately 3–4 weeks later, of donations from the promoter of that rezoning proposal.

27.06 The Tribunal was unable to determine the extent to which, if at all, any of these councillors proceeded to support the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands in 1993 as a direct consequence of receiving payment from, or on behalf of Mr Jones, in late 1992.

⁴⁵ Mr Jones paid IR£5,000 to Cllr G. V. Wright in November 1992.

27.07 The Tribunal was satisfied that the councillors' acceptance of money from, or on behalf of, Mr Jones, in circumstances in which they knew that the donor of the payments had an interest in lands which were, or were likely to be, the subject of a rezoning motion in which they, in their capacity as elected councillors, might, or would exercise their vote, was improper. If viewed objectively, the acceptance of such donations by a councillor from a landowner/developer who was seeking the rezoning of lands, an aspiration which for the most part, as found by the Tribunal in its consideration of the making of development plans, required to be voted on by individual councillors, served only to negate the required disinterested exercise by a councillor of that voting duty.

27.08 The acceptance of money in such circumstances, were it publicly known, could reasonably be expected to give rise in the minds of the members of the public to a perception that such payments influenced councillors in their decision-making role (including such influence as they might exercise over others). It is the view of the Tribunal that such a perception is likely to reduce the public's confidence in the integrity of the office of an elected councillor.

MR LIAM LAWLOR TD (FF)

PAYMENTS TO MR LAWLOR IN RELATION TO THE BALLYCULLEN/BEECHILL LANDS

28.01 A cheque in the sum of IR£5,000 was drawn against Mr Jones' personal bank account and paid to Mr Lawlor. Mr Jones described the payment as a political donation solicited by Mr Lawlor relating to the 1991 Local Elections, which were held in June 1991.

28.02 In a statement of information provided to the Tribunal by Mr Lawlor on 29 December 2000, (the 'B42' list) Mr Lawlor referred to a payment of IR£5,000 to him from the 'Jones Group Ltd', and categorised this, and other payments, as 'income, including political contributions, donations and consultancy fees being approximate and as recollected by Mr Lawlor in respect of the period 1973 to 2000'. In an affidavit sworn by Mr Lawlor on 8 April 2002, he again referred to a payment of IR£5,000 from Mr Jones, referring to it as a contribution to an electoral campaign of the 1990s. Mr Lawlor's belief in April 2002 was that the payment had been made to him in cash, and expended by him in the course of an election campaign.

28.03 When questioned on Day 620, Mr Jones stated that the IR£5,000 cheque given to Mr Lawlor had been drawn on his personal bank account and his belief was that the cheque had been made out to Mr Lawlor and not 'to cash'. Mr

Hussey recalled a payment of IR£5,000 made to Mr Lawlor in the period 1990/1991, and of being informed in early 1991 by Mr Jones that the payment in question was 'a political subscription'.

28.04 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Jones made a payment of IR£5,000 to Mr Lawlor in early to mid-1991, and that the payment was made by way of cash, or a cheque made payable to cash.

THE PAYMENT OF IR£7,500

28.05 Ballycullen Farms Ltd issued a cheque on 30 July 1991 to Comex Trading Corporation⁴³ in the sum of IR£7,500 in response to an invoice from Comex Trading Corporation dated 29 July 1991 and issued to the 'Jones Group'.

28.06 Local Elections (in which Mr Lawlor stood as a candidate and lost his seat) were held in June 1991.

28.07 In his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Jones said that subsequent to the first payment of IR£5,000 to Mr Lawlor, Mr Lawlor had again requested further donations from him. Mr Jones said that he had advised Mr Lawlor that he was not in a position to pay him more money by way of political donation, but that a further payment could be made on foot of an invoice to be provided by Mr Lawlor for services rendered regarding Ballycullen. It was on this basis that Mr Lawlor furnished the Comex invoice. The Comex invoice provided by Mr Lawlor to Mr Jones (and discovered by Mr Jones to the Tribunal) bore on its face an address in Surrey, UK. The Tribunal was satisfied that the invoice, although generated by Mr Lawlor, was bogus.

28.08 Mr Jones described the figure of IR£7,500 as having been a compromise figure agreed by the parties at the time, Mr Lawlor having requested more. Asked on Day 620 as to why he had required an invoice from Mr Lawlor by way of Comex or other invoice, Mr Jones had replied as follows: 'Well I thought he was, the donation for his status in the whole electoral scene at whatever, 12 and a half, was getting a bit excessive. And he had given me advice, I mean, there was no question or doubt about that.'

28.09 In an affidavit sworn by Mr Lawlor on 21 January 2002, Mr Lawlor stated that he was requested by Mr Jones to provide him with an invoice to cover a payment of IR£7,500. In that affidavit Mr Lawlor stated:

⁴³ See Exhibit 12.

With regard to paragraphs 23 and 25 of [the] affidavit, I was asked by Mr Jones to provide him with an invoice to cover the payment of IR£7,500 and I generated an invoice using Comex headed paper for this purpose. Once again I neither have nor had any interest whatsoever in Comex Trading Corporation, which was one of Mr [Michael] Quinn's companies . .

28.10 Comex was one of the entities identified by Mr Lawlor in May 2002 to the Tribunal as used by him for the purposes of creating invoices.

28.11 In a letter to Mr Lawlor on 5 September 2001, Mr Jones confirmed the payment to Mr Lawlor of IR£7,500 on foot of an invoice provided by him in the name of Comex Trading Corporation. In that letter, Mr Jones stated that the payment was for 'consultancy advice'.

PAYMENT OF IR£2,000

28.12 In documentation provided to the Tribunal by way of discovery by Mr Jones, a further payment of IR£2,000 to Mr Lawlor was identified. A cheque for IR£2,000 dated 16 November 1992⁴⁴ accompanied a letter of that date from Mr Jones to Mr Lawlor, which stated as follows: 'Enclosed herewith a contribution towards the campaign expenses. It's going to be tough going and the best of luck. Thank you also for all your good advice.'

28.13 Mr Lawlor advised the Tribunal that the cheque for IR£2,000 was lodged to a bank account in the name of Mrs Hazel Lawlor, Mr Lawlor's wife, on 19 November 1992.

PAYMENT OF IR£3,000

28.14 On 10 December 1992, Mr Jones wrote to Mr Lawlor, enclosing a cheque for IR£3,000.⁴⁵ The letter read: 'Dear Liam, Enclosed herewith contribution towards the Election expenses. Congratulations on your re-election.'

28.15 Mr Lawlor was re-elected a TD for the Dublin West constituency in the November 1992 General Election.

28.16 No information regarding this cheque was provided by Mr Lawlor.

⁴⁴ See Exhibit 13.

⁴⁵ See Exhibit 14.

28.17 A lodgement to Mrs Hazel Lawlor's AIB account on 14 December 1992 in the sum of IR£3,000 may represent the IR£3,000 paid to Mr Lawlor by Mr Jones on 10 December 1992.

28.18 In his evidence to the Tribunal, Mr Jones professed to have no recollection of these payments of IR£2,000 and IR£3,000, although he accepted that he had made them to Mr Lawlor.

PAYMENT OF IR£300

28.19 Mr Lawlor's discovery to the Tribunal on 4 May 2001 included a copy of a cheque for IR£300 drawn on Mr Jones' personal account and dated 20 May 1993. A letter from Mr Jones accompanying the cheque indicated that it was a contribution towards a fundraising event at the Royal Hospital in Kilmainham, Co. Dublin.

MR LAWLOR'S INVOLVEMENT WITH MR DUNLOP AND MR JONES IN THE CONTEXT OF THE BALLYCULLEN LANDS

28.20 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that it was his belief that he was retained by Mr Jones in February 1991 on the recommendation of Mr Lawlor. Mr Dunlop recalled Mr Jones alluding to advice he had received by Mr Lawlor when they met for the first time in February 1991, and he suspected that Mr Lawlor was at that time in receipt of money from Mr Jones.

28.21 Mr Lawlor was a councillor in Dublin County Council until he lost his seat in the Local Elections of June 1991. Mr Lawlor was also at that time, and subsequently for many years, a TD in the Dublin West constituency.

28.22 Throughout the period 1991 to 1993, there was considerable contact between Mr Lawlor and Mr Dunlop, and it was likely that at least some of this contact related specifically to the proposals to rezone the Ballycullen lands. Mr Dunlop saw Mr Lawlor as a person of influence within the Fianna Fáil group of councillors on Dublin County Council, notwithstanding the fact that Mr Lawlor had lost his Council seat in June 1991.

28.23 The Tribunal was satisfied that by 1990 an established relationship existed between Mr Jones and Mr Lawlor and that the underlying basis for that relationship was the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands. Although Mr Jones admitted to a prior casual acquaintance with Mr Lawlor through their mutual business interests, and believed Mr Lawlor's interest in the Ballycullen lands first manifested itself in 1990/91, when he had been advised by Mr Lawlor during a Fianna Fáil fundraising event to take on a business partner in relation to the project, the Tribunal was satisfied that in the years prior to 1990 Mr Lawlor had direct involvement in the efforts then being made to change the zoning status of the lands in question. Documents discovered by Mr Jones revealed that as far back as January 1988, Mr Jones' planner, Mr O'Malley, was making reference to Mr Lawlor's engagement with County Council officials and others in relation to the lands. Mr Lawlor was at that time himself an elected councillor.

28.24 Mr Jones and Mr Lawlor were known to each other from the 1980s, and Mr Lawlor provided advice to Mr Jones from the late 1980s in relation to, particularly, the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands. Mr Jones told the Tribunal that in 1990/91, he was advised by Mr Lawlor to take on a development partner with 'credibility' in relation to the Ballycullen lands. Mr Lawlor introduced Mr Jones to Mr Joe Tiernan, an established developer, as a partner with 'credibility'. Although negotiations took place between Mr Jones and Mr Tiernan, they did not enter into an agreement. Sums totalling IR£17,800⁴⁹ were paid to Mr Lawlor either directly or indirectly, by Mr Jones and/or Ballycullen Farms Ltd in the period 1990–93, and were the subject of inquiry by the Tribunal.

28.25 The Tribunal was satisfied that Mr Lawlor's interest in assisting Mr Jones' efforts in relation to the zoning status of the lands continued and that he played an active role in that regard up to October 1992 when the lands were rezoned.

28.26 Evidence to the Tribunal left it in no doubt but that Mr Lawlor was a valued advisor to Mr Jones during the currency of the Ballycullen rezoning campaign. For example, Mr Lawlor met with Mr Jones on 17 September 1992, some seven weeks prior to the Ballycullen rezoning vote, and on the same day he faxed a letter providing detailed advice to Mr Jones as to the steps to be taken to progress the Ballycullen rezoning project.

28.27 It was particularly in the context of this involvement that the four payments to Mr Lawlor by Mr Jones, of IR£5,000 (early 1991), IR£7,500 (July 1991), IR£2,000 (November 1992), and IR£3,000 (December 1992) were considered by the Tribunal.

28.28 The Tribunal was satisfied that the primary reason for the four payments to Mr Lawlor was recognition of the assistance provided by Mr Lawlor to Mr Jones in his capacity as an elected public representative. While Mr Jones admitted as much in relation to the July 1991 payment to Comex, there was every indication that the rationale behind the other payments was similar, notwithstanding that the IR£5,000 was paid prior to the then expected Local Election of June 1991, and the IR£2,000 and IR£3,000 were paid immediately before and after the 1992 General Election. In correspondence with Mr Lawlor on 16 November 1992, Mr Jones himself connected the IR£2,000 contribution to the 'good advice' received from Mr Lawlor, to assist Mr Jones' rezoning endeavours.

28.29 None of the four payments to Mr Lawlor bore the hallmarks of legitimate political donations. In relation to the first two payments, the Tribunal was satisfied that they were paid following a request by Mr Lawlor. The request for, and payment to, Mr Lawlor of IR£5,000 in early 1991, at a time when Mr Lawlor was a sitting councillor, and at a time when he was fully apprised of Mr Jones' then and future intentions regarding the Ballycullen lands, was wrong and corrupt. These findings apply equally to the IR£7,500 Comex payment. The fact that Mr Lawlor was not a councillor at the time he received the IR£7,500 at the end of July 1991 did not, in the view of the Tribunal, diminish this finding in any way. The arrangement arrived at by Mr Jones and Mr Lawlor as to how this payment could be facilitated was, in the view of the Tribunal, evidence of the fact that neither Mr Jones nor Mr Lawlor viewed this payment as anything other than a payment made for services rendered by Mr Lawlor.

28.30 The Tribunal was satisfied that the said payments amounting to IR£17,500 made by Mr Jones to Mr Lawlor in 1991/2, having regard to the fact that Mr Lawlor was at the material times an elected representative (including an elected councillor at the time of the first payment), and in that capacity in a position to exercise his vote and to influence fellow councillors, up to June 1991, and thereafter continue to exercise influence over councillors in his capacity as a TD, were corrupt.

CLLR PAT RABBITTE (DL)

29.01 Evidence to the Tribunal suggested that Cllr Rabbitte was lobbied by both Mr Dunlop and Mr Jones for his support for the rezoning of the Ballycullen/Beechill lands, although Cllr Rabbitte denied that Mr Dunlop lobbied him, and denied being aware that Mr Dunlop was associated with the Ballycullen lands. He voted in favour of the motion to rezone the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992 but did not attend the confirmation meeting on 28 October 1993. In this period, Cllr Rabbitte was the local Democratic Left councillor in the Tallaght area, the area in which the lands were situated, and a TD for Dublin South West.

29.02 Cllr Rabbitte was one of three Democratic Left councillors who had voted in favour of the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands on 29 October 1992. Prior to voting on that motion, Cllr Rabbitte had been lobbied by Mr Frank Brooks and Mr Oliver Brooks of Ballycullen Farms, and had, at their invitation, viewed the lands. The Brooks brothers had apprised him of the non-viability of the lands as a working farm, having regard to their location in a built-up urban area.

29.03 Cllr Rabbitte told the Tribunal that a discussion with his party colleagues prior to the vote on 29 October 1992 would have taken place as a matter of routine.

29.04 Cllr Rabbitte did not attend the special meeting of Dublin County Council on 28 October 1993 when the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands was confirmed, because of a commitment in Dáil Eireann. However, Cllr Rabbitte's two party colleagues, Cllrs Billane and Tipping voted to reverse the Ballycullen rezoning for which they had voted a year previously.

29.05 Cllr Rabbitte explained Cllrs Billane's and Tipping's change of view in relation to the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands by reference to a decision of Democratic Left to withdraw support for that rezoning. This decision was taken following media reports suggesting that the voting by some councillors on the rezoning of lands in the course of the review of the Dublin County Development Plan may have been improper or questionable. It also followed a discussion between Cllr Rabbitte and the journalist Mr Frank McDonald in relation to, amongst other issues, the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands in 1992.

29.06 Mr Dunlop in his evidence stated that, following the calling of the general election in early November 1992, he visited Cllr Rabbitte at his home and gave him a sum of IR£3,000 in cash as a political donation.⁴⁷ Mr Dunlop stated that he advised Mr Rabbitte that the donation was being made on behalf of a small number of Mr Dunlop's clients. Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that he was certain that he referred to the name of Mr Jones and Cllr Rabbitte's support for Ballycullen at the time of making the donation. Mr Dunlop first made reference to his having mentioned Mr Jones' name to Mr Rabbitte in the course of his evidence to the Tribunal on Day 609. This issue had not been referred to in his earlier evidence to the Tribunal, nor in prior statements made to the Tribunal in relation to a payment to Cllr Rabbitte.

⁴⁷ On Day 148, Cllr Rabbitte's name had appeared on Mr Dunlop's '1992' list (of recipients of election contributions) at no 23, as a recipient of IR£3,000 cash, with a note stating that the sum had been later returned to him by means of a cheque.

29.07 Mr Dunlop maintained that in his selection of Cllr Rabbitte as a recipient of election funds, he was in reality engaged in ‘a little bit of forward thinking’, having regard to the possibility that Cllr Rabbitte might be involved in a government. In fact Cllr Rabbitte did not become a member of the government that was elected following the 1992 General Election. Cllr Rabbitte was appointed a Minister of State in the ‘Rainbow’ coalition government that was established on 15 December 1994.

29.08 Mr Dunlop claimed that Cllr Rabbitte readily accepted the donation. Mr Dunlop was certain that the payment constituted a legitimate political donation and did not carry with it any suggestion of a bribe, nor was it in any way motivated by any improper purpose. However, Mr Dunlop stated he would not have made the donation if Cllr Rabbitte had not voted in favour of the rezoning of the Ballycullen lands.

29.09 Cllr Rabbitte acknowledged that he received a cash political donation from Mr Dunlop in his home in November 1992, and that it was unsolicited. However he was certain that the amount was IR£2,000, and not IR£3,000, as claimed by Mr Dunlop. A party colleague of Cllr Rabbitte, Cllr Tipping, recalled being informed at the time that Mr Dunlop’s payment to Cllr Rabbitte was IR£2,000.

29.10 In the course of his sworn evidence, Mr Dunlop acknowledged that, although he believed that the sum paid to Cllr Rabbitte in November 1992 was IR£3,000, it was possible that the sum was IR£2,000.

29.11 In the course of a private interview on 11 May 2000, Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal: ‘I gave it to him, I have said to you IR£3,000, unless he provides the cheque and he says it was for IR£2,000. I would believe it then that it was for IR£2,000.’

29.12 Cllr Rabbitte told the Tribunal that Mr Dunlop, having called to his home, stated to him that he wished to make a small donation to him on behalf of a small number of clients. Questioned by the Tribunal as to how he had interpreted this statement, Cllr Rabbitte said that the issue as to the identity of a small number of clients was not pursued at the time. Cllr Rabbitte said that he almost immediately told Mr Dunlop that the question as to whether or not the donation could be accepted would have to be considered by the Democratic Left party, which had a procedure in place for dealing with such issues.

29.13 Cllr Rabbitte said that the encounter between himself and Mr Dunlop lasted approximately half an hour. In the course of that meeting, Mr Dunlop placed an envelope on Cllr Rabbitte's desk. Cllr Rabbitte said he only checked the content of the envelope and became aware of the amount of money involved after Mr Dunlop had left his house. Cllr Rabbitte said that in the course of their meeting, they discussed the election campaign, and particularly the question of Fianna Fáil's likely loss of seats and the Labour Party's likely gain of seats. Mr Dunlop advised Cllr Rabbitte at the meeting that he had been hastily recruited by Fianna Fáil to work as an election coordinator in its headquarters.

29.14 Cllr Rabbitte called into question Mr Dunlop's suggestion that his diary entry on 11 November 1992 (and which read 'PR at home') was a reference to their meeting in his home. Cllr Rabbitte accepted that there was some contact between himself and Mr Dunlop around this time, but remained certain that Mr Dunlop's visit to his home was unexpected. A record of telephone contact with Mr Dunlop's office for 10 November 1992 suggested that Cllr Rabbitte telephoned Mr Dunlop's office on that date.

29.15 Following the donation, a discussion was held between Cllr Rabbitte and his director of elections and other Democratic Left party colleagues, at which the decision was made to return the IR£2,000 donation to Mr Dunlop. A cheque to Mr Dunlop was duly dispatched, drawn on the Democratic Left party bank account. Mr Dunlop acknowledged receiving the cheque for IR£2,000.

29.16 Cllr Rabbitte told the Tribunal that the decision of his party to return the money to Mr Dunlop was made on his recommendation. Cllr Rabbitte explained that the basis for the decision was that it was perceived by himself and by his party that the payment was inappropriate in circumstances in which both he and the other Democratic Left councillors were required to vote in the context of the review of the Dublin County Development Plan on matters in which Mr Dunlop had an interest.

29.17 Cllr Rabbitte said that he telephoned Mr Dunlop prior to returning the cheque in order to explain the reasons why it was being returned. Cllr Rabbitte said that the decision to return the IR£2,000 donated by Mr Dunlop in the form of a cheque, rather than physically returning the cash itself, was taken for reasons of practicality. Cllr Tipping told the Tribunal that the decision to return the donation in the form of a cheque was made so as to ensure that there would be a record of the donation and its return, and this was done on Cllr Rabbitte's recommendation.

29.18 Cllr Rabbitte returned the cheque with a letter which read as follows:

Dear Frank,

I refer to our discussion at the weekend and now enclose cheque as promised. I repeat that no offence is intended and I hope you will understand that. The decision was aimed at drawing a distinction between decisions pending and ones already decided [in] the normal way before the Election was called.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONCLUSIONS

29.19 As a matter of probability, having regard to the entry in Mr Dunlop's diary, the Tribunal concluded that Mr Dunlop's visit to Cllr Rabbitte's home took place on 11 November 1992. The Tribunal accepted the evidence of Cllr Rabbitte to the effect that the sum given to him by Mr Dunlop in his home in November 1992 was IR£2,000. It was satisfied that the sum was received by Cllr Rabbitte as a political donation, and that it was returned to Mr Dunlop in the form of a cheque drawn on the account of the Democratic Left party in December 1992, for the reasons stated. The Tribunal was satisfied to accept as a fact that the cash sum offered to Cllr Rabbitte by Mr Dunlop was IR£2,000, and not IR£3,000 having regard in particular to Cllr Rabbitte's evidence and that the fact that the cheque sent to Mr Dunlop returning the funds was for an amount of IR£2,000. The Tribunal also took account of the concession which Mr Dunlop himself made in the course of his private interview on 11 May 2000.

29.20 Cllr Rabbitte, having been paid IR£2,000 in cash by way of a political donation by Mr Dunlop in November 1992 at the time of the 1992 General Election, subsequently, through the Democratic Left party returned this donation (by way of cheque) to Mr Dunlop. The Tribunal was satisfied that Cllr Rabbitte and his Democratic Left colleagues returned the donation because of their appreciation of the inappropriateness of retaining it, in circumstances where Cllr Rabbitte and his colleagues were, as councillors, engaged in the making of a Development Plan for Dublin County Council and in circumstances where they were aware of Mr Dunlop's active involvement as a lobbyist for landowners engaged in pursuing land rezonings.

THE BROWN THOMAS MEETING

29.21 Mr Dunlop and Cllr Rabbitte agreed that they met by chance in Brown Thomas in Grafton Street in Dublin in 1997 or 1998, following the establishment of the Tribunal. The two men agreed that in the course of their brief discussion, reference was made to the Tribunal. Mr Dunlop claimed that Cllr Rabbitte, referring to the Tribunal and its inquiries, had stated to him that he 'presumed that that matter between us would never arise', which Mr Dunlop understood to be a reference by Cllr Rabbitte to the payment and return of the IR£2,000.

29.22 Cllr Rabbitte rejected Mr Dunlop's evidence on this issue. Cllr Rabbitte acknowledged, however, that shortly before this chance encounter, Mr Dunlop had telephoned him to enquire if Cllr Rabbitte recalled the exact amount of what Mr Dunlop referred to in the course of the telephone call as 'a certain non-donation', which Cllr Rabbitte understood to be a reference to the payment to him of IR£2,000 and its return to Mr Dunlop, in 1992.

29.23 Cllr Rabbitte advised the Tribunal that his reason for not referring to the IR£2,000 payment when providing information to the Tribunal by way of letter on 31 January 2000, was his belief that the said payment did not constitute a donation to him, as it had been returned to Mr Dunlop.

29.24 The Tribunal was satisfied that in their chance encounter in Brown Thomas in 1997 or 1998, following the establishment of the Tribunal, Cllr Rabbitte had not stated to Mr Dunlop, as alleged by Mr Dunlop, that he 'presumed that that matter between us would never arise' in the Tribunal. The Tribunal was satisfied that at no time did Cllr Rabbitte inappropriately conceal reference to the payment of IR£2,000 and its return.

29.25 This decision was both commendable and correct.

DRAFT ACTION PLAN

(SUBMITTED TO MR. CHRIS JONES, FRIDAY, 30TH AUGUST, 1991)

1. CONTEXT:

Previous efforts vis-a-vis planning applications and re-zoning motions failed. The reasons for this failure are now irrelevant.

It is now necessary to work within the parameters and the specific timeframe of the public display of the County Dublin Draft Development Plan. The public display begins in a variety of locations throughout the county on Monday next, 2nd September, and will last for a full three months until Tuesday, 3rd December, 1991 (see attached public notice).

2. PROCEDURE:

Any individual or group is entitled to comment on, or make a submission to the County Council regarding specific provisions of the Draft Plan. Members of the public are also entitled to request a hearing and their views will be recorded by two Council officials who will incorporate such views into the officials' report to the elected members. Such comments and submissions are collated and filed until the display period has been completed. Each elected member is circulated with a copy of the maps used for the public display, together with copies of the comments and submissions made. A schedule of special meetings of the Council, specifically to consider the Plan, will be organised, probably beginning in mid-January, 1992. At those meetings each map, and the relevant comments and submissions, will be discussed in full, beginning with the North of the County and working South. The final decisions on the submissions will not be taken at these meetings but will be deferred to a further schedule of meetings, probably in mid-1992.

Tribunal Ref : BALLYCULLEN/BEECHILL BRIEF

Tribunal Ref : CJ.BALLYCULLEN 1.16

When the elected members have finally considered and voted on all maps and submissions the County Council will display the agreed version of the Plan in public, for one month only. This display is for information only. Any comments from the public, be it individuals or groups, are not germane to the content of the Plan. They are regarded merely as observations.

When this month-long display has been concluded the Draft Plan is then officially promulgated as the Development Plan for County Dublin for a five year period.

3. Given the details outlined in paragraph 2 above it is now imperative to act as follows:

(a) SUBMISSION:

A detailed, fully integrated plan comprising:

- Business Park
- Residential
- Leisure (possible Golf Course)

must now be prepared by the architects, Murray O'Laoighre, which will form the basis of the submission by Mr. Jones to the Draft Development Plan display.

It is important to establish conclusively that no Environmental Impact Study is required until such time as an actual Planning Application is being made. We do not envisage a Planning Application being made until such time as we consider it of benefit in our interface with both planners and elected members.

TIMESCALE: IMMEDIATE
(see attached schedule of action)

RESPONSIBILITY: M U R R A Y
O'LAOGHAIRE

(B) PUBLIC AFFAIRS PROGRAMME:

Given the previous history of interaction with both planners and elected members vis-a-vis the Ballycullen lands we propose an intensive public affairs programme during the Public Display period but not before the finally agreed submission is ready. Copies of the submission, together with detailed maps in respect of our proposals will be made available to those elected members with whom we will have contact. It is vitally important that this contact is unified and cohesive. We recommend that all contact, unless otherwise required, be made by Frank Dunlop. This is a matter for discussion with Mr. Jones.

The most important points of contact relate to the new electoral County of South Dublin. There are 26 elected members in this electoral area. Within reason, and where judged appropriate, each one will have to be contacted and given a briefing as to what is proposed.

CHAPTER FIVE – THE PYE LANDS MODULE

INTRODUCTION

1.01 In this module, the Tribunal examined the zoning and planning history of the Pye lands in the 1980s and 1990s. The Tribunal considered the involvement of Mr Dunlop in relation to the project to rezone the Pye lands, and the involvement of certain councillors in that process. In particular, it considered the allegations made by Mr Dunlop that he paid sums totalling IR£4,000 to three named councillors (Cllrs Tom Hand, Donal Lydon and Tony Fox) in return for their support of the rezoning of the lands.

1.02 The Pye lands were located in Dundrum in South Co. Dublin, close to Dundrum Village Centre. The lands extended southwards from Dundrum Cross to lands which were in the ownership of Power Supermarkets Ltd in 1992 (the Crazy Prices lands). The lands constituted in effect what is today the Dundrum Town Centre.

1.03 In the 1960s and 1970s, the Pye lands were in the ownership of Pye Ireland Ltd, which operated a manufacturing plant on a portion of the lands. In the 1970s, the commercial viability of the company's manufacturing operations failed, so that by approximately 1980 Pye's major asset, apart from rental income, consisted of its lands.

1.04 Mr Aidan Kelly was the Managing Director of Pye Ireland Ltd from approximately 1982, and from about that time Mr Kelly concentrated on Pye's ambition to enhance the value of its land holding, which necessarily involved the rezoning of some of those lands.

1.05 By the early 1970s, a portion of the Pye lands had been transferred into the ownership of Albafare Ltd, a wholly owned subsidiary of Power Supermarkets Ltd (Crazy Prices). In 1984, a further portion of lands was transferred to this company. The ownership of Albafare was unconnected to Mr Kelly/Pye, although there was some collaboration subsequently between Mr Kelly and Power Supermarkets Ltd/Crazy Prices in relation to zoning and planning permission issues.

1.06 In 1988 Pye Ireland (Mr Kelly) reached agreement with Donlay Ltd (a company owned and controlled by Mr Joseph Layden and Professor Barry O'Donnell), as a result of which ownership of the then remaining Pye owned lands was transferred to a number of legal entities, Cabriole Construction Ltd (Cabriole), Dundrum Property Investment Company Ltd (DPIC), Dalehall Ltd (Dalehall) and Prisdine Construction Ltd (Prisdine).

1.07 The landholdings owned by Cabriole and Prisdine were divided geographically by the then-proposed Dundrum bypass, with the Cabriole lands located to the east of the proposed bypass and the Prisdine lands located to its west. The Dundrum bypass was subsequently constructed.

1.08 The agreements entered into from about 1988 between Pye/Mr Kelly and Mr Layden and Professor O'Donnell created, in effect, a joint venture-type arrangement which had as its main aim the enhancement of the value of what remained of the Pye lands, by bringing about the zoning and planning changes necessary for this purpose. Mr Layden, in evidence, described the objectives as follows:

- 1) To obtain planning permission for the Prisdine lands (zoned A (residential) in the 1983 Plan),
- 2) To have the Cabriole lands rezoned for retail development,
- 3) To enter into a joint venture agreement with Power Supermarket,
- 4) To enhance the quality of the units in the old Pye buildings.

1.09 As a result of the agreement negotiated in 1988, from that time until November 1991 (when the joint venture arrangement ended), Mr Kelly and Mr Layden spearheaded the plans to develop the Pye lands.

THE PLANNING AND ZONING HISTORY OF THE LANDS TO MAY 1991

1.10 In the period leading up to the formulation of the 1983 Dublin County Development Plan, various uses for the Pye lands were proposed, both by Mr Kelly and by the County Council. The 1983 Dublin County Development Plan zoned the Pye lands, partly A (residential), partly E (industrial) and partly C1¹ (limited commercial development). These zonings did not provide for any further retail development, and Mr Kelly considered retail development to be vital for the commercial viability of the lands.

1.11 In 1988 Mr Kelly's and Mr Layden's efforts were concentrated on developing the Prisdine lands (zoned A in the 1983 Plan). In a 'without prejudice' letter from Dublin County Council to Mr Kelly on 30 September 1988, it was stated that it was unlikely that the Council would have any objection to the residential development being proposed for these lands, but Mr Kelly was advised that the proposal for the commercial development of the lands constituted a material contravention of the 1983 Dublin County Development Plan, and as such would require the sanction of the councillors.

1.12 In 1989 a planning application for residential development on the Prisdine lands was lodged with Dublin County Council, in the name of Donlay Ltd. Planning permission for 86 houses (with conditions) was duly granted on 28 July 1989 and upheld on appeal.² The matter of a material contravention to obtain the sanction of the councillors for the commercial development for the Prisdine lands was not pursued, largely, it appeared, because of advice given by Kiaran O'Malley & Co (a firm of planning consultants retained by Donlay Ltd) to Mr Kelly and Mr Layden to have the Pye lands 'rezoned in the imminent Review', a procedure which would remove the 'issue of principle in relation to the retail development', thus allowing for a planning permission application to be made for a substantial retail component on the lands.

1.13 While the discussions between Mr Kelly and County Council officials were ongoing in 1988/9, Dublin County Council had embarked upon its review of the 1983 Development Plan. In 1990, the Draft Plan for the Review of the 1983 Plan was produced by the County Council. This 1990 Draft Plan (Map 23) showed the Pye lands retaining their 1983 zoning, being partly A, partly E, and partly C1.³ The C1 zoning reflected the Crazy Prices supermarket development which then existed on those lands. At a special meeting of the County Council on 10 May 1990, the plans for the Pye lands were 'noted'.

1.14 Following upon the publication of the 1990 Draft Plan, Kiaran O'Malley & Co lodged a submission with the County Council on 13 November 1990 in respect of the Pye/Cabriole lands east of Dundrum bypass seeking C (town/district centre facilities) zoning for those lands. This submission was rejected by the County Council at that time. However, the opportunity to seek a change of zoning for the lands arose in early 1991 when members of the County Council were afforded the opportunity to submit motions in advance of the Draft Plan being placed on its first statutory public display.

1.15 On 17 January 1991, Cllrs Paddy Hickey and Olivia Mitchell lodged a motion proposing:

That Dublin County Council hereby resolves that lands at Pye lands, Sandyford Road, Dundrum, Dublin 16 outlined in red on the attached map, comprising about fifteen acres and which has been signed for identification purposes by the proposer and seconder of this motion, be zoned for 'C' ('to protect, provide for and/or improve town/district centre facilities') in the Draft Review of the County Dublin Development Plan.⁴

² These lands were never the subject of any rezoning application.

³ A portion of the lands north of Dundrum village was zoned C2.

⁴ A C zoning would allow Mr Kelly and Mr Layden to build major retail outlets on the lands.

1.16 The lands identified in this motion were largely in the ownership of Cabriole and also included the Crazy Prices site to the south of the Pye lands, and a small portion of land owned by Albafare.

THE CIRCUMSTANCES WHICH LED TO THE LODGING OF THE HICKEY/MITCHELL MOTION

1.17 Mr Layden testified that at his and Mr Kelly's behest, Cllrs Hickey and Mitchell agreed to propose the motion. Mr Layden stated that the motion had cross-party (Fianna Fáil/Fine Gael) support. As of 1991 Mr Kelly understood that if a councillor signed a motion, more often than not he or she would have the support of his or her own party colleagues.

1.18 On 30 January 1991, Mr Layden wrote to the two councillors thanking them for their support and providing details of the proposed development of the lands that were the subject of the motion. As of 19 February 1991, Mr Kelly and Mr Layden, in a meeting with representatives of Quinnsnorth (Crazy Prices) supermarket, were in a position to advise that 'an application for rezoning of the entire site (the Cabriole lands) is now being considered by Dublin Co. Co. Cabriole stated that the rezoning proposal had the backing of both Fianna Fáil and Fine Gael councillors.' They also advised that 'a successful change of zoning will smooth the path of the application through the planning process.'

1.19 The note of this meeting also documented (although crossed out) a reference that the Labour Party were 'likely to agree to abstain' on the vote on the motion. Mr Layden acknowledged, however, that on the day of the vote (31 May 1991) the Labour Party councillors voted against the motion.

1.20 At a special meeting of Dublin County Council held on 31 May 1991, the Hickey/Mitchell motion was passed by a large majority (26 for and 3 against) of councillors, despite the objection of the County Manager, who advised the councillors that the proposed zoning would have an adverse effect on the old Dundrum village.

1.21 Following the successful passing of this motion, the Draft Development Plan was placed on its first statutory public display between September and December 1991, and the Pye lands were shown zoned C (including the Crazy Prices portion), and a further portion of the Pye lands in the ownership of Cabriole was zoned E (as it had been in the 1983 Plan). Mr Kelly, in evidence, described himself as being well satisfied by the outcome of the 31 May 1991 vote.

THE DISSOLUTION OF MR KELLY'S AND MR LAYDEN'S JOINT VENTURE/PARTNERSHIP

1.22 In late 1991, the joint venture-type arrangement between Mr Kelly and Mr Layden came to an end, and the two went their separate ways. Mr Layden/Professor O'Donnell, through their companies, became the owners of the (Prisdine) lands west of the Dundrum bypass, while Mr Kelly retained ownership of the remaining lands (including the Cabriole lands east of the proposed bypass). Mr Layden's and Professor O'Donnell's company Donlay Ltd also retained a right of way over the Kelly/Cabriole lands, and remained under an obligation⁵ to construct a link road over these lands to the Dundrum bypass.

1.23 Donlay took a charge over the Pye lands owned by Mr Kelly's companies in respect of monies then owed to Donlay.

1.24 Notwithstanding the parting of the ways of Mr Kelly and Mr Layden, the latter continued to play a role in relation to the Cabriole/Pye lands in that he had agreed in mid-1991 to assist on a fee-paying basis in whatever planning application would be made by Cabriole and Crazy Prices in regard to the lands which had been zoned C on 31 May 1991. Furthermore, the evidence established that Mr Layden on occasions also continued to play a role in relation to the continued efforts to secure a change of zoning for the Pye lands, particularly in the years 1993 to 1995. Mr Layden testified that his continued involvement in the rezoning efforts was motivated by the fact that his company Donlay was owed money by Mr Kelly, secured by way of a charge over the Pye lands then in Mr Kelly's ownership. It was therefore in Donlay's interest to underpin the value of the lands.

THE EVENTS LEADING TO THE SPECIAL MEETING OF 16 OCTOBER 1992

1.25 In the course of the September to December 1991 display period, Kieran O'Malley & Co lodged a submission supporting the C and E zonings in the Draft Plan, while a submission from the Labour Party opposed the C zoning and sought instead an A zoning, together with provision for a hotel and tourism facility for the lands.

1.26 During the months of April and May 1992, and notwithstanding her previous support for a C retail zoning for the Pye lands, what can best be described as a plethora of motions was lodged by Cllr Olivia Mitchell with the County Council, the majority of which had adverse implications, either directly or indirectly, for the zoning status of the Pye lands as then displayed on the Draft

⁵ An obligation imposed by the planning permission granted in 1989.

Plan. Likewise, Cllr Eithne Fitzgerald submitted motions which equally had adverse implications for Mr Kelly's zoning ambitions for his lands. Throughout the summer months Cllrs Mitchell and Fitzgerald met and corresponded with Mr Kelly in relation to the lands. By 3 September 1992 it was evident that the proposals being put forward by the two councillors for the Pye lands, individually and jointly, were poles apart from Mr Kelly's plan for a town/district centre. Thus, by late September 1992 efforts on the part of Mr Kelly and the said councillors to reach a compromise position came to naught.

1.27 On 3 September 1992 a joint motion signed by Cllrs Mitchell and Fitzgerald proposed that the zoning of the Pye lands revert to the 1983 Development Plan position, namely a zoning of A, E, and C1. In addition, this motion proposed that a specific objective be written into the Draft Written Statement in relation to the Pye lands, namely that it be County Council policy to encourage and promote the development of the area for tourism-related, recreational and/or light industrial uses. Cllrs Mitchell and Fitzgerald envisaged that these zonings would be complementary to the commercial function of the existing village core at Dundrum. If passed, the result of this motion would be to remove the C zoning that had been achieved on 31 May 1991.

1.28 The Tribunal was satisfied that the Mitchell/Fitzgerald motion, together with the correspondence sent by Cllr Mitchell to Mr Kelly on 4 September 1992, in all probability led to the submission of a motion in the names of Cllrs Hand and Lydon, in advance of the special meeting of the Council of 16 October 1992.

1.29 Mr Layden in effect advised the Tribunal that he had no involvement in procuring the motion signed by Cllrs Lydon and Hand. Mr Layden stated that he was not asked by Mr Kelly in 1992 to become involved in lobbying councillors in relation to this motion.

1.30 There was evidence before the Tribunal, however, of Mr Layden being urged, in a letter from Mr O'Malley (the planning consultant) on 29 April 1992, to renew contacts with elected representatives. Mr O'Malley's letter stated:

We understand that the Council is considering representations countrywide so it might be very appropriate if you were to have a word with your own supporters to emphasise your support for the proposed zoning naturally, and to counter any objections that have been filed, and I'm sure there are several, by other competing interests, such as local residents, other retailers, etc., etc.

In other words it'd be well worthwhile renewing contact with your local elected representatives at this stage and maintaining them perhaps for most of 1992.

1.31 The Tribunal was satisfied that in the months leading to the special meeting of 16 October 1992, Mr Kelly certainly canvassed councillors in support of his plans for the lands and in support of a compromise position he was suggesting, in light of the various motions which had been lodged individually and jointly by Cllrs Mitchell and Fitzgerald.

1.32 Mr Kelly retained the services of Mr Frank Dunlop in the period from 28 September to 16 October 1992 (the date of the special meeting at which the zoning of the Pye lands was considered).

1.33 The zoning of the Pye lands was considered at a meeting of Dublin County Council held on 16 October 1992. Among the issues for consideration, in addition to the motions which had been submitted by Cllrs Mitchell and Fitzgerald individually and jointly, was the motion signed by Cllrs Lydon and Hand proposing a C zoning for the majority of the Pye lands, and an E zoning for a portion of the lands, which would also allow for tourism and recreational developments. If passed, this motion would have effectively copper-fastened the zoning status achieved for the Pye lands at the meeting of 31 May 1991.

THE SPECIAL MEETING OF 16 OCTOBER 1992

1.34 Mr Kelly's objective in this regard was not realised. His plans were met with resistance, both from County Council officials and from Cllrs Mitchell and Fitzgerald by way of the motions which had been submitted by them in the period leading up to the special meeting of 16 October 1992. In the course of that special meeting, Cllr Mitchell's proposal to adopt a C2 zoning for Dundrum village, with the proviso that such zoning would include the potential for major retail development for the village, was put to a vote, and was passed unanimously. Following the withdrawal by Cllr Fitzgerald of a motion she had submitted, which related in part to the Pye lands, the next motion put to a vote was the Mitchell/Fitzgerald motion that had been lodged on 3 September 1992, and which proposed the retention of the 1983 Development Plan zoning for the lands. This motion was passed, with 30 councillors voting in favour, 23 against and 1 abstention. Included in the list of councillors voting against this motion were Cllrs Lydon, Hand and Fox. As a consequence of the success of the Mitchell/Fitzgerald motion, the Hand/Lydon motion (which proposed the retention of the C zoning on the lands with a portion to be zoned E) fell.

1.35 The passing of the Mitchell/Fitzgerald motion resulted in the Pye lands reverting to their 1983 zoning of A, E and C1, so that for all intents and purposes, the zoning which had been achieved by Mr Kelly in May of 1991, was undone.

1.36 In June 1993, in the wake of the success of the Mitchell/Fitzgerald motion, the County Council voted unanimously to insert into the Draft Written Statement a specific objective that as far as the Pye lands were concerned it would be County Council policy to encourage and promote the development of the area for tourism-related recreational and/or light industrial uses.⁶ This was the objective that went on public display in July to August 1993.

THE RETENTION OF THE SERVICES OF MR FRANK DUNLOP IN RELATION TO THE PYE LANDS AND RELATED MATTERS

2.01 Over the course of giving his evidence on Days 145 to 148, Mr Dunlop provided a series of lists to the Tribunal in which he identified a number of individuals and companies who had retained him as a lobbyist and from whom he had received money. None of those lists made reference to the Pye lands or to Mr Kelly, nor did Mr Dunlop list any councillor as having been in receipt of monies from him in connection with the zoning of those lands. Mr Dunlop did, however, make passing reference to the Pye lands in the course of a private interview with Tribunal counsel on 11 and 12 May 2000. When asked about the lands, he made reference to Mr Kelly having approached him regarding same. However, Mr Dunlop did not then allude to his having paid any councillor in respect thereof. In his October 2000 statement Mr Dunlop said, with reference to the Pye lands:

To the best of my recollection and belief I received a sum of approximately IR£5,000 from Aidan Kelly in connection with this development in Dundrum. I paid Messrs. Lydon and Fox a sum of IR£1,000 each for their support for this development. I also paid Mr Hand a sum of IR£2,000 for his support for this development.

2.02 There was no dispute but that Mr Dunlop was in fact retained by Mr Kelly as a lobbyist in 1992.

2.03 In the October 2000 statement Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that the inclusion of an asterisk beside a particular development denoted that monies were given to him with regard to that development in the full knowledge that payments to councillors were required to achieve support. Mr Dunlop placed an asterisk beside the words 'Pye lands'. On 13 September 2001, in response to a letter from the Tribunal on 6 July 2001, Mr Dunlop stated that to the best of his recollection he paid the cash sums of IR£1,000 each to Cllrs Lydon and Fox. The payment to Cllr Lydon may have been made either at his workplace at St John of God, Stillorgan, or in the environs of Dublin County Council. The payment to Cllr Fox was made, Mr Dunlop stated, either in the environs of the County Council or in the environs of the Royal Dublin Hotel. Mr Dunlop's belief was that the payments were made to those councillors in or about April 1992, Mr Dunlop believing that the motion in question may have been voted on in April/May 1992.

2.04 In that same 2001 statement, Mr Dunlop also outlined that, to the best of his recollection, he received the IR£5,000 in cash from Mr Kelly in or about April 1992 in the environs of the Royal Dublin Hotel.

2.05 On 24 January 2007, subsequent to a brief of documentation having been circulated to him in advance of the Tribunal's public hearings into the Pye Lands Module, Mr Dunlop furnished another (unsigned) written statement wherein he repeated the details previously given with regard to Cllrs Lydon and Fox and stated that his payment to Cllr Hand was made in the environs of Dublin County Council's offices.

MR DUNLOP'S SWORN TESTIMONY

2.06 Mr Dunlop accounted for his failure to identify the Pye lands/Mr Kelly and the councillors whom he alleged he paid when giving evidence to the Tribunal on Day 148 on the basis that on that particular day his concentration was perhaps on 'heavier or more prominent items or items that had more impact on me.'

2.07 Mr Dunlop told the Tribunal that in or about September 1992⁷ he was retained as a lobbyist on behalf of Mr Kelly. Mr Dunlop stated that his retention came about following an approach made by Mr Kelly to him in the environs of Dublin County Council, namely at the Royal Dublin Hotel. Mr Dunlop made an oblique reference to his belief that he may have been recommended to Mr Kelly by a third party, although he maintained he had no knowledge of who that third party might have been. This initial approach was followed up by a meeting between the two men (recorded in Mr Dunlop's diary) on 28 September 1992. Between that date and mid-November 1992, Mr Dunlop's diary and office telephone records document contact between them.

⁷ Mr Dunlop revised his earlier assertion that he had met Mr Kelly in April 1992.
